

BY CARD 289.05
Accession No. 11494 Call No. B84
Author _____
Title Brethren at Work
DATE DATE
DUE DUE

289.05
Accession No. 11494 Call No. B84

Bethany Theological Library
3435 W. VanBuren St.
Chicago, Ill.

RULES

This book may be kept for two weeks with privilege of renewal for two weeks.

Fine of two cents charged for each day books are overdue

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2002 with funding from LYRASIS members and Sloan Foundation

<http://www.archive.org/details/brethrenatwo183151moor>

THE BRETHREN AT WORK.

"Behold I Bring You Good Tidings of Great Joy, which Shall be unto All People."—LUKE 2: 10.

Vol. III.

Lanark, Ill., January 3, 1878.

No. 1.

The Brethren at Work.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY

—BY—

J. H. MOORE, S. H. BASHOR, M. M. ESCHMANN.

—:O:—

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

| | | |
|-----------------|---|-----------------|
| R. H. MILLER, | — | LADOGA, IND. |
| J. W. STEIN, | — | NEWTONIA, MO. |
| D. VANIMAN, | — | VIRDEX, ILL. |
| D. D. MENTZER, | — | WAYNESBORO, PA. |
| MATTIE A. LEAR, | — | URBANA, ILL. |

OUR MOTHER.

Oh! many lips are saying this,
Mid falling tears to-day,
And many hearts are aching sore,
Our mother's passed away.
We watched her fading year by year,
As they went slowly by,
But e'en far from us e'en the fear,
That she could ever die.

She seemed so good, so pure, so true,
To our admiring eyes,
We never dreamed this glorious fruit,
Was ripening for the skies,
And when at last the death-stroke came,
So swift, so sure, so true,
The hearts that held her here so fast,
Were almost broken too.

We robed her in a pure, white dress,
As her desire had been,
Gave one last kiss, then laid her 'mid,
The Summer leaves so green,
Then each took up the broken thread,
Of life and all its cares;
How sad our heart 'mid daily tasks,
We miss our mother's prayers.

We ne'er shall know from what dark paths,
They may have kept our feet;
Yet holy will their influence be,
While each fond heart shall beat,
And as we tread the thorny way,
Which her dear feet have trod,
Ever shall feel our mother's prayers,
Leading us up to God.

And when the storms of sorrow come,
To each bereaved heart,
Let faith glance upward to the home,
Where we shall never part,
Where one awaits with loving eyes,
To see her children come,
As one by one we cross the flood,
And reach our heavenly home.

Selected by ADA I. CORRELL.

NEW YEAR'S GREETING.

BY D. B. MENTZER.

To the Editors and the Special Contributors of the Brethren at Work.

MAY He who "made Himself of no reputation," and in meekness "went about doing good," grant you grace, mercy and peace, and "wisdom from above." And let all the faithful say, Amen.

I cannot say that "Ye have need that I write unto you," but it seems good to send you an annual message of Christian greeting, such as love would dictate through the Spirit of Truth. If we were always encouraged in whatever we do, there is no telling how far each one of us would unconsciously venture away from "the Way the Truth, and the Life,"—our Refuge and Fortress.

But then we all need encouragement in every good work, and that encouragement should be the expression of a Christ-following, Christ-loving heart. Love encourages, love cares for and defends the character of its object. Such is the love of true Christians. Unless "the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts," the spirit of the world has great possessions there, and the manifestations will evidence the fact. O let us

"LOVE ONE ANOTHER."

This is indeed the religion of Jesus. By this the unbelieving world shall see the evidence of the Christian religion. "Love is of God."—Should we hearken to and be profited by the apostle Paul's admonition, "Be ye followers of God as dear children," we would love as God loves—love the good and hate the evil. This was the order in Eden, but sin reversed it.—The wicked "hate the good and love the evil." Conversion brings us back again, to hate evil, and "all appearance of evil," and to be "followers of that which is good." 1 Pet. 2: 13.

In this life we are daily surrounded with good and evil influences. Not only are we surrounded by such opposites, but in our flesh dwells no good thing of our own. All the good that flows out into life's works, is the gift of God, and all the evil is of "that wicked one," through our flesh. Then we have great reasons to watch and pray continually, and yield to the implicit commands of "the Captain of our salvation," seeking to exemplify Him in every thought word and deed. We have also abundant cause to sympathize with one another, bear each other's burdens as much as in us lies, and help one another over the rugged, narrow way that leads to that "Better country."

You, my very dear brethren, are entering upon another year of editorial labor. No one can tell how the year will end. We know not who will be called from our Lord's family on earth to that above. Eph. 3: 15. This is a solemn thought. Solemn thoughts are our best thoughts however, for they bring us nearer to Him in whom we believe, and to whose immutable image we are being fashioned by His grace in us, through obedience to the Truth. Therefore let us earnestly ourselves delivered to the saints. In the God whom we serve, there is no variableness and no shadow of turning; and so must we become in our relation to the faith, the truth as it is in Jesus.—Be steadfast in the faith at all times and in all things, defending the church and her glorified, all-adorable Head.

CONTENT FOR THE FAITH

From an experimental stand-point, I look upon your labors as editors, as being very responsible indeed. The editing or the selection and preparation of manuscript for the compositor, and the consequent publication of the same to the church and the world, is a work, perhaps not second to the ministry of the Word. Some suppose that to be an editor is enviable, but they never were editors. Others suppose it to be an honor, but they do not consider its untold responsibility. To you it is the labor of servants, and the sense of your accountability keeps you humble and slow to venture on uncertain foundations. May it be so henceforth and forever, that you may present to the brotherhood and to the world a sanctified press.

If you serve in "singleness of heart," and in "humbleness of mind," you can accomplish much good in the church by sustaining and perpetuating her identity. It is claimed that the press moulds the people—its readers. We believe this is true. Then let it be your anxious care so to edit your "copy," and so to select your matter, that your entire patronage may be moulded into the mind of Christ, who came, not to do His own will, but the will of HIM that sent Him.

Be steadfast in the doctrine, immovable in the faith, "looking unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith," the hope of earth and the joy of heaven.

I have yet two New Year texts to offer especially to our special contributors and all other correspondents:

"Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." Phil. 2: 5.

"To do good, and to communicate forget not, for with such sacrifices God is well pleased."—Heb. 13: 16.

COME TO THE WORK.

The great need of the church to-day, is "men of God," who will deny themselves of all that is selfish, and worldly, and compromising with perverted Christianity—men who will practice the religion we profess, and endeavor at every opportunity to spread the Truth, and peace, and good-will. Such ye are, we trust. Then let us put our hands firmly to the plow, and without looking back, or tarrying by the way, go forward in the work. A powerful enemy is ours, and the warfare is long and all important. O let us come to "the help of the Lord against the mighty."

Your contributors are one means to do your duty. May He who never wearies, and who is long-suffering and of tender mercy, grant you wisdom, grace and steadfastness in the "Faith and patience of Jesus." Think not that this labor is child's play—a play of words. While writing for the Christian press may be considered an exercise and training for the mind, it ought rather to be the expression of a heart full of love for the primitive cause of Christ, and the effort of a sin-pardoned soul going out after the lost. While we labor late or early when others are at ease, and probably criticizing with undue severity our feeble labors, let us remember we serve the Lord, and expect our reward and honor of Him only. Let us labor while it is day, for behold the night cometh.

SPIRIT AND FORM.

BY S. Z. SHARP.

SPIRIT always makes its presence known in some manner or form, but form, per se, is not always a certain indication of the Spirit's presence. The Holy Ghost descended "in a bodily shape like a dove upon Christ."

"There came a sound from heaven, as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they (the disciples) were sitting," but the kiss of Judas and the long prayer of the Pharisees were no sign that either the love or the spirit of God directed these actions.

The language may be otherwise beautiful and even musical to the ear, but without the right spirit it will not produce fruit unto eternal life. The "incorruptible seed," like every other seed will produce fruit only after its own kind—Converts are like the spirit that accompanied the preaching that converted them.

A man may be "rude in speech," yet if the Holy Ghost accompany that speech, it may make a Felix tremble and cause thousands to "be packed in their hearts."

On the other hand, there may be a form of godliness without the power. Even the tongue of an angel may be but as sounding brass, without that "charity that never faileth."

Pharisees carried out the law to the letter, and gave titles of mind and cunning, yet were threatened with the damnation of hell. In view of these facts, how careful ought those to be, who are so scrupulous to comply with every form of religion, that they do not lack the Spirit.

PROFANE PRAYER.

BY H. P. BRINKWORTH.

OUR attention was called to the four divisions of prayer in an article, written by Bro. B. B. Whitmer, and, thinking we could review each to advantage, we accordingly offer a few thoughts on "Profane Prayer," and hope some brother will write up the other subjects.

Profane, to unhallow or take in vain the name of our God. Our mind naturally runs to Sinai's mount, where the awful thunders roared, and where Moses said: "I exceedingly fear and quake." The tables of stone, written by the finger of God himself, declared: "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord, thy God, in vain, for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh His name in vain" (Exodus 20).

Yet how often in the face of this, as well as other commands, we hear man, made in the image of his Maker, impreating upon himself and others, the curses of God's law! How often if mortal man had the power, would he have sent those with whom he had to deal to the lowest regions of dark despair! The Lord will not hold these guiltless!

Dear reader, art thou daily taking His holy, His exalted, His glorious name in vain? But there is a probability that He will answer thy prayer. Thou invokest upon thyself in prayer to Him, that He will shut thee out of Heaven, and shut thee up in hell! Oh! fearful imprecations, yet daily heard! "Out of the same mouth proceedeth both curses and blessings." Oh! swearer, pray; but pray for forgiveness! God will hear thee. "He has promised to heal thy blackslidings, you, to love thee freely." He hates thy ways, but loves thee with an everlasting love. Jesus died to save all, yes, even the chief of sinners. Do not think thy sins are so great, thy guilt so black, that He will not love thee. Oh, remember His loving words, "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool" (Isaiah 1: 18). "He will not turn the death of a sinner, but rather that he turn from his ways and live."

"Come unto me," all ye that are weary and heavy-laden, and I will give you rest." The yoke of sin is a galling yoke. Christ says: "Take my yoke upon you and learn of me, and ye shall find rest unto your souls" (Matt. 11: 28; 29). Oh, come, come, COME!

Bath, England.

A FEW THOUGHTS.

GOD knows all our wants and needs. Let us come huddly to a throne of grace, denying ourselves of all ungodliness and worldly lusts. Let us watch and pray lest we enter into temptation. When Christ was on earth, and suffered for us, taking away our sins, He showed great love and kindness for all men. His sweet voice cheered the fallen and cast down. Now will we examine ourselves, whether we follow Jesus in this? Time will soon be no more with us, and we must go hence to reap the fruit of our labor. Jesus will soon appear and say, "Come ye blessed of my Father, and inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." This will give us comfort in that day, and rest forever with Jesus. Let us double our diligence, and put our trust in God, who is all love and powerful.
DRESSLEY A. BROWN.

WHY SHOULD A MAN SWEAR?

WE can conceive of no reason why he should, but of ten why he should not:

1. It is mean. A man of high moral standing would almost as soon steal a sheep as swear.
2. It is vulgar. Altogether too mean for a decent man.
3. It is cowardly. Bidding a fear either of not being believed or obeyed.
4. It is ungentlemanly. A gentleman will no more swear, than go into the street and throw mud with a clothcap.
5. It is indecent, and offensive to decency.
6. It is foolish. Want of decency is want of sense.
7. It is abusive—to the mind that conceives it, to the tongue that utters it, and to the person at whom it is aimed.
8. It is venomous. Showing a man's heart to be a nest of vipers, and every time he swears, one of them sticks out its head.
9. It is contemptible, forfeiting the respect of the wise and good.
10. It is wicked. God will not hold him guiltless who taketh His name in vain.

REFLECTIONS.

BY JAS. Y. HICKLER.

IN this refined, sophisticated age,
How many thoughts the mind engages,
How many plans, how many schemes,
Are nought but visionary dreams!

How many people in our day,
Who, not upon the narrow way,
Are drifting onward in the dark,
Like some forsaken sailor's bark!

The gates of hell are open wide,
And devils nod in plume and pride;
The toys of fashion sparkle bright,
For those who walk not in the light.

For the road is broad that leads astray,
And thousands, thousands go that way
Unto the end of their career,
Before the judgment to appear.

The light of God is for us all,
But was eclipsed through Adam's fall,
That if in darkness we should be,
The light of God we can not see.

Should we obey the Pope's command
And have no Bible in the land,
We soon would to destruction go
To reap the fruits of endless woe.

Nor Popes, nor Prelates, priest, nor kings,
Nor devils with Abaddon's wings,
Can utterly that Book destroy,
Which did the mind of God employ.

If we are in the light of God,
Our influence will be spread abroad,
The light in us will freely shine,
And spread its influence benign.

If Christ be in us, we in Him,
Our light of truth will not be dim,
And we can walk the narrow way,
That leadeth unto perfect day.

We will obey the Word of God,
And He who washed us in His blood,
Will lead us into perfect peace,
Where we shall see Him as He is.

Hortleysville, Pa.

WATCHING.

BY MARY E. BOYD.

"Watch ye, therefore, and pray always."
Luke 21:36

WATCHING is a duty, imperatively enjoined upon every true follower of Him whose eyes are as a flame of fire. We can no more be Christians, without this grace, than we can be Christians, and omit praying; the two are correlative; but I believe we are apt to ignore prayer, and undertake to make watching a double duty, whereas watching is always accompanied by prayer, this forever annuls the watching of criticism, and gives us the divinely appointed watching which is fealty to Christ's demands. We are to watch that none of "these things" (woes) come upon us; this implies the watching of both ourselves and others. Watch our thoughts, desires, actions, and influences. We must also watch opportunities, lest we let pass unheeded some golden moment in which we might have been instrumental in saving a precious, blood-bought soul.

Watch lest any root of bitterness spring up and trouble us, and thereby many be defiled; lest we fail to do all in our power for our Beloved; lest we neglect to nourish the dear babies in Christ, and through our neglect some become weak and sickly, or even die. Oh for the love of heaven, let us watch the land be! Let us watch lest we fail to seek after the straying. Oh! let us hasten to speak the kind, loving word of sympathy which will help them to return to the fold, ere the wolf devours them. Even though we may "sow in tears," watch the glorious promise, we shall reap with joy. We must watch lest we withhold the word of cheer from those whose lives are not so sunny as our's, or fail to visit and minister to the sick; lest we neglect the poor or aged; or fail to aid to the utmost of our ability in the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom, or to pray for enemies, and thus allow hatred to spring up in hearts where only the genial sunlight of Christian love should glow.

Watch, lest the soul-thrilling, heaven-piercing Macedonian cries, which float on every breeze, are unnoticed and we receive for our temporal comforts, or luxuries, that which should flow freely into the treasury of our King; lest we forget to pray for, and assist, our dear ministers who labor continually for our spiritual good and for the welfare of the Lamb's dear Bride. Said a brother to me a few weeks since: "It seems to me I can always tell when some one in the congregation is praying for me; when I get up to preach, my heart glows with fervor and the Spirit sends words to my mouth, faster than I can utter them."

Oh! then if we want to hear good sermons; want the cause of Christ to prosper, let us watch our ministers, be sure to see when they need assistance and not lay upon them a double burden, while we reap the benefit of their labors. Let us watch and pray always for the good of souls, and the glory of God; so shall the glorious Bride arise, deck herself with beautiful garments, and go forth in the beauty to meet the Bridegroom; so shall we receive an abundant entrance into the Celestial City.

BLASPHEMY.

BY MARY A. LEAVY.

WHEREFORE I say unto you, all manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men; but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men. And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him; but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come." (Matt. 12:31, 32).

Blasphemy, from the Greek Blasphemia, properly denotes calumny, detraction, reprehensible or abusive language, against whomsoever it is rendered. When such abuse is uttered against God, the signification of the word is the same as when it is uttered against a created being; the degree of guilt depends upon its application, that is, as to what object it refers. As, therefore, the sense of the term is the same, though differently applied; let us next inquire, what is essential to constitute this crime in either case? It is essential to this sin, when committed by one man against another, that there be in the injurious person the will or disposition to detract from the person abused. A mere mistake in regard to character, especially when the mistake is not conceived by him, who entertains it, to lessen the character, however erroneously, to exalt it, is never construed by any into the crime of defamation.

Now as blasphemy is in its essence the same, however applied, what is fundamental to the very existence of the crime, is the same when applied to God as when applied to man, namely a will, a design, a purpose to defame, to insult the Divine Majesty. Blasphemy then, against God is calumny, and to constitute the crime it is necessary, that the calumny be intentional, that the perpetrator knows what he asserts is false.

The circumstances which called forth the language of our text from our Saviour, will perhaps throw much light on this subject. Jesus had just healed one possessed with a devil; the people recognized the hand of God in this, and anxiously inquired, "Is not this the son of David? Is not this our long expected Messiah?" But the Pharisees, (those religious guides to whom the people looked with profound respect, because of their reputed sanctity and learning) answered: "This fellow doth not cast out devils, but by Beelzebub, the prince of devils." They could not deny the reality of the miracle. That some wonderful power had been displayed was too manifest to be ignored. What then must be done? "These people look to us for instruction, we have great power and influence over them. We ourselves know very well that this miracle could only be performed through the agency of God, but if we tell the people this, they will adhere to Him and we will lose our power over them. But the hold which we have on this people is of great advantage to us every way, we must, and will retain that hold at any cost. We will therefore give them an answer which will scandalize this Jesus in their eyes; we will tell them that His miracles are performed by magic arts, that He is in league with the prince of darkness. The ignorance of this people, and their entire confidence in us, will prevent them from detecting this sophistry; we will take advantage of this ignorance, of this simplicity and bind our fetters more firmly upon them."

"Jesus knows their thoughts." We think I can see the blessed Master cast upon those hypocritical leaders a look of mingled pity and indignation. After exposing the ridiculousness of their position, He addresses to them the scathing language of our text.

"You know what you have asserted is false your knowledge of the literature of your nation, teaches you that such a miracle could only be performed through the power of God. Beware! you are now going too far; your extreme hatred of me, and your prejudices are leading you into fatal errors. In the garb of humanity, which I have assumed, I can bear all your malice, all your blasphemy, because it was fore-ordained that I should bear reproaches and insults (see Psalm 69:9). But if you wilfully insult the Spirit of God, you place yourself beyond the reach of mercy."

Oh how shocking that any one should permit his prejudice, or his worldly interest to lead him to such fearful lengths, yet we find this warning not only addressed to the Pharisees, but Paul also caution his Hebrew brethren against this dreadful crime. See Heb. 6:4-8; 10:26-29.

As we have already seen it was those wretched Pharisees, who, instigated by worldly ambition and avarice, slandered what they knew to be the cause of God; and against conviction, reviled His work as the operation of evil spirits, who alone could commit this horrid crime in the time of our Saviour's corporal stay on earth. But Paul addresses the following language to the Hebrew brethren: "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh and put Him to an open shame." Again,

"If we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sin, but a certain fearful looking for judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries." It is the same wilful, known sin that placed the Pharisees beyond the reach of mercy, that places the once enlightened Christians in the same awful state.

The above Scriptures express a high degree of heavenly light and knowledge. Oh can it be that any who have been thus highly exalted, who have been permitted to sit in heavenly places with Christ Jesus, have tasted the riches of His love, should fall away, should for the sake of some worldly object renounce Christ, forego all their precious blood-bought privileges, and turn again to the weak and beggarly elements of the world? The above Scriptures certainly intimate that such is possible.

Let us now notice the circumstance under which the above warning was given. In those early days of persecution under the Roman emperors, when a person was arraigned for trial on the accusation of being a Christian, he was required to call upon the heathen gods, supplicate to the emperor's image, and curse Christ, "none of which things," says Pliny in his famous letter to the emperor Trajan, "can any of those who are really Christians be compelled to do." But the cursing or blaspheming of Christ under those more humane emperors such as Trajan, Adrian, and Antoninus, was sufficient to procure their pardon, or release. Those more cruel persecutors as Nero, and Domitian seem not to have admitted of pardon, if once a person had assumed the hated name of Christian. Paul foreseeing the danger and temptation that this possible escape from punishment would expose the Christians to, exhorts them to steadfastness, and warns them against apostasy. He knew, that when the question would be asked of them again and again, if they were Christians, threatenings, being intermixed with the questions, as Pliny says they were, he foresaw that a possible escape from the cross, the burning fagots, the playings and all sorts of torture which were held up before them in all their hideousness, would cause the faith of some to waver, therefore he faithfully points out to them the dreadful consequences of denying Christ, of treading under foot the Son of God, of counting the blood of the covenant wherewith they were sanctified an unholy thing, and of doing despite to the spirit of grace.

Since at any time, or under any circumstance is a fearful thing, and there is nothing we should so much fear, but to sin wilfully after having received the knowledge of the truth, to openly and avowedly renounce Christ, after experiencing His pardoning grace, the apostle tells us there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins. We have now wilfully rejected the only sacrifice that can be offered, consequently we are left without a sacrifice, without a propitiation, and the apostle tells us what an awful doom awaits such (see Heb. 10:27). Ignorance is the only possible palliation to sin, hence Paul says of himself that he was once a blasphemer, a persecutor, and injurious, but says he obtained mercy because he did it ignorantly in unbelief, intimating, that but for this ignorance he could not have obtained mercy. And our dear Saviour when He prayed for His murderers, could only plead their ignorance, "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do."

Faithfulness and sincerity are the highest things.—Confucius.

THE MISSIONARY CAUSE.

BY JOHN FOLNEY, SEN.

I AM truly glad that the brethren are catching more of the missionary spirit, and I hope that, that spirit will become so great and powerful in the church that she will send her ministers, not only into every part of the United States, but also in every county and every corner of countries, that the Gospel of Christ may be preached to all the human race of our country, so that we will not have to meet daily, men and women, who will say: "We never heard any of your people preach," and others tell us we never saw a "Dunkard" before we saw you. And some such were born and raised to manhood, in Pa., Va., Md., and Ohio where there are so many brethren and organized churches.

Brethren, who is to blame that those people have not the Gospel preached to them? May they not have cause in the judgment day to accuse us that we have not done our duty in full? It looks to me a though it ought to arouse every saint to a sense of his duty in this respect; for surely the word, "go ye into all the world," stands yet on the page as it always did. And that is not all, brethren and sisters, Paul says, (2 Cor 6: 8), "As deceivers and yet true." Now let us look how deceivers do, how zealous they are. They spend a great deal of time and money to get a missionary into every mind, State and county. You may go where you will, there you will find the people taught some mode of worship, but lamentable to say, they are not taught the pure Gospel, nor the true mode of worship, which Christ and the apostles taught. Brethren will, not we, who know the terror of the Lord, put forth greater efforts to persuade men, and exhibit more zeal for the ingathering and saving of precious souls, than those who go about to preach a part of the Gospel for filthy hire? And many of them make the Gospel of Christ of no effect by their traditions, or as Christ said, (Matt. 23: 2), "Teaching for doctrine the commandments of men." He said, In vain they worship me.

Let us become a little more Paul-like, and go where the Gospel is not known, or at least is not practiced. And we know that one soul is of more value, than our silver and gold. And the prophet Daniel said (Chap. 12: 3), "And they that be wise, shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars forever and ever." Hence let us all do our duty. Paul says (1 Cor 9: 16), "For though I preach the Gospel, I have nothing to glory of, for necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me if I preach not the Gospel; for if I do this thing willingly, I have a reward; but if against my will, a dispensation of the Gospel is committed unto me." May God prosper and bless the missionary labors everywhere is my prayer.

PUNCTUAL AND REGULAR.

BY S. J. HARRISON

TIME is correlated to everything that it may be said to have a place in everything. God did His work in a set time. He began it at a certain time, and finished it at a certain time. He began His rest at a certain time and ended it at a certain time. He appointed certain times for His worship. He has established laws to govern all things. The wind and sea obey Him. He makes the earth turn upon its axis in an exact time; He takes the earth around the sun, century after century in the same exact time. The moon performs her work as punctual and regular as her great Ruler is punctual and regular. Their movements are punctual and regular to the smallest fraction of a second. It is therefore a plain case that punctuality and regularity are two of God's laws.

Sin is a transgression of the law. Those who are not punctual and regular, transgress the law, and therefore sin. Sin cannot enter heaven. Therefore those who are tardy and irregular cannot go to heaven.

I was at preaching not long ago where a strange speaker was expected. The speaker was a lady. She waited until the hour to begin had fully arrived; but the people came strolling in until services were nearly over. This was very annoying to the speaker, disgusting to the listeners and disadvantageous to the tardy person. I have seen the same in our meeting almost as often as the occasion was unusual. Well, what are the reasons for this? I will tell you what a few of them are.

Some go to meeting late to have a better opportunity for displaying some new garment or jewelry which they or their children have lately obtained; some to have people know that they live about there; some because so and so are to dine with them that day and everything must be nice, and it must be made so before they go to church. Some go to meeting late because they had work to do. "Must clean up once a week you know."

The next thing some men do, is, they do not go to meeting regularly, even the lights (?) of the church absent themselves for the most trivial causes. In a district where there are from one to two hundred members, only about two-thirds of the number are present at any one meeting. And what are the reasons for this? I suppose the absent ones can tell the reasons as well as anybody, therefore I give what they say. "I was not feeling very well; I had to go to town on Saturday and I am getting old and do not feel good to be out so much." Another says, "O, I'd sooner sit in the house than go out on the cold road to preaching." Another says, "I wanted my horses to rest, I had been working them hard all week, and I had a big week's work for them again. I have so much work to do that I and the horses need all the rest we can get. I cannot attend meeting until I get a little through with my work." Another says, "It was muddy and I did not want to soil my buggy." Another says, "The preaching is not worth listening to." Others stay at home—away from worship—to entertain visitors. They love a talk about the prospects of fruit, the likelihood of cholera killing their hogs, the relative merits of the different breeds of cattle, the propriety of feeding stock, to selling the feed, the advantages of certain mowing, reaping and threshing machines—they love this better than the worship of God. O, what depths of love for Christ! What a resolution to run the race with patience! to have "Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven!" What an example to the youth, the sinner, and the infidel!

WHAT THERE IS IN A NAME.

BY E. EMBARTH.

ON account of the great diversity of opinion, in the world, many, yea, very many may wonder whether any other name than that of Christian should be assumed by the followers of Christ. There are many ministers who say that no one who pretends to be a follower of Christ, should be willing to be known by any other name. We, however, should not confide in such men, nor imitate such sentiments, but look into the perfect law of ourselves, lest we be deceived.

We learn from our pilot—the New Testament that the name Christian was first applied, at Antioch, to the followers of our Redeemer, but by whom it was applied we cannot tell. We may learn from the history of the early followers of Jesus that the name was applied to them by way of epithet, hence it was not assumed. They were called Christians because they followed Christ, for the same reason that a certain sect are called Campbellites because they followed Campbell.

A number of names have been applied to the followers of Christ by men only, but one only by Christ Himself. Now, fellow-pilgrim, to whom would you give the honor? To Christ or to men? Our Savior, while here among men, said to His followers, "All ye are brethren;" and this is the only name He ever conferred which they could with propriety apply to themselves. From this we may learn that if we wish to give God the glory, with respect to His Son, we should assume His endearing name in preference to any other. We can see no impropriety in allowing others to call us Christians when they apply the term to us because we follow or obey Christ, but we should never assert that no other name should be assumed by us, for we should prefer and apply to each other the endearing name "brethren," because this is in accordance with the example of the holy apostles and their immediate successors, and because our blessed Savior has said we are such.

Then kind reader, whenever you have occasion to speak anything concerning the people of God, keep the honor of your Savior nearest your heart by calling them by the name applied by Him—BROTHERS.

PHYSICIAN, NURSE AND MEDICINE.

BY S. B. WYMAN.

IT is very natural when we get sick, that we send for a physician to examine and give us a remedy. First we feel bad, and we get worse and worse, until disease gets us down, then send for a physician. He comes, examines us and doses out a number of powders and drops, and appoints a nurse to care for the patient, and administer the medicine, charging the nurse very particularly how to give the medicine and to be sure and give all he has left. He leaves the patient in the care of the nurse. Now suppose the nurse does not administer the medicine as directed, and the patient dies, is the nurse clear? or must the nurse bear part of the blame? Now the application.

First, we understand Christ to be the great Physician (Matt. 9: 12); and according to Matt. 9: 13 the sinner is the patient, and we understand the minister of the Gospel to be the nurse, according to 1st Corinthians 1: 13; Eph. 4: 29; 1st Pet. 4: 2; Josh. 1: 1; 1st Thes. 11: 7, and even the word minister means one that administers, a servant. Now we understand the medicine to be the commandments of Christ found in the great Book, the Bible. The sinner is very sick; he feels that he needs a physician, and as the Physician is gone, he examines his Book or New Testament. He there finds his symptoms explained. Next he places himself in the hands of a nurse, by going to church and there the nurse administers medicine to him, by telling him what he must do to get well or free from sin. If he be a good nurse, he will tell him the same as the great Physician did, and also that good nurse, Peter on the day of pentecost (Acts 2: 38). And he will do as he was commanded to do by the Physician in Matt. 28: 19, 20; he will tell him to obey all the commandments, take all the medicine and reject none. But sometimes, naturally, we find a nurse that claims he thinks a great deal of the patient, and will not give all the medicine, but will reject what is bad to the taste. Just so, we have them spiritually speaking. What do they tell the patient or sinner? Why do we find them sometimes teaching such commandments as are popular in the world? they will say, the sinner need not go to a stream of water to be baptized, but he will sprinkle him as it is not so much bother, and also he can do as he pleases about obeying all the commandments, as he will get to heaven without &c. He pretends to think a great deal of his patient, or the sinner, and he can take or obey just such commandments as he feels like. But beware, may he if it were not for the dollars, he would not think so much of you, but of course the easier he is, the more adherents he will get. If he was concerned about your soul, do you not think he would depend more upon the Doctor-book? Does he know more than the doctor?

O! when that great day shall come when the patient and the nurse will be examined, what a time that will be! When the patient is examined by the great Physician and found incurable, what will he say when he is asked whether he took all the medicine he left him or obeyed all the commandments? He will be apt to say the nurse or minister did not give them or teach them then the nurse will be interrogated; what will he answer? Nothing can he say, but behold the nurse or minister that gave all the powders or commandments, left him to give, and his patients they are safe enjoying heaven in its beauty. Then we will see which nurse thought the most of his patient. Oh sinner hunt the nurse that will give all the remedies prescribed by the great Doctor and take them, then all will be well.

REASON AND FAITH.

WHILE the bright eyes of reason are full of piercing and restless intelligence, her ear is closed to sound; and while faith has an ear of exquisite delicacy, on her sightless orbs as she lifts them towards heaven, the sunbeam plays in vain. Hand in hand, the brother and sister, in all mutual love, pursue their way, through a world on which, like ours, day breaks and night falls alternately; by day the eyes of reason are the guide of faith, and by night the ear of faith is the guide of reason. As is wont with those who labor under these privations respectively, reason is apt to be eager, impetuous, impatient of that instruction which his infirmity will not permit him to readily apprehend; while faith, gentle and docile, is ever willing to listen to the voice by which alone truth and wisdom can effectually reach her.—Henry Rogers.

Regularity is unity; unity is godlike, only the devil is changeable.—Richter.

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE,
S. H. BASHOR,
M. M. ESHELMAN, } EDITORS.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent post-paid, to any address in the United States or Canada, for $1.50 per annum. Those sending ten names and $15.00, will receive an extra copy free of charge. For all over this number the agent will be allowed 10 cents for each additional name, which amount can be deducted from the money, before sending it to us. Money Orders, Drafts, and Registered Letters may be sent at our risk. They should be made payable to Moore, Bashor & Esheleman. Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE, BASHOR & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., JANUARY 3, 1876.

CONSIDERABLE matter has been crowded out this week: among them a couple reports, the Gleanings and Obituaries. Will endeavor to make room for most of them next week.

THE rainy weather and muddy roads are greatly interfering with the success that would otherwise crown the efforts of our ministers in their protracted meetings during this season of the year.

THE present indications are that Bro. STEIN is to engage in a public discussion with Mr. RAY, editor of the Baptist Battle Flag, to commence sometime in January. More can likely be said about it next week.

WE are again obliged to ask those who have ordered Hymn Books to have patience. Though we ordered sometime ago, the books have not come. When ordering books or pamphlets the money should always accompany the order.

OUR missionaries, now in Denmark, expect to visit Germany and England before returning home. In company with brother BINSKOWITZ, they may spend considerable time preaching in England, and reach home sometime in April.

BROTHER DAVID MARTIN, of Marshall Co., Iowa, gave us a call last Saturday. He and family are visiting relatives and acquaintances in this locality. Brother JOHN ZOOK of Cedar Co., was with us in the same day. He seems to be enjoying himself.

THE unusual state of the weather, for this season of the year, has rendered traveling and out-door work in this part of the country extremely disagreeable. The last few months have been more like Spring than Winter—raining considerable of the time, hence giving us mud in abundance.

LATE reports indicate all Europe is arming, and the old world is in a most critical condition. Russia has called out another large army, and it is feared that both England and Germany will soon become involved in the bloody conflict. Should they do so, it will doubtless more or less affect all Europe.

ON the last page of this issue, will be found an interesting batch of correspondence regarding a public discussion to have been held in Carthage, Mo. We do not blame the Baptists for not wanting to debate their side of the question on baptism, for their backward single immersion is so young that they do not want it exposed to the public gaze. On Mr. CASSIDY's part it is a square back down.

A BROTHER writes: "Yesterday morning I noticed how happy the children felt over their presents, and as they were passing them to each other I asked them if they liked to read the BRETHREN AT WORK. They said they did. I then told them that there are many who are too poor to pay for it, and I thought we ought to make them a little present; so if it we want, and I now send you $1.50 for the 'Charity Fund.'"

AT this season of the year, when subscribers are running in at the rate of a thousand a week, it will be impossible to avoid making some mistakes, such as leaving out in occasional numbers whose time of subscription has not expired, containing names that ought to be omitted, or getting some incorrectly inserted. Should any thing of the kind occur we want to be notified of it at once. Do not wait a month or two and then writ, but attend to it as soon as the mistake is discovered. If new subscribers do not commence receiving their papers within a few weeks after sending, they will please let us know; but first inquire of the postmaster before writing. When writing be sure to give post office, county, and State in every instance. The figures to the right of your name denotes when your subscription expires.

THE horrors and cruelties of war have been lately brought to light in the vicinity of Plevna. The terrible state of things is perhaps unparalleled in modern warfare. After the town fell into the hands of the Russians, famishing dogs were seen feeding on the bodies of dead and wounded soldiers, tearing the flesh from the bodies of the still living wounded. The vultures picked at the skull and hopped from body to body with fenshish delight. The savage howls of the greedy hentes, the cries and heart-rending groans of the wounded, as they vainly struggled with the dogs, could be heard for miles around. The wounded that were able to crawl about, clutched at the odd morsels of food in the hands of the dead. One thousand prisoners were huddled together in one place. The living and dead were piled together promiscuously in heaps like wood, and carted away. The scene was horrible beyond description. These are the fruits of war. May God grant us peace on earth.

INTRODUCTORY.

THROUGH a kind and gracious Providence, we are enabled to greet you again, and we hope this, the ushering in of another year, finds us all ready and willing to step into the front ranks to live, proclaim and defend the holy religion brought to us by our Master. The Captain of our salvation is just as ready, able and willing to lead us on to victory, as He was last year. Knowing this, not a soldier should desert, not one think of going to sleep on duty, and remember to continue in well-doing, and the victory over sin and Satan will be complete.

We appeal to this noble band of workers, this army of the Redeemer, to make a vigorous charge all along the lines and help us to carry the glad tidings of salvation over the enemy's intrenchment. We should not, cannot be satisfied with simply holding the forts we have taken, but should labor hard and patiently to take many more. And as we go forth to conquer, let us be sure that the flag we follow has on it the crucified Christ as well as the glorified Lord. This is the flag that leads to peaceful, permanent victory.

We feel grateful to the many contributors who have helped us to enrich and enliven the columns of the BRETHREN AT WORK the past year with their heaven-born and soul-cheering thoughts, and cordially invite them to continue in sending forth sound words—words that have in them the power, honor and glory of God. With pure motives, principles can be made to take deep root in the hearts of sinners and turn them to the living God. Let the glory of Thy Son shine out from the top, bottom and sides of every word you write, and the world will witness such a stream of light as has not been seen for these many years.

And you who have steadily and patiently labored to extend the circulation of our paper, we ask you to go on in the well-begun work, looking to Jesus the great Rewarder, for your toils and your people's. We hold you in grateful remembrance for what you have done, and hope you will find continual pleasure and spiritual profit in laboring with us.

We can make you but few promises for the year, as the great Dispenser of events alone knows what shall be. We desire however to devote our time and talents to the defence and maintenance of the pure and unspiced religion, the dissemination of edifying literature, and the presentation of every fact, every command and promise of our heavenly Father. We do not expect to please all men, for our Master did not do that, but do desire to please Him who hath called. Put us with His tender mercy and kindness to serve Him. Nor do we expect to please ourselves in all things. We too must bear and forbear; otherwise there would be no winning, no burning of doors. O that we may cling to the whole truth, speak where God speaks, bridle the tongue where God bridle, honor God, love all men, hate sin, and "do duty" is the wish and prayer of your humble servants.

OBJECTIONS REVIEWED.

SOMETIME ago, brother D. D. Clark of Grant, West Va., sent us a copy of Elder S. W. P. Richardson's objections to the doctrine of baptism for the remission of sins, taken from the Mountain Echo, published at Keyser, W. Va., with a request that they be reviewed in the BRETHREN AT WORK. This we will now do, so far as the objections are worthy of note.

We give the Elder's article entire, proposition and all, that our readers may hear both sides of the question, and learn how even ministers will misconstrue, either through ignorance or malicious intent, a doctrine which does not correspond with their preconceived opinions, or religious education. This we do, not because we love disquisitions, but because we love the truth, and do not want people misled or prejudiced against a doctrine of the New Testament, without a knowledge of what its teachings are on the subject opposed.

Men can file objections to any doctrine or theory, or even the Bible itself, that on a superficial investigation, have a show of fairness and force about them, which in reality, when fully investigated, are objections only, and stand without the least logic, much less of a scientific or divine foundation. The article before us shows the cunning of its author in dealing with a square Gospel doctrine. He leaves both the Gospel and logic and swoops down on the sympathies of the people, without offering one single passage from Holy Writ, that has any bearing on the subject whatever. It is the old dodge of Universalism he resorts to, in his endeavors to prove his theory, not by Bible proof, but by a misrepresentation of the one he opposes, and by reaching the sympathies of the people. We will without further comment, give the Elder's proposition and objections verbatim and review them in proper order.

Objections to the doctrine of baptism, in order to remission.

He means of course the remission of past sins. The proposition is fairly stated, and tells in plain terms what the doctrine is he objects to, and opposes. The doctrine contained in the affirmative of this proposition, is not of very recent origin, which the reader will readily perceive by turning to Acts 2: 38, "Repent and be baptized every one you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." And in Acts 22: 16 "Arise and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." This is what the gentleman is opposing. These are the men who have dared to set up the claims which have met the learned hymn's disapproval. Notwithstanding they spake by counsel from on high, uttering only the things of the Lord's house as the Holy Ghost gave them utterance, yet they have, in the doctrine of baptism for the remission of sins, met with opposition at this late date in the church's history. By "experience" and "teaching" and "faith alone" and "heart religion," we are now told that this doctrine taught by men of God, instructed by the Holy Spirit, is wrong, has objectionable features about it and is damning. Why men oppose this part of God's Word, will be readily seen by referring to 2 Tim. 4: 3, 4. And now as the attack is not made on the apostles—oh no, not in the least, of course no; I will deny that, but let the reader refer to Peter and Ananias, and then to the Elder's statement and decide for himself. Do not turn together him or us, but first look at the matter as it stands; first read the apostles, then read the Elder's doctrine and that will decide the matter at once. They say: "Be baptized for the remission of sins." "Arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins," but the Elder actually says, "I denounce it as wrong and sound my objections abroad." It needs no comment, no argument, theological disquisition to assist in a proper interpretation of the difference between the two systems of pardon.

Either Peter and Ananias were wrong, or else our modern apostles has missed the mark, no use of trying to evade the conclusion. Will the Elder tell the readers of the Echo where he received his authority to denounce the apostles in this manner of teaching the design of baptism? Did the Holy Ghost make a slip of the tongue, when He informed them what to say? Is that it? Or has the Spirit of God changed tactics since then? Can he tell? Will he do it? You no doubt think this rough, but the nature of the case demands all we can give, and we do only our simple duty in stating the issue in as plain words as our pen can inscribe. There are no two truths in the universe, that will show a contradiction when contrasted, and yet the elder's article does cross the apostles; hence one or the other is wrong. Whether it is man divinely inspired, who spake only by the Spirit of God, or whether it is an uninspired modern evangelist preaching in the back woods of Va., we leave our readers to judge.

Now here comes his first objection.

Objection No. 1.—If baptism is the procuring act of pardon, it must be repeated every time we wish pardon.

That this objection is a perversion of the proposition he so clearly states above, will be plain to all with only a few words of explanation. He says, "If baptism is the procuring act of pardon," just as if the apostle Peter or Ananias or any other man, who holds the doctrine he opposes, even taught that baptism procures pardon. Presume it will be best to preach the Elder a short sermon as to what we do believe, as he then can oppose the doctrine more lucidly. If he will not understand the Bible, probably he will this. One or two things appear plain, after reading his objection No. 1: either he is woefully misinformed of the Bible on the subject or willfully misrepresents it. This we say in justice to the readers of this article, as well as the first Gospel preachers. The doctrine of baptism for remission, does not teach any more than elder R., that it procures pardon. The blood of Christ only could procure pardon. Man's act cannot procure it. Remission of sins is an act of God, done in heaven for the believers, and not an act done in man. Of himself man cannot forgive sins; God does that. Water does not wash away sins literally, neither does faith procure pardon; nor repentance either. After a man believes, repents, and is baptized, it takes the same pardoning act of God before our sins are remitted; the same as if man had done nothing at all. We repeat, God alone can forgive sins, but He has never promised to forgive any man, while he is impenitent, while he refuses to be baptized. Baptism does not procure pardon—is not of debt, but of grace—is a condition upon the performance of which God graciously grants pardon.

The blood of Christ only cleanses from sin, but man has not the power to apply the blood of Christ literally. This is done in a figure, hence Paul says (Rom. 6: 1-3), "baptized into the death of Christ," not into His burial, for His death was not shed there; but was shed in His death on the cross, hence we are baptized into His death, and thus make a figurative application of the blood of Christ; and thus it is written: "The blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin." Neither does it follow that every time we need pardon, we must be baptized. This again shows the Elder's extreme misunderstanding of the idea embodied in the doctrine he is opposing. Baptism is not an ordinance in the church to be regularly repeated at stated periods, as the Lord's Supper, but as Dr. Conant of the Bible Union, remarks is the "initatory rite of the new institution." It is the consummating act which takes us into Christ. "It is the last step in the divine process of conversion." Paul in Eph. 4: 5 says, "One Lord, one faith, and one baptism." And in Gal. 3: 27, "As many as have been baptized into Jesus Christ have put Him on." Not baptized into Him three, four or five times, but once; this does forever. It brings us in contact with the blood of Christ, "into Christ," into the one body, and then it is written, "His blood cleanseth us from all sin;" and we (the believers), have an Advocate with the Father, when we do sin. We cannot believe into Christ, neither can we repeat into Christ—"the one body," "the church," but we believe in and on Christ, and repeat of our natural God, and are baptized into the church into Christ, the only way, or ever can get into Christ. A man must believe and repent before he is a proper subject for baptism, and baptism to any improper subject is worth nothing or brings nothing.

Objection No. 2.—Some object—cannot you be glad and happy?

What does he mean by this? Does he mean that there are saints who never were baptized? Or is he turning lady-spindler, and pretend that while older persons need not be baptized—hades most, I had it? The doctrine teaches that none but believers are fit subjects for baptism, and when they believe and repent they are qualified subjects for baptism, no sooner. And in accordance with this idea, the Savior declares: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not, shall be damned;" and again (John 3: 5), "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of heaven." Any man out of the kingdom is in an unsaved state, is a sinner, and nothing short of an entrance into the kingdom or body of Christ, will make him a new creature. And we speak by the best authority known to man, when we say, men cannot enter the kingdom without being born again, not of "feeling" and mourner's bench, but of water and of the Spirit. Born of the Spirit alone will not suffice, neither will a birth of water alone do, and any man is outside of the promise of God, without a birth of both; hence any man, unbaptized, needs to be; and as baptism, the last act in conversion, takes us into Christ, we assume man must be baptized before he is whole; for says the Redeemer, "They that are whole need no physician, but they that are sick." This, then warrants the conclusion that none but sinners need be baptized, for all who are not baptized, must be, in order, not only to be saved, but to full communion in all churches of any note, the Elder's church not excepted. Why he makes his church tighter than he does the heavens above, he will tell you a man can enter heaven without baptism, but he cannot be a member of his church without it. Poor fellow, he certainly needs sympathy or a great change.

Objections No. 2.—"The goal of all ages who were not baptized with that intent were lost." The holy of no age were ever lost. The doctrine condemns no man who is holy, no more than our law hangs law-abiding citizens. It only teaches baptism to sinners along with faith and repentance as conditions on which God has promised them pardon, and condemns no good, no holy man of any age. God condemns men with the words of Christ in the last day. The Elder knew there was no argument in this, but wrote it to blind people by a false assertion, and to enlist their sympathies, but the intelligent reader will readily perceive the absurdity of such a course. No man, or set of men, can condemn or preach men to hell. The declare in the hands of God, and according as they have lived, their reward shall be. All we can do will avail nothing in their behalf. The purpose of God towards them is fixed, and it is mischievous and wicked to thus play upon sympathetic hearts. If the doctrine is false, prove it by logic and Gospel, and let the sympathies of men alone.

Objections No. 4.—"Baptism must be received with the design of pardon, otherwise the act is sinful."

This is only a repetition of his third objection and will need but few words to show its absurdity. There is only one way of administering the ordinance, to be repeated, but once in life. To take a man into the one church, and to do this, it must have a proper design, a proper mode, proper subject, and a proper administrator. Anything performed as baptism, outside of the Gospel plan and Gospel design, is but an open mockery in the sight of God, and no baptism at all. It makes no difference what men think about it, their opinions do not change it in the least. Truth is not changed by men's opinions, and if anything was established by the Almighty as a fixed fact, as baptism is in its design, mode and subject, all the prayers of men and the shocking of hell itself cannot change it. God blesses men when they do His will, and it is only by the one who does His will that shall enter heaven (Matt. 7: 21). And the eternal decree of Jehovah is, "If the blind lead the blind, they will both fall into the ditch." This doctrine does not stand judging and condemning the dead, but as a justifier of those who use it as a medium of communion with the blood of Christ. It leaves the dead in the hands of a just and merciful God, which is more civil than Elder R., who continually pulling them out of the grave in view of sympathetic hearts, and that too for the purpose only, of opposing the Holy Ghost in its instructions to man how to baptize, and to wind around their hearts, a system of religion that has no tangible way in the world of entering the church. That makes a man a Christian in a way that no preacher on earth can tell him how. He only knows he is a Christian because he feels so, and only feels so because he knows he is in Christ. Will Elder R. tell in a plain way just how to get into Christ? He cannot do it, for he don't know.

He will get a lot of poor, deluded souls around a mourner's bench, and when they seek Christ with all their might and cannot get through, he utterly ignores the old apostle's way of telling them how to do: "Repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." No sir, not a bit of that; but he will lay the Bible aside, and tell great yarns of how long he sought, before God spoke peace to his soul, and of many others who sought longer; and after some of the honest but deceived creatures, have come night after night, and experienced no change, he will as he and his brethren have often done before, say to them "Why, you're through and don't know it. You're a Christian, and haven't found it out." There never was a man in apostolic times who preached such stuff; and in every instance when men inquired what to do, they were told in a few plain words, and were soon in the church rejoicing. Paul was the longest of any man on record in the Bible getting through. He prayed three days, and then had to be baptized before God would remit his sins.

Objections No. 5.—"Baptismal regenerationists neither believe or practice the doctrine they profess, for they will receive proselytes who have been baptized with other intent."

This cannot be said against those who simply baptize for remission of sins, for they oppose baptismal regeneration as strongly as men can oppose a false theory. Baptismal regeneration teaches that baptism inducts people into the kingdom of heaven without any preparation or change, as in infant baptism where it is supposed to save them, without imparting faith, giving knowledge, or repentance—where the only thing the child receives in the world is a few drops of water, and if it is saved by that, it is a water-salvation, for all it gets is water, and but a few drops at that; while the doctrine of baptism for remission of sins, teaches that baptism alone saves no man, teaches that men must believe and repent before baptism will do any good at all, that baptism is one of the conditions of pardon, and no man can knowingly pass it by and enter into the kingdom. And even if the Elder's objection did hit the mark, if can be hurled back on him with equal force, for he teaches that no man is fit to be baptized until he is pardoned. Thus to use his own weapon, he damns all who are baptized before they have experienced a "feeling," says, they are not nor never were converted, but he will take such, as proselytes, into his church by letter, without even asking them to go to the mourner's bench, that is, if he can get them. If they were not converted, why does he not act consistent and demand that they should be, and then baptize them right on receiving them? Will he tell us? His fifth has missed the mark, let him try again. "Ignorance is bliss." He should not condemn others for doing as he does, certainly not, but probably he is like the Scotch minister who told his people, "Now don't do as I do, but do as I tell you to do."

Objections No. 6.—"The promise has failed and the gates of hell prevail if the doctrine be true."

What doctrine does he mean? Is it the doctrine that says, "Arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins—Repent and be baptized for the remission of sins?" Is that it? Does he mean that? If he does, then the church in the apostolic age was weak, and the doctrine taught then was unavailing. Will the Elder please tell us just what he does mean? Give us a plain, tangible idea of what he means, and is trying to say, for his objection as it is, is too remote to admit of criticism.

Objections No. 7 & 8.—"It sends to hell all pedobaptists, who do not believe as they do."

These two objections being so near the same in signification, we conclude to reply to both. What sends pedobaptists to hell? The doctrine that baptism is for the remission of sins? Did Peter on the day of pentecost when he preached it with such power, say any thing about pedobaptists going to hell? No sir, for there wasn't a pedobaptist in the world for near two hundred years after that day, and mourner's bench baptists, until a date many years later, unless it be Paul who, after trying for three days to enter by faith and prayer alone, was informed by the Lord that, that was not the way to obtain forgiveness, but he must be baptized and then his sins would be pardoned.

If there be anything in his objections it will apply with equal force to the doctrine he preaches, for that says, all who were baptized in order to the remission of sins, were not, and are not converted, and declares that the unconverted are lost, hence all who were baptized for remission of sins are lost. This is the logical conclusion. The Elder should not sling stones, especially when his own house is glass, and before his objections will reach any one else, he must bring a little Scripture in support of his own position. Will he do it? Not he; no indeed, for the fact is he has none to bring.

Objections No. 9, 10 & 11.—"It is strictly sectarian," "It excludes the good and fellowships the bad—in many instances," "It divides the followers of Christ."

While these "objections" are only to fill up space and scarcely worthy a notice, yet we give them a few words through respect to the brother who sent us the request, and its author, who is represented to us as a man of ability. Of course we must reply to "ability" and "education" whether there is anything in the production or not.

That the doctrine of baptism for remission is taught in God's word, we positively know; that man has no promise of salvation without it, is another Gospel fact which the Elder dare not affirm on Bible grounds. If the doctrine is sectarian, we might inquire what made it so? Certainly not Christ or the apostles, for such a thing in their day was unknown, but lately men have departed from the original plan of conversion, and because God's people still adhere to the Gospel they are hissed at as "sectarian," "selfish," and anything but Christians. The gentleman should look higher than the flesh, should look up to God and inquire for truth and then practice it upon the ground of humility and let men alone. The doctrine is either right or wrong on the face of its sanction by the Almighty and not because men call it "sectarian." The Elder is guilty of sectarianism in his denunciation of the doctrine of baptism for remission. Such men as he, are what makes the world sectarian, religiously. If he is so liberal and not sectarian, why does he not fellowship all and leave sectarians to do the opposing? The doctrine is of God and if Elder R. and all others would do just what the Bible teaches, we would have no dry-land-mourner's-bench roads to glory, and protracted seekings, but like the church in early times, and such a thing as sectarianism would be unknown.

That it fellowships bad men in many instances we admit. One among the twelve was a devil. That the Elder's church fellowships many who are bad, we presume he will not try to deny. This for we are even. That it ever excluded a saint he cannot prove. Let him do so if he can. That many who are good morally, are excluded we also admit, but God has not permitted us to invite any but His true followers, the baptized believers to His table, hence we cannot assume to do so.

That it divides the followers of Christ, we emphatically deny. He and his church, and those of like faith are as much to blame for this division as any one else, and more too; for it is they who make it by their departure from the plain way of Christ. The doctrine recognizes no man as born of God until he has complied with the requirements of the Gospel. It makes no difference what he may affirm of himself, his feelings will not do. Like the man who sings by ear, he does not know whether he is right or not; he only feel he is singing correctly, but when he learns the notes, then he knows he is singing correctly, for the notes show the way. So some men save souls, only by their feelings, and do not know whether they are right, they only feel so, but this doctrine recognizes no such Christianity as correct, but follows the notes, God's revelation, His command; and they know they are right, for the Gospel will not lead them wrong.

Objections No. 12.—"It is a doctrine that has no authority in the Kingdom of God, and is the same which has led, and now can lead."

By turning to Rev. 3: 8, the reader will perceive to what a degree this man perverts the passage, "No man can shut it." This language is used in addressing a Christian church relative to their admission into heaven and nothing is more foreign to the truth than to assert that it applies to the unbaptized or the administrator of the rite. The idea of baptism for remission gives the administrator no more power than any other faith. The power of admission into the church is not exclusive of the administrator for baptism. The doctrine teaches that baptism is nothing to an improper subject. That a man must have repentance before he is fit to be baptized, and baptism to any man who has not been changed in heart by faith or in life by repentance, is a mere nothing, obtains nothing, and a minister may baptize any man who has not believed and repented, one thousand times and it will do no good. Hence the reader can see that there is nothing in the Elder's objection unless it be misrepresentation of the doctrine he opposes and perversion of Scripture Rev. 3: 8.

The minister has no power to admit any man into the mystic body of Christ who has not believed and repented. Neither has the man who wants into the kingdom until he believes, repents and is baptized. It takes an administrator and a proper subject before a lawful Gospel baptism is completed, and we might add in this connection, baptism performed by a proper way.

The gentleman now closes his wonderful tirade against Peter and Ananias (Acts 2: 38 and 22: 16) with the following jumble of language which has in it no intelligent argument against anything or any body in particular:

"We are taught in God's word that there is one plan of pardon, that Christ forgave sins without baptism. We should be spiritually minded when we are baptized, which is life, and joy, and peace in the Holy Ghost. We should be dead before buried. There is no medium between life and death, dead to sin, alive to righteousness, the Spirit quickeneth, the sinner's heart is an unclean place. God's Spirit does not dwell in an unclean place—repent and believe the Gospel, believe and be baptized, they that gladly received the word were baptized. If thou believest thou mayest. No man calleth Jesus Christ the Son of God but by the Holy Ghost. Let the reader think of these things."

S. W. P. RICHMOND, Missionary of the A. C. C. in W. Va. Smithfield, Pa.

We admit that there is but one plan of pardon, which God grants on the condition that man believes, repents and is baptized, no sooner, and no later. That Christ forgave sins while He was on earth without baptism, before His crucifixion, we also admit. But that He does so now, we say there is no Scripture to prove. His last command was, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," but "he that believeth not shall be damned." This is the law now, and no man has the promise of forgiveness since Christ's death without baptism. We reply that all are dead out of Christ—dead in sin—dead to God—and the Gospel of Christ is to make us alive and raise us up into heavenly places of Christ. Faith quickens the heart, repentance changes the life and baptism changes the relation—places him in the church or in Christ, which makes him a new creature, and being a new creature, he is alive in Christ and dead to sin. And this is the death we die in conversion, die to sin, but we are not dead to sin until we are in Christ, and no man gets into Christ without being baptized into Him. This we have proved in reviewing the Elder's first "objection." The rest of his ending is so remote from anything in particular that we pass it by, believing we have noticed more now than is worthy a space in our columns. Some, on reading the Elder's article, no doubt will be deceived, but the intelligent reader would at once see the weakness of his reasoning and pass it by as flimsy and unscriptural, and in the main as a total mis-comprehension of the doctrine he opposes. He seems to be fighting an enemy he hardly knows who, but firstly jumps on the apostle Peter and Ananias for teaching baptism for remission of past sins, then fight upon them as "sectarian"—as sending "Pseudo-baptists" and the votaries of the mourner's bench "to hell," and says "They hold the keys" and shut the door, which, he says, Christ says no man can shut; thus declaring that Christ was guilty of what he held the key, "for no man can shut it," and then says, "to prove the Elder correct and Christ has proved a case, he sent the doctrine to be pronounced heretofore." Now the fact as Elder R. was either doubly dishonest when he wrote his wonderful "objections," or did not know what he was opposing and if he is an honest man and love the truth, he will come out and acknowledge his mistake. We cannot prove any man forgiven outside of baptism, since the days of Christ, or even the promise of forgiveness. Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which will testify to the truth of this matter.

Read what we have written closely, and compare it with the Word of God. We have repeated more than would be admissible under other circumstances, but the repetition is unavoidable replying to such articles as the one is we have just reviewed. S. H. R.

The Home Circle.

READ AND OBEY.

- "Husbands, love your wives."
"Wives, obey your husbands."
"Children, obey your parents in all things."

Edited by M. M. Eshelman.

CHARITY is a little dim-sighted at times, but envy and bitterness have eagle eyes.

We rejoice in Gospel progress, the enlightenment of saints and the fidelity of Christian character; but in the downfall of what is not good.

CHARACTER is always in the first person, and the first should care for it. Reputation is in the third person, and the third person generally looks after it.

To press self into an article to such an extent as to force out Jesus, is a sad condition for any writer. That soul needs conversion, and a missionary sent to his house might be productive of good.

Do that which is honest, though you appear as a reprobate. Principle weighs tons; policy is sugar-coated; principle is the same outside as inside, and is never "puffed up," self-willed, bossy nor feathered.

Oh little writers must be patient if their letters do not appear at once. We have heard from many of you, but not from all. Your letters will appear just as fast as we can find room. In the meantime continue to send us letters full of love for Jesus and all men.

All through this year, if spared, we will realize many blessings which are now unknown. God is so good and kind that He never withholds blessings. He does not want us to be disappointed, but to be happy. Godliness brings contentment, and is profitable to all.

MORAY is the kernel, and within the shell from God's standpoint. In His great Book, motives are written in capitals and actions in small letters. With Him it is not only what was done, but why it was done. Motives may be strangled and drowned, but either time or eternity will bring it to the surface.

There are four rests mentioned in God's Book. The first is God's rest when He had finished the work of creation. The second is that of Cainan. The third is the Sabbath rest; and the fourth is "the rest that remains for the people of God." This last is the Christian's strong hope. To rest in Jesus is the grand consummation of all. Children, early seek that rest, and when you find it, abide in it.

If you feel that no human soul existed for about three hundred years after the birth of Christ. The church was governed wholly by the law of God, progressed and flourished in spite of all opposition. The apostles, ministers and teachers went every where preaching the Gospel, and that too whether men would hear or whether they would forbear. They believed in God and wanted others to do that too.

PARENTS will observe that the BROTHERS AT WORK is a good family paper at a low price. In it you will find matter for yourself and for your children. You are not called upon to pay $1.50 for a paper for yourself and 50 cents on $1.00 extra for a monthly paper for your children. And then instead of a monthly publication for the young folks, you have a weekly. This the children appreciate, and we trust that through it many may be induced to seek Jesus early.

BROTHER J. W. RITCHIE of Williams Co., O. says: "I have enjoyed myself very well since I have been received into the church. I have been in the church over two years, and I was but ten years old when I came to Jesus in obedience to Him. I rejoice to hear of others coming to Christ and hope many more will come before it is too late. I am young in the cause, but have no desire to turn back to the world again, but want to go on through this unfriendly world to the end of the journey of life."

That is the way we like to hear boys and girls talk. Do not be afraid to go to Jesus early, and follow Him.

NOT FIT TO BE KISSED.

"WHAT all papa's mouth?" said a sweet little girl. Her bright laugh revealing her teeth white as pearl.
"I love him, and kiss him, and sit on his knee, but the kisses don't smell good when he kisses me!"
"But mamma!"—her eyes opened wide as she spoke—"Do you like nasty kisses of 'Incees and snikes'?"
They might do for boys, but for ladies and girls I don't think them nice," as she tossed her bright curls.

Yes, yes, little darling, your wisdom has seen, that has for daughters and wives should be clean. For kisses—love something of the best and bliss from mouths that are strange and unfit for a kiss.—Schubert.

WHAT TO AVOID.

THIS is for children, and I want them to read it. I don't come to tell you that this is a New Year, for you all know that, but I come to tell you what to avoid. Avoid bad thoughts. They make a bad heart. Avoid bad words. They make people—sensible people feel sad, and sorry for you. God is not in bad words, nor does He smile upon you for them. Avoid forwardness. Don't be first to talk, first to the table, first in the dish and first in the easy chair. Avoid these naughty habits, and grow up good men and women.

Avoid the habit of speaking evil. As you grow up, and men and women don't do just as you command, avoid the degrading habit of going about the country and saying all manner of evil against them. "The face of the Lord is against them that do evil." O it is terrible to have the face of the Lord against you! It is better to have the face of men against us than to have the face of the Lord against us.

Avoid telling in your writing and speaking, what great things you have done. Tell what Jesus did, the holy men and women of old did, and how kind and good others are to you, but never tell into the habit of holding yourself up as a center post, for all others to revolve around. I have seen men get so large in their own estimation that in moving them, travels they stood straight up and made ears, buggies, beds, victuals, congregations, depots, tin-stables, and a host of other things—swing all around them. They were the center pole, and what "I say," "I heard," "I did," was the A-puice all the way through. Now I want none of you little folks to get that big. I write this to you. Big folks won't read it, and if they do, they will say it is only for little folks. They are right. And I hope they will let you have it, for it belongs to you. Profit by these things, avoid all sin.

BE KIND TO THE AGED.

Dear Little Folks:

Will you read a letter from Aunt Sallie? I love to talk to the little folk at Sunday School, but as we have none this Winter, I will talk to you, though not for you are strangers to me.

We read in the Bible of a good old man; his name was Elisha. As he was going from Jericho to Bethel, there came little children out of the city and mocked him and said: "Go up, thou bald head; go up, thou bald head." There came two she-bears out of the wood, and tare forty and two of them. Now children, I hope none of you are like the ones I've been telling you about. Do not mock or make fun of old people. They were once as young as you are, and would walk as straight as you can, and could read and sing, with as steady a voice as you can. Always be kind and pleasant to the aged. If you are in church for any other place and an aged person comes in, and there is no vacant seat, get up and give him your seat. You are young and can stand better than grandpa, or grandma. They will love and respect you for it. God will love you too.

I love to read your little letters. Write again, it will be encouraging to other little folks, and if the editor thinks my letter worth publishing, I will write again on another subject. I must bid you good night. AUNT SALLIE.

Maui-ou-ill, Ill.

TO THE BOYS.

BOYS, I want to tell you a story about Robert and his father, and I want you to think about it often.

Robert's father had told him to keep out of bad company, and yet Robert would sometimes go among bad boys; boys who would use bad language, and his father saw that his son was growing worse, but said nothing at the time.

One evening he brought some very nice red apples on a plate and gave them to his son, who was much pleased with them, and thanked his father very kindly. Robert's father then told him to buy the apples away a few days, to get mellow. Just as Robert was carrying the plate of apples into the room, but was seldom used, his father placed a rotten apple on the plate, and told him to let it remain there.

"But," said Robert, "this apple will spoil all the others."

"Do you think so? Why should not the sound apples rather make the rotten one fish?" said his father.

After some days he told his son to get the apples. But what a sight! The sound apples were all rotten, and the room was filled with a bad odor.

"Oh, father!" said Robert: "Did I not tell you the rotten apple would spoil the good ones? yet you did not listen to me."

"My boy," said the father: "Have I not often told you that the company of bad children will make you bad? yet you do not listen to me. See in the ruin of these apples, that which will happen to you, if you keep company with wicked boys."

Now, my dear boys, when my bad boys want you to join their company, I want you to think of the rotten apple. Boys, the story of the rotten apple may do you good in your boyhood, in your manhood, and in your life beyond the grave. Boys, don't forget the rotten apple.

Lucasville, Ind.

SELF-DENIAL.

SELF-DENIAL is an important lesson that all should learn. If we do not learn in youth, we may grow up to be very unhappy men and women. It may be rather hard sometimes to control our own selfish desires, but we will find by so doing we will accomplish a great deal of good.

Have you ever noticed the difference among your playmates, between the one who always tries to make everything pleasant and everyone happy, and one who does more? On the other hand notice a child of a selfish disposition—one that does not try to cultivate a generous tone, such an one will indulge in sin and folly more and more as he grows older, and will finally become miserable himself. No little children will go to such, expecting to find a place in their affections, for their very selfishness will cause every one to turn from them, feeling that in their hearts there is no warmth. We all like good, generous people. Then let us try to cultivate generosity, which we may do by first practicing self-denial. May we ever remember this important thing, for a great deal of the trouble in after life is the consequence of its neglect. I wish we were all wise enough to know that a good-hearted, self-denying and generous person exerts an influence that will live throughout time and to all eternity.

ANNA RYAN-PHILIP.

TO PARENTS.

PARENTS, are we getting our children the encouragement we should, that they may become workers in the Lord's vineyard? How do we educate them to read and write? By waiting until they are grown up, and then reasonably expect them to immediately become acquainted with a knowledge of it. No, but by study, and a practical use of the pen they are made acquainted with these things. How do they acquire the knowledge of neat, practical farming and gardening? By coming out over the fields and garden without restraint. No, but the industrious parent that follows those vocations has many little jobs for them to do. If there is work to be done in the field we take the little boys along and have them do what they can. If there is work to do in the garden, we take them there and have them do what they can.

Then why is it that we do not take them into the Lord's vineyard and educate them more there by pointing out some special event or occurrence and have them read and read it to them, and entering into a social conversation with them about it, help them to reason and to get at the idea or lesson that is taught. A page has been opened in the BROTHERS AT WORK for the special reading and instruction of the little readers. Help them write; help them to understand God's ways and laws, then we can say we have "brought up our children in the admonition and nurture of the Lord." W. K. SIMMONS. Union City, Ind.

CHILDREN AT WORK.

From S. J. Price.—Dear Editor:—I think the BROTHERS AT WORK is a good paper. I read it through every week, and can hardly wait until it reaches me; but when it comes I look with anxiety for news from brethren Hope, Eby and Fry, who have crossed the deep waters to call sinners home to God. May God favor their work, and help all to hold out faithful. Pan Creek, Ill.

From Joseph Burgard.—Dear Editor:—I am twelve years old, and one of the fatherless. It pleased the good Lord to call my dear father home when I was eight years old. Then my mother was left a poor widow, so I was compelled to go out, and am now staying with my uncle Isaac Meyers and go to school with cousin Katie. I hope I may grow up a good man, so that I may meet my dear father in a better world. Astoria, Ill.

From Freddie Horner.—My Dear Friends:—I am going to school and learning very fast. I am twelve years old, and go to Sunday School. I love to write for the Children at Work. I want all the little boys and girls, who read this, to do good and obey their parents, so that when death comes they can die in peace and dwell with Jesus. I am trying to obey the will of God. Leacock, Ill.

From Sadio Miller.—Dear Editor:—You were once my dear teacher when we lived near Lancaster. We now live in Iowa. I am ten years old, and go to school to Mr. Zuk. I love my teacher. My papa and sister Minnie are members of the church, and I hope when I grow up I will too, and be a good woman. Pa went to meeting to-day twelve miles from here. He walked to the road, and rough. We do not get to meeting as often as when we lived in Ill. I often cry myself or mairy because we cannot go often, but we hope for the better. Chicago, Iowa.

From Katie Myers.—Dear Editor:—I have read so many good little letters, written by the little folks, and I want to say a little too. When the paper comes to our house we all want it first. Papa wants it, mamma wants it and I would like to have it too; then papa generally reads it to me. I hope that you are nearly all going to Sunday School. When we live the Brethren have no Sunday School. I wish they had I would go. We live quite a ways from the meeting-house, and seldom get to meeting. I am eleven years old. Astoria, Ill.

From George S. Shirk.—Dear Editor:—I love to hear from all the little folks, and also from the brethren in Denmark. I go to school and like my teacher very well. I went to Sunday School Yes, Sunday, but it has closed for the Winter. I am twelve years old. Delmar Mills, Ill.

From Mary J. Bowers.—Dear Editor:—I am ten years old, and go to school. I like my teacher. I read in the Fourth Reader, study Geography, Arithmetic and spelling. I love to go to meeting, and read the Bible. I like your paper too. I have one little brother six years old, and three sisters. One of them is eight years old, and she intends to wait to you too. My grandpa and grandma Bowers live in Iowa. They are quite old. I like to go to see them. I had with them three weeks last Spring. Whitehall, Iowa.

From J. P. Snyder.—Dear Editor:—You want a little boy and girl to write for you worthy paper, which I love to read. I am going to school. My teacher's name is James McKeon. He is a very good teacher. My work morning and evening is to feed the calves and carry in wood. I am ten years old. At present my mamma is in Illinois. I go to meeting with pa and ma. I love to hear them talk about Jesus, who blessed little children and said, "of such is the kingdom of heaven." Colfax, Kansas.

From Christie Kaufman.—Dear Editor:—I am a little girl eleven years old. I have one little brother, but no sister. I have a dear papa and mamma. I love them, and I love my little brother too who is only six years old. My name gets the BROTHERS AT WORK, and I like to read in it of my dear Saviour. I love Him, because He is so kind to me. I think everybody ought to love Him. I go to Sunday School, and there learn many things about my dear Jesus. I go to day-school, and like my teacher and play mates. I love everybody. Brown, Ind.

The most valued gift is the One given by God and laid in the manger in Bethlehem. It was given to every man, woman and child on earth.

CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM DENMARK.

Dear Brethren:—
A cold waters to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country (Proverbs 25:24). This proverb is very suggestive, and is especially applicable to our purpose at this time, being in a far country, and having good news to write in reference to the mission in Denmark.

The first Love-feast ever held in Denmark according to the example of Christ and His apostles, (that we have any account of at least) was celebrated on the evening, or night of the 18th inst. and is now among the things of the past; but the effect to be remembered through life, and the fruit of it (eternal life) to be reaped in the Kingdom of God or Father's Kingdom, where Jesus said He would eat anew with His disciples (Matt. 26: 29).

The morning of the 18th having come, we all made ready to journey towards the house of brother C. Hope, (it being a fair day) the place appointed for the feast; and having about fifteen miles to go, we took the train twelve miles, at the end of which we met a team. Some of the company (being about twelve in number) got on the wagon while the rest of us went on foot. On arriving at the house at about nine o'clock, Bro. Hope met us with several letters from our children and kind friends in northern Ills., containing much encouragement. Also a copy of the BRETHERN AT WORK in its enlarged form, containing much interesting matter, and having plenty of latitude for our brethren editors to deviate from their excellent, original platform. Hope better things however, though we thus speak, and things that accompany salvation. Hope it will meet the approbation of all, and hence be patronized by the general brotherhood. We also receive the Linn Star regularly, giving us the news from near home. The fact of receiving much encouraging news at that time added much to our enjoyment at the meeting.

The meeting commenced at ten o'clock, and after meeting we resorted to the water where two persons were buried with Christ by baptism, according to Matt. 28: 19, the one being a young man who had embraced the principles of religion, as taught and practiced by the Friends, and for some considerable length of time traveled around advocating the doctrine he so fondly cherished, but some way came in contact with some tracts published by the Brethren, and on examination found they contained more Scriptural truths than the doctrine of non-resistance alone, which he loved so much. He therefore began to distribute them; but upon further examination he became convinced of the necessity of leaving that Prophet, Jesus Christ, in various, not only in part, and came and said to Bro. Hope, that "it is not only hard, but inconsistent to sell one thing and practice and preach another," demanded baptism like the church, and is now going on his way, seemingly rejoicing. The other was Bro. Hansen's wife, lately from Norway, thus adding two more to the little flock, making in all fifteen, five brethren and four sisters.

We then returned to the house, and after dinner we called the members all together and instructed them more fully in the order of the Gospel as practiced by the church, and then proceeded to elect one brother to the ministry, and one to the office of deacon, the lat falling on Bro. C. O. Eskildsen for the ministry and on Bro. C. Nielsen for deacon. Brother Hope was also advanced to the second degree in the ministry. The members all seem to be very much in love and union, and seemed to act in church matters as scholars well advanced, thus proving that they were going to the same school, and learning out of the same book, and from the same Teacher that we have in America.

There was excellent order at the meeting, and from what we could see and judge, some more widely impressed, and are coming the most. Hope and pray that the Lord may give a large increase to the little sister church in Denmark, that her branches may spread like the green bay tree, and that she may go forth clear as the sun, but as the moon, and terrible as an army with banners, and that the slain of the Lord may fall by hundreds at her feet, the rebellion in Europe against the God of heaven may be subdued, and the law and government of the Prince of peace may prevail, the letters of vice and animosity that had its victims as with a cart-trap to the great engine of degradation and destruction may be broken, the soul let go free to rejoice in the glorious liberty of the children of God. The church being the instrument which the Lord uses to accomplish His work, it will not do for her to fold her arms, and be at ease. She must come out from her hiding place and meet the enemy boldly and fearlessly, and fight the enemy in every land, for we sing,

The saints in all that glorious war, Shall conquer though they die.

Much remains to be done, and the time is short. Every brother and sister should feel the same interest in spreading the Gospel and saving sinners that our blessed Lord did. And let us for one moment consider the work He did in so short a time, and then try and imitate His example, though we may not always have whereon to lay our heads. He became poor that we through His poverty might be made rich. We have sometimes thought how many might be made rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom, who are now sitting in darkness and starving for the want of the bread of life, if all our brethren and sisters would only appropriate that which is only a hindrance to their own spiritual progress, to the spread of the Gospel and the salvation of sinners. What a great blessing it might prove to mankind in general, and to no disadvantage financially to the donor, for he would not be required to sacrifice any of the comforts of life, simply a small proportion of his surplus. Surely such a course would meet the smiles and approbation of our Heavenly Father, and receive a full reward, for a cup of cold water administered in the name of a disciple does not lose a reward. How much less a free-will offering thrown into the treasury of the Lord for the salvation of sinners.

But we are aware of the fact that while many of our dear brethren and sisters are given to hospitality, and liberal in communicating to the temporal wants of the church, and even humanity in general, they nevertheless do not seem to see and feel the necessity of administering to the spiritual wants of the church and the world as much as we think it would be their privilege to feel. But we feel gratified with the increased interest of the church on that point for the last ten years. ESOMT EBY.

FROM FALLS CITY, NEB.

WHEN I last wrote I was at Grant River, Gentry Co., Mo., where are seven members, and they ought to have a minister move among them and preach for them. I had some meetings with them and in my humble judgment, a church could soon be organized, had they a minister among them. From here I went to the North-east corner of Nodaway Co., near the Iowa line. Here were three members. I stayed with them nearly one week; preached only seven sermons for them, two evenings being too dark and stormy for meeting. There are now seven members; and three more applicants, and would have been baptized, but want their certificate from their former church (Campbellite) first. And there is a good prospect for a number more soon if they can have preaching. The above two places belong to Whitesville church, Mo. Bro. Joseph Basher and Daniel Glick are the ministers.

Thence I came thirty miles to the South-west corner of Nodaway Co. Here are five members belonging to Bethel church, Holt Co., Mo., where Joseph and Joel Glick are the ministers. In this church I gave them nine meetings at three different places.

Now, what ministers will volunteer to go to the above named places in Gentry and Nodaway counties, so churches may be organized soon? JOHN FRENCH, SEN.

A SAD ACCIDENT.

ON the morning of the tenth of December, a beautiful young lady by the name of Eliza Mason, a teacher by profession, met with a terrible death. She lived with her grandfather three miles North of Tipton, Iowa, but at the time of the accident was stopping with her uncle, Mr. Reader. Mrs. Reader was sick, and Miss Mason took upon herself the household duties. On the morning mentioned she turned down the wick of the kerosene lamp, and finding the light rather dim, turned up the wick again when the lamp instantly exploded, throwing its contents over her, and parts of the room. Being enveloped in flames, she still had presence of mind sufficient to run out of the room where the sick woman lay, but Mrs. R. seeing two of the children following her, sprang out of bed and brought them back, extinguishing the flames, then fell fainting on her bed.

In the meantime Miss Mason picked up a blanket from a bureau and ran into the yard where her cries attracted the attention of two of her uncles who had just left the house. They both ran to assist, the one to Miss Mason, and the other to the house to save his dear wife and children. But the flames had already done its work on Miss Mason, and she lay terribly burned her clothes having all been consumed. It is said that the flames ran up for about eight feet, and no mortal could endure such a burning. She lived amid terrible suffering for seven hours when death brought relief. Two of the best physicians were employed, but all to no purpose.

Here was a young lady in the prime of life, twenty-one years old, with the hopes of a long and useful life, snatched away in an instant without a moment's warning. Her parents had gone on before her, and there remains only a dear sister to brave the trials of life. The deceased was followed to her last resting place by a large number of people. There they laid her who bore her terrible sufferings with Christian patience. O dear reader may this be a warning for us all! When we think peace and safety is ours, then sudden destruction comes. This is given as a warning, that all may be prepared to go hence, for "we shall die and not live."

BESS F. MILLER.

Clarence, Iowa.

FROM C. HOPE.

Dear Brethren:—
IT has been sometime since I sent you any news, but our dear brother Enoch Eby has kept you informed of the labors here. The arrival of the brethren and sisters and the preparatory arrangements for our Love-feast kept me very busy, so that I had no time to write. God be thanked for sending them and prospering the cause here. We now have an organized church numbering fifteen souls. One sister was baptized shortly after the brethren and sisters arrived, and at our Love-feast brother Hansen's wife and a young Quaker were received into fellowship by confession and baptism. This young brother used to travel and preach, and for a time had worked hard against us, but on reading Sabbathism and Our Faith was induced to visit me. This visit was so pleasant that it brought forth several others, and he was present to hear four discourses on the divisions of the Law and the Gospel, and practical obedience to the New Testament requirements. Finally he wrote me a letter stating that he could resist no longer, and humbly begged to be received into the church.

On last Sunday evening he, brother Hansen and I went ten miles south of this where this young brother had been working, and held a meeting. The congregation was large, and we addressed them from Heb. 1: 1, and so much interest was manifested that we were constrained to make another appointment for the 22nd. Two persons, man and wife, could scarcely leave us. They both followed us a long distance, and only after an hour's conversation could we get away from them. The woman exclaimed in the presence of many, that for five long years had she waited patiently to see us, and thanked God that now He had permitted her this privilege. Both, no doubt, will come to Jesus.

Bro. Eby does well, speaking sentences by sentence, people are very anxious to come, see and hear the American brethren and sisters. All are favorably impressed with the manner and plainness of our people, and have good hopes of the success of the mission. This is good, and will go far towards helping along the work.

FROM NORTH-EASTERN OHIO.

NEWS AND NOTICES.

THE affairs of Zion are moving along prosperously in this part of her territory at present. The different congregations seem to be active and zealous in provoking one another to love and good works, and its ministers generally are laboring to promote peace and good will among the members. And while a higher standard of piety is labored for among those who have already professed Christ, the important duty of carrying on an aggressive warfare into the enemy's country, has not been overlooked. Societies of meetings have been held at various contemplation in many, if not all of the congregations, and have already been accomplishing much good. Bro. James Robinson from West Virginia is heart and soul engaged in wielding the Gospel sword—that noble instrument before which devils quake—in several of the congregations, and other evangelists from abroad are expected to come during the Winter to assist in besieging the stronghold of the enemy.

The home mission labor has also been blessed with marked success in its efforts to extend the borders of Zion. In Belmont Co. where but a single brother resided he labored for brethren John Nicholson and Joseph Beer, through their persevering labors have succeeded in influencing quite a little flock (twelve or fifteen I believe) in accepting the grace of God to the joy of their souls. May the good work be continued in this and other directions.

Eld. James Quinter having preached several of his effective sermons in the Ashland congregation which were followed up by the home ministers in their usually effective manner, and the result has been a glorious one for the Master. The educational enterprise at the latter place is still pushed with vigor, and from present appearances there is not a single cloud either great or small, overshadowing its final and permanent success, that has not a silver lining underneath. A union of efforts by the friends of education is very desirable, but local self-interest is a poor thing to unite on. "United we stand," providing we have a solid foundation to stand upon. We cordially invite all to unite with us on the solid and broad foundation of disinterested love for the cause, for its own sake. May the cause of Christ continue to prosper. E. L. YONK.

Madisonburg, Ohio, Dec. 20, 1877.

FROM CLARK CO., MO.

Dear Brethren:—
WHEN I consider how fast people live, how careless and unconcerned they are about their soul's salvation, I am made to tremble. It is sad when we behold how many profess to love Jesus and by their appearance and actions you cannot tell them from the world, only when you see them in the church at worship.

My prayer is, that God may send some of His people here to tell the true story of the Cross. I have prayed to God to so direct that I may reach some place where I can hear at least one sermon from the Brethren. When I read in the BRETHERN AT WORK of the many who turn unto the Lord in other places, I rejoice, but then I feel sorry that none at this place know the Lord by full obedience. I hope some of the brethren will pass through here and at least stop over night and preach. We are plain folks here. I think I saw one or two brethren pass through here on the train. I hope some will come. God will reward you. We need missionaries in our land as well as in Europe. M. E. ROSE.

Alexandria, Mo.

[Will some of the Brethren in Missouri please attend to this call?—Eds.]

FROM PLYMOUTH, IND.

THIS is to inform the readers of your worthy paper that our church is still in a healthy condition, thank God. I can say, since brethren Bashor and Calvert were here there seems to be more life than there was before they came and labored for us so faithfully. While Bro. Bashor was here, which was eight days, there were eight baptized and one reclaimed. Bro. Jesse Calvert stayed one week after Bro. Bashor left and baptized six more, making fourteen, and one restored.

We thank the good Lord that He blessed the dear brethren that they came to us and labored so faithfully. I pray God to bless the laboring brethren, that they will travel more than ever in these last and dark days we have got into, as there are so many false prophets; and even many are deceived with the Bible in their hands. O! dear brethren is it not a joy that we have the rising generation educated, and then they will let themselves be deceived with the Bible in their hands? How necessary it is for us all to watch and fight valiantly.

How good it is to have our brethren preach and explain the truth as it is in Jesus in their papers! I wish the Primitive Christian and the BRETHERN AT WORK could be found in all our houses, at least should they be found in the members' houses, and the rich should help lay for the poor; and by having the brethren's periodicals to read, many will learn the truth that may never hear an true Gospel sermon preached, and thereby many of our members that live away from the brotherhood will hear the brethren preach. I have traveled and met with dear members that said they had not heard a brother preach for twenty years. May God bless us to do more than ever. JOHN KNISLEY.

FROM RAY CO., MO.

Dear Brethren:—
I HAVE just closed a series of meetings in Ray Co., Mo. They were stopped on account of the bad state of the roads and much rain. The congregation were good and the interest excellent. Several made application for baptism. Their wants will be attended to by the brethren there. I much regretted the necessity of closing the meeting in the midst of such excellent prospects, but had to submit to circumstances. D. B. GUNSON.
Percin, Mo.

NO DISCUSSION IN CARTHAGE.

[The following is the correct evidence relating to a public discussion that was to have been held in Carthage, Mo., between the Baptists and the Brethren; but as the Baptists refused to defend their practice in a clearly stated proposition, the discussion will not take place. A careful reading of the following letters will be sufficiently explanatory.—Eds.]

Letter No. 1.

CARTHAGE, MO., AUG. 15, 1877.

Mr. John Wampler—

SIR:

Some weeks since I was informed by Bro. W. M. Plank, that you desired to know whether I would discuss the mode (action) of baptism, with Mr. Stein, one of your preachers? I told him to say to you that I would. A few days after this I left for the Missouri river, and after an absence of nearly two weeks I returned, and the following Lord's day night Bro. Plank said that you desired to know whether I was willing to have such a discussion in Carthage? I informed Bro. Plank that if the congregation here desired it, I would be willing to hold it. According to the message received from you, Mr. Stein is to affirm the following proposition.

"That the Scriptures authorize the Trine immersion, face foremost in water, of a believing penitent." I will negative it. Last Lord's day the subject was brought before the congregation here, and it was unanimously decided that such a discussion would be approved of by them, when your people shall have given Mr. Stein a written endorsement, to affirm this proposition, (the congregation then will do the same for me). I will be ready sometime in October to meet him. I am so employed it will be impossible for me to do so before. Such a discussion, of course, must take place in the evening between the hours of 7:30 and 10 o'clock.

Very respectfully,

W. R. CUNNINGHAM.

Letter No. 2.

HOME, NEAR CARTHAGE, MO., AUG. 16, 1877.

Friend W. R. Cunningham—

Your note of the 15th has been received, and I confess that I am a little surprised at one thing from the reading of your note. Any one but myself would be led to believe that I have challenged you, or that I was the first to ask such a discussion. We, men people, do not seek such discussions, but meet them, that is when our faith and practice are assailed, we defend them, believing it to be our duty to be ready to give an answer to every man who may ask us for a reason of the hope that is in us. In this case friend Plank first told me that you published, that some time in the near future you would come out to our School-house and preach against trine immersion. I then remarked that if you did so, we would defend the practice. I think I named Bro. Stein as one, and to defend the truth in this matter, and after friend Plank again saw you, he informed me that you said that you were ready to discuss the matter with Bro. Stein, or any other man. I felt that this was a very strong assertion, and caused me to feel a strong desire that our people should meet it; but as the object of such discussions is a should be to enlighten the people and spread the truth, it makes but little difference to the people who first offers to discuss.

Bro. Stein has not said, whether he would or not discuss the matter with you, but I give it as my own opinion that he will, but should he decline, we hope you will stand by your proposition, to discuss it with any other man. I sent your note to Bro. Stein, asking him to write to you. If he is to assert that trine immersion as practiced by our people, is authorized by the Gospel, and you negatively, then the matter should be reversed, and you affirm that single immersion as your church practice, is authorized by the Gospel, and undoubtedly I prefer if there is a discussion, it include other points of difference between us. However as I sent your note to Bro. Stein, I shall at present say nothing more, only that I wish you to write me if you think I have not stated your first propositions correctly.

Respectfully yours,

JOHN WAMPLER.

Letter No. 3.

NEWTONIA, NEWTON CO., MO., AUG. 31, 1877.

Mr. W. R. Cunningham, Carthage, Mo.—

DEAR SIR:

Yours of the 15th inst. to Bro. John Wampler was sent me by him, some time ago, with a request for me to correspond with you in regard to a proposed debate. This is my first opportunity for doing so, after obtaining the counsel of the Brethren here and with him, in which the decision of both congregation is, that I should try and meet you in discussion. The following language, however, in your letter to Bro. Wampler that "According to the message received from you, Mr. Stein is to affirm the following proposition, to wit: 'That the Scriptures authorize the trine immersion, face foremost, in water of a believing penitent.'" I shall negative it," appears to me a little dictatorial for Christian courtesy. I desire that we shall determine the propositions for debate with mutual satisfaction and fairness, and inasmuch as I am informed that the question did not originate with our people, but from a desire expressed by one of your brethren (Mr. W. M. Plank) to hear the matter investigated and a remark from you to him (W. M. P.) that you would "discuss it with Stein or any other man," it does seem to me that you should reasonably expect to entertain an affirmative proposition respecting the teaching and practice of your own church. Inasmuch therefore as your proposition contains two distinct issues between us, and we are agreed that "a believing penitent" is the Scriptural subject of baptism, I therefore submit the following propositions, which as far as I am capable of judging, cover the whole promises, define clearly and accurately the teaching and practice of both churches on the subject, and are therefore impartial and just.

PROV. 1st. Christian Baptism is administered by a single dip of the candidate under the water with an invocation of the Holy Trinity. Will you affirm? I will deny.

PROV. 2nd. Christian Baptism is administered by immersing the candidate "FOR" or "INTO" each of the three divine names, to wit: Father, Son and Holy Spirit. I will affirm. Will you deny?

PROV. 3rd. In administering Christian Baptism, the candidate is Scripturally immersed by a forward, bowing posture. I will affirm. Will you deny?

PROV. 4th. In administering Christian Baptism the candidate is Scripturally laid backwards under the water. Will you affirm? I will deny.

Oct. would suit me best for the debate were it not for previous engagements, which I have about one hundred and fifty miles north of us, extending from the early part of Oct. to the middle of Nov. If other parties are agreed, the Lord willing, I will meet you in discussion the last week in Nov. The time of day you proposed is from 7:30 to 10 o'clock P. M. That will not suit me at all. 1st. Because my habitual hours of rest come much earlier than 10 o'clock, from which habit I cannot depart without corresponding impairment of physical and mental vigor for the time being. 2nd. It will be desirable on several accounts for me to spend my rest at a brother's house a few miles from town, in order to reach which, I would have to ride through the cool night air exposing vocal organs, as well as general health. 3rd. It would still be harder on our brethren and sisters and the country people generally, who live out miles from town and will be anxious to attend, while the town people in either case will have but a few rods to go. I propose therefore that it shall take place between the hours of 9 A. M. and noon, allowing each disputant three half hour speeches, for as many days as will be necessary to complete the arguments pro and con.

Respectfully submitted,

J. W. STEIN.

Letter No. 4.

CARTHAGE, MO., SEPT. 12, 1877.

Mr. J. W. Stein—

DEAR SIR:

Yours of Aug. 31st received, examined and duly considered. It is useless to multiply words as to the origin of our present correspondence, for it in no way affects the truth for which we all should be searching. I could never consent to appear before the people with four propositions upon a subject that can be fully covered by one, especially since your declaration that we harmonize as to the believing penitent, which of course necessitates the dropping of the expression. The proposition, of course, then, that would bring out the truth, would be: Trine immersion is Scriptural baptism. You affirm, I deny.

I've consulted with our congregation as to the time for holding the discussion. They do not object to Nov. but suggest it would be better to commence about the 19th or 20th, for the reason that it will then be the full moon. The time from 6:30 to 8:30 P. M., then occupying time for four half hour speeches. It is a settled question that there can be no discussion if it must be held during the hours in which labor is performed, for we expect our audience principally in the town, from among those who perform daily labor in the shop, or at the counter. A comfortable house will be provided for you among our brethren in the town, and each morning you can go to the country, if you desire. Your animal will also be cared for.

As to the appointment of Moderators, I would suggest that three are sufficient; you selecting one, I one, and those selecting a third, who shall be their chairman.

Respectfully,

W. R. CUNNINGHAM.

Letter No. 5.

NEWTONIA, MO., SEPT. 21, 1877.

Mr. W. R. Cunningham—

DEAR SIR:

Yours of the 12th inst. came duly to hand, and would have been promptly answered, but for a protracted sickness of intermittent fever from which I have suffered for some time. Accept thanks for the proffered hospitality of your brethren which will be accepted if needed. Considering the circumstances I will accept all the arguments proposed in your letter, except the proposition for debate. Your letter to Bro. Wampler of the 15th ult. just brought forward the subject of the forward vs. backward action in baptism, on very distinct issue between us, which, I think, for truth's sake should be brought clearly before the public mind. Hence the propositions I offered on that subject, which, I shall certainly not decline to discuss on equal terms. You can do so, if you wish.

Respecting what I am to affirm I prefer my own wording as before proposed, viz: "Christian Baptism is administered by immersing the candidate for or into each of the three divine names viz. Father, Son and Holy Spirit." This is a proposition that contains our position, and which, I insist you shall negative, unless you can point out features, wherein it fails, correctly, clearly and fully to state our teaching and practice on the subject. If one proposition fully covers the question under consideration, as you intimate, then two affirmative propositions (if your object is to save time) need occupy no more time than one, provided our matter is arranged accordingly. Here I will state one for all, that if you will not consent to affirm your teaching and practice, as you propose I shall do mine (to which I have never yet objected) on the point to be debated, the discussion as far as I am concerned is at an end, and the Brethren may supply another disputant if they wish. In all debates, the truth itself supplies a natural advantage in the premises.

This should not only be desired, but should fully satisfy all, who love and wish to know the truth. Any other advantage sought, or obtained in the premise of a discussion, is unequal and unjust, notwithstanding custom may be the contrary. Considering the rule given us, by our blessed Master, (Matt. 7:12) on what principal of christian right, justice, or reason, can you ask us to affirm our views for you to deny, and at the same time refuse to affirm your views for us to deny? Are your views not called in question as well as ours? Should I affirm our views and you not affirm yours, the whole discussion would turn (according to proposition) upon our teaching and practice, throwing the entire burden of proof upon myself, while your teaching and practice might be screened from public examination, if you wished. Please let me hear from you again at your very earliest convenience.

Respectfully,

J. W. STEIN.

Letter No. 6.

NEAR LAMAR, BARTON CO., MO. SEPT. 28, 77.

Mr. J. W. Stein—

DEAR SIR:

Yours of the 21st inst. is at hand, was forwarded from Carthage. From yours I extract, "Considering the circumstances, I will accept all the arrangements proposed in your letter, except the proposition for debate, which then leaves the question as to whether I will accept your verbiage in the proposition: 'Christian Baptism is administered by immersing the candidate for or into each of the three divine names, viz: Father, Son and Holy Spirit.'" As you say, "this is a proposition that contains our position and which I insist you shall negative."

I therefore inform you that you shall not be disappointed for I will negative your proposition. As, according to your language, the above proposition "Contains our (your) position," it therefore is unnecessary that we have a separate proposition on forward action, for if your position is correct by this proposition it contains the "forward action." It will be soon enough for you to cry out, when in our discussion, I shall attempt to screen the doctrine of the church of Christ. Now as you have my acceptance of your proposition as quoted in this, it only remains for you to say whether it, the discussion, shall take place about the 19th of Nov. or the week following. Address me at Carthage.

Respectfully,

W. R. CUNNINGHAM.

Letter No. 7.

NEWTONIA, MO., OCT. 8, 77.

Mr. W. R. Cunningham—

DEAR SIR:

Yours of the 28th inst. at hand. When I said "except the proposition for debate," I did not simply mean to insist on the verbiage of my own proposition, but also that there must be another proposition affirming your position as my letter plainly stated. When I said "this proposition contains our position," I meant of course on the POINT which it stated, not on any which it did not state, which it seems to me any rational mind ought to understand. You have dropped the forward vs. backward action. If you wish to take it up again, do so in an intelligent form, dividing the affirmative labor and I will discuss it with you, or since you seem to have such strong antipathy to a plurality of propositions affirm the backward action and I will negative it. The 20th of Nov., at 6:30 P. M. will suit me to commence, (the Lord willing).

I have never supposed that you had any disposition to "screen" the "doctrine of the church of Christ," but your whole course during our correspondence in refusing to name and respond to any suggestions, propositions or statements, I have made, looking to an affirmation on your part, of your position has convinced me in the belief that you are disposed to screen your single-dip view of baptism and this I must believe, unless in your next letter you agree to affirm a proposition in its support. In all my letters I have insisted that you affirm your proposition on the single action (in baptism) and in my last letter I most particularly stated it, as a FINAL CONDITION of the debate (as far as I was concerned) get in no instance have you seemed to pay any attention to this part of the correspondence, whatever. I propose again that you affirm the following proposition, or ITS EQUIVALENT, viz: "Christian baptism is administered by a SINGLE DIP of the candidate under the water with an invocation of the Holy Trinity." If you will do this, the conditions of the debate are settled, as far as I am concerned. If you will not, this is my LAST LETTER and the correspondence goes to press. Your next letter will decide the matter. Please let me hear by return mail.

Respectfully,

J. W. STEIN.

Letter No. 8.

CARTHAGE, MO., OCT. 11, 77.

Mr. J. W. Stein—

DEAR SIR:

Yours of the 8th inst. is in my possession, and I must confess that I am much surprised to see your opinion so much disturbed, because I will not let you have your own way about this correspondence, that is, write your side of it and then have me answer just to suit your whims. You would have me do just as a certain farmer had his colored boy Joe do, but your great trouble is, I will not be obedient unto your orders. As you seem disposed to have our correspondence go to press, I will let the readers know how it was with the farmer and Joe.

[The following is most too ridiculous to go before a religious public, but it certainly shows to what some men will at times stoop when driven to the wall.—Eds.]

The farmer had a field covered with sod made by the famous Kentucky blue-grass, and when the Spring came, he decided to have the sod turned over. So having supplied Joe with a pair of horses, a set of harness, and a suitable plow, the farmer guided Joe with his equipments to the said field in which were grazing some cattle, and among them was a certain white cow, to which the farmer called the attention of Joe, for to plow, a land must be marked out, and to accomplish this, there must be some object by which the plowman shall be guided. "Joe," said the farmer, "do you see that white cow?" "Yes sah," said Joe. "Now," said the farmer, "I am going away, and while I'm gone, you'll just follow that white cow; I'll be back in the afternoon to see how you are getting along. Do you hear me sir?" "Yes sah," said Joe, "and I'll do just zackly so you say, sah." The farmer took his departure, the cow grazed peacefully, Joe followed her with his plow, and the farmer returned according to his promise, but to his amazement Joe had simply wandered and scratched all over the field, but had done no plowing. "Joe," shouted the farmer, "what have you been doing sir?" "Just prezakely what you told me sah: foller dat cow all de day long; Joe always do what you tell him, sah," said the obedient negro.

Now sir, from the time this correspondence commenced with you, you have taken an object irrelevant to the proposition you were to affirm, and like that white cow, you have gone grazing peacefully around, and because I would not do as you desired, follow whithersoever you wandered, then you became convinced that I am disposed to screen my "single-dip" views of baptism. Indeed! but how did you come into the possession of your wonderful knowledge concerning my "single-dip" views of baptism? When, as you well know that prior to this time, I never wrote one word to you about "single-dip baptism," and now is the first time in all my writing, or talking that I ever made use of such an outlandish, unscriptural expression, for as the Bible tells me nothing about "single-dip baptism," I know nothing of it. I suppose however if I would suffer myself to wander out into Babylon, where you are, I might learn something of it. My views sir, of baptism are found in the New Testament, and I am constrained to believe you would be much benefited if you would study that word and tradition less. From my first letter, you will know that our debating depended upon your affirming "trine immersion," and my denying it, and is you did not intend to do this, why did you not say so, and let the correspondence stop? In yours of the 21st of Sept., you say, "Respecting what I am to affirm, I prefer my own wording as before proposed, viz. Christian Baptism as administered by immersing the candidate for or into each of the three Divine names, viz. Father, Son and Holy Spirit. This is a proposition which contains our position, and which I insist you shall negative, unless you can point out features, wherein it fails, correctly, clearly and fully to state our teaching, and practice on the subject." In my letter of the 28th of Sept., I quoted your proposition, and a portion of the sentence that immediately followed it, and then said, "I therefore inform you that you shall not be disappointed, for I will negative your proposition." In yours of the 8th of Oct. you say: "When I said, 'this proposition contains our position, I meant of course on the POINT which it stated, not on any which it did not state, which it seems to me any rational mind ought to understand.'" Now the quotation from the 21st of Sept., correctly, clearly and fully states our (your) teaching and practice on the subject? What subject? Of course your position on the subject about which you were writing. But when your proposition is accepted, and you discover you are cornered, then you come in the letter of Oct. 8th, and declare it don't cover your position. Stein of Sept. 21st, and Stein of Oct. 8, don't harmonize very well. I am compelled to apply Isaiah 28:20 to you. "For the bed is shorter than that a man can stretch himself on it; and the covering narrower than that he can wrap himself in it." I thought your letter of the 21st, was to be your last, but I now see that your Oct. 8th, is another last. I can reconcile this in one way: your first letter was one end, that is the beginning end, the 21st Sept. is another end, which is two ends, and Oct. 8th is another end, which is three ends, and now you have your correspondence like your baptism, it is trine, therefore ready for the press.

Respectfully,

W. R. CUNNINGHAM.

REMARKS.

The reader will observe from Mr Cunningham's Kentucky white cow story, his reason for not agreeing (as I proposed from the beginning) to bring his side of the question into debate, lest like "Joe" he would make bad work of it. He thinks that "single dip views of baptism are outlandish and unscriptural." If so, what must the thing itself be? a peculiarity of Baptism and to be found there according to his language. A sad death for him. He will find that a single dip for baptism unconnected with an invocation of the trinity, as he now practices it, found its origin with Gregory, the pope of and the 4th parish council of Toledo Spain A. D. 633. Bingham's Antiquities of the Ch. Ch. Vol. 1, Book XI ch 11.) It would be well for all if such human traditions would be abandoned, for the "apostolic traditions" of baptism into each name of the Holy Trinity which found its origin with Christ, and is enforced by His great imperative (Matt. 28:19). Instead of accepting my proposition as Mr. Cunningham professes to have done, it will be seen that he has never even responded to the main condition of the discussion as proposed by me, in a single letter, and only accepted my verbiage of his own proposition after he had the matter entirely in his own hands, and knew there would be no discussion at all. As to his personal allusions and the spirit of them, I might respond, if our holy religion allowed me to "return evil for evil" or "railing for railing."

Very truly,

J. W. STEIN.

Newtonia, Mo.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK.

"Behold I Bring You Good Tidings of Great Joy, which Shall be unto All People." — LUKE 2: 10.

Vol. III.

Lanark, Ill., January 10, 1878.

No. 2.

The Brethren at Work.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY

—BY—

J. H. Moore, S. H. Bashor, M. M. Eshelman.

—:O:—

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

| | |
|----------------|-----------------|
| E. H. MILLER | LAPOGA, IND. |
| J. W. STEIN | NEWTONIA, MO. |
| D. VANMAN | VIRGEN, ILL. |
| D. M. BENTZER | WAYNESBORO, PA. |
| MATTHEW T. FAY | PERONA, ILL. |

TO MY MOTHER.

MY mother, words cannot express,
The measure of my love;
Affection of my earthly mould,
But that of heaven above.

O, could I tell thee how my heart,
Is firmly bound to thine;
Thy feelings of my own are part,
Thy sorrows all are mine.

Can I repay thee as I ought,
For thy unceasing care?
I cannot, but my Saviour will,
In answer to my prayer.

When he shall make his jewels up,
Among them thou wilt stand;
And strike thy harp to heavenly strands,
With the angelic hand.

And wilt thou, in thy fervent prayers,
Thy father's God beseech,
His glorious Spirit to impart,
Thy erring child to teach?

Selected by H. C. BUTTERBAUGH.

Lanark, Ill.

THE TREE AND ITS FRUITS.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

WHEREVER there is fruit there must be root to determine its quality. Persimmons grow not on grape vines, nor pears on the ivy, but a poor grape is a grape still, and an apple of Gomorrah is none the less acid and ashy inside because of its blooming exterior. The world's gaw-gaws and frivolities, do not grow on the top of life. A holy, Christ-enthroning heart blossoms into "Twelve manner of fruits," always ripened always ripening, ever growing sweeter with the flavor of the Upper Eden, and more mellow with the grace of the Cross. No apple on the tree in the garden of Eternity is capable in all respects to its fellow. It is only when the principle of life and growth and general ethical features. The constituent elements are the same in all, but not their proportions and arrangements.

My recent article on "Religious Show Dolls" was very sharp on certain violations of Christian principle, while I would not abate one jot of its severity for those whose abominations it anathematized, it was not intended to reach as far as some suppose. In computing a man's hand, or foot, we must not feel ourselves obliged to amputate his head. Between John 2: 6, 10, and unadorned ecclesiastical costume, there is plenty of room for all the simplicity which the Gospel enjoins. In the nature of things it is dangerous to adopt the method of the Medes and Persians, in our ecclesiastical legislation, where we have not an illustrative case in the inspired record. We have not enough Divinity in us to make fixed laws of inferences drawn from general principles. But we should have so much wisdom as to know that when we find a black-berry that it has close relation with a briar. Blackberries and prickles go together. Principles are inviolable as Deity, but our inferences may be erroneous, and this makes it a matter of prudence that we leave the door open for a deeper insight, and a worthier application. There is no exception to this rule. The province of Annual Conference is not only for the solution of difficult problems, but for their disposition on principles that admit of no question. At this point there is perhaps undue rigidity in the discussions and decisions of our councils. We have not the same right to insist on fixed, unchangeable forms of our own devising, as on baptism or feet-washing; and we should be very cautious not to treat as though the authority were the same in both instances. I believe in stern daily self-denial in all that tends to foster the self-exalting, self-worshipping element in our nature. For many it is far more difficult to abandon the pipe and quid, than for fashion-mongers to don the round coat. How many strain at a gnat and swallow a camel. Character comes first, and then the whole exterior life as the natural product. This cuts off the fashions and fancies, and vanities of the world as completely as its gross immoralities. It is not dress as such that is befolding, and rending, and enclothing the church, but inhospitality; and out of this springs pride in all its forms, like mushrooms out of a dung-hill. Flesh-pleasing, world-imitating apparel is a sore evil in the church, and should not be tolerated; but there are other violations that reach deeper, are more debasing, more difficult to eradicate, and often hold stubborn empire where the greatest simplicity in dress prevails. Those who serve on committees can testify. "Be ye holy for I am holy" lays the axe to the root of the tree of iniquity. A garment of hemp may be spotted by the world as deeply as one of silk. "KEEP THY HEART WITH ALL DILIGENCE."

WHEN DOES EDUCATION BEGIN?

BY S. Z. SHARP.

EDUCATION begins not, as some suppose, in the primary school with the first lesson in the alphabet, but at home and in the nursery. The mother and the nurse are the first teachers; they lay the foundation of nearly every branch taught in college or the university. The elements of natural philosophy, mathematics, grammar, botany, zoology, etc., are all acquired before the child enters the primary school, long before the child can lip an intelligible word, it investigates the principles of natural philosophy. It grasps every object within reach, to ascertain its properties, turns it over, if possible, to learn its form and size, then invariably applies its mouth to it to discover its taste, in other words it is taking practical lessons in natural philosophy. It is also making experiments with matter which the professor in chemistry at the university is doing, only on a more extensive scale.

The idea of unity, the basis of all calculation, is very early understood, while the idea of adding, subtracting, multiplying and dividing by means of objects, are understood by every intelligent child before it reaches the proper school age. All the teacher can do afterward is to impart a knowledge of the rules by which these operations are performed, and lead the pupil to a more comprehensive view of the subject, and instruct him to apply his knowledge to practical purposes. Napier and Newton invented or discovered nothing, and the professor of mathematics teaches nothing in this branch whose primary elements, the mother can not teach to her boy on his finger, while seated on her knee.

The amount of knowledge early acquired in grammar, or language, is still more wonderful. By the time a child of ordinary intelligence, six years old, it can understand the meaning of about ten thousand words. Take a modern spelling book, count the words that a child can understand, and you will be astonished at the result. The art of using language is learned before the child enters school; the science of it at school. We need not mention other branches, let it suffice to say that the parents, the teachers in the primary school, in the high school, the college, and the university are all engaged in the same work of leading the pupil up the so-called "Hill of science." There is no conflict between the work of the parents and the other instructors; between the parent who lays the foundation, and the college professor who gives the finishing touch to a moral and intellectual edifice that shall be for a blessing to mankind, and a glory to God.

PENCIL MUSINGS.

BY S. C. BASHOR.

NUMBER III.

IF you baptize by one dip, and claim that you baptize by the authority of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, you can have it that way if you choose; but Christ is our Lord; he is our authority, and by his authority we have the law of baptism, and that tells us just how and when, and all about it. He says: "Baptize them in the name of the Father, (not by His authority, but in the name of the Father,) and of the Son, (not by his authority, for He gave his authority when he said, "Go teach, baptizing etc., in the name of the Son,") and of the Holy Ghost, (not by His authority, but in the Holy Ghost.) In the three divine names we are baptized by a separate act, into each name, into one God. He is not God without the Father, He is not God without the Son, He is not God without the Holy Ghost.

When we address God, we address the three Divine beings, when we address the Father in its full sense, we address Him in the name of His Son through the guidance of the Holy Spirit. These three cannot be separated in the great work of mercy, neither can they be united in the strict sense of individuality; there must be three, no more, no less. How then do we get into these three? Paul says we are baptized into Christ, does this bring us into the Father? No, we get into the Father when we are baptized "In the name of the Father," does this bring us into the Son? No, we get into the Son when we are baptized in the name of the Son, so says Paul, and so we get into the Holy Ghost when we are baptized in the name of the Holy Ghost. So sure are we of this fact as the Bible is true. To get a man into Christ is reasonable; to get a man into the Holy Ghost when he is baptized into Him, is reasonable; but to baptize a person into the Holy Ghost, and then say that he is baptized into Christ by the same action, is an assertion not warranted in the Bible.

Lanark, Calcutta.

VISITING THE SICK.

BY D. C. PERRY.

IT IS as a duty frequently taught in the Holy Scripture, and devolves more or less on every humble follower of Christ. Whether it is always done from a sense of duty I am not able to decide, but this I do know, that it often results in more evil than good. I have seen the houses of sick families made the houses of feasting and pleasure, instead of going to relieve them of their cares and anxieties, or watching over the sick. Perhaps they will gather their whole family together, from the largest to the smallest, and take them along, and probably on the Lord's day at that, and now their friends, in addition to watching over and waiting on their dear-ack ones, are obliged to go to work and prepare to feast their sympathetic neighbors. I have come to the conclusion that this kind of visiting does not meet the approbation of the Lord.

If we do not go for the purpose of comforting and consoling them in their afflictions, also ministering to their temporal wants, if they are in need, we had better remain at home. I have no doubt, the motive is generally a good one, but sometimes we do not think of the result of our actions. We do not mean to discourage any one, from attending to their duty, for we fear that it is too much neglected by most of us, but when we go, let us go for a purpose, and let that be for the benefit of the afflicted parties, either in ministering to their spiritual, or temporal necessities, or both; and when our purpose is accomplished let us leave the field for others.

Dear Brother, what I have written has been from a good motive, and if any of us have failed in the past, let us be more careful in the future, in this as well as all other Christian duties.

Mt. Morris, Ill.

WILL IT HURT?

BY J. S. PERRY.

"I DON'T see that going to the circus or theatre will hurt me," said a professor of religion.

Hurt you? why not at all! How can that hurt you if you desire to go? The very fact that you want to go shows that you are already hurt. Satan tempted you, you yielded, and your desire shows sin has hurt you. Going can't hurt you any worse, though through your influence you may cause others to be hurt.

So with a desire to go to a dance, or any worldly place of pleasure; the going can't hurt you, the desire to go only shows too plainly you are hurt—badly lacerated by Satan,—already.

Just so it is with every one who can't see how doing this and that, contrary to God's will or commands, is a-going to hurt them. The hurting has already taken place in the soul, and nothing short of God's grace, which leadeth to repentance, can heal the hurt. Obedience to God, or rather the desire or love that you have, which leadeth thee to obedience, is what cures all these wounds, or hurts. That is when genuine love leadeth you to repentance and obedience, the merits of Christ make you whole.

Says an other, "To don the habiliments of the fashionable world can't hurt me; no religion in dress." Hurt you? why not how can it hurt you, who has a love for these things. The very fact that you indulge in them, is evidence all the hurting has been done before, and of course there is no religion in dress when it is evident there is none in the desires. There is no religion in externals, the religion if any, is in the heart,—our religious faith rather—and the commands only tell what kind of religion is in the heart, that is all. When you see grapes hanging on a vine, you may be sure the heart of the vine is gospel; and when you find a tree that is a crab-apple tree at heart; you may be sure it will bear sour, crabby fruit. Not sweet golden pippins.

"I don't see that neglecting or refusing to appear before God in prayer with my head uncovered will hurt me," says a woman of the household of Faith. Hurt you, sister, no! The unwillingness to pray, shows that the hurting was done previous. If "shame" hurts, then you have been hurt, for it is a "shame" for a woman to pray, or prophesy, with her head uncovered. And if you don't "pray" you are still hurt, for it is the duty of all God's children to pray. It is sin that hurts, and the hurting is done before the evidence comes to light. Now we can't always tell how much one is hurt by sin, but God can. He knows all about it. To do more hunts, to do less hunts. Keep the short rule before your minds, continually, and observe it, and you will not get hurt.

The devil, in the last day, shall rise against us in condemnation, for that he hath been more careful to get souls than we to save them.

MARRIAGE HYMN.

When Adam was created he dwelt in Eden's shade,
As Moses had related before the bride was made,
Ten thousand times ten thousand of creatures swarmed around,
Before the bride was formed, or any mate was found.

He had no conversation, but lived like one alone,
Till to his admiration he found he lost a home
Great was his exultation when first his bride
he spied,
Great was his elevation to see her by his side.

He spake as in a rapture, I know from whence you came,
From my left side extracted and woman is thy name,
This seems to be the reason why man should love his bride,
A part of his own lady, the product of his side.

The woman was not taken from Adam's head
we know,
Nor she must not rule over him if eventually so,
The woman was not taken from Adam's feet
we see,
Nor he must not abuse her, the meaning seems to be.

The woman she was taken from under Adam's arm,
And she must be protected from injury and harm,
The woman she was taken from near to Adam's heart,
This seems to be the reason why they should never part.

And now, most noble bridegroom, to you I turn aside,
Don't let this little Volume be ever laid aside,
The Book that's called the Bible, I pray you don't neglect.

In every source of duty, it will you both direct,
Here's counsel for the bridegroom, and counsel for the bride,
I pray you, do prove faithful, and for your house provide,
And to avoid contention, don't sow the seed of strife,
These are the solemn duties of every man and wife.

Selected by Conval Fitz.

SELF-JUSTIFICATION.

BY CHARLOTTE T. BOND.

THERE is within us a disposition to find a ready and reasonable excuse for our own short-comings. Faults that appear mountains in others, we can find very plausible excuses for in ourselves. The heart is indeed deceitful above all things; who can know it? We naturally suppose when we do a wrong or commit an error or sin, that we are surrounded by peculiar circumstances, and if we had been situated as others, we would not have been tempted to have done so. This is only some of the stratagems of the wicked one to lead us further into temptation, and finally to ensnare us into some deeply aggravated sin. God cannot look upon sin with the least degree of allowance in us any more than others; and when we begin to search for errors, let us remember the eye of God is upon us, and if we have committed sin, our apologies only make the matter worse, and our trying to believe there is no great harm in it, makes it no better. If we are disobeying God's Law, nothing short of a true, heart-felt repentance can remedy the evil.

I have often heard it said, "I do not think there is much harm in what I did." Much or little, it was harm. If it was disobeying the Law of God, and us not thinking there was much harm, makes it no better. Another excuse is, a great many others do so, why cannot I? This is the weakest excuse that can be brought forward, that others doing wrong, would justify a wrong in us. When we begin to give away to our carnal inclinations, pleading that there is no harm in this or that, we are in a very critical condition; the evil one, is making pretty good headway with us.

Let us rather stand firm, with the determination that we will not do wrong, if we know it, "God being my helper," and if we cultivate this frame of mind, and trust in Him He will help us. He has promised to help us in every time of need; but when we rather try to justify our sins, than to humbly acknowledge them to Him, we have no promise, either of forgiveness or help. Many things of this kind, have come under my observation. Of late matters have occurred, that have called professing Christians, and those that thought themselves very strict, into companies that have met for revelry, and these Christians would excuse themselves, by supposing there was no harm; forgetting probably that whatever we do, must be done to the honor and glory of God. Dear reader, cease to make excuses; learn to do His will, and if you should fall short, do not make the matter worse by apologies, but acknowledge your fault and ask pardon. He is ever ready to forgive the truly penitent.

A TALK ON THE COVERING.

BY J. S. MOELLER.

DAUGHTER. Why is it that the Brethren Church insists so strongly, that all their female members should wear a covering on their heads, in time of worship?

Father. Because the apostle Paul commands it.

Daughter. I believe the apostle had in view only the hair; for he says, "The hair is given for a covering," in 1st Cor. 11: 15.

Father. If the apostle meant nothing more than the hair, then it would have been superfluous to say anything about the covering, from the fact, that people knew long before the apostle wrote, that the hair was intended for the natural covering of the head.

Daughter. But does not the apostle say, in the Scriptures above referred to, that her hair is given her for a covering?

Father. Yes, he does; but he says a good deal more too. In order to understand what the apostle meant in the verse you referred to, it is necessary to notice some of the preceding verses first. You have, perhaps, noticed that the apostle wrote about the uncovering of the man's head, as well as the covering of the woman's head, in time of worship?

Daughter. Yes! I have.

Father. Does it not seem quite plain that the uncovering pertaining to the man's head; and the covering pertaining to the woman's both refer to the same object, i. e., if the uncovering of the woman's head is only the hair, then the uncovering of the man's head means the hair also?

Daughter. Well! I suppose so.

Father. Then, if the uncovering of the woman's head means the hair, then every time they pray or prophesy they must take their hair off.

Daughter. Oh! Since I came to think of it, the uncovering of the man's head means the hat. Of course! To take the hair off, every time of worship would certainly be very inconsistent and bothersome.

Father. Well now; according to your own admission, both the uncovering of the man's head, and the covering of the woman's head means the same thing. Then if the uncovering of the man's head means removing the hat, the extra covering of the woman's head means another covering too, besides the hair.

Daughter. I expected you would trap me; but what about the hair being given her for a covering in verse 15?

Father. We are not quite ready for that yet. The apostle says in the chapter referred to, in verse 16th: "For if the woman be not covered, let her also be shorn." Now do you know what the word also means?

Daughter. I do not know that I do exactly, only that it generally stands between two things of similar import.

Father. Your definition is tolerably good, but to make this matter clear, let me use a simple illustration. If I say, James! put on your socks, also your shoes, is it not clear that two coverings are meant?

Daughter. Yes! surely.

Father. If I say, put also a shawl on your head, would you not understand that another covering had already been referred to?

Daughter. Yes, but what has that to do with the argument?

Father. A good deal! The word "also,"—meaning two things of similar import, of course has that meaning in the verse referred to. Then the apostle had in view in that verse, two uncoverings in case of disobedience. If the woman had off the religious covering in worship, then, also let the natural covering (the hair) be taken off, is his meaning. But according to your notion the word "also" is not needed, from the fact that you have but one covering, and that is the hair, hence you can see the impiquity of your position. Or in other words, how can the apostle use the word "also" when but one covering is referred to? It would be entirely superfluous. According to your idea, but one covering could be taken off.

Daughter. Yes, I see that the term "also to be shorn or shaven," is used by the apostles, only when the woman's head is not previously covered; otherwise there is no sense in the language.

Father. The apostle had in view, in the 15th verse, the inconsistency of taking off the natural covering, i. e., the hair, "For her hair is given her for a covering." And now, to retain this natural covering, let her head be covered with the religious covering. This extra covering, is the apostle's meaning undoubtedly.

D. Well, why must that covering be one of these little contemptible caps? Why won't a decent hat do as well?

F. Unless the church decides on some uniform covering, it will not be long till every woman will have just such a covering as will suit her own taste, and in a short time all the fashionable hats of the world will be worn by members of the church. It is in this way, that many of our churches, which once were noted for their plainness, have become so fashionable.

D. I do not believe that there will be any caps in heaven.

F. Well! I do not believe there will be any hats there either.

D. Then why contend for a covering at all?

F. Whatever Christ, or the apostles commanded us to do, that we must do; and our disobedience to anything, even the covering, may be the means of us losing heaven.

Now the substance of our talk is about this:

1. The man's hair is given him for a covering as well as the woman's; both can retain their hair by being obedient.

2. The man is to have his head uncovered, i. e. his hat off in time of worship.

3. The woman is to have her head covered by a religious covering, and thus honor her husband, and retain her natural covering (the hair).

D. I see plainly now that the apostle meant some other covering beside the hair—some covering that could be put on and taken off conveniently to suit the occasion, just as the man can take off, and put on his hat or covering to suit the occasion, and this I know could not be done were the hair the only covering the apostle alluded to.

F. Yes, I now see that you understand the apostle clearly, and hope you will be obedient.

D. I know that we should obey in all things, for so commands Christ, but then for me to wear a cap, would make me look so odd.

F. As to looking so odd, in this you are mistaken. You may only look a little odd in the eyes of those, whose own taste is as corrupt as their hearts; besides this, it is not in accordance with the spirit of Christianity; that its followers should so adorn their person as to please the corrupt taste of a wicked world; but rather adorn themselves so as to please God. Further, there is nothing that makes the sisters in a religious assembly, look so saintly and becoming worshippers, as the covering adopted by the Brethren church.

CHRIST THE SURE FOUNDATION.

BY DANIEL BUCK.

FOR other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ" (1 Cor. 3: 11).

The apostle Paul, that great ambassador for Christ, knowing nothing but Christ, and Him crucified, was endeavoring to show the church at Corinth, that Christ alone was the sure foundation; that in Him only should they trust, that they could find refuge in none other. Paul found the Corinthians in a confused condition, they were not fully established in the cause of Christianity, that they were still carnal and walked as men, while one said, I am of Paul, and another, I am of Apollos. Who then is Paul, and who is Apollos, but ministers by whom ye believe, even as the Lord gave to every man? Why all this strife and division? You are too much under the control and influence of the carnal mind. But their feelings and desires, and their affections must be drawn to Christ, who is the great center of attraction, as Peter said to the Jews, "This is the stone that was set at naught by you builders, which is become the head of the corner. Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is no other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4: 11, 12).

Then we understand that if we desire happiness, and share with Christ in glory, we must build our eternal hopes on the rock Christ Jesus, for there is no salvation in any other; no deliverance from sin and its awful consequences. God has made ample provision for fallen humanity. The Lord knew our condition, better than we knew what we stood in need of; there being nothing for us to base our future happiness on. God through the prophet Isaiah says, "Behold I lay in Zion a foundation stone, a tried stone, a sure foundation," and no man has any right to doubt its genuineness, its durability, for it will stand, and upon it the church of Christ will stand, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. But, says the inquiring mind, where shall I go? My desire is to build upon a foundation, that when the storm approaches, when the rains descend and floods arise, the building may stand secure. Many say, come and go with us, we have found the rock of salvation. But perhaps when you examine closely, they have called in question some of the material that composes that sure foundation, some that is indispensable necessary to our salvation. I hear the apostle say, "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, is profitable for doctrine." You have not obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine, you have tried out some of the sayings of Jesus, and do them not, consequently I fear there is danger. Jesus says, "He that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, is like a man that dug deep and built his house upon a rock."

Then as God has a work for us to perform, in order that we may secure eternal life, we must labor consistent to His will. He has given us a rule, by which we are governed. In a temporal point of view, the mechanic that undertakes to frame a building, works according to a rule or system, in order that the building may go together properly, but should he not respect the system that should govern him, and work at random, what would the consequence be, when all the material is ready to go together? Why undoubtedly there is a great mistake. His work is imperfect, and this is not all, when the inspector comes along to take it of his hands, he will then fully realize his sad mistake; the building will not bear inspection. Just so in regard to that Spiritual building; they that are without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers from the covenant of promise, having no hope and without God in the world; must first realize their condition; that if they remain away from God, and do not become His servants, and work in His vineyard, they will be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of God and the glory of His power. They must acquaint themselves with the system, by which they must be governed. Go to the Architect, the great Master builder; He is the great Law-giver, and as the Psalmist David says, "The Law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul."

He at once lays hold of the promise set before him, goes to work with a willing mind, is in possession of that faith that works by love—that living faith that prompts us to obedience to the requirements of heaven. The carnal mind must be brought into subjection to the will of God. The penitent is willing to surrender all at the feet of Jesus, he wants to follow Him in all His appointed ways; he wants to go where Jesus went. Well, says one, where was He? If you will consult your Bible, you will find Him down in Jordan, being baptized of John, and coming up out of the water, the heavens were opened, and the Spirit descending in the bodily shape of a dove, and a voice was heard saying, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." While there, God recognized Him as His Son, and there it is where God will recognize us as His sons and daughters. We are His children by adoption, Christ became our Elder Brother, and we are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints, and household of God, and we are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief corner stone, by whom all the building fitly framed together, groweth into a holy temple in the Lord.

They have nothing to fear, because they are standing upon the rock; there is no danger of suffering loss, when the time comes that every man's work shall be tried. When the great Inspector comes, we will not be found wanting, we will then fully realize the reward of labors, will hear that welcome applaudit: "Well done good and faithful servant, enter thou in the joy of thy Lord." Dear unconverted friends, where are you standing? We appeal to you, to examine the ground you occupy, remember, other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ. Work while it is called to-day, for the night of death cometh when no man can work. We submit these few imperfect thoughts to your consideration, and when you see that you have not done your duty; that you are found wanting, we kindly ask you, to commence the great work, that you may lay hold of eternal life.

WISDOM.

BY E. R. N.

THE wisdom of God, is the capacity to make due use of His words. To do this, is to read the Bible; make it your staff to lead you through this world and it will light you to the world to come, where all will be joy. The wise man's eyes are in his head, and the grace of God is upon him. As Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and in deeds, likewise if we to-day in the sight of God, want to have that wisdom which excelleth from on high, we must be workers in the vineyard. So as to teach us, to number our days and apply our hearts into wisdom.

But where shall wisdom be found? We know not the price thereof, for it cannot be purchased with gold, neither is silver weighed, for the price thereof; for the price of wisdom is above rubies. Whence then cometh wisdom? It cometh from that spirit that departs from evil, and the fear of the Lord is upon him, and happy is he that findeth that wisdom. Hide the commandments within yourselves; incline your ears unto the Word of God. Then thou shalt have understanding and receive the wisdom of God.

THE BIBLE.

BY E. R. N.

OUR continuation on earth is of short duration. We are rapidly hastening through its many troubles. The sun of life will soon have set. The darkness of death settles over all that occupies our heart and hands, and our spirits pass into that world from whose bounds no traveler returns.

What then is so important to us, as a knowledge of ourselves, of our relation to God, and of a future state, how we may be prepared for the duties of this life, and for the scenes which are so soon to open upon us, in another world?

Books that assist us in the attainment of this knowledge, are of inestimable value. They relate to our most important interests, and ought therefore to have the first place assigned to them in a course of reading, especially must this be said of the Bible. This Book, the oldest surviving offspring of the human and Divine intellect, the chosen companion and friend of patriarchs, prophets, apostles, and of the wisest and best men that have ever lived. This Book, that reveals to us the character and will of our great Creator, and final Judge; that opens before us the way of salvation through a Redeemer; unveils to our view the invisible world, and shows us the final destiny of our race; this Book which God has given expressly to teach us our character, our duty, and prospects, which has conducted, all who have obeyed its precepts, to the presence and endless enjoyment of its Divine author, and must conduct us thither, if we ever enter that happy world.

This Book ought surely to be held by us in the highest place of honor and respect; to be made the guide of our youth, the companion of our age, and our solace and support in all the prosperous and trying pangs of life. Considered as a master composition, the Bible is unquestionably the most interesting Book on earth. It has truly been said of the Bible, by one of the greatest and best of men, "That it contains, independent of its divine origin, more sublimity, purer morality, more important history, and finer strains of eloquence, than can be culled from all other books, in whatever language they may have been written. Embrace, then, my young friends, this Sacred Volume. Let it be a lamp to your feet, and a light to your path! With every morning dawn and evening shade, repair to the Book of God for counsel; peruse and practice its instructions; and the happy effect of it upon your present and future associations, you shall gratefully acknowledge at the right hand of God, and amidst the thanksgiving and praises of the heavenly world."

THE DIFFERENCE.

BY J. B. FAIR.

A DISTINGUISHED man once said, "The longer I live, the more I am certain that the great difference between men—between the feeble and the powerful, the great and the insignificant—is energy, invincible determination, a purpose once fixed, and then death or victory."

That generally will do anything, that can be done in this world, and no talents, no circumstances, no opportunities will make a man a Christian without it.

The real difference between the firm, determined, invincible, zealous professor, and the weak-kneed, pany, undetermined one, is energy; the one takes hold of the plow and presses forward with a will, and all the noise and commotion, the flutter and glare of fashion, and the display of gew-gaws, will not attract his attention or divert his purpose. But he looks steadily forward to the object before him, while the other is continually looking back over his shoulders, undetermined whether to go forward or turn back. He has not the energy to press away from the alluring scenes behind, and for shame will not turn back, until, by his much looking back, he stumbles and falls; then he is rendered unworthy for the kingdom of God.

Then let me entreat every Christian professor to be zealous, be firm, rally around the blood-stained banner of Prince Emmanuel, and go on—not to victory or death, but to certain victory.

THE PERFECT LAW OF LIBERTY

BY JAMES WARR.

"BUT whose looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed" (James 1: 25).

The apostle James has written in his epistle, such cheering words of comfort and consolation to the faithful in Christ, and the prominent thought revealed is this: that to obtain the blessings of God, all depend upon the full compliance on the believer's part, to the requisitions of the Gospel. By hearing the truths of the perfect Law, and reducing them to practice as fast as learned; looking into the same, and also to continue therein.

The Word of God is their Law of Liberty, the truths of which if obeyed, become the means, by which the saints receive the blessings resulting from their good deeds. Christ has given unto us the blessed Gospel, a law complete in all its parts, and perfectly adapted to the spiritual wants of man, and is intended to restore him to the position he was designed to sustain in the primitive creation, by liberating him from under the bondage of sin. If the truth makes us free then we are free indeed says the blessed Master.

Man will worship. He will also assimilate to the object that he worships; therefore the law of the Bible requires us to love the Lord our God, and Him only are we to serve. How are we to serve the Lord? Surely by obeying what He requires of us, that is to do justly to love mercy, and not be a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work; obeying from the heart that form of doctrine delivered unto the saints. Faith without works is dead. Faith and works go together in all our Christian duties found in the Law of God. A law without a penalty attached, that will follow any infringement or violation is of no account. "He that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him it is sin." Therefore knowing the terror of the Lord, we persuade men to obey the perfect Law of Liberty, which will make them free from the law of sin and death.

The Gospel is composed of purely persuasive principles, intended to enlighten free moral agents, who are willing to be enlightened by that true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world. "Whosoever will, may partake of the water of life freely," which will cleanse us from all sin and its effects upon the soul, and consecrate and purify our bodies, that they may be fit temples for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, that it may abide there; and guide us into all truth, and bring to our remembrance all things recorded in the perfect Law. This may be accomplished by obeying the truth as it is in Jesus, governed and controlled entirely by His teachings.

A correct knowledge of the Scriptures in a great measure forms the true dignity and happiness of the Christian, by which he is enabled to add to the felicity of his fellow-standard bearer, because of the cross of Christ.

There are five essential elements in every kingdom, and the Kingdom of Christ has these, viz: Christ the King; the saints His subjects; the heaven and earth, the territory; the Gospel, the perfect Law, and the Holy Spirit, the power executing the perfect Law of Liberty. "The Law of the Lord is perfect converting the soul." May it be our life's greatest work to study this Law, and be fully brought to know and love the truth for the truth's sake, and seeking for the wisdom which it imparts, and go on to perfection in our high and holy calling.

Forgive us, Lord, as we forgive others.

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE,
S. H. BASHOR,
M. M. ESHELMAN, } EDITORS.

THE BRETHERN AT WORK will be sent post-paid, to any address in the United States or Canada, for $1.50 per annum. Those sending ten names and $15.00, will receive an extra copy free of charge. For all over this number the agent will be allowed 10 cents for each additional name, which amount can be deducted from the money, before sending it to us. Money Orders, Drafts, and Registered Letters may be sent at our risk. They should be made payable to Moore, Bashor & Eshelman. — Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed —

MOORE, BASHOR & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL. JANUARY 10, 1873.

LATEST NEWS FROM Waterloo, Iowa says, that brother YOUNG is there preaching, and so far, is meeting with good success—souls are turning to God.

BRO. JOHN ZOOK, of Iowa, before leaving for his home last week, preached two able sermons at the Cherry Grove meeting-house, two miles North of Lanark.

BRO. J. P. HERRIC of Philadelphia, Pa., has been laboring at the North Coventry church, Pa., and as a result thirty-two have been added to the number of the saved.

IGNOR the heading of "visiting the sick," on first page of this issue. Bro. B. E. PATER urges a reform that has been too much neglected. Don't fail to read the article, and then live up to it.

LIFE is the preparation day for the eternal rest beyond; then make good use of the present. Let your motives be pure and your acts noble. Modesty and virtue are priceless gems; see that you possess them.

If you would be happy and enjoy life, look on the bright side of the picture. He of good cheer, it is but a few steps to the land where troubles are unknown. Look ahead; the future is of more value than the past.

AFTER reading Bro. BASHOR'S Review of Eld. HENNINGSON'S objections to Baptism for remission of sins, in last week's issue, hand it to your friends, especially the advocates of the immerger's bench system of conversion.

BROTHER S. Z. SHAW, of Tennessee has promised to write regular for the BRETHERN AT WORK, and is expected to furnish a series of valuable articles. His experience as teacher and minister, qualify him for giving some profitable lessons.

BRO. BISHOP left last week for Iowa, and will return sometime during the week. We wish him a pleasant trip, for it is at times comforting to get away from the office work, and get a little fresh air. When he returns, he will likely have something interesting to tell our readers.

OUR readers are continually calling for shorter articles, saying they are read more, and accomplish more good than longer ones. Though the present issue sets a very good example in this direction, yet we hope to improve in the future. Short, well-written articles are what we earnestly solicit, and they are usually given place in preference to longer ones.

WORDS of encouragement flow in from nearly all parts of the Brotherhood, and our agents are doing a good work gathering subscribers for 1873. From many localities, where we last year had but a single subscriber, we are now receiving large lists. And now that the year has fairly begun and our readers have grown so numerous, we realize our editorial responsibilities more and more, and trust by the help of our Master to send out only such matter as will be to the edification of God's people; the union of our great Brotherhood, and the salvation of souls. We trust too that our contributors will dwell less on the minor differences that may be existing among us, and so direct their articles as to establish a perfect bond of love and good wishes throughout all the churches. We enter upon the work with greater diligence, praying that much good may be accomplished and in the end, life everlasting.

ELDER JOHN FORNEY called upon us again during the Holidays, and spent sometime in our Sanctum. On Monday last he started for his home in Nebraska, expecting to stop in Blackhawk and Benton counties, Iowa, to visit his brothers living there, and to labor some in the cause of the Master. Trust his visit may be pleasant, and his labors successful. His visit in Illinois was not as pleasant to many as it would have been, had the roads been in a better condition so that he could have preached more for us. We always welcome such brethren as Bro. FORNEY among us. If some of our "would-be-refined," who shudder and turn the cold shoulder to the name of "pioneer preacher," could have the privilege of listening to brother FORNEY and such men as he, they no doubt would conclude that men on the frontier know Jesus, and can wield the sword of the Spirit as effectually as "polite grammarians." In fact they preach Jesus and the Gospel, and let grammars take care of itself; and while we listen to such men, the heart gets so full that the head forgets to censure. Brethren, when you travel, don't forget Illinois and our office here.

A REQUEST.

NOW that the first of the year is past, many may conclude that it is unnecessary to solicit subscribers, supposing that the time is over for such work, but we hope that our friends will not think that way, but continue to work for the paper, and when you meet with those who do not take the BRETHERN AT WORK, show them the paper and ask them, "Please let me have your name for the paper one year." Subscriptions may begin at any time, though we can still supply some back numbers. By working for the paper during the long Winter months, you may be the means of saving souls, and at least sending good instructions to many wayward hearts. Try, kind reader, and see what you can do. If you have no extra papers to hand to your friends, drop a card containing your address in full and we will send you sample copies, prospectus, &c. free. This and February are the best and most successful months to work for a paper, as the nights are long and all want something to read.

Gather too, what you can for the Clergy fund, as there are many members who would like to read the BRETHERN AT WORK, but are not able to pay for it. Remember the poor and neglect not the widows and orphans, for these we have amongst us, and should do them good and thus obey a divine injunction.

TRACT ASSOCIATION.

THIS year there is a vacancy occurring by the expiring of ENOCH DICK'S term as one of the Board of Managers, which vacancy must be filled either by his re-election or the election of another to fill his place. Each donor is entitled to one vote for this purpose, therefore those who have donated to the Association, will immediately send in their votes to this office. They may be sent on a postal card, in letters or otherwise. In each and every case the donor must give his or her name and post-office. Please attend to this at once, as we should know the result by the first of February. The rules of the Association provide that the one elected to fill this vacancy, should be a well-established brother, residing in the Northern District of Illinois. Each donor will therefore be his own judge as to who that brother should be. For the benefit of those who are not familiar with the workings of the Association, we will next week publish their circular in full; would have done so this week, but lacked room.

The donors will please send in their votes immediately. Address this office.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

PARTIES writing to this office on business relating to the firm; communications, subscriptions, church news, orders for books, tracts, etc., should not address their letters to either of the editors individually, but use the firm's name of MOORE, BASHOR, & ESHELMAN, as this will avoid, in many instances, inconvenience and delays. Parties doing this will have their business attended to more promptly, and their articles inserted without delay, if necessary.

Both brother MOORE and BASHOR are often called away to labor in the ministry, and letters addressed to either of them would necessarily be neglected until they returned. Letters of communication, intended for either of us as private matter only, should be addressed to the one for whom they are intended.

We should like for all to take notice of this, and remember it when writing to us.

THE JEWS.

THE following from the Weekly Inter Ocean would seem to indicate an important movement among the Jews in the United States: "The Rev. David Rosenberg, of Columbus, Ohio, issued a call for a national convention of all Israelites who are now willing to accept Jesus Christ as the promised Messiah of the world. The objects of this convention will be to form an alliance of all the converted Jews and of Israel throughout the world; to appoint a set time to confess the sin of the nation in rejecting Jesus Christ; to form a basis for a national existence upon the New Testament Scriptures as the statute and law of the nation, and to explore the powers of the world to restore Palestine to the people of God. The date and place of holding this convention will be fixed by those in favor of the project."

The return of the Israelites to their native land, is being looked for with much anxiety. Since their exile from Palestine, they have endured sufferings and privations beyond description; yet amid all their misfortunes, God has preserved them a distinct and peculiar people. Their return to their promised rest and privileges, will be as life from the dead. May God speed the time when the land of the prophets shall once more resound with the songs and praises to Him who doeth all things well.

J. D. M.

A FURTHER EXPLANATION.

IT seems that a misunderstanding has been attained, regarding the import of what was said a few weeks ago, in relation to my name having been used as one of the directors of the missionary movement at Meyersdale, Pa., some having concluded that I am not interested in any movement outside of our own district. This view of the matter is incorrect, for I am interested in any lawful effort put forth for the promulgation of the truth, but am not at present connected with any movement away from home. I do not generally engage in an enterprise until I understand it, neither is it my motto to oppose any thing until I know that it is wrong.

It is evident that we, as a people, have been too slow in spreading the Gospel—have not done as much in our own land as ought to be done, but whether the present movement will supply the wants in this direction remains to be seen; I trust, however that it will, and that it may work to the glory and honor of God and the salvation of many souls. If the project is a good one it will soon be apparent, and therefore I do not want, what I have said, to cause any one who may be connected with it, any unpleasantness, as I did not mean to oppose it, but to correct a wrong impression.

I would be glad to see every lawful missionary effort succeed, and be a power in home missionary work. Though there may be some things connected with the enterprise that are not fully in harmony with my views of apostolic missionary work, yet the confidence I have in some of those who are in sympathy with the movement, forbid me to act hastily in this matter. Hope the readers will not think that I am going to oppose a thing before I have time and opportunity to investigate its nature and workings. On last page is given a report of the convention. For the want of room it was crowded out of the last issue.

J. D. M.

MEETINGS.

AS many are continually writing from different parts of the brotherhood, soliciting my services in evangelistic work, and my duties and health being such that it is not only impossible to fill the calls, but in many instances to write a satisfactory reply, I take this method of notifying all of the possibility of filling their call, trusting that all will understand and be fully reconciled.

My health failing recently, caused many promises in Indiana and southern Ohio, to remain unfulfilled, for the present at least, but will remember them in the future. Agreeable to promise, and no hindrance interfering, we expect to meet with the church in divine service at Dunkirk, Ohio, Feb. 14th, at 6:30 P. M.; will, if health permits, remain sometime in that part of the State, unless office duties call me home. Something like thirty calls have been made in that State, but it will be impossible to fill them all.

Several letters not yet replied to, will now receive a notice. Paul Wetzel, Grundy Center, Iowa; Cannot possibly come now. Do not expect me to come until I say so, as I do my own announcing, unless otherwise arranged, according to the will of the Master, and from present indications I shall have to be careful on account of my worn out condition, in making appointments myself, too close together in time, and too far ahead.

Wm. Hertzler, Lancaster Co., Pa. My stay in Pennsylvania will be too short to hold a series of meetings in each of the five churches your call endorses, hence will wait until the time I first wrote you, next Summer or Fall.

Jackson Whitebatch, W. Va.; E. B. Shaver, Va.; S. Z. Sharp, Tenn.; Samuel Longmacker, Iowa; D. L. Replogle; S. P. Snider; D. Negley; Thomas D. Lyon; A. Pinterbaugh; Thos. Snyder; Jos. P. Herric; Lena church, Ill.; Hiel Hamilton; Daniel Hardman; E. S. Berkeley; Eld. Weaver; J. Rife; J. R. Gish; cannot state any definite time now, as to when I can be with you. — Calls come to me most every day, and sometimes all day, come soon. This I cannot do. I would like to be able to fill every call that comes, but cannot; even if my health were unbroken, I could not fill one fifth of them.

Some even go so far as to send me five dollars in the envelope as an inducement to come and preach for them, but as I do not preach for the "almighty dollar," but for the Almighty Creator, that is useless. Yet those who have been thus favoring me, will please accept my warmest thanks for their Christian generosity. The members, where I have been preaching from time to time, have manifested great liberality in administering to my temporal wants and expenses, and I feel satisfied that those who have the Master's cause at heart, will not let those enter who come to labor among them.

In Ohio, brethren J. P. Ebersole and S. T. Rosserman will make arrangements, as to which churches I am to visit first after leaving Dunkirk. Trusting that we will have the hearty co-operation of all God's people in that part of His heritage, and that His blessings will attend the efforts, I look forward with pleasing emotions to our meetings there.

S. H. B.

RESPONSE TO D. B. MENTZER.

THE echoes of your "New Year's Greeting" have not all died away, but some of them continue to fall upon more than one heart, filled with the image of Him who was found "in a manger." The shepherds who "came with haste," greeted the lowly One, and then went and spread abroad what they had seen and learned. Such news could not be locked up—could not be withheld from all men. And all they that heard it, wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherd (Luke 2: 18). To-day wonder and amazement are depicted on the countenances of the great multitude, because of "THOSE THINGS." "Those things," the wonders of the Lord, His pure doctrine and its marvelous effects on men and women, cause the multitude to wonder. Though God, for more than 1800 years, has permitted vast multitudes to see His living witnesses of the work begun in Bethlehem, yet the multitude prefer to grovel in sin and iniquity.

But God be praised, we have the same Father, the same Jesus, the same great Book to read and direct us as all Christians have had. Out of the same Well, we draw the "living water." From the same store-house comes the living Bread. From the same Vine we gather fruit. The closet for prayer is the same hallowed place as when our Father declared He would meet us there. As men were then fearless in holding forth God's truth, so must we be. Policy would say, turn and twist to please men. Principle stands up and says, "Move on, whether men will hear or whether they forbear."

The news of God's marvelous doings was spread abroad throughout the then known world, and no man or nation was cursed for so doing. "Those mixers" were designed to elevate mankind to a high standard of divine illumination, and "earthen vessels" were chosen to tell it to all nations. "Truth, and peace, and good-will"—a trinity of virtues reaching from earth to heaven.

Not simply "late or early," dear brother, but late and early will fully express it here. While others are at rest, editors must think, and write and arrange, pray and wrestle with God for grace and judgment, so that His name may be honored and souls saved. Few persons know the weight and responsibility of publishing a religious paper. Experience alone can give the knowledge. The man who thinks if all sunshine has got no farther than his thoughts, the man who craves the position for honor, has one foot yet in the ditch and needs a few thorns in the flesh to help him out. To publish well, a man must stand on the Rock, be clothed with God's mantle, and with the sword of the Spirit in the fear of God, and not of men.

True, some may criticize "with undue severity." That does not change anything with God. Criticism must needs be, that is, the criticism that flies with dove's wings. That with eagle's wings never gets higher than the rocks and crags. A thorn is good for us occasionally. Paul was permitted to be exalted, and that was right; but let him become exalted above measure, a thorn was given him in the flesh, a messenger of Satan to buffet him. So with us. A thorn may be instrumental in doing us good, though it come from Satan. Thus God turns Satan's messengers to our benefit. I have long since learned not to despise thorns. But then no man should thrust in thorns simply because he can, but because he is assured that the thrusting is absolutely necessary for the good of the editors. Such, however disagreeable to the flesh, are encouraged, welcomed and received with due respect, but if any are disposed to thrust in thorns merely because they can, they do nothing to our labors of love, nor make wrong things right.

To simply conduct a popular sheet is an easy matter. In such a case, the only thing is to consult the popular taste, and give just what it calls for. To do this it is not necessary to know the mind of the Lord—how "to declare the whole counsel of God"—how to "know nothing but Jesus Christ and Him crucified." These things do not concern the popular editor. His business is to feel the public pulse, and run as it beats. He does not maintain anything particularly, but is always watching for something to copy or imitate him. He permits public sentiment to govern him; he never helps to form public sentiment. In fact, he is astray to show what way the wind blows, and not a real live nugget of gold in the great House of God.

But to conduct a paper with "the marks of the Lord Jesus" on it, is no child's play. He must know God and Christ, and the Spirit of Truth. He must be firm for the right and maintain it. His paper must, like himself, be unassuming—not mere outward appearance, fine print, pretty paper etc, but it must have the grains of truth all over and in it. He must be so thoroughly covered with the marks of the Lord Jesus as not to allow himself to ever talk about his paper being the cheapest, the healthiest, the best, the longest. People know how to compare without lessons from an editor. Then he must not seek notoriety, and self-distinction. If there be any good in him, people will see it. He must be fearless to tell the whole truth. Armed with the strong weapons of God, he goes forth not only to think right, but to do right.

Your letter is full of comfort. May God through all this year, give all of us grace to do our duty in honor to His name. Pray that we may all draw continually from the well of Truth. Should we happen to stop-over upon the "merry clay," call us back with a gentle voice, and God will not forsake. Peace be with you and all saints.

M. M. E.

Kind words—like sunshine—ever enliven the heart, and scatter sorrow, leaving only the remembrance of the past, which assist in a proper appreciation of the present. Such are tender words from a mother.

GLEANINGS.

FROM JACOB MISHLER.—Last Sunday our aged sister, Mary Mishler was buried; aged 75 years, 3 months and 8 days. "She was truly a "mother in Israel." Our series of meetings commenced at the same time in the Springfield church, and lasted day and night until last evening. We expect to commence another series at the same place on the evening of Jan. 1st, 1878 and continue four days. We have the promise of other ministering brethren to be with us. A sister of Calhoun Co., Mich., attended our meetings, and says she has been a member of the church for three years, but never attended a Love-feast and heard but one sermon by the brethren since she became a member. A few of our members raised the money to have the paper sent to her.

Our home mission in N. E. Ohio is doing a good work. There is a small body of isolated members in Belmont Co. This will be a good place for ministers, traveling on the B. & O. R. R. to stop off and preach. Let Bro. David Snyder, Warnock, know of your coming.—Maple Grove, O., Dec. 26, 1877.

FROM J. S. FLOYD.—Will say, that during Christmas, (before and after) we were with the Brethren in Boulder Co., had a series of meetings that were well attended. It was remarked by one brother, that he was never in a church district where there was more Christian love manifested than among the members in Boulder Co. May this one, grand element of peace and prosperity ever characterize them! It is our expectation to locate permanently among them at no distant day.

We have had most delightful weather for some weeks, until now we have some little snow and colder weather. Whilst we hear of so much rain and mud East, we congratulate ourselves on being in a climate where mud is seldom seen, and the climate so pleasant and healthy.—Greely, Colo., Dec. 30, 1877.

FROM DANIEL VAXIMAN.—After preaching seven discourses in the Baptist church in Tennessee, McDonough Co., Ill., I left on the 17th for Prairie City; was taken about ten miles North-east to a school-house on Vinegar Hill, where I preached nine times. The weather being sometimes wet, and roads almost impassable, we had nevertheless good congregations and much interest was given to the Word preached. After baptizing those who believed, I went to Astoria, Fulton Co., on the 25th inst. Had one meeting there, roads almost impassable, and it is still raining, so I started for home. Reached home Dec. 25, after an absence of twenty-seven days; found all well.—Verden, Ill., Dec. 28, 1877.

FROM T. MORGAN.—I came to California in 1867 with father and mother, joined the Brethren, and am now a soldier for Christ. I have to go about 40 miles to hear preaching by the Brethren. We have a glorious time at our camp-meetings on the San Joaquin. I enjoy myself in singing and praising God. I always feel good when I am with God's people, and I am glad Bro. Bashor is coming to California, we will all be happy to meet him.—Antioch, Cal., Dec. 25, 1877.

FROM J. B. PENCE.—The churches of Tennessee are in the enjoyment of peace, so far as I know, and are refreshed by an occasional accession to the fold. When some wandering soul returns to God there is joy among the angels in heaven and also among the saints on earth. We have had most delightful weather for some time, beautiful, clear nights and bright, sunny days.—Limestone, Tenn., Dec. 25, 1877.

FROM PETER D. REED.—This is one of the oldest churches in the State. The ark of the Lord is moving onward. Two have been added to the church the past Summer by baptism. Paul may plant and Apollus water, but God alone gives the increase. We have four ministers and six deacons. The Lord bless all His dear people, and hold them in the bonds of love and peace.—Limestone, Tenn., Dec. 15, 77.

FROM J. M. PARKER.—The great Preacher hath said: "Cast thy bread upon the waters, thou shalt gather it after many days." This the Ashland church has done, we trust, "in faith believing," and are now by the gathering of souls realizing that the promises of our God are steadfast. Since our dedicatory and Communion services, eight blood-bought souls, some in youth and others in the prime of life, have come into the vineyard of our Master, to labor for a pass-port through the gates into the City. For these manifestations of divine grace among us, we desire to praise the Lord; for He has triumphed gloriously.—Ashland, O., Dec., 25, 1877.

FROM STATE CENTER, IOWA.—We number about seventy members. The old ship of Zion has been sailing along with not the most favorable wind, but still hope that we are nearing the port. With an occasional addition to our number we feel to take courage. There were eight added during the summer, all of whom were young and seem to be setting a bright example. May the good Lord be their Shepherd and Guide, and safely land them on the other shore.

FROM NOVY EARLY.—We love to hear of souls returning to Christ,—souls that have strayed away. We had no additions recently, though we are in peace and union with each other. I believe the church would feel very much gratified if some of our western brethren would come out this Winter and hold a series of meetings. We believe there might be much good done. The weather is as warm as in April, and the roads are extremely muddy.—The fruit buds are swelling as in Spring.—Dec. 28, 77.

FROM JAMES Y. HERRICK.—We have remarkably fine weather. No snow to whiten the ground yet, save snow and rain on the 29th of November, which melted as it fell. We frequently see dandelions in bloom. To-morrow will be Christmas, and from present indications it will be green yet, which, you know, speaks well for doctors and undertakers. There is much sickness in the land. Scarlet fever, measles, diphtheria and other complaints that flesh is heir to, are prevalent.—Hockleyville, Pa., Dec. 28th, 1877.

FROM J. J. SCHAFFNER.—I hope you may continue to hold up the banner of King Emmanuel, and ever be ready to denounce error and defend the right. I do not feel able to do much of the sowing, but I can do some of the binding. This church, (Middle Creek, Ia.), numbers thirty, one preacher and three deacons, and at present are progressing finely. We need more preaching however, and invite brethren who travel through here to give us a call. We have a good country, and anyone desiring to come and see it, can address or call upon the writer.—New Sharon, Ia.

FROM DANIEL SNYDER.—This is a new place; not many of the people here ever heard of the Brethren until recently. At our series of meetings the last of November, some few began to see the light, and thirteen turned in with us to serve the Lord. Hope they will continue faithful unto the end!—Warnock, O.

FROM J. R. WATKIN.—Since the 29th of Oct. 1877, seven were added to the number of the disciples, in the Glade Run district, Armstrong Co., Pa.

Since our first visit to the above named district, to serve them in the ministry, (Feb. 12, 1876) fifty have been added by baptism, and seven reinstated, making in all fifty-seven. May the blessings of Heaven attend them and all the beloved in the Lord, and ultimately bring us all to praise Him, in full perfection in the church, triumphant in glory.—Glade Valley, Pa., Dec. 31, 1877.

FROM KNOX EARLY.—We had once thought we could be ready to return by January, but now think the time will be too short, and as sailing is considered rather dangerous in February and March, we think we shall not likely start home before April, especially if a door opens in England so that we can be profitable. But if we can do no good, we will not remain here very long on expense. But more of this in the future.

LYNN.—Have nothing of interest this week, save that we, and all the members as far as we know, enjoy good health; had fair weather for a few days, rather cool, froze enough last night to stop the plough; appearances for snow today, for the first this Fall. We did not get around much this week. Meeting last Sunday about twenty miles off, did not go. Bro. Hoop, and Bro. Eskaldson attended it. The meeting was in a new place, report good interest; next Sunday I go South about eighteen miles, prospects for baptism; some near the Kingdom, good interest to the word preached everywhere. May the Lord give the increase.—Nov. 27, 1877.

FROM THOMAS D. LYON.—I commenced meetings in the neighborhood of Bro. John Barnhart's near Mahomet, Ill., on the 5th of December, and closed the 14th. Had nine meetings in all. They were well attended and quite an interest manifested. While we visited from house to house during the day time, forming some acquaintances, we were well pleased with the people, found them sociable and kind. On Saturday morning, 15th, Bro. John Barnhart accompanied me to the Urbana church. Had meeting in the evening, and continued till Monday evening. In consequence of rain and bad roads, we by agreement, concluded to postpone the meetings, and I returned home, regretting very much that I did not get to see our beloved brother and sister, John and Mattie A. Lear, who could not attend the meeting.—Hudson, Ill., Dec. 23, 1877.

FROM JOHN FENR.—After my warmest greetings of love to you and yours, I wish to inform you that I wish to renew my subscription for your paper, which on its forehead, bears the seal of God—"DO THE COMMANDMENTS."

We have pretty hard times here, having just passed through one drouth, with every indication of another dry year. Many are scared, but we think that we cannot get along without religious literature. Better have less on the body and more in the heart. Poor in purse, but rich in grace, is better than treasures of gold.—Ripon, Cal., Dec. 17, 1877.

FROM C. H. BALSBAUGH.—Amen and Amen to the proposition of a more Scriptural method of electing to the ministry. The result of my method that has a sound principle for its basis, must be the expression of the preponderant mind of the Body of Christ, if it is to be the expression of the Mind of the Spirit. This presupposes the preponderance of the Spirit in the heart and life of the members, out of which the choice is to be determined. Holiness gives wisdom and discrimination, enabling to decide and act in exigencies of moment as by an inward personal whisper of the Holy Ghost. The prayer of the apostles was the expression of their personal appropriation of the life of Christ: "Lord show—whom of these two thou hast chosen" Acts 1:24. Although the choice was made by them, it was no less the choice of God through their unity with Him in the Holy Ghost. This is what guarantees a Divine call to the Apostleship. Of nothing may we be more certain than of meeting the mind of God in the matter by being in Him in the choir of a minister. If the Body of Christ is not all a myth—if it be really true that the Church is the embodiment of the Life and Love and Wisdom of Jesus, why should we not be able to elect an ambassador who is beyond question "in Christ's stead?" This cannot be done by a minority, unless that minority has the credentials of superior holiness, and thus a right to claim the indisputable representation of the mind of the Spirit. If twenty-five souls have made selection of a certain brother, and seventy-five have been scattered among ten or eleven others, where is our criterion to determine "whether of these twelve the Lord has chosen?" If Christ is the Head of the Church, how shall it be known that the mind of the Head is in the result unless the pre-eminating mind of the Body is in it? There is neither reason nor Scripture to justify our present method of ministerial induction. The sooner we make the majority the representative of Christ, the better. A supernatural call apart from the instrumentality of the Church, must be sustained by supernatural credentials. By the dispensation of the Spirit, as the indweller of the Church, we are restricted to the influence through the ordinary life of the Body of Christ; and in choosing a minister, we may not accept the decision of the minority unless the Spirit intimates, out of His regular course of operation, that the choice is His. When this is wanting, further efforts are required until the balance of the Body's life turns the scale.

FROM NEWTON BROWN.—On the 19th of Dec., Brother Salmon Buckalew commenced a meeting with us, and closed on the 23rd. We had a refreshing season. Eight previous souls were made willing to come out on the Lord's side; and many more we think are counting the cost. Brother Buckalew is devoting the most of his time to traveling and preaching. May God bless his labors and crown him with success.—Snake Spring Church, Pa.

The Home Circle.

READ AND OBEY.

"Husbands, love your wives,"
"Wives, obey your husbands,"
"Children, obey your parents in all things."

Edited by M. M. Eshelman.

BROTHER, sister, see that power reigns where you dwell.

Now let us see how many of our little friends can get us a subscriber for the BROTHERS AT WORK.

Just now the little bad-resses have all they can do to keep the buds from bursting through. The warm weather tempts them strongly to come out.

In ancient times each family had its own mill. It consisted of two circular stones, about the size of our common grind stones, placed one above the other. The lower one was fixed, the other revolved by means of a handle and between the two the grain was ground.

At this time of the year children have much time to read, and as most of them attend school they do read much. See that what you read will make you better. Pick out all the good and throw away the bad. Look at Jesus, love and obey Him. God is quick to reward all who do good.

The Bible tells us of fiery serpents. They were so called on account of their flaming color. The Israelites were badly bitten by them while passing through Arabia. A fiery serpent in the form of strong drink is biting thousands of people every day. Every child should be taught to shun it, not to touch it.

Parents should point out to their children the evil effects of the use of tobacco. Not much can be done with older persons who use it, but children who do not, should be taught not to use it. We believe all who use it, would advise against any one commencing it's use, for none can say it is a nice habit. We were once in the tobacco snuff, but were determined to get out, and did.

Bro. Michael Barber writes: "I would suggest that you have the Children at Work to give the Scripture that was read at the last meeting they attended. I do like to have them remember what they hear. Quite recently a Baptist minister told me, that in England parents require their children to state the minister's text when they come home from meeting."

We accept the suggestion, dear brother, and hope our young readers will profit by it. It is a blessed thing to remember the words of God, for in so doing one is always prepared to ward off the enemy's attacks.

Drop melted green glass into water, and it will form drops which are called "Prince Rupert's Drops." They were first brought to England in the year 1600 by Prince Rupert, and by the people were considered "a kind of miracle in nature." But a little thought will soon produce an easy explanation. Take one of the drops and break off ever so small a bit of the point, and the whole will at once shiver to pieces. The connection of the particles are so slight, that when one is disturbed all are affected. Break one of the least commandments of God's Word and its effect upon you is just the reverse of nature. The drops fall to atoms, that is nature. You break God's law, and you will fall, that is the effect of the spiritual law, when transgressed.

Is our home free from the storms, frets, and worries of life? asks more than one thoughtful child. Do we find comfort and pleasure at home? Or must we go to other places for kindness? Do you hear kind words and see loving smiles on papa and ma's faces when you come home from school? Do you, my dear children? Are you kind and good to each other, or are you full of rudeness and stupid? Are you my little friends? When you see a real home, a home inside as well as outside, you see a light, pleasant spot, where every one is happy, do we not? In a true home, testing, scolding and fighting are not found. The sunbeams of happiness shine in every nook and corner of a good and true home. Then make home pleasant and cheerful. Be happy and that will make others happy. Keep a sunny temper; and then the sunny temper will shine all the brighter.

ALL CAN HELP.

SUPPOSE a little twinkling star,
Up in the deep-blue sky,
Should say, "What light can reach so far,
From such a star as I?
Not many of my noble rays
On yonder earth can fall;
The others so much brighter blaze,
I will not shine at all."

Suppose a bright, green leaf that grows
Upon the rose-bush near,
Should say, "Because I'm not a rose,
I will not linger here,"
Or that a dew-drop fresh and bright,
Upon that fragrant flower,
Should say, "I'll vanish out of sight,
Because I'm not a shower."

Suppose a little child should say,
"Because I'm not a man,
I will not try in work or play,
To do what good I can,"
My child, each star some light can give,
Though faintly gleaming there;
Each rose-leaf helps the plant to live,
Each dew-drop keeps it fair.

And our good Father, up in Heaven,
Who doth all creatures view,
Even to every child has given,
Some goodly work to do,
Kind words toward those with whom you live,
Kind words and actions right,
Shall kind the deepest darkness give,
A pure and lovely light.

-Schubel.

INFLUENCE OF HOME.

SEEKING in your excellent paper a few columns designed for the Home Circle, I thought that I, as a mother and sister in the household of faith, might be permitted to add a mite, well knowing that in that circle much depends on the mother.

A mother has much to do in moulding the character of her children. They learn to speak their mother's language first, and if their homes are governed by kindness and benevolence, and the low, selfish passions are not allowed to be exercised before them, they will almost invariably show the nature they have received, unless, as is sometimes the case, that the parental influence have been such that the child's faculties may have been distorted so much, so that it will take an extraordinary amount of care and training to lead it in the way it should go.

Knowing and knowing that there are such cases, how great the responsibility resting upon mothers! The future destiny of nations rests upon the mothers of our land. But some weary, care-worn, weak-spirited mothers will ask: Do fathers have no responsibility? Are husbands without a charge in this matter of great importance?

No, indeed they are not. Much more than they generally realize depends upon them. How few husbands, when they first call their wives their own, rest on the charge that it is committed to them and remain, professing godliness, often forget it.

Man has been set at the head of the family. What a position of importance and trust! Not only has he the weight of government, body and mind, so that he is called by his despotic will. She may be his superior in mental development, but he holds the wife-power which he possesses, strengthened by the consciousness that he is "lord of creation," she must yield implicit obedience, even though she, who is called "mother of the idea."

In every every way is the husband responsible for the disposition and interest to his offspring. Few husbands understand, or even try to understand, the deep and tender feelings, the keen susceptibilities with which many mothers are gifted, and it is through these feelings, that he often makes, or mars, the disposition of his future son or daughter.

The head of the family, as Christ is the Head of the church, what an example to imitate, and what an account they will be to render! If husband would learn to imitate them, great He, all more, few wives, would feel that their path through life had been strewn with thorns and watered with tears. But mothers should not give up, if they cannot always overcome their head; they should try to discharge their duties in the fear of the great Head of the church.

It is necessary that the mother should inform herself on the many duties devolving upon her; for her hand is the forming of immortal souls. She has their earliest and tenderest care; she should have clear and definite ideas of right and wrong, combined with considerable force of character, firmness enough, that when she knows she is in the right, to stick to it. She should have pretty large benevolence, which imparts kindness and generosity to her nature, but should be guided by good judgment.

She should teach her sons what true moral courage is, and endeavor to learn their weak points, and be able to encourage and help them to overcome their weaknesses. She should be like the sculptor with a block of marble before him. He knows just how he wants it to look after it is finished. He knows too, that it will take time, patience and skill to accomplish his purpose; yet this does not discourage him. Energy and practice makes one more skillful.

"An honest man is the noblest work of God," and she should keep this ideal of manhood in her mind's eye, not only to be honest in his buying and selling, but an honest purpose of doing his duty whenever he is placed, whether it be the highest seat in the government, or a dockworker in the house of the lord. She should try to motivate high and noble aspirations and a taste for reading good books, which no parents should neglect to supply their children with.

Good and industrious habits lie at the base of all other accomplishments, and whatever qualities the mother loves and desires to see in her husband, she should try to implant in the mind of her son, for if he lives, he too is destined to become a husband and father.

I often think there is a greater responsibility in raising girls than boys, for upon the intelligence and virtue of young women, depends, in a great measure, the virtue and morality of young men. Let the girls show by their words and actions that they will not countenance the attentions of young men of loose habits, or of doubtful morality, and I think that the effect would be that they would at least try to restrain their evil ways and cultivate better habits, and, through the influence and society of women be made better.

In Psalm 144, 12, we read, "That our sons may be as plants, grown up in their youth, that our daughters may be as corner-stones, polished after the similitude of a palace." Does this not imply strength and solidity? Woman is called the weaker vessel, yet she must be the foundation of society. Not only must she be strong, but she must also be polished, which, I think, means a cultivated and refined mind, and add much to the beauty and strength of woman, and will greatly tend to increase her influence at home and in society.

L. WEAVER.

NEW YEAR'S GREETING.

A HAPPY New Year to the Home Circle, to Grandpa, Uncle Ben, and all the little correspondents! I like very much to read the Home Circle, and I expect to see some more little pieces from you all in the first number of the New Year. Last week we did not get the paper, and I was ever so long, until papa wrote to the BROTHERS AT WORK, and sent us one. I read all the letters and they were very nice. It seems as if I was acquainted with you all and would like to hear from you every week. I would like to see a letter from some of my cousins at Canak, for I have quite a number of them up there.

I was reading in the Bible this morning about a little boy. He was lying in his bed, sick, and he said some one call him, but he did not know where it was. When he heard the call three times he knew that it was the Lord that called him, and he said, "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth." And the Lord told him a great many things, and he became a great prophet, and spoke many wise things.

But my letter is getting too long, so I will let you find out who this little boy was, and where we read about him, and may be I will tell you more about him in my next letter.

COLE B. EWING.

Stirling, Ill.

WORDS OF COMFORT.

LETTER little children to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of God," (John 18, 36). Now, dear children, you have heard what your heavenly Father has to say about you. Now try, and remain good, obey your parents when they tell you to do some thing, don't say, "Let Willie and Mary go, but go you-ell." Then you will please your parents. Be good children, do not fight, don't does not like such. Do not tell lies, or swear or steal, for that is all wrong.

J. E. SPRINGER.

CHILDREN AT WORK.

From Mary Stiller.—All the little boys and girls are writing letters, so I guess I must write one too. This is not the first letter I ever wrote. I am thirteen years old. My father and mother belong to the church. I have seven brothers and four sisters living, two dead. I love to go to church and hear preaching, but we have no church near that I can go to now. I read the children's letters, and they are very nice. In the Summer I go to Sabbath-school, but we have none in Winter. I go to school every day. When you come to Syracuse, come and see me.

Syracuse, Ind.

From A. J. Robinson.—I am a little boy, and will be ten years old in January. I am glad to see your paper open to little folks. I wish I could write something that would be of some interest to them. I have never been to day-school a day in my life. I only go to Sunday-school and I can read any passage in God's Holy Book. Have started at Genesis to read through the Bible, and have got to the 10th chapter of Deuteronomy. I can't write good enough to write a letter for myself, and have to get pa to write it, but I will sign my name myself. Pa is a boot and shoe-maker, and is in bad health; he is not able to take your paper. I wish he was; it gives so much good talk about Jesus. I want to tell all the young folks that read your paper, to always tell the truth. Never say a bad word, don't go with bad boys, and your pa and ma, go to Sunday-school, go to church and to prayer-meeting, and say your prayers every night.

Sister Milligan takes your paper and that is the way I get to see it. I can make figures and add numbers, and now I will ask the little folks a question: What name in the Bible spells the same backward that it does forward, by placing the fourth letter before the fifth one? It is a man's name. Let us see who can answer it.

Miss's Statia, Tenn.

From Minerva Brumbaugh.—Dear Editor:—I will try and write a letter this morning. I am nine years old. I like to go to church with my pa and ma. I read in the Fourth Reader, I read over many letters in the Home Circle, and I think they are very nice. I wish I could see all the little girls that write for your paper.

Bedford, Ohio.

From Harry Warner.—I like to read the children's letters, and am glad there are so many good boys and girls that write for a good paper. I go to school and try to learn all I can. I expect to be a man some day, and I would not like to grow up and not have an education. My teacher says, "Youth is the seed-time of life." We should store our minds with knowledge, and have our heart full of good thoughts, then the seed will find no room. S. H. Bishop was at our house twice when he preached here. My papa said he was one of the editors of your paper. I like to go to church and hear them talk about Jesus, and how He blessed little children. I want to be one of His children. I try to be a good boy, but sometimes I am not as good as I would be, but hope I will grow better as I grow older.

Now, if you think it worth while to put the letter in your good paper, I will write you another letter.

Phymouth, Ind.

From Andrew Brumbaugh.—Dear Editor:—I will write a letter for the Home Circle. I am eleven years old. I go to school, and I learn very fast. I like to go to meeting and hear the Brethren preach. I like to read in your paper. I send my love to all the little folks.

Bedford, Ohio.

From Ida B. Grove.—I have been reading in your excellent paper, and saw you requested the young folks to write for the Home Circle. I thought I would be one to fulfill your request. I am young in years, but have come out from among the world, and am now trying to serve the Lord. I will also try to obey my parents in everything I can.

I was baptized in September, and ever since I have tried to be faithful to the Master. I am but fourteen years old. I love my brethren, sisters and friends, and I will try and be a good girl so they will love me. I have some of my dear school-mates who are yet out of the ark of safety, will give their hearts to God. I was once in their condition, but now I have been changed and hope they will too. I love my teacher and school-mates, and you, my dear editors. I hope you will pray for me that I may ever prove faithful.

Shannon, Ill.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A LETTER.

Richard Baxter Showour and Wife.—
YOUR long and interesting letter reached me about a week ago. I would be glad to write you one of equal length, but am too weak to do so. I wish, amid the pressure of other correspondence, which demand the first consideration. If the Lord will, I intend to meet your claims at some future day, and try to present a few thoughts that may appear of a little encouragement, even if I satisfy you not on the special topic you desire elucidated. A great and solemn work is assigned you, in which you have more hope of all needed aid from God, than of success with a sun-blinded, sun-blinded world.

If you relate yourself rightly to Jesus,
he will relate himself rightly to you. We need not simply, diligently to search the Scriptures and fill our quiver with arrows from God's armory, but above all is it necessary to "Crucify our flesh with the affections and lusts," so that room be made for the Holy Ghost to wield the material which we gather for our work. An unsubdued temper, a single dominant element of our fallen nature, a single ruling world-made pre-occupancy, shuts out the presence of God, and compels us to labor in our own strength. Small capacity fully possessed by the Holy Ghost, will accomplish more for Jesus, than great gifts and acquirements under the dominion of arrogance and self-dependence. Deal honestly with yourself and your God, and then hope for great things. One spark of fire from the Brazen Altar will kindle a higher and brighter flame for Jesus, than a whole volcano full of glowing ferren, gotten from the heart of natural reason. The altar was built by man, and of common material, but under God's direction, and kindled from above. Take the first and shape your ministry by it, and you will be gloriously blessed with present exaltations in Christ, and with a golden harvest for the Celestial Garner. We cannot hope too largely when we hope in the infinite, exhaustless Jehovah, but this hope has holiness for its condition. That minister who makes his life the duplicate of the Cross, will have the Crucified as the power and crown of his life. To win souls for Jesus, we must win them by Jesus, and this requires that we be a kind of second hand Jesus ourselves.

C. H. BALSBAUGH.
November 10th, 1877.

FROM OREGON.

WILL inform the many readers of the BRETH-REN AT WORK, that we, the Brethren of the Willamette Valley church, Oregon, are in usual health, thank God. We have had unusual wet weather this Fall; roads very bad, markets good; still trying to serve the good Lord. Brother David Early, of Lima, Allen Co., Ohio, arrived here on the 5th of this month, to see us and our country, and preached some, which gave us much encouragement. He also purchased a farm adjoining mine, expects to start back to Ohio to-morrow and bring his family out here next Spring. May the good Lord speed and protect him on his journey.

There is plenty room here for more Brethren.
We much desire for them to come, especially laboring brethren. Here is a Macedonian call, come over, Brethren, and help us. There are precious souls here craving for the bread of life.
Our need is very large, many more calls than we can comply with. I have promised to preach a sermon in the German language, on the coming of the Holy Spirit. With kind regards, if be otherwise, call on us, we shall be glad to see you. The Brethren are very cordially engaged in our work.

Yours affectionately,
DAVID BROWER.
Salem, Miss. Co., Dec. 20th, 1877.

FROM ELDER SAMUEL MURRAY.

MEET with the Brethren, in the Middle Fork of the Willamette, in Clinton Co., to hold a series of meetings. Commenced on Monday morning the 17th of December, preached eight discourses. Preached only of evenings, except Lord's day. The result was eight baptized, and many more almost persuaded to be Christians.
Seeing the interest manifested, we were sorry to leave the place, but according to promise, we had to leave. We had promised the brethren of Parkview to meet with them the day before Christmas, and continue over New Year, but when we got to Elma, we found they had postponed the meeting on account of bad roads, and bad weather. When we learned this, we were very sorry that we closed our meeting with the increased interest that was manifested. The general impression was, that a few more meetings would have brought quite a number more in the church. We think we have too few traveling ministers, and too many in the church that are not alive to the cause of the Master as they should be: that the love of money is the root of all evil. Neither do they remember that "God loveth a cheerful giver," or they would be more free to assist the poor brother in his temporal affairs, so that he could devote more of his time to preaching the word, and saving souls. I was at a church meeting not long since, where a call was made, for means to support the Southern mission; quite a number of the wealthiest members, refused to give, saying, they were opposed to missionary work. Where a man's treasures are, there will his heart be also. May the Lord pity and help us all.

SAMUEL MURRAY,
Bucnell's Creek, Ind., Dec. 28th, 1877.

FROM NEW YORK.

Dear Friend:
I CALL upon you, without ever seeing you,
as I believe you and your co-partners are doing a good work through the instrumentality of your valuable paper. I have been well pleased with the missionary efforts made by you and your brethren, although I was greatly disappointed when I heard that the brethren, who traveled through Canada, had been within about twenty eight miles of Clarence, and did not come and see us. If any of your brethren come so near again, come and see us; I am sure they would be welcomed, if they would stop. I think there is a good field in this place for missionary labors.

The harvest truly is great, and the laborers are few. Good, friend Moore, in the good work, and may the Lord reward you with a crown of glory in heaven, is my prayer.

Yours in Christian Love,
THOMAS LEWIS,
Chaves Center, N. Y., Dec. 23, 1877.

FROM MAPLE GROVE CHURCH, IA.

I PRESUME the brethren and sisters would like to know on whom they are bestowing their charities when they send their money to us, to assist in building a house of worship for these strange brethren and sisters, of whom they know nothing. About seven years ago, 21st of last Sept. we landed in this county from Kosensko Co., Ind. found nine members in the western part of Adams Co., twenty-two miles East of this place. Bro. Christian Harader preached occasionally for them: he having the oversight of this congregation. By Bro. Har-ader's consent we went to work and did the best we could, he coming over occasionally and encouraging us by his presence and fatherly admonition. Having just been called to the ministry before leaving Ind., we were unexpended in everything pertaining to the ministry and church government, however we held our regular meetings, with opposition on every side. To day we number fifty-five. Eleven have moved to other parts of the county. Four have gone to their reward. I have returned to their wallowing in the mire.

Every Sabbath, and during five months continuing with May, we have preaching twice every Sabbath, and during Winter, preaching every Sabbath evening also.

Every Thursday evening we have social meetings, conducted as follows: Opened by singing and prayer, then the reading of a chapter which is always selected by some member at the previous meeting. Then follows exhortation by a member of the brethren and sometimes sisters.
The brethren take up a portion of Scripture, read and speak upon it, then close by singing and prayer. The very best of feelings prevail at all our meetings, we often weep and rejoice together when we hear our members talk of their trials, their hopes, prospects and determinations. We believe our social meetings accomplish much good. There seems to be a growing interest on the part of the members and others; congregations are increasing. We hold these social meetings at the houses of the brethren.

We have a church treasury for home purposes, and it is remembered at all our social meetings, that each member cast into the church treasury as they feel the Lord has prospered them. We have another contribution for the poor blind, or church purposes generally. For this purpose every member pays five cents every six months. The amount thus collected is sent to the P. C. office to be used as they think best.
This last contribution we have adopted as a rule in our church, and we believe it would be a good rule to be adopted by every arm of the church; no member could feel it burdensome, and yet it would throw thousands of dollars into the general church treasury, thus enabling the church to send missionaries wherever needed, and scatter the doctrine of the Brethren all over the land; build churches, etc. If this meets your approval, brethren, write it up, if not, show your contempt for it, by letting it alone.

We close our remarks by asking an interest in the prayers of all the brethren and sisters that we may continue faithful until death.

N. C. WORKMAN.

CHURCH NEWS.

From Mahomet, Ill.—As we read your good paper, filled brimful of good news, we feel to thank God and take courage. We are still trying to do the best we can in the Master's cause, though it be but little, and the Lord will bless every lawful effort put forth for the name of Jesus and His precious Word. We have regular meetings the second and fourth Sunday of each month.

I am alone and have all the work to perform,
and many calls go unfiled; get discouraged sometimes, then some good brother comes in to help us. O! what encouragement when brothers come, filled with the spirit of love to cheer us up in our Christian warfare. This truly was the case a few days ago, when Bro. Thomas D.
Lyon came to visit and preach for us. We never saw Bro. Lyon in a better spirit for speaking.
He preached nine times at the Brick Schoolhouse to large and attentive congregations.
We truly appreciate his labors and think he has laid the foundation for a good work. This I think is very necessary in a place where we expect to build up a church. We want the truth, and the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

We did not have the pleasure of seeing any one out on the Lord's side, but were made to believe by the many expressions of love from the people, that our efforts will be crowned with success in the short future. Hope the Brethren will remember us, as they travel from place to place. We live fifteen miles Northwest of Champaign City, on the Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western R. R. Brethren wishing to locate in Central Illinois, can't go to a better country than here. Stop, and make this your home. May God bless the BRETHREN AT WORK!

JOHN BARNHART,
Dec. 23, 1877.

From Aurelia, Ia.—Inasmuch as we like to read church news, I thought, I would send in a brief account of our meetings here, in Cherokee Co., Iowa. Bro. Marens Fowler came to us Dec. 7th and commenced a series of meetings in the evening of the 8th. Continued meetings every day, up to the 18th, (some day meetings) with good success. On the 14th, one sister came forward to be received. We went to the water where she was buried in the liquid grave, and rose again, we trust, to walk in newness of life, and on the 15th (Lord's day) there were more professions, some came forward, and upon their confession were baptized, making four more to swell the ranks of the army of the Lord. The Brethren were much encouraged and held up in the morning, and many of our sisters to be counting their cost, some expecting themelves about ready to come out on the Lord's side.

So you see the great wind of salvation is blowing on every side, rather isolated centers.
We have meetings to-day, and that will be the Governor's labor with us, when he comes to another field of labor in Chickasaw Co. May the Lord go with him, and every day laborer be crowned with the precious fruit of the Spirit, and his efforts be a blessing to the souls in the case of our Master, our great Redeemer.

JOHN BARNHART,
Dec. 23, 1877.

From Goshen, Ind.—Our church, at this time in a healthy condition. We had meeting on Lord's day, the 2nd. Bro. Jacob Delp was with us and preached. On Monday the 24th, we had church council and felt that the Lord was with us; and on Christmas day we had meeting again in the forenoon and also in the evening. Our ministerial force was enlarged on Christmas by the appearance of our dear brother
Frederick F. Koch, from Bloomington, Mich., who is still holding forth the word of Eternal life to a perishing world, and is doing what his Master has commanded: "Go, ye and my Gospel."

E. P. PEFFLY,
Dec. 28, 1877.

From Hudson, Ill.—On the 22nd of Dec.,
P. A. Moore of Woodford Co., Ill. came to us, and preached five sermons with much power, such as was never heard from him before. He commenced with faith, repentance and baptism and so on; gave each item in rotation so that all could understand him. Though the congregations were small, yet a good impression was made on all present. We hope the brother may be spared to preach Jesus unto others, so that they may be constrained to say: "See, here is water, what doth hinder me to be baptized."

JOHN Y. SNAVELY.

DIED.

Obituaries should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and separate from all other business.

HARNISH.—In the Antioch church, Ind., on the 12th of March, sister Elizabeth Harnish, in the 37th year of her age.

LEEDY.—In the same church, Nov. 10th, 1877, sister Emma Leedy in the 20th year of her age.

BIGELOW.—Also in the Antioch church, Aug.
25, 1877, Bro. Noah Bigelow in his 22nd year. Disease consumption.

McINTYRE.—Also in the same church of consumption, on the 11th of Nov. 1877, brother
James McIntyre in his 64th year.
M. BAILEY.

BILLING.—In the Cerro Gordo church, Piatt
Co., Ill., Dec. 7, 1877, aged 57 years and 18 days.

He united with the church in 1843 and served as a deacon 11 years. He figured quite prominently in the early history of the church in Champaign Co., Ill., and for many years was the most influential man in that part of the country. The sister has lost a faithful husband, the children an affectionate father, and the church an able counsellor. Disease, typhoid fever. —
Funeral services by Eld. David Frantz.
A. B. SNIDER.

MEYERS.—In the Falls City church, Neb.,
Eld. Henry Meyers, aged 80 years, 9 days. —
Funeral services by Jonathan Lichty and
C. Forney, from Rev. 22: 5, 6.
W. W. MILLER.

MOYER.—Near Shippach, Montgomery Co.,
Pa. friend John Moyer, aged 77 years, 11 months and 8 days. Funeral occasion was improved in the interest of the Mennonite congregation.
JAMES V. HECKER.

WEAVER.—In the Orville church, Wayne
Co., Ohio, Dec. 29, 1877, Lizzie Jane, daughter of friend Jonathan Weaver, aged 8 years, 10 months and 24 days. Funeral dis-course improved by the writer, from 2nd Kings 4: 26.
D. M. HAYES.

HORNISH.—Ida, daughter of John and Eve
Hornish in Poplar Ridge church, Defiance
Co., Ohio, of diphtheria, December 7, 1877, aged 1 year, 8 months and 28 days.
W. W. NOLTINGER.

WYERS.—In the Rock River church, A-hion,
Iowa Co., Ill., our beloved sister Harriet Akers, aged 61 years, 6 months and 1 day. She suffered over two years with the dropsy.
SARAH A. DAVITT.

CURRY.—In the Yellow Creek church, Bedford
Co., Va., Dec. 8th, 1877, Eld. Leonard Curry, aged 71 years, 4 months and 23 days. Disease, yellow fever.

He had seven children, two of which were three children, namely, two grand-children and one great-grand-children to name their loss. Five children, four grand-children, and one great-grandchildren were provided for, and placed in the care of the church. He was buried with oil in the night of the 10th of Dec. His works preserved to his family. James L. Cross, improved by the Brethren from Phil. 1: 24.
R. Z. REPROGUE.

HUGHES.—William, son of brother and sister Hughess, aged 12 years, 5 months and 20 days.

NOFFSINGER.—Samuel, son of Henry and Anna Noffsinger, December 23, 1877. Aged 28 years, 8 months and 27 days. Funeral services by the writer and other brethren.
STAN LONE.

SHOWALTER.—Died in the South Waterloo church, Blackhawk Co., Iowa, September, 8th, 1877, Phoebe Showalter, aged 73 years, 5 months and 2 days. Funeral services by Eld. J. A. Murray and others from Rev. 14: 13.
E. SHOWALTER.

REPORT OF THE CONVENTION.

Report of Proceedings of a Convention held at Meyersdale, Somerset County, Pa., December 4th, and 5th, 1877, in response to a call issued by Howard Miller and others interested in organizing an effort to extend the borders of the Church of the Brethren.

The meeting was called to order by Elder James Quinter of Huntingdon Pa., and after devotional exercises, the committee on programme, appointed by a preliminary meeting the previous evening, announced the following names as temporary officers: H. B. Brumbaugh of Huntingdon, Pa., Chairman, and E. L. Yoder of Madisonburg, Ohio, Secretary.

On motion the temporary officers were elected to act during the meeting of the present convention. The President next called on Bro. Howard Miller of Salisbury, Pa., to state the object of the convention, who explained the object to be, to more organize our present mission service and showed the necessity for so doing.

The programme as announced by the committee was then acted upon as follows:

1st. Naming of the organization. Resolved: That we this day organize "The Brethren's Church Extension Union," and that we cordially invite all brethren and sisters to cooperate with us.

2nd. The following committee was announced to report candidates for permanent organization: John Wise, P. J. Brown, J. P. Heitic, Jas. Conner and S. C. Klein. Bro. Wise not being present, A. J. Sterling was nominated to take his place. The committee reported immediately, and their report was accepted.

3rd. The following question was on programme for discussion: Shall we have a board of directors? After discussion it was Resolved: That we have a board of directors composed of one member from each church district.

4th. Reading of letters addressed to the Convention. Letters were read from C. H. Hulsbough, Julia A. Wood and D. C. Moonaw.

The remainder of the afternoon session was spent in electing directors. Adjourned until 8 o'clock P. M.

EVENING SESSION.

Election of directors was concluded. The following committee was then appointed to define the duties of the directors to which was afterwards assigned the additional duty of defining the duties of all the officers. James Quinter, H. B. Holsinger, Howard Miller. Convention adjourned till next morning, 9 o'clock.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, DEC. 4TH.

Convention was called to order and proceeded to hear report on definitions of duties of officers. The following was read and adopted by the convention.

Definitions of the Duties of the permanent officers of the Church Extension Union.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

1st. They meet on Saturday preceding the A. M., at such a place as may be found convenient.

2nd. Duties.—They shall assume a general advisory oversight of the affairs of the Union, and shall hold the permanent officers responsible for the faithful performance of their duties. And they (the board) shall have presented a report of the financial and moral condition of the affairs of the Union at each regular meeting.

TREASURER'S DUTIES.

To receive and receipt for all money received. He shall pay out money to persons presenting orders, such orders to be properly signed by the President, and attested to by the Secretary and shall at all times have his books open to inspection or proof; and shall prepare an annual report for the board of directors. There shall be a quarterly report of the finances sent to the church papers for publication. All letters containing money to be sent to the treasurer.

SECRETARY'S DUTIES.

1st. All correspondence shall be attended to by the Secretary, to whom all communications respecting the business of the Union shall be addressed, excepting letters containing money.

2nd. To keep an accurate record of the work of the Union.

3rd. He shall take the field personally; do all he can to lawfully and honorably advance the interests of the Union.

4th. He shall represent the interests of the Union to the congregations he shall visit.

5th. He shall make his annual report to the board of directors.

6th. He shall receive a just compensation for his services, and necessary expenses shall be defrayed. All money to be sent to the Treasurer, who shall return the sender his receipt. He shall report to the Disbursing Committee the work that requires attention as occasion demands, and shall report progress in church work quarterly.

COMMITTEE OF APPOINTMENTS AND DISBURSING.

1-4. Shall have power to fill ministerial vacancies as far as it deems advisable and resources permit.

2nd. This committee shall send out only such men as ministers, missionaries or laborers in the church field as shall represent the teachings, faith and general order of the Brethren's Church.

3rd. They shall conform to the established order of the Brotherhood in regard to going into the territory over which a regularly organized church extends.

4th. They shall direct the expenditures of money in defraying the expenses for services in traveling and in sending out laborers.

5th. They shall fix the compensation of those engaged in Church service.

6th. Three shall constitute a quorum of this committee, and shall transact business in the necessary or voluntary absence of the others. The committee shall all receive due notifications of proposed meetings.

PRESIDENT'S DUTIES.

The President shall upon occasion, call meetings of the Union, and preside over them as its chief officer.

MISCELLANEOUS BUSINESS.

Resolved: That the present officers hold their offices from the present date, until one year from next Annual Meeting.

Resolved: That an auditing committee of three be appointed by the directors from their number to audit the accounts of the Church Extension Union, each year and to present the result to its regular Annual Meeting.

Resolved: That the proceedings of this meeting be sent to our periodicals for publication.

Resolved: To call a meeting of the Board of Disbursements and appointments to-day in the absence and without notification of Bro. Meyers.

Resolved: That the sisters be authorized to cooperate systematically and that workers among them may be appointed by the Secretary where it will cause no disturbance.

Resolved: That this meeting tender its thanks to the brethren and sisters and friends of Meyersdale, and vicinity, for the hospitality offered to those attending the meeting during its sessions.

The following are the names and addresses of the officers of the Union:

President, James Quinter, Huntingdon, Pa.; Secretary, Howard Miller, Elk Lick, Pa.; Treasurer, J. D. Livengood, Elk Lick, Pa.

COMMITTEE OF DISBURSEMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.

James Quinter, Huntingdon, Pa.; Grubill Meyers, Eldorado, Pa.; Jos. W. Bear, Huntingdon, Pa.; A. J. Sterling, Masontown, Pa.; Jonathan Kelso, Elk Lick, Pa.

DIRECTORS.

S. Z. Sharp, Marysville, Tenn.; D. C. Moonaw, Blacksburg, Va.; J. J. Harshburger, Cross Keys, Va.; Sol. Buckalew, Clifton Mill, Va.; J. D. Trosble, Langmoore, Md.; Jeremiah Binehly, Accident, Md.; J. T. Meyers, 1012 Marshall St. Plott, Pa.; Silas C. Klein, Elk Lick, Pa.; P. J. Brown, Congress, Ohio; Geo. Wine, Covington, Miami Co., O.; P. R. Wrightsman, South Bend, Ind.; Heil Hamilton, Ervin, Howard Co., Ind.; John Metzger, Cerrito Gordo, Ill.; G. Brumbaugh, Grafton, Pa.; E. K. Buechly, Waterloo, Iowa; Samuel Longacker, Panama, Iowa; D. D. Sell, Plattsburg, Mo.; J. W. Stein, Newtoma, Mo.; C. Forney, Falls City, Neb.; James L. Switzer, White Rock, Kan.; F. P. Locher, Bloomingdale, Mich.; J. S. Flory, Greeley, Colo.; Joseph Ogg, Granger, Minn.; Israel Paulson, Ringoes, Dunfermlin Co., N. J.; David Brower, Salem, Oregon; E. Heyser, Madison, Georgia; Geo. Wadde, Lathrop, Cal.; Garrett Bailly, Miller's Mills, N. C.

E. L. Yoder, Sec'y.

Madisonburg, Ohio.

A REPORT.

Report of Sabbath School Conference of the Northern District of Indiana, held at the Union Church, Marshall Co., Ind., Dec. 7th 1877.

Conference was opened by singing the 283rd hymn. Exhortation and prayer by Bro. P. R. Wrightsman. Reading of 1st Tim. 2 chap. and the minutes of former sessions. In the absence of Bro. Jacob Berkey, President of the Convention, Bro. P. R. Wrightsman was chosen pro tem, who made some very appropriate remarks and declared the meeting open for further business. It was motioned and seconded, that we first reconsider the work of the previous meetings by sessions, and adopt, modify or amend as the Conference assembled, deemed proper. The motion carried, unanimously to reconsider.

The President proceeded to read Sec. 1st of former rules and regulations. After some considerable debating an amendment was offered by W. G. Cook and it carried unanimously.

Sec. 1st. Resolved: That the school shall elect their own officers, electing only brethren or sisters as far as practicable.

Sec. 2nd read, after which a spirited discussion took place for some time, there Bro. Beiler moved that no one be permitted to speak more than twice on the same subject, and only fifteen minutes at each hearing, carried, finally Bro. Cook offered an amendment which was read and unanimously adopted as follows: Resolved: That every school shall be opened by singing and prayer, and reading of a chapter out of the Bible, and to be closed with prayer when preaching does not follow soon after.

Sec. 3rd read and passed unanimously as previously adopted, as follows: Resolved: That the school shall be formed into classes, and read out of the Bible or New Testament, reading the books through when commenced.

Sec. 4th passed without discussion, as follows: Resolved: That each teacher shall ask questions from the Scriptures read that day, and there may also be general questions asked by the school.

5th. Original resolution stricken out.

6th. Resolution read and adopted without amendment, as follows: Resolved: That the doctrine of the Bible shall be defended by the teachers of the school, and that in its purity, against opposition.

7th. Read and discussed for some time, when an amendment was offered by Bro. J. B. Wrightsman, which passed unanimously as follows: Whereas we believe in a systematic manner of teaching Sabbath-school scholars: Resolved: That we may adopt the lesson leaf. Adjourned for refreshments, by singing the 120th hymn.

Afternoon session opened by singing the 282 hymn, and some appropriate remarks by the chairman.

8th. Read and stricken out.

9th. Read and amended by striking out the sentence (and such foolishness as the world engages in) as intended: Resolved: That we take no part in picnics or Sabbath-school celebrations, or getting up banners, but we will oppose them all.

10th. Read, passed unanimously without debate as follows: Resolved: That we maintain in the Sabbath-school our humble plain character, both in manners and dress, as well as in the church.

11th. Read and adopted without discussion or amendment as follows: Resolved: That our object be to teach and learn the Scriptures, and instill in the minds of the young the pure principles of the Bible.

12th. Read, and after some discussion, an amendment was offered by Bro. John Knisley, which was unanimously adopted as follows: Resolved: That we believe it to be the duty of every member of the church, to take an active part in the Sabbath-school by the way of lending all their aid and assistance to the advancement of the cause. Bro. Wrightsman offered the following additional section, which was unanimously adopted without discussion, as follows:

13th. Resolved: That the Northern Dist. of Ind. S. S. Conference request said general Dist. meeting to request next A. M. to appoint a publishing committee to prepare and publish such S. S. papers, books and general S. S. literature as the wants of our Sunday-schools require. This department being dispensed with, the next in order was the election of officers for the year 1878.

The result was as follows: President, P. R. Wrightsman; Vice President, John Knisley; Secretary, W. G. Cook, Assistant Sec'y, John B. Wrightsman; Treasurer, Margaret Cook. Corresponding Secretaries: P. R. Wrightsman, O. W. Miller, S. C. Beiler, John Sturgis, Isaac Early, John B. Wrightsman, John Cistee, Manassa Summers, Byron W. Moore, Wm. Wilburn, Sarah Miller, Lizzie Wrightsman, Hannah Appleman, Emma Kahrich and sister Frank Hardman.

The object of this great number of corresponding secretaries being appointed, was to encourage articles to be written on the subject of Sunday-schools from different sections of Northern Dist. of Ind., in behalf of the advancements of the cause, and this Convention assembled. Recommended that all appointed to duty will be prompt to the discharge of the same, and that many not mentioned assist, that the principles of the Sabbath-school cause be firmly set forth and encouraged by all. The Conference then proceeded to appoint a committee on general arrangements, which resulted as follows: Dr. P. R. Wrightsman, Chairman, South Bend, Ind.; Bro. Jacob Appleman, Plymouth, Ind.; Bro. Davis Younce, Syracuse, Ind.; Bro. A. Paterbaugh, Warsaw, Ind.; Bro. Isaac L. Berkey, Goshen, Ind.; Bro. John Sturgis, Wawaka, Ind.; the committee to be ordered in session by the Chairman. Raised by motion for the cause, $258, all donations for cause to be forwarded to sister Margaret Cook, Treasurer, Plymouth, Ind. Appropriate remarks on the subject of Church charity, and then came in order the discussions of the propositions presented by the previous Conference, which resulted in a limited exposition of the propositions, on account of all those assigned to that duty were absent, though many valuable instructions were given by the brethren, and sisters present. After this, there being no further business before the Convention, with a general expression of good feeling for the advancement of the cause, and having realized the benefit of being amply paid for our assembling together in the good cause, the Convention adjourned with prayer by Bro. John Knisley, and singing of the Doxology by audience.

A. Wm. G. Cook, Sec'y.

(JOHN B. WRIGHTSMAN, Ass't.)

Primitive Christian and Pilgrim will please copy.

George Bernard Tanguay, a Roman Catholic priest, of Montreal, has written a letter to Archbishop Taschereau, declaring his withdrawal from the Church, on account of errors, and his intention to preach in the future "the holy Gospel of Jesus Christ." Defections from the Catholic body in the province of Quebec, have been very large in the past five years.

Since December is the last one has hardly been experienced in the memory of the present generation. In many places the roads have been impassable for loads, and business has been greatly affected. The peach trees in Michigan bloomed, and in many parts of the North flowers were found in the open field.

Since our last issue a considerable change has come over the weather. Up to the close of December the weather was warm, and in some respects delightful, though the roads were wretchedly muddy. But now the mud is froze hard, and the roads are extremely rough. The weather is cold and some snow has fallen.

By a few changes of importance have taken place in the Eastern war. The Russians have gained other advantages, but the snow in the Balkans, prevents much activity among the armies.

Nothing certain is yet known regarding the step to be taken by England. Other powers remain firm so far.

STANLEY, the great African explorer, has returned to Alexandria, Egypt. He has perhaps penetrated Africa further than any white man. His discoveries will be of great value to Geographical students.

Moody has been throwing some more of his shells into the camps of Secret Societies. Moody is down on Secret Societies and so might every preacher to be.

It is reported that the Chinese have lately massacred 15,000 men, women and children.

It is said, that if all the papers now published in the United States were to fly to their destinations as they leave the press, that they would almost constantly hide the sun from our view.

The entire mass of tobacco which is annually consumed in smoking, snuffing, and in chewing on the earth is 4,000 millions of pounds—manifestly too high an estimate for from twelve to fifteen hundred millions of inhabitants. Let us take the half as the more probable, and let us suppose the tobacco leaves transformed into roll tobacco, a tobacco serpent is created which, with a diameter of two inches, and following the direction of the equator, could wind itself around the earth thirty times.

BOOKS, PAMPHLETS, ETC., FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

Pengilly's Guide to Christian Baptism.—Price 20 cents.

Quinter and Snyder's Debate on Immersion.—Price, 75 cents.

Cruden's Concordance to the Bible.—Best edition, Imperial 8vo, Cloth, $2.75, Library Sheep, $3.50.

History of Palectino, or the Holy Land, by M. Russell, LL. D., Engravings, 18 mo., Cloth, 75 cents.

Christian Baptism.—With its Antecedents and Consequences. By Alexander Campbell. Cloth, $1.25.

Ancient and Modern Egypt.—View of Ancient and Modern Egypt. By M. Russell, LL. D., Engravings, 18 mo., Cloth, 50 cents.

Head's Theological Works, or a Vindication of Primitive Christianity. By Elder Peter Head. Bound in cloth, 472 pages. Price, $1.25.

Reason and Revelation.—By R. Milligan. This work should not only be read, but carefully studied by every minister in the brotherhood. $2.50.

Christianity Utterly Incompatible with War. Being one of Twenty Reasons, for a change in my church relations.—By J. W. Stein. Price, 25 cents; 25 copies, $5.00.

A Sermon on Baptism.—Delivered by Bro. S. H. Beshor in the Elk Lick Congregation, Somerset county, Pa. A neatly printed pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 20 cents.

Family Rules and Regulations.—By J. W. Stein. Beautifully printed in three colors on good card board, is intended for framing, and should be in every family. Price 20 cents.

Voice of the Seven Thunders; Or, Lectures on the Book of Revelation. By J. L. Martin. Among modern books this is read with curiosity. You can't help but understand it. $1.50.

True Evangelical Obedience, its nature and necessity, as taught and practiced among the Brethren or German Baptists. By J. W. Stein, being one of his twenty reasons for a change in church relations. This is an excellent work, and should be circulated by the thousands all over the country. Price, 20 cents; 7 copies, $1.00; 15 copies, $2.00.

The Origin of Single Immersion.—Showing that single immersion was practiced by Christians and as a practice, cannot be traced beyond the middle of the fourth century. By Elder James Quinter. It is a tract of sixty pages, and the Brethren should take an active part in giving it an extensive circulation. Price 2 copies, 10 cents; 4 copies, 20 cents; 30 copies, $1.00.

Certificate of Membership in Book Form.—They are neatly printed on good paper, ready to fill out, with duplicate attached and all well bound together in neat book form, somewhat after the style of blank note books. One of these books should be in the hands of each congregation, from which a number will be furnished, and of these one will be filled out, signed by the officers, and left from the duplicate and bound to the member. The duplicate has on it, in substance, what is in the certificate, this remains in the book, thus enabling each congregation to keep a record of this part of her business. We put up ten sizes of books, No. 1, containing one hundred certificates, price 50 cents; No. 2, containing fifty certificates, price 30 cents; those wanting book containing two hundred certificates, can obtain them for $1.25.

Buy any of the above works sent post-paid on receipt of the annexed price. Address—

MOORE, BASHOR & ESHELMAN, LANARK, Carroll Co., Md.

W. U. R. R. Time Table.

Day passenger train going east leaves Lanark at 12:15 P. M., and arrives in Baltimore at 6:45 P. M. Day passenger train going west leaves Lanark at 2:10 P. M., and arrives at Rock Island at 5:50 P. M. Night passenger trains, going east and west, meet and leave Lanark at 2:21 A. M., arriving at Baltimore at 6:00 A. M., and at Rock Island at 9:00 A. M. Freight and Accommodation Trains will run west at 12:35 P. M., 10:30 A. M., and 12:30 P. M., and east at 1:10 A. M., 1 P. M., and 1:50 P. M. Tickets are sold for above trains only. Passenger train makes two round trips at Western Union Junction. G. A. SMITH, Agent.

Passengers for Chicago should leave Lanark at 12:21 P. M., and the Western Union Junction, here they need not wait five minutes for the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul passenger train, and then reach Chicago at 7:15 the same evening. To reach Lanark from Chicago go to the Ft. Way depot, take the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul train at five in the evening, run north to the W. U. Junction, change cars for Lanark, and arrive here at 2:21 in the morning.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK.

"Behold I Bring You Good Tidings of Great Joy, which Shall be unto All People." — LUKE 2: 10.

Vol. III.

Lanark, Ill., January 17, 1878.

No. 3.

The Brethren at Work.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY

—BY—

J. H. Moore, S. H. Bashor, M. M. Eshelman.

—FO—

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

| | | | | |
|-----------------|---|---|---|-----------------|
| R. H. MILLER, | — | — | — | LADOGA, ILL. |
| J. W. STEIN, | — | — | — | NEWTONIA, MO. |
| D. YANIMAN, | — | — | — | VIRIDEN, ILL. |
| D. R. MENTZER, | — | — | — | WAYNESBORO, PA. |
| MATTIE A. LEAR, | — | — | — | URBANA, ILL. |

FAULT FINDING.

IN spreading of a person's faults
Pray don't forget your own;
Remember, those with houses of glass
Should never throw a stone.
If we have nothing else to do,
Than talk of those who sin,
'Tis better we commence at home,
And from that point begin.

We have no right to judge a man,
Until he's fairly tried;
Should we not like his company,
We know the world is wide.
Some may have faults, and who has not?
The old as well as young,
Perhaps we may, for all we know,
Have duty to them owe.

Put it on a better plan,
And let it work out well;
To try your own defects to cure,
E'er other's faults you tell.
As though I sometimes hope to be
No worse than some I know,
My own short-comings bid me let
The faults of others go.

N. w. let us all, when we begin,
To slander friend or foe,
Think of the harm one word may do,
To those we little know,
Remember ours is chicken-like,
Sometimes to peck, come home,
Don't speak of others faults until
You have none of your own.

Suggested by M. S. Barkland.

WHEN WAS CHRIST BORN?

BY D. P. SUMNER.

THE time in which Christ was born, is considered a subject of great importance by some professing people, while the matter seems not to be so highly valued by the Holy Ghost, who inspired the Evangelists to write the history of his birth, as they have not dropped a hint by which a guess could be made of the time, excepting the "shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night."

Of this we know, that "it was a custom among the Jews to send out their sheep to disperse about the Passover, and bring them home at the commencement of the first week." During the time they were out, the shepherd watched the night and day. As the Passover occurred in the Spring and the first week began early in the month March, which answers to part of October and November, we find that the sheep were kept out in the open country during the whole of Summer. And as these shepherds had not yet brought home their flocks, it is a presumptive argument that October had not yet commenced, and that consequently, our Lord was not born on the 25th of December, when no flocks were out in the field, nor could he have been born later than September as the flocks were still in the fields by night. There are no less than 136 different opinions concerning the year of Christ's birth; and as to his birthday, that has been placed by Christian sects and learned men, in every month of the year. The Latin church, supreme in power, and infallible in judgment placed it on the 25th of December, the very day on which the ancient Romans celebrated the feast of their goddess Brona.—"Clark.

I do not believe that the time of Christ's birth at that time was certainly known outside of Joseph and Mary. If it had been known, Herod surely need not embrace in his bloody edict all the male children in the period of two years. But let us search the Scriptures for a key to this mystery.

"Three times thou shalt keep a feast unto me in one year" (Ex 23: 14). These were, the feast of the Passover, the feast of Pentecost, and the feast of Tabernacles, called also the feast of ingathering. The Passover was celebrated in remembrance of the Hebrews' deliverance out of Egypt. Pentecost, called also the feast of harvest, also the feast of wrcks. This feast was celebrated fifty days after the Passover, to commemorate the giving of the law on Mount Sinai, which took place fifty days after. The feast of Tabernacles was celebrated on the 15th day of the seventh month (Lev. 23: 34), to commemorate the Israelites dwelling in tents forty years in the wilderness. Dr. Clark says, that this seventh month was Tisri, and is the seventh of the ecclesiastical, and the first of the civil year; and answers to the last half of our September, and the first half of our October. And some think that creation happened this time. This feast took its name from the booths, tents made of brush, in which they must dwell seven days (Lev. 23: 42). These feasts were distinguished in their several peculiarities, by which they were observed. The Passover had its paschal lamb, the feast of harvest its offering of the first fruit, and the feast of tabernacles its booths of brush, and the people's abourings before the Lord their God for seven days.

The law being a shadow of good things to come, may we not find, for things to come on these occasions which will bear in the new dispensation established on better promises? Let us see. The feast of the Passover, answers to our Easter. It was at this feast Christ was crucified, buried, and rose again. This Passover feast must be observed on the 14th day of the month, which God said should be the beginning of months; that is, "the first month of the organized church." This month Clark says, "is Abul, and answers to part of March and April, whereas it is supposed that previous to this, the year began with Tisri, for in this month the Jews supposed God created the world, when the earth appeared at once with all its fruits in perfection. From this circumstance, the Jews have found a reason for the commencement of the year to fall to which they afterwards attended in their reckonings. That which began with Tisri, or September, was called their civil year; and that which began with Abul, or March, was called their sanctified or ecclesiastical year." The month then being Abul, the feast was celebrated on the 14th day, and on the 15th day from the 14th day began the feast of harvest, known by us as Pentecost, or Whitsunday. It was when Prophets had fully come that the Holy Ghost came down in His power, and clothed the apostles with power fully, to preach Christ crucified to all nations.

Thus we see two very notable events in the Christian dispensation occurring on two of the three great feasts in the old dispensation. The mind naturally enquires, what occurred on the other, the feast of tabernacles? I have no positive proof, but in my mind I have no doubt that Christ was born at least during this first week, and seventh ecclesiastical month.

It is not at all probable that such momentous things should occur in the Christian world at the time of two of the three great feasts, and thus one should remain neutral in the great drama of Christianity, especially the month. Great and marvelous things are crowded into this, the seventh ecclesiastical, and first civil month of the year. On the first day, there shall be a Sabbath, a memorial of blowing of trumpets, a holy convocation. On the tenth day, there shall be a day of atonement; it shall be a holy convocation. And on the fifteenth shall be the feast of tabernacles, for seven days unto the Lord. Who will venture to say, that great things were not signified by these things? What are they? I believe the nativity of Christ. At this feast Israel must go out of the house and dwell in booths; at the birth of Christ the shepherds at least were out in the fields by night. At this feast, Israel must rejoice before the Lord their God for seven days; at the birth of Christ the angels brought good tidings of great joy, which shall be for all people. And if men failed to rejoice before the Lord their God, the multitude of the heavenly host praised God saying, "Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace, good will toward man."

According to Clark, this month Tisri, answers to the last half of September, and the first half of October. If so, then the first day of Tisri, would be about the 15th of September on which was to be a memorial of blowing of trumpets; and is the day which the early Christians observed as the day of Christianity. Did not the angel's voice, Behold I bring you good news, in trumpet sounds reach from earth to heaven, as well as over all creation? for the good news shall be for all men. Until I have positive proof to the contrary I believe this is about the time Christ was born.

UNCONSCIOUS INFLUENCES.

BY A. W. SOUTHWELL.

BY unconscious influences, I mean those influences that are silently and unconsciously working upon the minds of the human family. We know that some men exert a great influence over others. Whether they say or do others will try to imitate. Such influences can easily be seen. But there are influences that seem to be silently doing their work, and yet their effects are deep and lasting; so powerful are their effects that I could not that they have changed the course of many minds, and formed a basis on which many have built.

It is said, that "the mind of a child is like clean snow." Then every foot-print, touch of the hand, brush of a garment, or any and every thing that comes in contact with it, has something to do in shaping and making impressions upon it. Now if the instruments of repression are clean, all the impressions will be clean; but if the rest, the hand, or garment is unclean, the result is an impression with taint or dirt concerning it, which is almost, or quite impossible to remove. So every filthy word spoken in the presence of a child leaves an impression taintful with uncleanliness, likewise every deed and look.

As we are influenced more or less by all around us, how careful ought we to be in watching these influences, as they may be dragging us down, and we are unconscious of it. And while we are watching the influence, others may have noticed, let us examine ourselves and see what kind of influence we are exerting over others. Is our presence a benefit or an injury? Does our conversation elevate or degrade? Does our conduct impress others for good or evil? When we meet a stranger, is there something about our looks, our words, and our actions that will make good impressions on his mind? Let us examine ourselves and see what kind of influences we are exerting. Are we "letting our light so shine before men that they may see our good works, and glorify our Father which is in heaven?"

INCONSISTENCIES.

BY F. W. W. W. W.

THERE are people in the world, and it is to be regretted that there are many, who are continually complaining about inconsistencies which they imagine they see in others, which they themselves are continually practicing in reality. How frequently they thimble (being) tell us that we should be known by no other name than that of Christian while Christ, our only Captain says, "all ye are brethren."

Very frequently, while opposing trine immersion, which is the only one baptism without human origin, do we hear men say that the apostle taught one baptism only, when he said, "one Lord, one faith, one baptism," while at the same time they believe in and encourage all the baptisms by fellowshipping, as brethren those who have been sprinkled, poured, or immersed by one or three dips. They however fail to notice the fact that the same apostle recommends one faith only, as well as one baptism, and yet they encourage many different faiths by fellowshipping all the various denominations in existence.

I heard a minister, while behind the pulpit with the Bible before him, declare that he was ready and willing to extend the right hand of fellowship, and accept as a brother any one who believes that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. I must admit that I felt somewhat grieved to think that men could be induced to fellowship Satan and publicly accept him as a brother, but this man did it, for no one will be willing to expose his ignorance so much as to deny the fact that Satan believes that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. The difference between Satan and a true believer in Christ is this: The true believer teaches that men and women must believe in Christ, and obey Him in all His appointments, while Satan teaches that if men and women will believe in Christ, they either need not obey Him at all, or else only such of His mandates as they deem proper. Simmer, will you hear and obey his doctrine which he propagates by the help of his agents, or will you obey Christ's word?

EDUCATION VS. CRIME.

BY S. Z. SHAW.

A NUMBER of years ago, I heard Hon. J. H. Wickham, Supt. of Public Schools in Pa., say that, of the 1500 convicts in the penitentiaries of his State, scarcely any could both read and write. This suggests the idea that there must be some relation between ignorance and crime; and to investigate the subject more fully I visited the State prison at Nashville and found there 929 convicts, only twenty-nine of whom could read and write. Here was a sad and living comment on the misfortune of being uneducated. Nearly 1000 persons, wearing the stigma of crime, a disgrace to their friends and an enormous expense to the State, because their early training was neglected. It does not follow from this that every person who cannot read and write will necessarily become a convict, but it does show that crime, like cholera, will seize upon the victims best adapted to it—age and will flourish best among the ignorant.

Children unrestrained at home, and losing their restraint of school life will have little regard for authority, even that of law, and are soon carried by it and punished. Not so with those who are educated. They are taught to restrain their evil passions at school, and will do so when they enter public life.

The frequent "strikes" in the games of Pa. are made by ignorant foreigners. The terrible destruction of property during the recent great railroad strike, which shook the very nation, was not caused by the intelligent part of the employees, but by the ignorant rabble, who took advantage of the occasion to give vent to their unbridled passions.

Had the four million blacks been educated, there could have been no rebellion in the South. Education is therefore not only the preventive of crime, but the safeguard of a nation, and less the safeguard of a church than that of a nation. One of the worst religious sects in the United States, not controlling a school, and as a body, opposed to college education is nevertheless divided into five or six factions, while the strongest sect numbering over a million and free from all internal dissensions is the one which has the greatest number of schools and colleges under the control of the church. The experience of ages has shown that to prevent crime, a nation must educate, and to prevent divisions a church must have schools of its own.

THE FIRM BANK.

The following verses, supposed to have been written by the Rev. Rowland Hill at a time when public credit in Great Britain was shaken by the failure of several banks, are republished by request:

I HAVE a never-failing bank,
A more than golden store;
No earthly bank is half so rich;
How can I then be poor?

'Tis when my stock is spent and gone,
And I without a groat,
I'm glad to hasten to my bank,
And beg a little note.

Sometimes my Banker smiling says:
"Why don't you oftener come?
And when you draw a little note,
Why not a larger sum?"

"Why live so niggardly and poor?
Your bank contains a plenty;
Why come and take a four-pound note
When you might have a twenty?"

"Yea, twenty thousand ten times told
Is but a trilling sum,
To what your Father has laid up,
Secure in Christ His Son."

Since then my Banker is so rich,
I have no cause to borrow;
I'll live upon my cash to-day,
And draw again to-morrow.

I've been a thousand times before,
And never was rejected;
Sometimes my Banker gives me more
Than asked for or expected.

Sometimes I've felt a little proud,
I've managed things so clever;
But, ah, before the day is gone
I've felt as poor as ever.

Should all the banks in Britain break,
And that of England smash;
Bring in your note to Zion's bank,
You'll surely have your cash.

And if you have but one small note,
Fear not to bring it in;
Come hoddly to the bank of Grace;
The Banker is within.

All forged notes will be refused,
Man-writs are rejected;
There's not a single note will pass
That God has not accepted.

This bank is full of precious notes,
All signed and sealed and true,
Though many doubting souls may say,
"There is not one for me."

The leper had a little note—
"Lord, if you will, you can!"
The Banker cashed this little note,
And healed the sickly man.

We read of one young man, indeed,
Whose riches did abound;
But in the Banker's book of Grace
This man was never found.

But see the wretched dying thief,
Hang by the Banker's side;
He cried, "Dear Lord remember me!"
He got his cash and died.

—Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine.

FAULT-FINDING.

BY CHARLOTTE E. BOND.

"WHY beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?" (Matt. 6: 3).

The language of the text emphatically warns us against the principle of fault-finding. This is a matter that is very difficult to control in our natures. To manage this trouble, the tongue must be bridled, and kept so, for the apostle tells us if the tongue is not bridled our religion is in vain. This thing of watching each sister, and stating just the length of the cap strings, and how she ties it, the exact size of the bonnet, or just how this or that brother has his coat rounded, looks very much like a representation of the titling of the mint, anise, cummin, and neglecting the weightier matters of the law, judgment, love, and mercy. You that are criticising every little matter in dress, examine yourselves. Have you dealt fairly with your brother in all your contracts with him? Have you given just weight in every case? Have you not in your possession one dollar and fifty cents that you could send the BRETHREN AT WORK into some poor family next year; that you have intended to spend for some selfish purpose?

While we are criticising others, let us look within our own hearts and see if all is right there, and when watching our neighbors wash their hands, cups, and pots, before they eat, according to the tradition of the elders, let us not lay aside the commandments of God. Peace and good will toward man, has been proclaimed from on high. Our Savior said, "Peace be unto you." "My peace I leave with you." Do we still retain that peace in the church? We are commanded to have forbearance toward one another, and to exercise patience and forgiveness toward each other, and as near as we can live peaceably with all men.

We think this continual fault-finding destroys our peace, and brings about unpleasant feelings. We are told precisely what to do in case a brother offends, go to him, and only him, kindly, lovingly, and tell him meekly of his fault. If he hears thee, matters should stop right there. But in many cases the whole neighborhood knows it before the offending party knows that he has offended any one, and sometimes the matter is laid before the elder, as the first move. This is not the way we understand the Scriptures in these matters; and possibly if we would look a little more in our own hearts, and watch ourselves a little more closely, we would not have so much time to abuse the faults of others. May we all be able to examine ourselves, and walk before God blameless, is my prayer.

"THOU FOOL."

BY JES. L. HOOVER.

THE term fool, is frequently, but thoughtlessly made use of by many. It has several meanings, such as a person destitute of reason, an idiot, also one that acts unreasonably, and is frequently used as a term of reproach. But in the Scripture, it means a wicked person. "The fool has said in his heart there is no God" (Ps. 14: 1). "But whosoever shall say, thou fool, shall be in danger of hell fire" (Matt. 5: 22).

Among the Jews the term fool, implied the highest enormity and most aggravated guilt. Among the Gentiles, such an expression was punished by cutting out the tongue, and thrusting a hot iron of ten finger's breadth into the mouth of the person who used it. A person who hears these sayings of the Savior and doeth them not, is termed a foolish man. When a man puts up a building and does not lay a solid foundation, we conclude that he is a foolish man, for he has not acted wisely, but went contrary to the rules for building. Five of the ten virgins were foolish, for they took no oil with them in their vessels. "And while they went to buy, the bridegroom came; and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage, and the door was shut."

There was a certain rich man whose ground brought forth plentifully. But he became alarmed about not having sufficient room for his goods, and the fruit of his land. He pulled down his barns and built greater ones. After having built greater barns, he stored away his goods, and said to his soul, "Thou hast much goods laid up for many years, take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry. "But God said unto him, thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee" (Luke 12: 19, 20). Oh! what a message, death staring him in the face. He may have been honest, and not slothful in business. He may have stood high in society, and was considered a wise man. But he fooled himself out of the salvation of his soul. So it is with him that is not rich towards God. "Where your treasure is there will your heart be also."

THE TEST OF DISCIPLESHIP.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

A Brotherly Christmas Greeting to all the Saints of Philadelphia.

THE most solemn and august thought conceivable is MORAL BEING. This includes God and Angels, men and devils. Moral responsibility and immortality are inseparable. Being without beginning must necessarily be without end. All inferior intelligences emanating from Him, not only originated by Him, but made in His likeness, with His essence woven into their constitution share His prospective Eternity; Life everlasting is the Being of God, and the opposite is Eternal Death. The loss of the Divine character in us, is the loss of His life, though life continues in another quality and relation and experience. The restoration of this character is Eternal Life and this life is LOVE. "God is love, and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him" 1 John 4: 16. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love to one another" John 13: 35.

The test is deep and comprehensive. It dissects the very heart of God, and lays bare the contents of His Uncreated Personality. To be like God is our only chance for Heaven. To make this community of nature and joy possible, the wonder of the Incarnation, the Crucifixion, the Resurrection, and the Ascension had to intervene, and all these were expressions of love, both as grounds of reconciliation and patterns for imitation. Of all questions this is the most momentous, an I, or an I not a true disciple of Jesus Christ? To pretend to love God, while we are vindictive in feeling, and cold, distant, in conduct, is base hypocrisy. To wear a smiling mask, and make profession of affection which the conscience belies, is ditto. "By this shall all men know," by this test God Himself asks to be judged. He announces Himself as LOVE. He gave His only Begotten Son to all the dread liabilities of our apostasy, and appointed a special functionary to cry out, "Behold the Lamb of God." "By this shall all men know that God is love." The principle which opened the way, must also be the living controlling principle of all who pass over it. None can be of God, or have part in His beatitudes, save those who are quickened and sustained by the principle that made God human. What an inconceivable stoop that was which exchanged the glorious Throne of the third Heaven for the manger, and the Swaddling-clothes! This served the double purpose of expiation and example. We needed a Propitiation for our sins, and a type of the Divine idea of human excellence. Christ is both, and we cannot have the benefit of the first without conformity to the last. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples."

We are so apt to lose the great and lofty idea of God in Christ in the habit of thought, and feeling generated by con-ventionalism that we need, "line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little" to prevent the spiritual from being overlaid and obscured by the carnal. It requires unceasing vigilance, unbroken and desperate warfare with the world, the flesh, and the devil, to keep the new born Christ from perishing under the sword of Herod. An idle word, a fit of passion, the nursing of a forbidden desire, the reading of humorous or flesh-pleasing literature, entertaining or retailing gossip, exaggerating frailties, and caricaturing virtues, and misshapening motives, are all diminutions or destructions of the test of our discipleship. Every aberration from the life of Christ is its own blight and damnation. No simple instance of self-preference escapes the curse of the law. We are dwarfed, and maimed and paralyzed and dead, because the supremacy of self the Holy Ghost retires, and resigns the field to the Arch-deceiver, whose prerogative it is to assume the cloak of Heaven to do the work of Hell. If we would know our relation to God, we have but to ascertain our relation to our fellows. God was in the flesh, and has given us the true mould of all human relationship, outside of which there is no salvation.

"He that hateth his brother, is a murderer" and he that loveth not in Christ, hates. "Ye must be born again" out of Christ all life is death. To love as brethren we must be generated by one Father: self-sacrifice is the ruling characteristic of that Love which made a way through to opposing attributes of Jehovah for our redemption; and the same element among those thus redeemed is not only a badge of our Divine lineage, but the very essence of the Life Everlasting. "He that loveth not, knoweth not God; for God is love." Let these words as they are breathed out of the heart of Jesus by the Holy Ghost, sink into our souls like the knell of death, oh! what a bottomless hopeless Hell in these three words, "knoweth not God." Between the love, of which the cross is the life, and the ignorance of God and the depth of damnation, there is no middle ground. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." Not the purest and loftiest affection that ever welled from the unrenewed heart; but the love that drew Jesus out of the bosom of the Father, and impaled Him on the malefactor's stake, under the frown of Heaven, and the terrors of Hell, and the scoffs and railings of the very objects for whom all this humiliation and agony was endured! Oh! the beauty of Holiness. Oh! the depth and tenderness of the Divine Heart. Oh! the dignity of human nature. Oh! the exceeding sinfulness of sin, the exceeding madness of the human will, and the awful, God-defying obstinacy of perverted inclination. So good is God, so great is man in make, and so mean in his character, who cannot love as Christ loves, cannot be where Christ is. The fellowship of the saints is the eternal unity of the Holy Trinity. Christ is the expression of the uncreated All-Love, and we are "the habitation of God through the Spirit" the propitiation of the Incarnation. Let us not cheat ourselves out of salvation, by discounting the love of Christ, in our life, and taking that for a copy of His, which is only a misshapen, ghastly birth of sin. The work of God goes deep, and when it plows up the subsoil of our being, and mellow it under the harrow of discipline, and the rays and dews of Grace we will be able to endure the scourge, and the buffeting and the spitting, and the mocking, and the lacerating nails, and look up to God in trust, and down upon the cruel world in pity, and say, "Father forgive them." So did Jesus, and, "If any man love not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His," overwhelming words! Who can read them without being startled? Who can endure the doom of the loveless, and who can love without the cross?

FALSE TEACHERS.

BY FRANK ALLEN.

It is an awful charge that is brought against false teachers, in olden times (Isaiah 9: 16). The leaders of this people caused them to err, and they that are led of them are destroyed.

There are many teachers in these last days, chargeable with this guilt. And we find a curse pronounced against them (Gal. 1: 8, 9). "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other Gospel unto you, than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." As I said before, so say I now again, "If any man preach any other Gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed."

1. They cause the children of men to err, by false doctrine. This was the case with the teachers, in the church at Galatia. They preached another Gospel. And when we read the awful curse which under the influence of inspiration pronounced upon such: surely all teachers, ought to tremble at the thought of preaching anything else than the unadulterated Gospel of Christ.

2. Teachers cause men to err, by not fully bringing forward all things commanded, and not declaring the whole counsel of God.

3. They cause men to err. (2 Pet. 2: 2, 3). "Through covetousness, and with figned words they make merchandise of them, and many shall follow their pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of." How far this has contributed to make many a poor, thoughtless creature, who, either was incapable of looking beyond the surface of things, or would not take the trouble to do so, concluded that religion was a trick of priestcraft, it is impossible to conclude. We are told in 2 Tim. 4: 3, 4. "For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned into fables."

Many examples are to be met with, of the fatal influence of such teachers. Where the inhabitants of whole districts are laid asleep under the most fatal delusions, and are steered against every attempt to direct their attention to the Christianity of the Word of God, surely the thought of this, ought to excite in those, who profess to teach all things commanded, much watchfulness and prayer, and to lead the children of men carefully to draw their instructions from the pure fountain of Divine Truth. They should examine with minute attention, the light in which things are represented in the Scriptures, and their discourses should be a faithful copy of what is therein contained. The apostle Paul declares, under the influence of the spirit of prophecy, that "in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce breakers, false accusers, fierce despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasure more than the lovers of God, having the form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." And after giving the description of characters, he adds, as an injunction, and plainly binding on the disciples of Christ, and records, for their instruction in these last days, "From such turn away."

Be it noticed in this passage, the characters that were to distinguish the last days. Such characters have existed in every age; but the period referred to; they should be found with a form of godliness (Rom. 16: 17). "Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them that cause divisions and offences, contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them" (2 Thes. 3: 14). "And if any man obey not our word by this epistle, note that man, and have no company with him, that he may be ashamed" (2 John 1: 10). "If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed." Are the foregoing Scriptures to be obeyed? (Matt. 5: 19). "Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven" (James 2: 10). "For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all" (Rom. 2: 13). "For not the hearer of the law is just before God, but the doer shall be justified." Disobedience in these things tends to draw a veil over the peculiar doctrine of the Word of God, and not only to obscure their glory, but to exclude from the mind every impression that the knowledge and belief of them is essentially necessary to our acceptance in the sight of God. It tends to annihilate those distinctions which they so constantly maintain. From such turn away. Was this precept to be obeyed? If so, all the supposed difficulty in obeying it can be considered in no other light than as involving a reflection on the wisdom of the Lawgiver.

CHRISTIANITY.

BY JAMES WIRT.

THIS term embraces within its significant a wide scope for reflection and contemplation; the primary definition is the religion introduced and taught by Christ and the apostles. The object at present is, to notice the design and purposes of its introduction.

First, it is intended to reinstate man in favor and friendship with His Creator, a position from which man had fallen in consequence of his violation of the Divine Law, and is now suffering the penalty annexed to the infringement of this law. Hence its object is to redeem all implicated, from under the curse of a broken Law, by restoring them, that they may enjoy as in their primeval creation, that sweet communion and companionship with their Maker. This is a fact none who are acquainted with the truths of Inspiration will deny, and the experience of all truly enlightened Christians corroborate the statement. Blessed indeed are they who enjoy experimental religion, for it strengthens their love, their devotion or attachment to the cause of Christ, neither does it stop with the possessor of the blessedness, but enlists their powers to bring others under the immediate influence of our holy Christianity.

Love is the life of the soul, and the principle regulating its action in its normal and abnormal states, may be illustrated by two passages of Holy Writ expressed by the Author of this religion: "Come unto me all ye that labor." "Depart from me ye workers of iniquity." By rendering a voluntary, or willing obedience to the first, insures a complete assimilation to Him who is the Author and Finisher of our faith, and to the second there will be a compulsory obedience rendered by all who spend a life in open rebellion to Him, who is their Sovereign King of kings and Lord of lords, as a rigid and just award. It is wisdom in those who are apprised of these immutable results, to comply with the invitation of their blessed Savior, and take His yoke upon them and learn of Him now, that they may find rest unto their souls, and enjoy this rest throughout eternity.

The religion of Jesus has for its object the inculcation of chaste virtues, pure morals, and spiritual and enlightening influences. The benefits of the Gospel are many, and are intended for the entire race, none need be exempt to the benefits conferred, only obey and enjoy spiritual life, or disobey and suffer spiritual death. "Except you eat the flesh of the Son of man and drink His blood," there will be no spiritual life in the soul. The New Testament contains the histories of the lives of those who exemplified the doctrine of our holy Christianity. They furnish us examples worthy of our admiration and respect, and to copy after the lives of such illustrious characters should be the desire of all Christians, for it will enable them to progress in the divine life, by inspiring them with a zeal to press forward toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ. The Christian will consider the labors of the present life as preparatory to a wider and extended field of usefulness, among the redeemed spirits of "just men made perfect" in the immortal climes of spiritual freedom, and there forever show forth the praises of Him, who has loved and redeemed them with his own precious blood, enjoying the fruition of Christianity.

ANOTHER YEAR.

BY MARY A. YLAEGER.

THE wheels of time have made one more revolution. Another year has rolled into eternity, the deeds of each and all are recorded, whether for or against us; if against us let us make haste to retrace our steps, and make our calling and election sure. Another year comes before us as a clean white page, unspotted by the monster sin. Many are vowing to live true to each other, true to their country, or true to some organization, but how many are vowing to live true to their God? How many have made such vows, and have broken them, have fallen asleep in sin and feel easy in their present condition? But awake, ye immortal souls to a sense of your duty, make haste to renew your vows to God, and repent of your sins while it is to-day, for the night of death will soon come when it will be too late.

Many times, when I sit at home on Sunday, do I think of the past, when we gathered with you at the house of God at Shannon Ill., and listened with interest to the Word preached, but cannot meet with you now. But once have I seen any of the brethren since we have been in Iowa, but nevertheless my faith is not shaken, my anxiety for the cause of Christ is none the less. I am still battling on through this sinful world, trusting in Him who is able to save, and hope by the grace of God to live this year better than any before, for if I meet none of you in this world, may I be so unspeakably happy to meet you in a better one, where many near and dear ones are waiting for us. May we ever live faithfully bound together with the bond of love is my prayer.

Laport City, Iowa.

PERSECUTED.

BY A. NELSON GRAYBILL.

"BLESSED are they which are persecuted for righteousness sake for their's is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice and be exceedingly glad; for great is your reward in heaven; for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you" (Matt. 5: 10, 11, 22). "He that will live godly must suffer persecution" (2 Tim. 3: 12). Christ says, "If they persecute me they will also persecute you."

There are very few Christians now-a-days who are imprisoned, killed or persecuted for their righteousness's sake, or for Christ's sake in this our free America, where we can worship God as it were under our own vine and fig tree. But it is to be feared that some are persecuted for unrighteousness, for their evil deeds, instead of good deeds or righteousness. Although I acknowledge that the true and faithful Christians will be tried more or less by the world and ungodly people, and have their trials, temptations, difficulties and dark seasons; yet they will all work together for good to those that love God, and enable them to shine brighter, and feel happier afterward, if they have patience and grace enough to stand the storm. Therefore the Christian must watch and pray, and shall "count it all joy when he falls into divers temptations, knowing this, that the trying of his faith worketh patience." The Christian should try and live so, that if the people will speak evil of him or her they do so falsely; and if it is false, he shall rejoice in a coming day. And if the Christian professor does anything contrary to the Scripture, the worldly people, or non-professors, have a right to tell him or her in the spirit of meekness. By the fruit we can know the tree whether it be good or evil, and by their actions, walk and conversation, the Christians show their religion; actions speak louder than words. So the Christian professor should be on his guard and live out the profession in word and in deed, that he be no stumbling block in the way of others, but a true light to the world, and as salt to the earth.

The Christian is to come out from among the world, and be a separate and peculiar people, zealous of good works, keeping himself unspotted from the world; is to be dead unto the world, and alive unto God. The Christian is to become an active and faithful worker in the vineyard of the Lord, improve his talent and time to the glory of God, and "pray for them that despitefully use and persecute you." "Bless them that persecute you, and curse not." And not be as we read, have a name to live and are dead, but try to save and win souls, for he that winneth souls is wise; "For if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?"

The Brethren at Work.
PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE,
S. H. BASHOR,
M. M. ESHELMAN, } EDITORS.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent post-paid, to any address in the United States or Canada, for $1.50 per annum. Those sending ten names and $15.00, will receive an extra copy free of charge. For all over this number the agent will be allowed 10 cents for each additional name, which amount can be deducted from the money, before sending it to us. Money Orders, Drafts, and Registered Letters may be sent at our risk. They should be made payable to Moore, Bashor & Esheleman. — Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE, BASHOR & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., JANUARY 17, 1878.

BRO. BASHOR'S address until further notice will be Fairplay, Washington Co., Md., care of Elder DAVID LONG.

ELDER WILLIAM ELAM, of Bond Co., Ill., has passed away. He died Jan. 4th. Thus one by one the good ministers are passing away.

ELDER JOHN FORNEY, during his travels will net us agent for the BRETHREN AT WORK, and whatever business, respecting subscriptions, the purchasing of pamphlets, etc., may be transacted with him, will be all right with this office.

BRO. JOHN METZGER says: "I would like to visit you this winter, but cannot tell yet, as there are so many calls. I am going all the time. I expect to soon start on a preaching tour of about three weeks. Will tell you more after while."

GRUMBLES do not work, neither do workers grumble. Men who work have no time to stop and grumble, and grumblers are generally too unconcerned about matters to exert themselves much at good, healthy exercise. More workers and less grumblers is what our land needs.

THE brethren, preaching in Denmark expect to start homeward just as soon as the necessary means reach them, hence those who contemplate sending more money for this purpose, will attend to it immediately. About three hundred dollars are yet needed to defray the expenses of the mission.

EVERY man, woman and child ought to learn, not only to work, but to work well. A constant, useful employment is the best known antidote against crime and wickedness. Give me a working people every time for peace and piety. Work and pray is as essential to purity as watch and pray is to faithfulness.

It is said that as late as A. D. 1556 the Bible was not yet translated into any heathen language, and only twenty-two years ago it was in but fifty-two languages; but to-day it is, in whole and in part, in two hundred and fifty different languages of the lost. This shows the progress of the interest taken in circulating the Scriptures.

If those people who sit around on goods boxes and in public places, talking unbecomingly about their neighbors and friends, will stay at home and devote a little more time to reading the Scriptures, it will be much better for them and the morals of the people generally. Heaven speed the time when people will learn to quit speaking evil of each other.

ELDER JAMES R. GISH, of Woodford Co., Ill., is not practically a "tent-maker," but he is going into the "tent-business," in a way that will evidently effect the furtherance of the Gospel. He has, at his own expense, purchased a tent about 42 by 32 feet in size, and proposes traveling, patch his tent where it seemeth good, call the people together and there preach the Gospel and labor to build up the Master's cause. This is a step in the right direction, and Bro. Gish is just the man to take hold of it. God bless the missionaries!

DAMASCUS, situated on a beautiful plain, 130 miles N. E. of Jerusalem, is one of the most ancient cities in the world. It is 2,314 feet above the level of the sea, and surrounded, for many miles by delightful, fertile fields and gardens, well watered with beautiful streams. The city is about two miles long and one mile wide, and contains nearly 200,000 inhabitants, several thousands of whom are Jews. The streets are long and narrow, and though the houses outside appear rough and sometimes gloomy, yet within, many of them are neat and beautifully arranged. Nearly every house has a fountain. The place is yearly visited by many thousand pilgrims.

For an excellent plan for building a meeting-house with but little money see notes of travel and preaching by Elder JOHN METZGER on last page. Poor churches want to make a note of this. Then those who are in the habit of filling up their reports of travel with railroads, good dinners and etc, want to read the article again. If any of our correspondents can put more news in less space, with less outside matter they will please let us hear from them. Writing church news is a little like making maple molasses; it wants to be boiled down till there is nothing left but the good.

MOUNT ARARAT, the resting place of the Ark after the Deluge, is 17,260 feet above the level of the sea, and about 14,000 feet above the surrounding plain. The summit is covered with eternal snow for about 3000 feet. Though far from being the highest mountain in the world, yet very few persons have ever been able to reach its summit. Tradition points out a place on the side of the mountain, where Noah is said to have planted his vineyard; and lower down, in the plain, the stranger is shown the place where the venerable patriarch is supposed to have been buried. The region just below the perpetual snow, is barren and desolate, unvisited by either beast or bird.

WE learn that Elder DAVID KELLER, of Cumberland Co., Pa., contemplates locating a colony in Kansas, on the lands belonging to the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe R. R. This is a step in the right direction, and we wish him success in the enterprise. It would be a good idea to locate colonies in all the Western States, and those of Texas, Kansas and Nebraska offer extra inducements. Locating colonies in new countries is an excellent way, of not only improving the country and morals, but of establishing strong-holds in maintenance of pure Christianity. It is hoped that influential brethren who think of going West, will give the matter some attention. Many of them could collect quite a successful little band, and thus be instrumental in building up influential churches.

BRO. LEWIS HILLERY favored us with a call last week. He spent a few weeks in Iowa, but is now at his home in Shannon, where he is detained in consequence of the sickness of his wife. She has been quite ill for some time, and therefore Bro. HILLERY cannot at present resume his missionary labors in the Central Illinois Mission Field. He will again enter the field as soon as circumstances will permit. During the last year his labors were quite arduous, and his travels extensive, amounting to several thousand miles. Out of 365 nights, 240 were spent in part, either traveling or preaching. — May God bless those who are sacrificing life, health and home comforts for the salvation of souls. Brethren and sisters, pray for sister HILLERY that she may be comforted in her affliction.

Timothy, perhaps no part of our religion more sadly neglected than family instruction and culture. Children are left to grow up, almost of themselves, with but little regard for their religious training. — the distinct features of Bible teachings are unknown to them; they are not brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord; have not like Timothy, learned to know the Scriptures from childhood. — They are turned upon the broad earth like a ship upon the ocean, without a rudder, to be drifted about by every wind of doctrine. Every child should have a well-directed, religious training as one of the essential qualifications of life. Better send them from home with an empty purse and a full heart, rather than a full purse and an empty heart. The heart—the inner part is the first thing to be got right; set this in order by careful, religious training and you will have done much toward helping the child on its way to glory. God bless home culture, and help parents to bring up their children in the fear of the Lord.

THE Bible is said to be like a great mountain, that can be viewed from different standpoints, but from no two of them will it look alike. I wonder how many different standpoints the apostles viewed it from? Wonder if if they saw and understood it differently? Wonder if one taught sprinkling and another immersion? one, pride and another humility? Wonder if there was one thing one side of the Bible and something different on the other? — The Bible never contradicts itself, it never teaches differently on the same subject. This is the work of man and not of God, His teachings are perfectly harmonious and uniform throughout, adapted to the wants of all nations and kindred, and that, too, without an apparent conflict. The good book don't teach one class of people a set of principles and then turn right round and teach another class so differently that the two parties cannot agree. Unity in faith and practice is one of the leading characteristics of the religion of Jesus Christ.

THE TRACT WORK.

ELSEWHERE in this issue, will be found a circular—"The Gospel Tract Association"—setting forth the plans for the working of an association, having for its object the publishing and distribution of pamphlets and tracts, and clearly setting forth the faith and practice of the Brethren.

It is inexpedient at this time to argue the necessity of such an association, for it is evident that much good can be done through the instrumentality of good pamphlets and tracts, and is one of the best known ways of spreading the truth with a small amount of means. Much good has already been accomplished circulating good literature, and in several instances pamphlets and tracts have been of considerable aid in planting the standard of truth where it was before unknown.

For the want of time to attend to the labors belonging to such an enterprise, the work has not been pushed much of late, but as our matters are now in a good shape, we propose giving the project considerable attention, and endeavor to build up an institution that will not only aid in the spreading of the truth, but be an honor to the Master's cause.

The plan of the institution provides that the Association shall be superintended by three brethren, assisted by an elected Board of five managers, and that in the case of a vacancy in the superintendency, it shall be the duty of the Board of Managers and the Reading Committee to fill said vacancy. As Bro. J. T. MEYERS has sold his interest in the office, there will be a vacancy to fill when the Board meets in February next.

We hope to see our Brethren take hold of this work and push it forward as much as possible, that our people may be better supplied with suitable reading matter. We need a good publishing house, suitable for putting out every needed kind of books, pamphlets &c., that may be subservient to the advancement of the Master's cause. Don't fail to let us hear from you. We want the minds of all our readers regarding the project, for we know that many have a personal knowledge of the good that has already been accomplished by the use of good literature.

THE NINETY AND NINE.

MOST of our readers have read that beautiful hymn known as the "ninety and nine," but have not, perhaps, heard of its origin, some years ago there lived in Melrose, Scotland, a lady who was led to see the beauty of Christ's character as portrayed in the parable of the Good Shepherd. Having a poetic turn of mind, she sometimes expressed her thoughts and feelings in verse. The thought of an Eastern shepherd, seeking a wandering sheep, touched her heart with poetic fervor, and she wrote the hymn beginning:

"There were ninety and nine that safely lay,
In the shelter of the fold"

The hymn was published in a local paper, and the lady died soon afterwards. The simlicity and beauty of the hymn gained for it considerable favor.

While Mr. SANKEY was in Edinburgh, England, he stepped up to a news stand and purchased a few papers, and in one of them found this hymn. He was then on his way to Glasgow, where he and Mr. Moody were to hold a farewell meeting. Mr. SANKEY felt greatly elated over the hymn, and resolved to sing it at the meeting. He stepped into a friends house, sat down at the organ, placed the beautiful lines before him and began to sing; the tune came to his mind instantly.

The meeting was a crowded one and quite solemn, but when Mr. SANKEY sang that beautiful hymn, it sent a thrill into every heart. One lady was greatly affected; it was her sister who wrote the hymn. After the meeting SANKEY received from her the following note: "I thank you for having sung, the other day, my sister's words. She wrote them five years ago. She is in heaven now."

J. H. M.

CHURCH VANITIES.

THE Chicago Evening Journal, of December 8th, deserves credit for the bold and fearless manner in which it severely denounces the extravagancies of church debts and vanities prevalent in large cities. After referring to a case, where a church building had been lifted out of a debt of over one hundred thousand dollars, the editor says:

"But, pray, what earthly or heavenly good is accomplished by the building of such costly church structures? Can the most ardent friends of religion suggest any interest subserved by these massive piles of church architecture, other than the gratification of an essentially wicked and selfish church pride? The Divine Founder of Christianity taught, both by precept and example, that true and pure religion consisted fundamentally in worshipping the great Father Spirit "in spirit and in truth," without any reference whatever to localities or church temples. And certainly no blind devotee of any faith could be so blind as actually to believe that the existence of these highly-ornamented cathedrals assist or promote the real, spiritual worship of God.

But more than this, the amount of money put into these costly churches can be regarded in no other light than as literally sunk in an utterly non-productive investment. It is of no use for friends of religious extravagance to say that the dividends received from such investments are spiritual, rather than financial, because they, as well as all other, know that the spiritual and moral benefits to be derived from the public religious services held in these edifices could be just as well, if not better secured at a much less cost in the line of sacerdotal display. Nor can it be avowed, without a blush of disingenuous shame, that this amount of equid thus invested has been given to the cause of God on earth, when the fact is, that God's cause has been more hindered than helped by the outlay. Think for a moment of the sum of money now locked up all over the land in huge piles of brick and stone, in elaborate frescoes and stained glass windows, in high-priced lumber and still higher priced trimmings! And all the while hundreds upon hundreds of poor, destitute families within the range of these church shadows are having the hardest kind of a fight to keep the wolf of hunger from their doors, and are repelled from, rather than attracted to, the solemnities of worship by these rich and gaudy edifices, with the unseemingly display of silks, satins and fine-linen of those who frequent them."

What is most needed at this time is an era of plainness and good common sense; one that will be characterized by a right-about face and a general reformation in church building and religious vanities. A continuation of the present customs will prove woefully detrimental to the cause of that meek and non-conformable system of religion introduced by Him whose actions as well as His teachings were models of consistency.

The Journal has taken a step in the right direction, and we hope to see other papers follow. If the popular religious papers of the day have not pluck and independence enough to stand up against and expose such high places, only the secular press of the country has

J. H. M.

We want less of creeds, but more trust; less of ceremony, but more of work; less of solemnity, but more genial honesty; less doctrine, but more of love.

AMONG THE BRETHREN IN IOWA.

On the morning of the 4th inst., I was delighted in reaching the house of our dear brother and sister B. K. and Katie Miller, in Cedar Co. With them and family many pleasant hours were spent, not a few in reading the Scriptures and instructing each other therein. Brother John Zwick and family live in the vicinity. With them I was glad to talk of God's "great things," and encouraged in the divine life.

These brethren and sisters live in a beautiful and productive country, and those contemplating a change of location, should visit or address either of the above named brethren, at Clarence, Ia. I say this much because I think the brethren ought to possess that country. God bless the dear ones that live there, for being away from the main body of the church they strongly feel the need of brethren and sisters moving in their midst. I did no great things while there, save that I tried to love them, and I got more of that in return than I deserved.

On Monday the 7th, reached Waterloo. Attended meeting in the South Waterloo church, four miles South of Waterloo on the evening of the 8th, and heard brother John Farney of Neb. preach on the coming of the Lord. His cheering words on the Lord's second advent encouraged the redeemed of God and warned the disobedient. While speaking of the sinner's doom and punishment, I thought that, truly brother Farney was content to remain on the Lord's side of this question whether Beecher, Farrar, and Swing were or not. These have recently discovered, in their imaginations, that there is no hell, but brother F., goes on sounding the old Gospel trumpet which declares there is a hell. That's right. Always give both sides, and then if people will dodge and doubt, you are clear.

Spent the night with brother Davis Younce of Ind., who arrived here on the 27th of December and commenced a series of meetings in the Strayer meeting-house the same evening, and continued until the night of January 2nd. Six precious souls made the good confession and were admitted into fellowship. On the 2nd he began to preach the Word in the meeting-house four miles South of Waterloo. Bro. Younce being unwell on Wednesday, the 9th, Bro. Bashor addressed the congregation from John 14:27, at the conclusion of which, Bro. Younce made a few farewell remarks, when one came forward desiring to put on Christ. Seeing the joy and happiness of the brethren and sisters, when even one sinner turned to serve the living God, I was reminded of the many similar scenes in hundreds of places in this broad land, and the joy in heaven over the wanderer's return.

One very commendable thing was visible among the brethren in this congregation, and that is, they acted as if they loved each other and those out of Christ. I do not say that they have no adversities, no seasons of grief and sorrow, because the latter gets into their cup too, but I was glad to see the evidences of brotherly love and kindness there. If you would know whether pure and unadulterated religion characterizes a body of believers, just observe how they treat each other. Their treatment of a brother who visits them, is but always a sure index of a loving congregation.

On the evening of the 9th about fifty persons assembled at the house of brother J. J. Weller to witness the marriage of brother S. H. Bashor and Miss Corda S. Weller. Brother Davis Younce performed the nuptial ceremony in a very brief and neat manner. The best of order prevailed and the arrangements were simple and plain. The guests were served with a plain, substantial supper, and the quietness and simplicity of and about the house reminded one of a Brethren's lay-abode. Brother and Sister Weller and their children, three of whom are also members, did everything they could to make all feel happy, and in the language of brother John Farney we "never were at a wedding where so much order, simplicity and kindness were shown." I say this in justice to brother Bashor, and companion and her parents, for we doubt they'll not get too many roses on their pathway through life, for evil disposed persons are ever ready to least on the front of an untried tongue. God bless brother B. and companion, and make them useful and powerful instruments in doing good to all around them.

On Thursday morning brother Younce, brother Bashor and wife, and I left Waterloo; brother Y. to go and meet his family at his home in Syracuse Ind; brother B. and wife to visit brethren and friends in Maryland and Pennsylvania, and I to join the loved ones at home.

I have in a brief way tried to give you something edifying from my visit among the brethren in a few places in Iowa, but you will observe that I am a poor hand on "travels," this being my first. I couldn't make my pen say what hour I left and arrived at the different points, the kind of victuals I ate, the color of quilts under which I slept, how far I walked, whose wagon I rode in, who met me at the depot, and a hundred other spread-eagle 's. Do the best you can with it; pick out the kernels and throw away the husks. M. M. E.

THE GOSPEL TRACT ASSOCIATION.

1. This institution shall be permanently located in Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill., and known as the "Gospel Tract Association," having for its object the publishing and distribution of books, pamphlets, and tracts, ably defending the doctrine and practice of the Brethren.

2. No work, in the form of a book, pamphlet or tract, shall be published by this Association until it has first received the approval of the Reading Committee.

3. The business of the Association shall be superintended by J. H. MOORE, J. T. MEYERS, and M. M. ESHELMAN, assisted by a Board of Managers consisting of five well-established brethren residing in the Northern District of Illinois. Said Board to be chosen by a vote of the donors, and shall hold office for a period of five years. Immediately after the election of the Board of Managers, they shall meet, and by casting lots, number themselves respectively 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5. No. 1 shall vacate his office at the expiration of the first year; No. 2, at the expiration of the second year, etc., so that an election to fill the vacancy may take place annually. All vacancies otherwise occurring shall be filled in the regular order by the vote of the donors.

4. It shall be the duty of the Board of Managers to appoint a Treasurer, who shall receive and care for all money belonging to the Association, and apply it as directed by the Board of Managers; to fix the price of each work published by the Association; to determine what compensation shall be allowed for handling them; to choose, for a period of five years, three well-informed and reliable brethren, who in connection with the Superintendents, shall constitute the Reading Committee. They shall also cause to be made and published an annual report of the work and doings of the institution.

5. It shall be the duty of this Committee to carefully and faithfully examine all matter intended for publication by this Association, and approve of nothing that will be detrimental to the plain teachings of the Gospel as generally understood by the Brethren.

6. The funds of this Association shall be known as the Printing and Distributing Funds, and shall be raised, perpetuated and applied in the following manner: First. All donations in sums of five dollars and over, shall be placed in the Printing Fund, and shall be used in publishing such matter as may be approved by the Reading Committee; but on the death of the donor his or her donations shall pass into the Distributing Fund. Second. All sums under five dollars shall be placed in the Distributing Fund, which shall be judiciously used in the free distribution of pamphlets and tracts as may be directed by the Board of Managers.

7. Each donor shall be considered a member of this Association during life, and may exercise the privilege of voting for the formation of a Board of Managers, and filling all vacancies occurring in that body.

8. All votes shall be sent by mail for other-wise convenient to the Superintendent, and the ones receiving the largest number of votes shall be declared chosen.

9. Should the superintendency of this Association become vacant, either from death or otherwise, it shall be the duty of the Board of Managers and Reading Committee to fill said vacancy by appointment.

Communications and all business matter pertaining to this Association, as well as contributions, should be addressed to

MOORE & ESHELMAN,
LANARK, ILL.

GLEANINGS.

FROM AARON SWILART.—It has only been a few years, since this church was organized. — Four years ago there were about forty members, now there are about seventy. We now have an applicant for baptism, and thus you see the good work of the Lord is moving on.— Wabont Creek Church, Ind.

ERRATA.—Dear Brethren, in my article in your issue of Jan. 3, present volume, eighth line from top of page, I unintentionally invite the reader to "look into the perfect law of ourselves." This would be strange perfection! I meant we should look into the perfect law for ourselves. In 33rd full line from top of same page, instead of "His" read "this."

E. UMBRAUGH.

FROM H. G. BREESE.—Brethren Dierdorff and Zollars are with us now. They came the 24th of December, and have had but few meetings yet, owing to the bad state of the weather and roads. They will remain over Sabbath. There seems to be quite an interest taken in the meeting, and there would be a good attendance, if the roads were not so bad. May the Lord bless their labors. I wish you good success with your paper.— Henry, Marshall Co., Ill., Dec. 27, 1877.

FROM ELDER JACOB P. MCGRAW.—I would give what the BRETHREN AT WORK costs, to see the report of the Brethren's success in Denmark. I expected to have traveled some this Winter, but owing to the ill health of my wife, could not leave home at all. It has been raining nearly every day for three weeks, and consequently the roads are almost impassable. But little is being done as to meetings, yet there are many calls, and some precious souls still coming out on the Lord's side. We received three this Fall by baptism.— Purple Cam, Neb., Dec. 21, 1877.

FROM S. Y. SUTHER.—There are some poor brethren here, who are not able to pay for the paper, so I shall give my extra eques time for each ten names) to them. Wishing you the blessing of God, and prosperity, both spiritually and temporally, I remain your brother in Christ.

FROM W. PETERSON.—The Lord has blessed His cause here. The prospect looks bright for those who love Him and keep His commandments. Some thirty have obeyed Matt. 28: 19, and are willing to follow Him as their pattern. May the Lord help us to be faithful a little longer and we shall reap, if we faint not.— Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 21, 1877.

FROM L. SUTHER.—I have been receiving two copies of the BRETHREN AT WORK, and have been making good use of the extra one, by giving it to a friend who says it is the best religious paper he ever saw, and is so well pleased, that he will subscribe for it now. My wife and I are the only members in this part of the country. I am doing what I can to help build up the cause here, by way of distributing our paper, and all to whom I have given it, read it and speak well of it. If there are any Brethren traveling in this part of the West, we will be pleased to have them stop and see us. We have a beautiful country.— Crete, Saline Co., Neb., Dec. 21, 1877.

FROM ELDER S. MURRAY.—This day closes another year of our mortal life. I have it to say, mine has been a very checkered one. So far have met with many troubles and trials and disappointments. Notwithstanding all this I must say, that the Lord has been very good to me. He has never forsaken me in all my sorrows and troubles, but has always provided a way for me. He has brought my years to the number of 71, the first day of last April; and was especially good to me during this closing year. — He supply was with me in all my travels through the year, and protected me from dangers seen and unseen. Distance traveled in the year 1877, was 2735 miles and in my great weakness preached 119 discourses. O may God help us to commence the New Year by living closer to our God and our Christian duty in prayer. I ask an interest in the prayers of all my brethren and sisters in Christ.— Birchville, Ind., Dec. 31, 1877.

FROM E. R. STIFLER.—I have received the first number of your paper for 1878, and am much pleased with it. We are glad that the children are willing to assist in it. God loves the children, so most parents love and encourage the little ones by placing within their reach such good and wholesome reading matter that the soul will not starve. So parents make your children a nice New Year's present of the BRETHREN AT WORK for this whole year. Place above all the Bible, the Book of all books in their hands, and teach them how to study it. — They will bless you for it in after-life.

FROM N. BERKEVILE.—According to previous announcement brother John Nicholson of Knox Co., Ohio came to us on Friday evening, Dec. 21st, and began a series of meetings. Glad to say that sinners were made to weep and saints rejoice. Eleven precious souls came out on the Lord's side, and were made willing to walk in newness of life. Would say, as many of our Northern Ohio Brethren are acquainted with Joseph Short, and have offered up many prayers for him, they can now rejoice with us, that he is a brother and the prayers of his brethren and sisters, and his dear companion, (a sister worthy of imitation) have at last been answered. May God sustain him to hold out faithful, as well as all the dear ones who have come out on the Lord's side. May the Lord continue His work. Bro. John will leave to-morrow, Jan. 3, for another field of labor. — May the Lord bless his labors is our prayer. — Yours in Gospel love and affection.— Delta, O., Jan. 1, 1878.

FROM P. B. WERTZ.—As letters have been addressed to me at Pilot Point, some think that I am still living there, but I am not. My address is changed to Martin's Springs, Grayson Co., Texas. I live nine miles west of Donison, and one half mile South of Nine Mile Post on the new road running to Gansville.

FROM Wm. D. TYSON.—I like the BRETHREN AT WORK so well that I can hardly do without it, and can hardly wait till it makes its weekly visits. We are about forty-five miles off from the nearest church of the Brethren. I often think if some of the ministering brethren could come and preach for us, how well we would feel. Brother Eschelman; the pamphlets, tracts and papers you sent me are going from place to place, and I have heard of a man who says that he has been convinced by reading the Perfect Plan of Salvation that the three-fold immersion was the only mode of Baptism. I like the BRETHREN AT WORK, on account that you do not publish controversies in its columns. Stick to your post and the Lord will bless you all. — St. Paul, Carroll Co., Ia., Dec. 23 1877.

The world never keeps faith with the heart that trusts it. Its promises of happiness are perpetually broken. Take it for what it is worth and set your affections on what is worth more.

HOPES, after they have ceased to contain possibilities, are as the pages of some book, which may have had an unaccountable fascination for us in earlier years.

No statue that the rich man places ostentatiously in his windows is to be compared to the little expectant face pressing against the window pane watching for his father, when his day's labor is done.

A LITTLE misery sweetens life. It is the salt that makes it palatable and wholesome; the shade that relieves, and sets off the monotony and brilliancy of sunshine.

CHERFULNESS.—Try for a single day, I beseech you, to preserve yourself in an easy and cheerful frame of mind. Be for one day instead of a fire-worshipper of passion, and hell, the sun-worshipper of clear self-possession; and compare the day in which you have rosted out the weed of dissatisfaction with that on which you have allowed it to grow up — and you will find your heart open to every good motive, your life strengthened, and your breast armed with a panoply against every trick of fate; truly you will wonder at your own improvement. — Richter

"I never complained of my condition but once" and an old man, "when my feet were bare, and I had no money to buy shoes; but I met a man without feet, and I became contented."

I know not why we should delay our tokens of respect to those who deserve them, until the heart that our sympathy could have gladdened, has ceased to beat. A man cannot read the epitaphs inscribed upon the marble that covers them, so the faults that they erect to criticise often prove only our repentance that we neglected when with us.

An attempt is being made to organize a colony of one thousand colored people in Liberty county, Fla., for settlement in Liberia.

It is a glorious occupation, vivifying and self-sustaining in its nature, to struggle with ignorance and discover to the inquiring minds of the masses the clear, verulein blue of heavenly truth.

The Home Circle.

READ AND OBEY.

"Husbands, love your wives."
 "Wives, obey your husbands."
 "Fathers, provoke not your children to wrath."
 "Children, obey your parents in all things."

Edited by M. M. Eshelman.

"The end of the commandment is charity out of a pure heart and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned."

Why should the spirit of any professor of the meek and lowly religion of Christ be rude and over-bearing? God never so willed it.

WHAT cares and anxieties mothers do have! From morning till night they toil and think for their loving children. Then be kind to your mother. Obey her, love her, respect her.

CHILDREN learn to hear all things. Though others may seek to destroy you—may go from house to house and speak evil of you, find fault with you, and hold up your weakness, learn to endure it. Our Father has put peace in such endurance, and O, the bright crown that He will give you if you endure and overcome!

DEAR parents, you who toil and suffer that your children may be happy and comfortable, you need encouragement too. Though your mind may be stronger than that of your dear offspring, yet you often grow weary, and feel the burdens of life. Look to Jesus, your dear Master who is full of love and sympathy for you. Rest in Him, Build on Him, Put Him on, for He will never wear out.

Do not keep the children from meeting. The moment they are able to read and understand, they are able to drink from the well of life. — Let them drink of that water, out of that bread, and be clothed with that garment—all of which came from our Savior. In sowing in their hearts, always sow good seed, and never try to force in the chaff too. The wind knows how to dispose of that.

I THINK a good way to get children or older ones acquainted with the Scriptures, would be for some brother or sister to write questions from the Old and New Testament for them to find and answer through the Home Circle.

C. A. MOORE.

We accept the suggestion, and hope the brethren and sisters will give the matter due attention.

ONE who had the mind of God—one who uttered as the Spirit dictated, said: "Let all your things be done with charity." You things! There is sunshine in that, for charity always lets it out. Remember it does not read, "Let some of your things be done with charity, but all your things." Nor should we mistake and get on the other side of the fence where it reads: "Let a few things be done with charity, and the rest with envy." That is a lead side to lean on; those who get over there, generally use pitch forks, but never takes. They pitch everything to others, but never take in anything for themselves. The last state of that soul is worse than the first.

CHILDREN COMING TO JESUS.

IT seems good and expedient to treat this subject briefly. At what age children should be received into fellowship is not a Bible question. The Bible is as silent as the grave as to that. Jesus who knew His mission well, said: "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not." Now, if He our Lord and Master commands us to suffer them to come, why say to any of them, they are too young? Why urge the plea that they may not hold out faithful? Why judge or set at naught what God has not set at naught? Does it not savor of faithlessness to doubt the fidelity of the child before it has been tried? Who has set us to be judges over God's children? And does it not appear as if we had doubts of God's grace to sustain the child? O let us never prevent anyone who can know God's will, from doing it! A child is old enough to obey God, when it knows that it is a sinner. The moment that conviction pierces the heart, just that soon is that person ready to turn unto the Lord.

We are not maintaining the baby doctrine, i. e., that babies must be made members of the household of faith, for a greater One than man, has already made them His. But we are pleading for those who know that they are sinners—know that they need a Savior to lead them through this world of sin, to keep them from personal faults and digressions. Such are old enough to do right, and no one should hinder them.

Often we get very peculiar notions of things. We often look at things from our own standpoint, and not from God's. We turn up the human side, and with it eclipse God's, and then try to be wise; but O how often we fail! Then let the children come to Jesus. Forbid them not. What Jesus has called, let no man overthrow. Get your children together, pray with them, sing with them. Point them to the Lamb of God, and when they call on you to help them to get into fellowship with the saints, forbid them not. God has much grace; and He will help the child just as well as you. Do not put it off with the plea that it is too young. If your child knows that it is a sinner, by its own actions, it knows enough to follow Jesus in obedience. God bless the dear ones and help them to live under his government.

JESUS' NAME.

A LITTLE girl with golden head,
 Asked me to read a minute,
 A pretty story, as she said,
 For Jesus' name was in it.

The pleasant task was soon complete,
 And long I pondered o'er it,
 That Jesus name should be so sweet,
 That even a child should love it.

Oh, sweetest story ever told,
 What tongue would dare begin it,
 If it were given of its gold,
 And Jesus' name name not in it?

CHRISTIAN CONSISTENCY.

TO hold high principles, and live on low ones, is Christian inconsistency. We are all more or less inconsistent. There is no man whose practice is not worse than his profession, no one who does not live below his own standard. But absolute inconsistency is when a man's life, taken as a whole, is opposition to his acknowledged views and principles. If a man says that it is more blessed to give, than receive, and is forever receiving, scarcely ever giving, he is inconsistent. If he professes that to please God is the only thing worth living for, and his plans and aims and contrivances are must to please men, he is inconsistent.—The Guide.

NO HOME!

IN looking over, and perusing the many good articles on the page devoted to the Home Circle, we were made to sorrow to think of the many dear little children and bigger ones too, that have no home; no father to protect and support them; no mother to love, comfort, care and provide for them; no brethren and sisters to associate with. Oh! the dreadful thought, no home.

You, dear children, who have all the comforts of a good home, who have fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters to love and care for you, do not, by any means forget those who have no home.

And you, dear children, who have no home on earth, no one to love and care for you, remember you can have a "Home in Heaven." — We find it written in God's Word, "Though your father and mother forsake you, the Lord will take you up." Therefore when you are compelled to wander in this unfriendly world without an earthly home, remember that you have a kind Father in Heaven, one who cares for you, and who will never suffer you to come to want, if you will put your trust in Him. Hence be good children wherever your lot may be cast, and if deprived of the blessings and comforts of an earthly home, may you secure that heavenly home, where there is fullness of joy, and pleasures for evermore at God's right hand.

MR. MORRIS, III.

ESSEX, DAVID.

I WILL DO WHAT I CAN.

HOW much might be accomplished, that is left undone, if all would do what they could. Though it be ever so small a matter, yet by continually adding little by little to the first attempt, in a short time we will be surprised to see the advancement that we have made. All of our great writers at one time were beginners, and their first efforts may indeed have been small, but they persevered, and we can now see the result.

Our greatest and most influential ministers were once beginners. Though they can now get up before a large audience and speak with ease, many of them, when rising for the first time, were almost speechless; but they went on, they did what they could and great has been the result.

Then, if such has been the case in the past, it still remains so in the future. If we wish to improve ourselves, we must work and continue working, though we see nothing before us that is encouraging. All may look dark in the future; great clouds may roll up before us and we may feel almost forsaken, but don't give up. — Remember, that what man has done, can be done again. Look up to King Emmanuel and ask for strength to overcome our trials. Cast your all on Him and He will give you the desired help.

Let us all resolve that with this new year we will begin anew to work for Jesus. Although we cannot cross the ocean or preach like Paul, there is plenty of work at home for all of us that we can do, if we will but take hold of that which presents itself to us. When once we have made a beginning, the hardest part has been accomplished and an opening is made for us. Though it may be small, it is an opening, and like the little hole in the great dykes of Holland that a little boy could cover with his finger, so with us. The opening is small and our work is like the little stream of water; if we continue to force it through the opening, it will gradually become larger and larger, until we can defy all the powers of Satan. But if we allow him to make an opening into our ranks, then destruction is near, and sad will be the result. We can all do something, and though it be ever so small, we should begin at once, and look to God for strength, so that, when our time is ended, we may know that we have done what we could.

J. H. ELLIS.

Upper Dublin, Pa.

UNCLE THOMAS AGAIN.

Dear Children,—

I PROMISED to tell you something about the little folk about Hudson. First, I will tell you the names of some of them. I do not think I can remember all the names. There is Ida, a bright eyed little girl that has three little brothers, Otis, Edgar and Ira. And there are Lydia and Emma (two sisters who have no little brothers; and there is Rebecca, who has no mother; Don't you pity her? And there are Hathe and Adaline with their little brother Arthur, who have such a good father and another that brings them to meeting whether it rains or shines. And Della, she was left an orphan, but she has been adopted into a family, who takes her to meeting and Sabbath-school; everybody loves Della; there is another Ida that has little brothers and cousins, Maud and Lettie; and yet there is another little girl we call Sadie; she has two brothers Abbie and Eddie.

Did you ever hear of so many names, and all good children? How did they all happen to be good children? Why God made them so, and they will be good till they learn to be naughty; but I do not think they will learn to be naughty children, they have such good mothers, and some of them have older sisters that are ornaments in the church, who will keep those little jewels from becoming proud and naughty; little children would never be proud or naughty if older ones were more exemplary.

Now I think there is quite a number of the little folk who write for the paper that would like to make the acquaintance of our little Hudson folk. Well if ever you do, you will find them sociable and kind, and if you should go with them to meeting, you will see how still they sit. I hope you will see letters from them all and then you will see their other names which I have omitted to give. Now if grandpa down at Grand can name more good little children than I have, he must be a happy grandpa, with such a host of little folks around him; well if he is happy with his surroundings I will not envy him, for I think all grandpas ought to be happy. Well now our letter is about long enough. Good bye to all.

Hudson, Ill., Dec. 26th, 1877

NOT A PRODIGAL.

I AM not the prodigal son that we read of. I am not a lost boy, but an orphan. My father died when I was quite small. I have a good place to stay, and am going to school to read and write, and I thought it good to write a few lines for the "Home Circle." I read the paper with gladness, and hope when I am become a man I may be a brother in the church, and a subscriber for the BRETHREN AT WORK. I want to be a useful man and a child of Jesus. I don't want to be like the foolish virgins. When they started to meet the bridegroom they tried to borrow oil. It is best for each one to have their own oil, and then there will be no need of borrowing. It should be brought in good time, so that when the time comes for using it, we can up and go.

There were ninety and nine that safely lay,
 In the shelter of the fold,
 But one was out on the hills away
 Far off from the gates of gold,
 Away on the mountain wild and bare,
 Away from the tender Shepherd's care,
 THEODORE HADIAN.

SPARE MOMENTS.

IT is astonishing how little some people value spare moments; and yet they are the "gold dust of time." If we take care of the moments, the hours will take care of themselves. Very often there are a few spare moments in which we could read a chapter in the Bible, or one or two instructive pieces in some good paper. But instead of doing this, the spare moments are wasted. If we spend the spare moments in this way, we will not be likely to improve the hours much better. But we find by reading the BRETHREN AT WORK that there are many young folk making good use of the spare moments by reading the paper, and writing for it.

We also find that there are some young folk that do not have the privilege of going to church very often. Some people would suppose from this, that they would have nothing to do on Sabbaths. But they can read good books and papers, by which they can learn a great deal.

It is true, moments are very small, but if we improve them well we may obtain much knowledge which we would not obtain if they were wasted. It is our duty to improve them to the best of our ability. Therefore, improve the spare moments and you will not regret it.

J. H. NEFF.

CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM KANSAS.

Dear Brethren:—

PERMIT me, through your worthy columns, to inform the church generally, that there is a little band of brethren living four miles North-west of Peabody, Marion County, Kans., and though small in numbers, zeal for the Master's cause abounds in every heart, there are no sleepy members here. Having but one speaker, and one deacon, the calls for preaching are more than we can possibly fill, we can but repeat the same old call that you have heard from Kansas so often, during the past year, "Come over and help us." Brethren, when you meet to worship, with four to seven ministers behind the table, take one serious thought of Kansas, and her call. You have at least one talent, and no doubt more, shall they be buried, or put to the exchange?

I was surprised, and glad to meet Eld. Daniel Keller, of Cumberland Co. Pa., in our town, (Peabody) prospecting along our line of Railroad for lands on which to locate a colony. That is a move in the right direction; let many more come.

We have a beautiful country, mild climate, good water generally, society kind, odding, and moral. The country is healthy, etc. Remember we are located on the main line, of the Atchison, Topeka, & Santa Fe R. R., which is running excursion trains monthly, and almost weekly, during the traveling season, and selling round trip tickets from the East, at extremely low rates. Brethren if you come or pass along this line, stop off at Peabody without fail, and see us.

Yours in the one faith,
 GEO. W. THOMAS.

FROM GRUNDY CENTER, IOWA.

Dear Brethren:—

THROUGH the mercies of a kind and Heavenly father, I was permitted to spend several days in Stark County, Ohio, where we lived some over a year; from there we moved to this place. In June last, I had the privilege of meeting with the brethren and sisters at several meetings, where I enjoyed myself very much, and in company with those whom I used to mingle my voice with so often, I had to think of the time when Christ shall call all of his children together, nevermore to part. We enjoy ourselves well with our brethren and sisters, while in this world, and while so doing, we remember the great and precious promises, which God has left for those that live faithful until death, and as we rejoice when we meet to worship here in the sanctuary of God, how much more will we rejoice when we are all gathered home into that house which is not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens, whose maker and builder is God? We know that the meeting and rejoicing there, will be a glorious one; and now dear brethren and sisters, in order that we may reach that final resting place, we have a great work before us, one that should make us daily feel the great responsibilities and the necessity of fearing God, and keeping his commandments. In order that we may finally have a right to the "Tree of Life," and enter in through the gates into the city, we must not forget the one thing needful. Sometimes it seems to me that we are too much inclined after the perishable things of this life. Many of us are financially embarrassed, and are striving hard to pay off these embarrassments, which of course is right, but we must remember that right here is great danger. While striving so much to pay off these worldly debts, and laying up treasures that are liable to corrupt, we become more or less careless about our souls salvation, and our chance if not closely watched, will be slim. "If the righteous will scarcely be saved, where shall the sinner, and the ungodly appear" (1 Pet. 4: 18). Our desire is to reach that place, where the streets are paved with gold, where the light of the sun is not needed, but the Lord God shall be the light thereof. Now brethren and sisters, this thought presents itself, this being the last day in the year 1877, we feel that we should praise God that he has preserved our lives until now, while, during the past year, some have been called away whose loss we deeply feel, and the Lord only knows, how soon we will have to follow.

This morning I read a letter from our dear brother, Enoch Eby, whom we have been acquainted with for a number of years. In his letter I notice where he writes, some have kindly remembered us etc., and he also says but even if we are forgotten by many, they are not forgotten by us. Now to this, I must say a few words to all my dear brethren and sisters, who may read these lines. Let us not forget our dear brethren who have gone to Denmark, for they have left their dear children, their friends, brethren and sisters, and many loved ones here in America, and in obedience to the church, and God's word, have gone away yonder to preach the pure word of God to those people. We can't but help to often think of them, and now dear brethren and sisters, as we are about to step into this New Year, may we deeply feel, to be more and more engaged in the cause of our Redeemer, as we feel that we are in perilous times.

A few days ago a friend handed me a newspaper printed in Philadelphia, Pa., and in its columns, I noticed an article written on the subject of "Hell," by a noted minister of Brooklyn, N. Y. In it he states that some of the great divines of England, are now discussing the subject also, that in two sermons lately delivered by Canon Farrar, of England, at Westminster Abbey, to large congregations, he boldly said that the words Hell, Damnation and Everlasting ought no longer to stand in the English Bible, and if the revisers did their duty, all three would be stricken out. Think of this brethren and sisters, this should put us on guard, and as we step into the New Year, let us say that we will be more energetic, and earnestly contend for the true faith preached by Christ and his apostles, and we can rest assured that if we live up to our profession, and hold out faithful until death, we will escape that place of misery which we do believe in, and can feel sure of receiving that crown of eternal glory, beyond the river of death. Jesus has promised to be with us to the end, and then pass with us through the cold valley and shadow of death. These precious promises should make us feel now, to be more faithful, so that we may be more perfect, even as our Father which is in Heaven is perfect. The Saviour says he of good cheer.

Much love to all,
J. M. SSVIBR.

FROM NAPA CITY, CAL.

Dear Editors,—
On reading the remarks of brethren S. H. Bashor, and F. G. Lant, regarding members preventing their children from joining the church when young, or on the first call, my mind was carried back to circumstances that came under my own personal knowledge. One of our neighbor's daughters, (about fifteen or sixteen years old,) was going to be baptized, and I went to talk about it with her mother, but to my sorrow she said, "I will not let her, she is too young, and I will not have my children talked about like some that are in the church." This same mother was herself received in the church one night, when she was at death's door, some ten or twelve years before. In a few years the daughter got married, and before she was married a year, she took sick and wished to be baptized, but her husband would not allow it, and she had to die in that terrible condition.

In another case, a sister kept two of her children from joining the church. Soon after the son took sick and died, and I don't know whether the other one ever joined, but one son she could not keep back, he is now a minister. This same old sister had a few years before, submitted to let her daughter (who was not expected to live,) go three miles to be baptized. She recovered, and is now a faithful sister as far as I know.

I am glad that the brethren are not afraid to warn such parents.
I was impressed with brother Buechley's address to the children, and I thought of so many young members in the Waterloo church, that can carry on the Lord's work, when we older ones are gone to the grave.

HANNAH KNAUFF.

Dec. 15th, 1877.

NOTES OF TRAVEL.

LEFT home on the morning of Dec. 12th., I arrived at Lewiston, Winona Co., Minn., next morning. I stayed until Dec. 22nd. Had meetings twice a day, nearly every day. Two were baptized, and the church seems revived. Bro. David Whetstone was ordained to the full ministry, and Bro. John Wirt forwarded to the second degree of the ministry. Brethren Jacob Wirt, and James Sweezy, were elected to the office of deacons. The roads being very bad the meetings were not as well attended as they otherwise would have been.

On the morning of the 22nd, in company with Bro. C. F. Wirt, Bro. David Buechly, and friend John Sadler, we started for Root River congregation, Fillmore County. Traveled over the worst roads we ever saw; arrived at the Brethren's meeting next day, just about the close of services. Meeting in the afternoon; carried in this congregation until Dec. 30th. On account of bad roads, and extreme darkness at night, we could have but few evening meetings; but met twice a day. At this place thirteen precious souls came forward and embraced Christ in Gospel order.

Tuesday (Jan. 1, 1878), we started for home, to stay a few days, and then, to start to Grundy County, Iowa.

We return hearty thanks to our dear brethren and sisters in Minnesota for their kindness shown to us whilst with them; also for their practical sympathy manifested in our behalf, in this, our hour of severe affliction.

W. J. H. BAUMAN.

Line Springs, Iowa, Jan. 1st, 1878.

EXHORTATION TO DUTY.

AS church news is of much interest to me, and not often seeing any from this arm of the general church, I thought I would drop a few thoughts from this vicinity. Weather pleasant, health exceedingly good. The church seems to be alive, to the interest of the Master's cause. The Sabbath-school Conference of the Northern District of Indiana, was held in this congregation; enjoyed a good meeting, though not largely represented from a distance; hope much good was accomplished. We are having desirable success in this church in the Sabbath-school work; not less than thirty of our scholars have united with the church in the past two years, and they are principally quite young in years, and are obedient followers of the Master.

We have prayer meetings in different localities of the church; one on Tuesday evening, the other on Thursday evening; held at the residence of brethren, and we find them thus far, of much profit, in strengthening and encouraging us on our way Heavenward. Both young and old engage in the noble work, and may we never grow weary in well-doing, and as the old year is no more to us, only for reflections, may we all see where we have come short of duty, and promptly resolve that at the beginning of this New Year, that we will strive to improve. May the spirit of prayer be instilled abundantly into the hearts of all our dear brethren and sisters; and may every house become a house of devotion to God. If any have neglected family prayer, may the spirit speak to them this beautiful New Year's evening, and say, you ought to erect a family altar, and dedicate it to the service of God; and let the offering be the humiliation of self-sacrifice. Oh, what power there is exerted over the mind, by the prayers of father and mother, with their children bowed around the family altar; and what a pity if our children should say, "I never heard father and mother pray." Fathers and mothers, cast off this reproach at once, by calling your family together at the beginning of this, another New Year, and engage in family devotion to God. The Almighty's eyes are over you, and he has said, His ears are open to your prayers. May God abundantly bless all our dear brethren and sisters in all the good, effective resolutions they may engage in, and in your prayers remember especially the brethren here, for we feel the need of your prayers.

I think the BRETHREN AT WORK is giving satisfaction, and may the standard of our church literature become magnified, and may all the good efforts set forth, meet with unbounded success; may the principles and doctrine of our adorable Redeemer, be set forth in such a persuasive power, that the sinner's heart may soon yield to obedience. May the principle of the missionary cause, meet the prayerful approbation of all our dear brethren and sisters; that they may be constrained by the love of God, to open up the treasures of this world, and give abundantly to its support. Remember that God is merciful and just in all his ways.

With love to all, and malice to none, I remain yours in Christ Jesus.

Wm. G. Cook,

Plymouth, Ind., Jan. 1st, 1878.

FROM DENMARK.

Dear Brethren:—
I HAVE just returned from Stenum, where I attended two meetings of usual interest. Bro. Hope, and family were with us all last week, which was something unusual for sister Hope, as her health, in connection with her family charge, does not admit of her visiting much, and even going to preaching, and hence hears but little preaching, unless done in their own house.

The work is still progressing slowly but steadily. Last Friday, another sister was added by baptism, and we think some others are counting the cost, and hope will soon begin to build. We held meetings here in the village in the hall, five evenings of last week, but did not have the interest we expected; hope however our labors will not be entirely in vain, as some in the small congregation, seemed to be favorably impressed.

We have appointed another feast on the sixth of January, at Bro. Hope's, where we expect to finish the work assigned us, and then as soon as arrangements can be made, start for Germany and England. If no effectual door opens to preach, we will shake off the dust of our feet, and turn towards America; this will we do if the Lord will, and the proffered means reach us in due time. This arrangement will add but little to the actual expense of returning home, but we will hurry here until we hear from the brethren in America, which we hope will be before the feast. I regret somewhat that we did not stop in England on our way here, and introduce our mission, and distribute our tracts. We think more good could have been accomplished, and we would be better qualified to decide on our arrangements now, but we hope to hear from brother Bendworth soon, which perhaps will assist us in determining what is best, and how soon we expect to set sail.

We feel, to some degree at least, a deficiency in taking any steps, or adopting any measures, that might be considered by any outside of the actual, or at least the primary object of our mission, (which was to organize a church), that would involve the church in more expenses, knowing that many of our dear brethren and sisters think, the expenses already incurred, are more than actually necessary, if the mission had been differently managed; yet we cannot feel ourselves altogether justifiable in returning without making some effort in the above named places, unless the Lord prevents us, as he did the apostle at a certain time when he thought of going to Bithynia, and was forbidden by the Holy Ghost to preach in Asia (Acts. 16: 6, 7), if so, we will be willing to submit, and give heed to some of the Macedonian calls. Our feelings cannot always be relied upon as a guide in matters of duty, as will clearly be seen in the case above alluded to; they may be more or less perverted, and yet we may not be aware of that fact; and then the Lord may interfere in his own good way, to let us see our error, and lead us right, if it should be, to send an angel with the sword, to stand before the ass; and nothing short of having a foot crushed, or to be pitched on the ground, will stop many of us in our path, and change our course, especially when we conscientiously think we are right, and more especially when honor, popularity, or some gift as a reward is offered, as was the case with Bar-lam, when he said, if Balak would give him his house full of gold, he would not go beyond the word of the Lord my God, to do more or less. (Numbers, 22: 18.) He was right, but when he asked God the second time what he should do, he started wrong, and he traveled on until the angel met him, and he promised to go back again; and every one that asks God for a second revelation, lays a foundation for error and deception, like the man that one time opened the Bible with the thirtieth chapter of John before him, and knelt down and asked God if he were required to wash the saint's feet; the answer was, No (?).

Our health since we have been in Denmark, has been very good, and the blessings of life needful to our comfort we are permitted to enjoy; and try to remember our Heavenly Father, from whom every good as well as every perfect gift cometh, with thankfulness, and to manifest a willingness to perform any duty in our weakness, that might bring honor to his name. The health of the members as far as our knowledge extends, is also good, both spiritually and physically; they seem to enjoy the blessings of the Gospel in a church capacity very much with us; so much so that they can hardly be reconciled to the thought of us leaving, especially so soon; but more especially brother Hope and family, having once been permitted to mingle with the dear brethren and sisters in America; and we think we feel, if not to the same, at least to some degree, the pangs of our separation, already piercing our hearts; for we feel much to sympathize with them in their isolated and lonely situation, and heartily recommend them to the sympathies and prayers of the whole brotherhood.

The weather has been very favorable for traveling this winter, no snow to interfere, as frequently is the case; night before last about an inch of snow fell, and the weather was so mild hitherto, that we held meeting without fire until the night of the 12th., when we kindled a fire in the town hall; this morning 18th still mild and some indications for snow.

By the time this reaches you, our work here will be finished, the Lord willing, and we will be ready to change our location, but our address from America, will continue to be the same, and Bro. Hope will send our mail to us, which will take a week longer, especially to England.

We close with greetings of Christian love and friendship to all our dear brethren and sisters in America.

Yours Fraternaly,

ESOBH EBY.

Hjorring, Wensyssel, Denmark, Dec. 17, 1877.

FROM THE DONALD'S CREEK CHURCH, OHIO.

Dear Brethren:—
THIS church was organized somewhere between the years 1805 and 1810; brother John Garber having the over-sight. Bro. John Garber died in the year 1813 or 1814. In the Fall of 1814 brother Christian Frantz moved from Botetourt Co., Va., and took the oversight of the church, he being at that time sixty-three years of age. The church increasing in numbers, by members moving from the Shenandoah valley, Virginia, also several families from Franklin and Roanoke counties.

Sixty-one years ago there were about thirty-five members, one minister and two deacons. From the best information we can get, there have been eleven ministers, and twenty-one deacons elected in this church, and out of this number, one speaker and three deacons have moved out into other districts; this list does not include officials who have moved here from other districts.

Our membership at present numbers about 275, out of this number thirty-five or forty live in Green and Madison counties. Our ministers are alive to the work allotted them, filling appointments in Green and Madison counties. Several different places of meeting in our county. The number of official brethren at present is seven speakers and seven deacons. The officers are all exemplary brethren, which is worthy of note; this being the case, we feel by the help of God, that the doctrine of the brethren will still be maintained among us in the future as in the past; notwithstanding the church has passed through adversities more or less at times.

Our old fathers of Israel have labored much to keep the body in the general order of the brotherhood, and we feel to rejoice that their labors have not been in vain in the Lord. Many brethren and sisters have fallen asleep in Jesus. The number of deaths in this district the past sixty-one years, has been a few over one hundred and forty.

D. B. HURT.

Jan. 3, 1878.

SADIE HAS GONE HOME.

NOW the family chain is broken,
One link from that happy band;
She, we dearly loved, has left us,
Left us for a happier land.

Like the rose, her beauty faded,
Short her pilgrimage below;
Sickness has prevailed upon her;
Jesus called her, she must go.

Vain were all their kind endeavors,
To restore her health again;
Friends, physicians, none could help her,
Why were all their labors vain?

Her earthly years were few in number,
O how soon they passed away!
With her brothers and her sisters,
She could not prolong her stay.

They have borne her to the church-yard,
There her lovely form is hid;
There, among the fading relics,
There her friends may find her grave.

Weep not father, weep not mother,
Trust in God to meet again;
Yes, dear Sadie's crossed the river,
Free from sorrow, sickness, pain.

Brothers, sisters, try to meet her,
In a better world than this;
Here is no abiding city,
There's a land of perfect bliss.

Run your race with faith and patience,
While your lamp holds out to burn;
When the Saviour comes to call you,
Then you'll rest with Sadie at home.

Selected by S. M. ESHLEMAN.

Lanark, Ill.

CHURCH NEWS.

From Sciota, Iowa.—A few words about our meetings in the Maple Grove church, Montgomery Co., Iowa. Bro. S. A. Garber of Decatur Co., and Bro. M. Thomas of Warren Co., Iowa came to us on the 8th of Dec. Commenced meeting same evening, and continued until the 16th, preaching the Word with power, giving much encouragement to the disciples, and warning the sinners. Had the best of order during the meeting; strict attention being paid to the Word preached. Although none publicly confessed the Lord, yet we believe the seed sown will take root and bring forth fruit that will be gathered in the future.

The brethren went from here to Mt. Etna, Adams Co., the Eastern part of our congregation, where they preached for a week, apparently for the same purpose, that is to build up the church and bring into the fold those that are without. The weather however was very disagreeable, reads almost impossible, considerable rain during the time of meeting, made the congregations small, but those that came paid good attention to the preaching. The church business transacted while the brethren were with us, was one brother received back into the second degree of the ministry, which office he once held, also one brother ordained to the eldership.

The brethren's labor with us we believe was much appreciated by the little flock here. May God bless them in their labors, wherever they go, and when their labors are over, may they fully realize the promise of Jesus "that where I am there ye may be also." N. C. WORKMAN.

Jan. 2nd, 1878.

From Orville, Ohio.—Dear Brethren: On the 8th of Dec. we the Orville congregation, met in council. Business passed off with interest, and a good feeling prevailed among the Brethren. There are meetings of interest to me and have not proved a warning voice in trials and temptations. The next day met at the Sepo Vidly meeting-house. We believe this meeting was acceptable in the sight of the Lord, to the hungry lands of the fold.

After retirement by a sister, went to visit a family in Lawrence. Here we met an Israelite, a sister having proved faithful in the Master's cause. For thirty five years she lay prostrate on her couch with no hope of recovery, but that the angel might come and carry her into the arms of our Redeemer. Here we spent about an hour in worship together, which seemed a balm to the dear sister, and will no doubt be long remembered by all of us. There is a family in this arm of the church, which deserves the sympathy of all, an aged father and mother.

Some of the brethren and sisters met there one week and have evening worship, which seems to be appreciated by the family and strengthens their affection among the brethren.

Moses KINDEL.

From Sandy Church, Ohio.—I came here Dec. 15. On the 16th held dedicatory services in their new and large, commodious house; it is 40x90 feet. The audience room is 40x80 feet with a folding partition. I suppose it will seat at least one thousand persons, but all could not be seated even then. We remained here one week, then went seven miles west in same district to another meeting house, bought from the Methodist fraternity. Continued our labors there one week, and closed our meetings Jan. 1st at the new meeting-house with a communion meeting.

I need not say that it was a happy New Year's day, indeed it was; forty-two were added to the church by baptism, and three restored to fellowship that had wandered away from the fold, and more promised they would soon come; others would have come if they had not been hindered. May God forgive them for their indiscretion, and may many more be added the church and be saved. All have our thanks for their kindness manifested to us. When the parting hour came we bid farewell perhaps never to meet again this side of the grave. JESSE CALVERT.

Columbiana Co., O. Jan. 2. 1878.

From Little York, Ohio.—Dear Brethren: I will give you some news from this arm of the church. This church is known as the Wyandot church. We number about forty, and the members are in peace with one another. Brethren Levi Dickey and Isaac Rosebarger were with us one week, and they held forth the Gospel in its purity. There was none added to the church, but there were some that were made to feel it their duty to become Christians.

The members were revived and encouraged. We look into the future with anticipation of reaping the fruits of their labors. We feel to thank God for what we have heard and seen, and hope that those Brethren will not forget us. We pray that the blessings of our heavenly Father may rest upon them. JACOB HENSTAD.

From Dunen Creek Church, Pa.—Last night closed our series of meetings. Valentine Blough of Somerset, Pa. was with us, and the Lord truly blessed his labors. Bro. Blough seems to have the good cause at heart; he gave many good advices to both saint and sinner. By his strong appeal to sinners, three were made willing to give themselves up to God, and many more were almost persuaded to become Christians. Many were the tears that were seen rolling down the cheeks of saints and sinners, as the hearty appeals came forth from the lips of the earnest minister, during the week he was here, we hope there has been much good seed sown and that it may spring up and bring forth fruit to the honor of God and to the welfare of poor souls. We pray that God may still be with us and do us all the good we need in time and eternity. THOMAS S. HOLSINGER.

Dec. 31st 1877.

From Sagar Ridge Church, Ohio.—We are still "laboring and have not fainted," and unlike the church at Ephesus, we hope we "have not left our first love." Our experience is that the gold that we are recommended to buy, like our earthly treasury, will not allow profligacy. The ship of the church will soon cease to move if we lay down our oars; aside from this, our little barks to get into the harbor, must sail up stream and that too windward. If we fold our arms and lie on our oars, the strong current of the stream of time will swiftly land us in the waters below.

A. The result of our labors, we have recorded fifteen accessions during the year. One, a young man of marked mental ability, who under the influence of Catholicism never read the Bible, until the age of nineteen. We fondly pray that he will be active in his sphere of usefulness in the church where it may be. Another, a father who had been epileptic when an infant; he was taken out of a sick-bed by a Methodist minister and baptized by him immediately. He was under conviction during Bro. Stearns' visit last winter, wanted to be received upon his baptism; we told him he could not be received:

- 1st. Because he was not baptized by a legal administrator.
2nd. His administrator having no faith in the baptism, was committing in whole engaged in the work.
3rd. Was not baptized for the remission of sins.
4th. Laying on of hands and prayer were omitted.

He has since made an unconditional surrender, has been rebaptized, and at different times expressed himself as enjoying the happiest religion he ever enjoyed. There is an effort being made in Northern Ohio, to further the interests of the cause the winter, hope the effort will be crowned with abundant success. I. S. ROSENBERG.

Gilboa, O. Dec. 21, 77

From Brush College, Ind. Our meeting began here December 24th and continued till January 1st. It was conducted by Bro. D. B. Stewart of South Bend, Ind., assisted by the ministers of our own district. Seven precious souls were made willing to follow the Lord, in his example, and were buried with him in baptism and arose to walk in newness of life.

Others have confessed themselves almost ready to come. May the Lord bless the seed that has been sown, that many may bring forth fruit in abundance. WILLIAM STEWART.

From Fulton Co., Ohio.—According to previous arrangements, met with the brethren in Fulton Co., Ohio to commence a meeting on the 21st of Dec. 1877. I left home on the 20th and arrived at Toledo on the 21st. Elder R. Beckwith labored in this city and he accompanied me to place of meeting. He is a young man of considerable talent, and a bright prospect before him in the ministry. Our meeting commenced near Swanton, and we remained with the brethren holding meetings at some five or six different places. After the usual method, when an interest is gotten up at a place, we must close our meeting and go to some other place, as though we were afraid some one might join the church.

Our meeting closed on the evening of the 3rd inst. Eleven were made willing to obey the Gospel, and were baptized. Many more were brought near the Kingdom. The Lord bless those dear lambs that have entered into covenant relation with the Father, Son and Holy Spirit. May the Lord keep them near His side. The brethren and sisters in this church are workers in the cause of Christ. God bless them in their labors in the vineyard. JOHN NICHOLSON.

From Bristol, Ind.—Brethren Isaac L. Berkeley and Benjamin Leer commenced meeting in the Pine Creek church-house on Saturday evening before New Year, and continued one week. Preached fifteen sermons, and the result was, four young persons united with the people of God, and were buried with Christ in baptism, and rose, we hope, to walk in newness of life, and we think others were made to think over the matter, and are counting the cost. The members have been refreshed and cheered on their way. Lasting impressions were made by our brethren who labored so earnestly for the conversion of souls. The weather got very inclement the few last days of our meeting, which was a great hindrance, else we think more would have joined had the weather been better. J. C. LEDMAN.

Jan. 8th, 1878.

From Southern Illinois.—Myself and wife started for Bond Co., Ill. the 7th of December, met with the Brethren in the Hurricane Creek church the 8th. Had church meeting the same day, and a pleasant time of it. Found the members alive to their duty. Had some meetings while there, good attention, congregations large. Eight were made willing to be baptized, and one more applicant. Hope they will all prove faithful. Some more said they were nearly ready to come.

From the Hurricane church we went to the Mulberry church, found the members mostly well, Bro. Wm. Elam was very poorly. The members all seemed in good earnest in serving the Lord, and in love and union. While with the brethren and sisters at Mulberry had some meetings, good order, and excellent attention. Three were baptized and one more applicant.

From Mulberry Grove we went to Marion Co. and stopped with Brethren in the Salem church; found the members all well and in good spirit, as they lately built a good, comfortable meeting-house. I just thought while there, if the Brethren at every place where meeting-houses are needed, would take hold like the brethren did in the Salem church, there would be many meeting-houses where there are none. They raised what money they were obliged to have to get the material, and brought it all together on the ground. Two of the brethren laid off the frame, all the rest would go and work day by day till the house was finished. They built that house in the shortest time, and with less money than any house I have known built by the Brethren. It is a good substantial house. Had some meetings while with the Brethren. Daniel Neher is the elder. Had a church meeting to elect an deacon. The lot fell on Daniel Flery. Andrew Neher was advanced to the second degree of office. Three were baptized during the meeting. On account of much rain, we had to close the meeting too soon. Landed home safely, found all well thank the Lord. JOHN METZGER.

Cresco, Iowa, Ill. Jan. 9th, 1878.

DIED.

Obituary should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and not to interfere with other business.

KEYSER.—Died Dec. 30th, 1877, in the Green Spring district, Seneca Co., Ohio, Anna Mary, infant daughter of Bro. Amos and sister Amanda Keyser, aged 4 months. Funeral conducted by Bro. S. T. Bossmann, accompanied by the writer, from Job 1: 21.

EL AM.—Died in the Mulberry Grove church district, Bond Co., Ill. Jan. 16th, 1878, elder Wm. Elam, in the 69th year of his age.

The subject of the above notice was born in Virginia in 1813, was removed to North Carolina in 1814 and in 1831 he moved to Fayette Co., Ill., where he resided till his death. Was married to Mary Andrews in the year of 1836. United with the church in 1854, was elected deacon the same year and was chosen minister the following year, was ordained to the full ministry in the year 1861, which position he filled honorably till his death. Funeral on the 16th inst., in the Christian church at Mulberry Grove by the Brethren to a large concourse of people. Text, John 12: 26. J. H. GOUGHMAN.

MILLER.—Died in Portage Prairie congregation, St. Joe Co., Ind. Bro. Sylvester Miller, son of Eld. James Miller.

He had been sick for over four years with consumption. Seven or eight months previous to his death, he was converted and united with the Brethren and became a zealous and active member of the church. Among his Christian virtues, his industry was a prominent one, though in most respects, he was known at different times to give to his poor minister an entire good suit of clothes as one bestowed. He loved God and His people, and God and His people loved him, for the Lord loveth a cheerful giver. "I was naked and ye clothed me," "Come up hither," "Thou hast been a father over a few things."

Funeral discourse by the writer, from Psalm 116: 15, and while the worthy parents and friends weep, it is not without hope of a glorious reunion in the glory land. Bro. Sylvester Miller was born July 12th, 1845, and died Dec. 23rd, 1877, aged 32 years, 5 months and 11 days.

P. R. WRIGHTSMAN.

South Bend, Ind. SWIGGART.—In the Globe Run congregation Armstrong Co., Pa. June 3rd, 1877, sister Sarah Swiggart, aged 77 years, and 12 days. Sister Sarah was a consistent member of the church over 40 years. Funeral services by the writer, from 1 Thess. 4: 18.

HELSEL.—Also in same congregation, on the 23rd of September, 1877, sister Lydia Helsel, aged 76 years, 4 months and 29 days. Funeral services by the writer, from John 11, latter chapter of the 28th verse. J. B. WAMPBANE.

WOLF.—Brother John F. Wolf, son of Jeremiah Wolf of Stark Co., Ohio, died Nov. 23rd, 1877, aged 14 years and 17 days. He was only sick 12 hours. Disease bilious colic. He leaves a wife and five children to mourn their loss. Funeral services by brethren G. Keller and J. P. Wolf, from John 11: 25, 26. J. J. FOX.

Please announce that the District Meeting of the Northern District of Missouri for 1878, is to be held at the Long Branch school-house in Harrison Co., four miles north of Martinsville, on the 15th and 18th of May, 1878. A full representation by delegates, of all the churches, is solicited; for our Home Mission work requires and well deserves the attention of every congregation in its district. C. C. ROOR, Clerk.

DANISH MISSION FUND. Table with columns for church names and amounts. Total: $1385.63. C. P. ROWLAND, Treasurer. Lanark, Ill., Jan. 10th, 1878.

Table listing contributions to the Brethren at Work office. Total: 378.63. Includes names like Lucey's Creek church, W. Va., $1.00; Greenland church, W. Va., 75c; S. F. Reiman, 50c; Barbara Landis, 1.00; E. Bishop, .25; Levi Stamp, 5.00; Cora Belle Emmert, .30; John Laird, .50; Dr. P. Fahney, .50; Benj. Bowman, 1.00; W. G. Schroek, 1.00; Emma S. Schroek, .25; R. Schroek, .25; Samuel Ross, 2.40; A. Toms, .50; J. J. Schuster, .50; James Keiser, .25; Jacob Harshbarger, .40; J. M. Gibble, 1.00; J. Emmert, 1.30; Jacob Culler, .50; Martin Meyer, .50; R. P. Ross, 1.50; J. S. Harley, 1.00; D. Meyers, .20; Abram Whitmer, 1.00; Bro. SIFER, 1.25; Sarah Berkley, 5.00; J. O. Culler, 1.00; W. Harrington, .50. Previously reported, 392.85. Total, 378.63.

CHARITY FUND. Table with columns for names and amounts. Total: 1495. Includes John B. Shaffer, $10; Family at Waddams Grove, Ill., 1.50; Samuel Metzger, .25; Lydia Harshbarger, .25; Benj. Bowman, 1.00; J. F. L. Wer, .85; Don. Meyers, .15; Catharine Supplee, .50; D. J. Hetrick, 1.00; Isaac Rowland, 2.00; J. B. Lehmann, .25; Sarah Berkley, 1.50; J. O. Culler, 1.50. Previously reported, 400. Total: 1495.

A noble Hannibal king of Italy is dead. His death has cast quite a gloom over the Imperial city.

The Turk are still meeting with disastrous reverses. Singha Pass, the Turkish stronghold has fallen into the hands of the Russians. Considerable excitement prevails in England, though they, it seems, is not likely at present to take any part in the war.

Many are commencing a series of meetings in Hartford, Conn.

Tim emigration to Texas, is said to be quite large. Many Brethren are looking that way also, but we advise them to be certain that the country will suit them before pulling up and going. It is no doubt an excellent place to live, but then it takes means there as well as elsewhere.

W. U. R. R. Time Table. Table with columns for train names, directions, and times. Includes Day passenger train going east leaves Lanark at 12:21 P. M., and arrives in Racine at 6:41 P. M.; Day passenger train going west leaves Lanark at 2:16 P. M., and arrives at Rock Island at 5:50 P. M.; Night passenger train, going east and west, meet and leave Lanark at 2:21 A. M., arriving in Racine at 9:50 A. M., and at Rock Island at 6:00 A. M.; Freight and Accommodation Trains will run west at 12:35 P. M., 10:50 A. M., and 12:20 P. M., and east at 1:10 A. M., 1 P. M., and 4:50 P. M. Tickets are sold for above trains only. Passenger trains make close connection at Western Union Junction. G. A. SMITH, Agent. Passengers for Chicago should leave Lanark at 12:21 P. M., run to the Western Union Junction, here they need not but five minutes for the Chicago. Make close connection with the Chicago, and thus reach Chicago at 7:45 the same evening. To reach Lanark from Chicago, go to the Ft. Wayne depot, take the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul train at five in the evening, run north to the W. U. Junction, change cars for Lanark, and arrive here at 2:21 in the morning.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK.

"Behold I Bring You Good Tidings of Great Joy, which Shall be unto All People."—LUKE 2: 10.

Vol. III.

Lanark, Ill., January 24, 1878.

No. 4.

The Brethren at Work.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY

—BY—

J. H. Moore, S. H. Bashor, M. M. Eshelman.

—:O:—

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

| | | | | |
|-----------------|---|---|---|-----------------|
| R. H. MILLER, | — | — | — | LADOGA, IND. |
| J. W. STEIN, | — | — | — | NEWTONIA, MO. |
| B. VANIMAN, | — | — | — | VIRIDEN, ILL. |
| D. H. MENTZER, | — | — | — | WAYNESBORO, PA. |
| MATTIE A. LEAR, | — | — | — | URBANA, ILL. |

A GREETING.

BY JAS. Y. HECKLER.

To the Eld. Edmund Fursey of the Pine Creek Church, Cyle Co. Ill.

Dear brother in Christ, I send greeting to you, because I believe you are faithful and true to your calling of God. You will pardon me then, for greeting you thus with my metrical pen.

How often I think of the brethren I love, The one that is coming to meet them above; The saints of all ages shall welcome us home, To be with the Lord when His kingdom has come.

But how that are mighty, and how that are great, Will come to inherit the Savior's estate; Though all are invited to come and partake of the feast which the Lord for His people will make.

If therefore behooves us to watch and to pray, Lest slipping or sliding our feet by the way, The tempter allure us away into sin, To things that are strange and forbidden have been.

My eyes have been pained and my heart has been grieved, To see how some brethren themselves have deceived, Who seek their own glory, ambitious for fame, And strive for pre-eminence to their own shame.

Such let us keep down to the lowly and meek, As no emulation nor honor to seek, But rather like Jesus, and all for His sake, Seek our own lives of no reputation to make.

By stooping and bowing in meekness and love, We hope to be raised to the mansions above, obeying the Savior, enduring in faith, Will raise us to glory and honor in death.

What joy and what gladness in heaven shall be When the saints of all ages their Savior will see! How high will the rapture of praises aspire, Beholding the One whom they always admire!

These lines are submitted to you with a prayer, When you are at the altar, remember me there, But when for yourself you fairly get through, In faith and assurance you speak for me too.

NOT OF MAN.

BY E. H. BAISBAUM.

RELIGION that is to fashion a fallen immortality into the beauty of holiness, can neither be originated nor consummated by finite power. The long and fearful struggles of the gigantic intellects of unassisted heathendom in attempts to solve the problem of human destiny, show the utter futility of self-wrought redemption from the bondage of corruption. "The world by wisdom knew not God" (1 Cor. 1: 21). Vast and high and deep was the line of heathen sages, but none could approach the idea that the only possibility of leading the breach of apostasy, and elevating man to community of nature and blessedness with his source, lay in the inhabitation of dual constitution by God Himself, and a sin-offering the uncreated and for the created. This was the great unsuspected mystery hid from ages and generations (Col. 1: 26).

To track the supreme importance of Christ's mission from His death to His life, is to multiply the whole scheme of Redemption and leave our sins unatoned, and our eternity unblest. If the power to save lay only in His holy example, there would be no necessity to put such emphasis on His resurrection, as we find in the declaration of Christ Himself and the apostles. A salvation solely dependent on the moral force of example, needs no literal revivification. The same is true as to the manward influence of Christ's death.

If the effect on character were all, it could not be augmented by a resurrection. But it is explicitly affirmed that "if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; YE ARE YET IN YOUR SINS" (1 Cor. 15: 17). This same apostle connects his authority as a teacher, not only with the Eternal Fountain of Light, but with the resurrection of Christ (Gal. 1: 1). All this demonstrates that in the Death of Emmanuel there was an object and efficacy wholly apart from its transforming effect on the human mind and heart. Man needed not only redemption from subjective ruin, but from the retributions of an objective Eternal Law. This Law denounced death on transgression, and less than death will not suffice. Whose death shall it be? It cannot be the death of the fallen, for that is the wages of sin, and instead of bringing deliverance, seals his doom in remediless damnation. The Being who is offended and dishonored by sin needs propitiation no less than the offender needs forgiveness. This propitiation can be nothing short of the complete satisfaction of the original penalty against sin. Man cannot effect it, as in the very act of payment he consummates his eternal alienation from God. Angels are equally powerless, for they cannot render double satisfaction to the Supreme Law which challenges all their resources in personal obedience. There is only one other avenue open for the escape of man from merited perdition. God Himself must become flesh, and live the life that comports with the primal dignity of human nature, and die the death which alone can atone for human iniquity. Less than this would degrade the Divine character, and invalidate Divine Law, instead of elevating and ennobling man. Had Christ given His spotless example, and multiplied His miracles, and revealed ten thousand times more of the majesty of the Divine character, and enlarged the volume of inspiration a hundred-fold, so as to insert an absolute solution for every perplexity in human life, and then ascended to Heaven without "taking death for every man," His mission would not have been worth a straw. The breach between God and man would have been as wide as before. The awful glory of Holiness, and the dreadful, damning nature of sin, are seen alone in the dreadful death-throbs of the Son of God on the Cross. Except we eat His flesh, and drink His blood, we have no life in us (John 6: 53).

To reject God's own satisfaction for His violated Law, is to court the wrath of Omnipotence, and whelm body and soul in the fiery horrors of Eternal Death. To make Christ less than God, and His death less than the ground of remission from the penalty of sin, is to make our damnation as certain as the firmness of God and the integrity of His Eternal Law.

CHRISTMAS

BY H. B. BRISWORTH.

UNTIL us a child is born; into us a Son is given; glorious news! glad tidings unto us." Do we realize that to us is born the Child, Jesus the Savior of the world? "A Son is given," can it be? Yes, glorious news! God has not spared any good thing; He has freely given to us His own Son, His beloved Son, His only Son, Jesus. And why?—Simply because we were under the curse of sin, transgression. How could we escape? Could we procure our own redemption from the net? Could we not satisfy the demands of a justly earned debt? Oh no! Nothing could we do; and while in this state, a Redeemer appears—a Savior is born, a Son is given? Yes, reader for you He came, for you He lived, for you He suffered the reproach of many; on Him your sins were laid, and for you He bore that cruel, insulting and ignominious of all deaths; the death of the cross. Oh! how He must have suffered. How torturing must have been that death! How painful! And the more so because He was the Innocent One of the most high. Reader, He suffered this for you; and while upon the cross He says, "Father forgive them! This language is for you. Yes, to you! You have transgressed against your Father's will; have incurred the divine displeasure, and your Savior cries for you, "Father forgive." Have you crucified your Lord, your Savior again? Have you opened afresh those bleedings wounds? Have you set at naught His sacrifice? Have you trampled under foot the blood, the precious blood of Christ? You have.

If you have not become reconciled to your Father and your God, oh, "I beseech in Christ's stead be ye reconciled to God!" Spurn not the call, but receive Him, and then the news to you shall come as glorious news, as glad tidings. The Savior shall be yours; and God shall be your God, a reconciled Father; an All-sufficient and wise Creator. Oh, dear reader, hear and your soul shall live! Whosoever believeth, trusteth, and followeth Christ, shall receive a glorious—a rich reward from heaven.

OUR DUTY TO THE POOR.

BY J. J. HOVELL.

DAILY do we offer up prayers and petitions to the Almighty to have mercy on the poor, the needy, the sick, and the afflicted, but if we neglect doing our part, our prayers will not be answered. Some may say, that the prayers of the poor will not be answered, for they have become so reduced, that they cannot do their part. Have they not done their part? Have they not made it known unto them that are of the household of faith through the Practical Christian and the BERTHEUX VI WOMAN, that they are in want? Yet could we all realize the feelings of gratitude, that the needy and the afflicted feel when they receive a gift of relief, we certainly would not withhold that which we can so easily spare. When the impotent or lame man, in the temple received what Peter and John gave him, he leaped, walked, and praised God. So it is to-day when relief is given to the needy and afflicted, they feel like going on and praising God. Their prayers being answered, they have cause to rejoice more than if they had heard the greatest sermon preached.

Let us consider well the circumstance of the poor, were we to be in their condition. Is it not often the case when there is something to be done for the poor, that many who are worth their own weight of this world's goods, can scarcely be persuaded to give one dollar for their relief, and some that are worth less can scarcely be persuaded to give anything at all? It is true that some persons are liberal, and very liberal too, but often in the time of need, they are not prepared to give. Some will divide with what they have, and pray that it may be applied to its intended use. "Give alms of thy substance; and when thou givest alms, let not thy eye be envious; neither turn thy face from any poor, and the face of God shall not be turned away from thee." If thou hast abundance, give alms accordingly; if thou hast but a little, be not afraid to give according to that little. "For if there be just a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not" (2 Cor. 8: 12). The poor shall never cease one of the Lord's mercies. Command them saying, thou shalt open thine hand wide unto thy brother, to thy poor, and to thy needy in thy hand" (Levit. 19: 10). "Ye have the poor always with you." From these words we can plainly see that there were poor in the time of Moses, and in the time of Christ. And if we examine the Word of God, we find that in all ages of the world, it was the will of God that His people should administer to the wants of the poor. If there be any poor among the children of God, we that are blessed with abundance of this world's goods, shall not harden our hearts, nor shut our hands from them, but shall open wide our hands unto them.

"Let us therefore come boldly unto a throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need" (Heb. 4: 16). "And to defend the poor and fatherless" and to "do justice to the afflicted and needy" (Ps. 82: 3). "Despise not the poor. Hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which He hath promised to them that love Him?" (James 2: 5). "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 5: 3). If we love God we will keep His commandments, worship Him in spirit and in truth, and live by every word that proceedeth out of His mouth. If we live by every word, we must not neglect the poor and needy. For if we only obey in part we may as well forsake all, for he that transgresseth in one thing, is guilty of all. "I have shewed all things, how that so laboring ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how He said, it is more blessed to give than to receive" (Acts 20: 35). "As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith" (Gal. 6: 10). "But whoso hath this world's goods, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?" (1 John 3: 17). "He that giveth unto the poor shall not lack; but he that hideth his eyes shall have many a curse" (Prov. 28: 27). "He that hath pity on the poor, lendeth unto the Lord, and that which he hath given, will he pay him again" (Prov. 19: 17). "And whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones, a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward" (Matt. 10: 42).

Now we will see the example of the apostolic churches on this subject. "For it hath pleased them of Macedonia and Achaia to make a certain contribution for the poor saints which are at Jerusalem" (Rom. 15: 26). "Moreover, brethren, we do you to wit of the grace of God bestowed on the churches of Macedonia; how that in the great trial of affliction, the abundance of their joy, and their deep poverty, abound into the riches of their liberality" (2 Cor. 8: 2). Being enriched in every thing to all liberality, which causeth through us thanksgiving to God. For the administration of this service, not only appeth the want of the saints, but abundant also by many thanksgivings unto God; while by the experience of this ministration, they glorify God for your professed subjection unto the Gospel of Christ, and for your liberal distribution unto them and unto all men (2 Cor. 9: 11, 13).

Let us not neglect the poor, but let their cases be judiciously attended to, for if we neglect the poor we will be held accountable in the day of judgment. Think of brother Workman's one penny proposition, and others who are in want. Where the work has not been attended to, take hold of it immediately, and if it does take a few of our dimes, we will only be depositing our money in the bank of heaven. May the Lord give us grace to do His will, and when our earthly career is ended He will take a home to sing His praises with all the blood-washed ones, is my prayer.

Augustine's advise was: "never resent a supposed injury till you know the motives of the author of it. On no occasion retaliate." It would be well if more would follow this advice.

WANTED—A MINISTER.

WE have been without a pastor
Some eighteen months or more;
And though candidates are plenty—
We've had at least a score,
All of them "tip-top" preachers,
Or so their letters ran—
We're just as far ever
From settling on the man.

The first who came among us
By no means was the worst,
But then we didn't think of him,
Because he was the first;
It being quite the custom
To sacrifice a few
Before the church in earnest
Determines what to do.

There was a smart young fellow
With serious, earnest way,
Who but for one great blunder
Had surely won the day;
Who left so good impression,
On Monday, one or two
Went round among the people
To see if he would do.

The pious, godly portion
Had not a fault to find;
His clear and searching preaching
They thought the very kind;
And all went smooth and pleasant
Until they heard the views
Of some influential sinners
Who sent the highest pews.

On these his pungent dealing
Made but a sorry hit;
The coat of God's peal teaching
Was quite too tight a fit.
Of course his fate was settled;
Attend ye parsons all!
And preach to please the sinners
If you would get a call.

Next came a spruce young dandy,
He wore his hair too long;
Another's coat was shabby,
And his voice not over strong;
And one New Haven student
Was woe to them all of those
We couldn't heed the common
For thinking of his nose.

Then, weary of candidates
We looked the country through,
And doctors and professors
To find one that would do,
And after much endeavor
One was found in the town,
Who, God be praised,
With few objections.

He had a goodly family,
But was a little odd;
One of our best preachers
He was, I'm told;
We thought he'd do,
To hold us in the town,
What a relief to us that day!
He'd been a long time.

Next we'd published our notice
By two or three papers;
The result was, in a week,
Over a dozen calls;
He came, he saw, he conquered,
So we were glad to see
The day when he was settled,
In our dear church.

In our church he was settled,
By a unanimous vote;
A lady of our congregation
Brought the good news;
And on our faces gleamed
In accents of delight,
The joyful proclamation
That our dear pastor was here.

Response of our people
And gladness in their hearts,
On such a happy day,
"The joys of old time"
An outpouring of sweet
Of flowers and perfume,
Of world's good, and a soul out-cry,
And golden sunsets.

Of faith and true religion
He nothing had to say;
He rounded all the corners,
And smoothed all the jagged
Managed with great ability
To entertain and please,
And gave the sinners' consciences
Completely at its ease.

Six hundred is the salary
We gave in former days;
We thought it very liberal,

And found it hard to raise;
But when we took the paper
We had no need to urge
To raise a cool two thousand
For the Rev. Shallow Splurge.

In vain were all the efforts—
We had no change at all—
We found ten city churches
Had given him a call;
And he, in prayerful waiting,
Was keeping them all in tow;
But when they paid the highest
It was whispered he would go.

And now, good Christian brothers,
We ask your earnest prayers
That God would send a shepherd
To guide our church affairs,
With this clear understanding—
A man to meet our views
Must preach to please the sinners,
And fill the vacant pews.

—Vindicator.

SHEW BREAD.

BY MATTHEW A. LEAR.

SHEW bread was bread offered every Sabbath day upon the golden table in the holy place, or sanctuary. These were twelve in number, according to the twelve tribes, in whose names they were offered. Every loaf was composed of a little more than five pints of flour, they were unleavened. They were presented hot every Sabbath day, the cold ones being taken away and eaten by the priests only. This offering was accompanied with salt, and frankincense (see Lev. 2: 13; 24: 5, 8). Some think it was also accompanied with wine, though this is not mentioned in the Scriptures, but as wine was used in many of the sacrifices and offerings of the Jews it is presumed that it was used here. These twelve loaves, because they stood before the Lord were called, of faces, or of the presence, that is bread which stands in the presence of God.

The shew bread is peculiarly interesting to us, as being a striking type of Christ. We will now try to make some of the points of comparison.

1. This bread was prepared as a sacrifice of holiness and purity, as testified by the priests. How precious his daily bread for holiness, when he gave Himself for us, that we should be sanctified to God through His blood. We are to be holy, as He is holy, and to be pure, as He is pure. The shew bread was prepared with clean hands, and with a clean heart. It was prepared in the presence of God, and it was presented in the presence of God. It was prepared with clean hands, and with a clean heart. It was prepared in the presence of God, and it was presented in the presence of God.

2. The shew bread was prepared with clean hands, and with a clean heart. It was prepared in the presence of God, and it was presented in the presence of God. It was prepared with clean hands, and with a clean heart. It was prepared in the presence of God, and it was presented in the presence of God. It was prepared with clean hands, and with a clean heart. It was prepared in the presence of God, and it was presented in the presence of God.

under His dispensation. The shew bread was one of the many things of the Jewish economy that pointed to Christ, designed to keep before the minds of the people the great redemption that God was preparing for the human family. Man is prone to forgetfulness, and forgetfulness is the parent of negligence, and finally of apostasy and ruin. Our dear Master, knowing our frailty, our proneness to apathy and indifference, the night of His betrayal, the night of His most dreadful sufferings instituted an ordinance in His church, and an ordinance most solemn and impressive, well calculated to keep before the minds of His people, the awful tragedy of Gethsemane and Calvary. While seated at the table with His disciples, partaking with them His last meal, and conversing with them of His approaching trial and sufferings, He took up a piece of bread in the most solemn manner, blessed it, brake it, and gave it to His disciples, and said, "take eat this is my body."

How emphatic! This bread which I have just broken represents my body which will soon be broken for you. Eat this bread, it is symbolical of the spiritual nourishment you will derive from my awful sufferings. I am soon to suffer, and through that suffering you are to procure spiritual aliment. Merciful Jesus! Was every comfort, every blessing, all the happiness, all the peace, all the joy that is mine, wrung from thee? Didst thou procure them for me at such an awful cost? Well may the apostle say, "Ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot." And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, drink ye all of this, for this is my blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins. Drink ye all of this cup, it represents the blood of the New Testament, the covenant of grace, and God's precious love, which is shed into the true God, and which is shed for many for the remission of sins.

Drink ye all of this cup, it represents the blood of the New Testament, the covenant of grace, and God's precious love, which is shed into the true God, and which is shed for many for the remission of sins. Drink ye all of this cup, it represents the blood of the New Testament, the covenant of grace, and God's precious love, which is shed into the true God, and which is shed for many for the remission of sins. Drink ye all of this cup, it represents the blood of the New Testament, the covenant of grace, and God's precious love, which is shed into the true God, and which is shed for many for the remission of sins.

all these emblems of our Saviour's sufferings are to be partaken of in the church, they are to be believed in a collective body, which body composes the true or spiritual temple, or dwelling place on earth. But not only are we to partake of these emblems as a remembrance of our Lord's sufferings, but through it we are to make a public exhibition of our Master's sufferings. Says Paul, "As oft as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he comes." Though a crucified Christ is a stumbling block to the Jews, and foolishness unto the Greeks, to the enlightened Christian he is the power of God, and the wisdom of God, our only boast is in the cross of Jesus.

so far from being ashamed of our Master's sufferings, we glory in them.

When our Savior instituted this ordinance, He said, this is my blood of the new covenant (see Bible Union Translation). Now a covenant implies two parties, and mutual stipulations. God made a covenant with Abraham, and gave him the rite of circumcision, which was the seal of that covenant. This rite was a sign, evidence, and assurance, both of the blessings promised by God, particularly that he would give them Christ the promised seed out of the loins of Abraham, and through him dispense unto them all spiritual blessings, on their part it was a sign of their faith or confidence in this promise, and also of their willingness to submit to the rule and guidance of this promised seed.

Now Paul tells us, "He is not a Jew, which is one outwardly, neither is that circumcision which is outward in the flesh, but he is a Jew which is one inwardly; and circumcision is that of the heart, in the spirit, and not in the letter; whose praise is not of men, but of God." Again he says, "For we are the circumcision which serve God in the Spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh." This covenant which was on Christ's part ratified with his blood, requires on our part that we receive the true or spiritual circumcision of the heart, which consists of a cutting away of all fleshly or carnal desires, or appetites. This spiritual incision is necessarily painful. Paul tells us that the Word of God, by which the incision is made, "Is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart."

Paul calls this holy sacrament a communion (1 Cor. 10: 16). Communion signifies fellowship, concord, harmony, union. It is then also a sacred sign of our spiritual fellowship with Christ. But, says the apostle, "What fellowship hath light with darkness? And what communion hath light with darkness? And what concord hath Christ with Belial?" Unless, then, we are one with Christ, unless our spirits are in harmony with his Spirit, unless there is in our hearts a willingness to forsake all for him, we he forsake all for us, unless there really is between our souls and Christ's a true and fellowship, we cannot properly partake of this sacred sign of fellowship. It is not only a sign of our spiritual fellowship with Christ, but also a sign of our mutual Christian fellowship one with another. "The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?" For, says the apostle, "we being many are one bread and one body; but we are all partakers of that one bread." This bread broken and distributed among the members of Christ's mystical body represents the union and concord that should exist between them, all being united together in him. Oh how solemn, how sacred is all this, when seated at that table, an almost overpowering sense of awe takes possession of our mind and soul, with what feelings, do we sip that cup and eat that bread! Holy Master, help us to cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God," so that we may partake of these emblems properly. For, "Whoever shall eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord, unworthily, shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord."

Let us so live, that we may have the fellowship one with another, and together have fellowship with the Father, and with His Son Jesus Christ (1 John 1:3).

THE WAR IN PROPHECY.

THE present situation of affairs in Europe calls out many references to the article "The European War in Prophecy," which appeared in Inter Ocean of Oct. 28, 1876, and which was republished in May last. The article was devoted to a statement of the views of the Rev. S. D. Baldwin, given in his book "Armageddon; or, the United States in Prophecy," published in 1851. The following is the summary attached to the quotations from the book, as published in The Inter Ocean in Oct. 1876:

"According to the views of Mr. Baldwin the accomplishment of Daniel's prophecy was to begin in 1876, continue through 1877 and terminate before the close of April, 1878. Should his prognostications turn out to be true, the near future will develop startling and profoundly interesting events. In that case the efforts of the European powers to patch up a peace will prove abortive [this was written in 1876, before the commencement of the war, and while the representatives of the powers were in conference]; the actual occupation of the revolted provinces [Bulgaria and Servia] by Russian troops will take place; England will oppose the Czar's progress with a sudden and tremendous onset in magnificent array, but without avail; Russian armies will victoriously cross the Balkans into Turkey, making a conquest of the European portion first, then pour triumphantly into Asia Minor, and reduce it to subjection, together with Egypt and Palestine. If Daniel's prophecy has been accurately interpreted, Russia is to become the autocratic colossus among the nations in the Old World within eighteen months from this date [Oct. 28, 1876], and then precipitately tumble into a vast and wonderful ruin."

The efforts to patch up a peace were abortive; Russia has occupied Bulgaria, and is ready to cross the Balkans in force. What will be the issue of the present negotiations none can tell.

—Inter Ocean.

REMEMBERING TOO LATE.

BY F. K. BEECHER.

SON, remember that thou in thy life-time receivedst thy good things; and likewise Lazarus evil things, but now he is comforted and thou art tormented (Luke 16: 25).

In the narrative related in this chapter from the 19-31 verse inclusive, the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God, who spoke as never man spoke, gives us in a brief, but positive manner, the life and death, eternal hereafter of two certain individuals, who lived in the world at one and the same time. It is however furnished by some of our modern deceivers, that is, for a fable, and not an actual occurrence; the blessed Savior gives it as a reality. Be this as it may, we are barely told in plain terms, what the state of the dead will be, beyond the grave, of both saint and sinner. This is however not saying that every be 220 will go to heaven, and that every man of wealth must of necessity go to hell; this is not the idea. The Psalmist says, "The wicked shall be turned into hell," (Ps. 9: 17). And the Almighty says, "Say to the righteous, that it shall be well with them" (Isa. 61: 10). Thus we see that it is the wicked, and those that forget God, that go to hell, whether rich or poor, and the righteous, whether prince or beggar, that shall go to glory.

The two now described in the narrative, the one was a great and rich man of the world; the other was a poor invalid, sick and sore; the one had great possessions, he had all that a carnally-minded, sinful heart could desire, the other had not where to lay and rest his weary head; the one was arrayed in all the pomp, and style, and fashions of the world, the other had not to shield himself from the stormy blast; the one had his table spread, and bled down with sumptuous meals, dainty dishes, and full cups, every day, the other had not where-with to stay his hunger; the one was a high-minded, haughty, proud man of the world, the other was an humble child of God. To be brief, the one had sown according to the flesh, the other according to the spirit, and the sequel will show what the harvest produced. "He that soweth to the flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the spirit, shall of the spirit reap life everlasting" (Gal. 6: 8).

Had the blessed Savior given us no more of this narrative than the three first verses 19, 20, 21, all the world would say that the rich man's case was the best, as he was rich, was clothed in the most fashionable attire that wealth could procure, and fared sumptuously every day of his life, he had all this, and more at his command, he had never learned what want was. The other man was poor, and needy, had to beg for crumbs, had not wherewith to satisfy his wants, and to clothe his body; besides this, he was sick, and full of sores, he had no one to befriend him, but dogs. "Moreover the dogs came and licked his sores." This is all the relief that we are told of, that the poor saint had administered to him, while laying at the rich man's gate. "And it came to pass that the beggar died." Death came to the poor saint's relief, he was now relieved of his sores, he had no more use of dogs to lick his sores, he no more begged for crumbs; we have no more account of his burial, yet we presume he was buried, without any great display being made. Let this be as it may, whether he received honorable sepulture or not, heavenly messengers, bright shining angels were in waiting for him at his departure out of this world, and conveyed him on the wings of the wind, away yonder, afar off out of reach of the wicked, into everlasting glory and happiness. "Where the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest." "Where the morning stars sing together, and all the sons of God shout for joy." "There is no more hunger thirst, heat nor frost, pain nor sorrow to endure. Nothing but peace, joy, honor and glory to be enjoyed at the right hand of God, in the presence of the once crucified Lamb, and glorified saints for ever and ever, through the endless ages of eternity. Where they sing:

"When we've been there, ten thousand years,
Bright as the sun,
We will be singing God's praise,
From when we first began."

The rich man also died, and was buried. Yet verily, the great and rich men of the world must also die, all their grandeur, wealth, pomp, style and worldly honor, cannot save them from death. "It is appointed unto men once to die" (Heb. 9: 27).

"Oh ye young, ye gay, ye proud,
You are dead, and wear the shroud
Then you'll cry and want to be Happy in eternity."

Beyond the grave, where do we find this once great man of the world. Jesus tells you in hell. O misery of miseries! But a few days prior to his death he was arrayed in all the splendor of the world, and now in hell, in torment. He now began to look around, realizing the awful condition his misspent life brought to his demon companions, could give him neither relief nor comfort. He now lifts up his eyes, and behold, away yonder afar off, at a great distance from hell, he seeth Lazarus, that once despised beggar, in glory and happiness, crowned with honor and majesty, he now begins to cry and pray, saying, father Abraham have mercy on me, send Lazarus, send him quickly; for I am suffering such torment here in the flames, send him with a drop of water, to cool my parched tongue. The answer was, son remember, that thou hast had all thy good things in thy lifetime; remember, that thou hast lavished them upon thy lusts; remember also that prayers from hell are to late. Remember, that while you lived in the world, and should have been engaged in prayer and serving God, thou hast been engaged in serving thy lusts, in revelry and carousing. Remember, also, how often you were warned, and entreated by the ministers of God, to leave off sinning, and to turn in with the overtures of bleeding mercy. Remember, how often you scorned the message from heaven, when the minister, with a broken heart, and eyes streaming with tears, was pleading with you, setting life and death before you, in unmistakable terms. Remember, how often you declared that you did not believe that there was a hell for the wicked to be punished in, but now also, Remember that you are in hell, that your prayers will avail you nothing but disappointment and anguish of soul. "And besides all this, between us and you there is a great gulf fixed; so that they which would pass from hence to you, cannot."

Remember that there is no possibility of passing this gulf, it is a great gulf, a fixed gulf, it is fixed by the decree of Almighty God, it cannot be pass-over, it cannot be bridged over. Although his holiness, the Pope of Rome, has been engaged for more than a thousand years, in constructing with purgatory, a bridge across this great gulf, but he has failed, and ever will fail. There is still another class who attempted to construct a bridge across this impassable gulf with final restoration, their material being no better than the Pope's purgatory, and consequently they have failed; and all others that may make the attempt, will most assuredly fail, the Almighty so decreed it, "That they cannot pass over."

COVERING SIN.

BY JOHN CALVIN BACHT.

But that covereth his sins shall not prosper; but whose confesseth and forsaketh them, shall have mercy" (Prov. 28: 13).

"Sin is the transgression of the law," and the world is full of it. "The whole world lieth in wickedness" (1 John 5: 19). We need not look far, within or without, at ourselves or others, until we see it in all of its ramifications, gradations, and accumulations. "There is none righteous, no, not one." "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God" (Rom. 3: 19, 23).

My text mentions two ways of disproving of sin. Covering it, or confessing it. The first is the most popular, and it is the theme of this essay. In our next we shall treat of confession.

There are various ways of trying to cover sin, but as yet none have been devised to successively hide it from mortal ken, much less from the eye of Him with whom we have to do. For as the old adage goes, "Be sure your sin will find you out."

Among the various ways of covering sin we notice,

1. Covering with lies. Cain tried it in the case of his brother Abel's murder, but the Lord knew all about it, and rewarded him according to his works (Gen. 4: 9). Gehazi, servant of the prophet Elisha tried to cover his covetousness by lying. His reward was leprosy to him and his seed forever (2 Kings 5: 20, 27). And when we come to apostolic times, we have an Ananias and a Sapphira, who lied unto the Holy Ghost, but they verily did not prosper. Death was the penalty (Acts 5: 1, 10). Many use this covering, to hide their sins, in times as in all others. The robber, the murderer, the whoremonger, and many others commit their crimes under the dark shades of night, and then try to cover them with the darker covering of lies, but all to no purpose. Sin has too many symptoms, too foul a smell, is of too uneasy nature to be confined under this, or any other selfish covering.

2. By blaming others. This was the way our foreparents did in Eden's garden. Adam blamed Eve; Eve, the serpent. Saul blamed the people for the violation of the divine decree in reference to the Amalekites, but the Almighty condemned their covering, and condemned their actions or sins. This covering is much in vogue in the present age, but prosperity no more attends it now, than it did in those olden days of yore.

3. By Comparison. For instance if we are charged with a certain fault, we instantly recollect that such a brother does so and so, and that is worse than we have done. This covering is entirely "too thin." Two wrongs never make one right; neither do two hundred make one. "For if every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward, how shall we escape if we?" "Go and do likewise."

4. By mutual consent. To illustrate, brother A. offends brother B. Brother B. informs brother A. of the offense. Says brother A., "you have done infinitely worse," and then proceeds to inform brother B. of the nature of his crime. "And," continues he, "if you proceed against me, I will proceed against you. But if you will drop it, and say no more about it, I will also." Agreed to.

This is what I call covering sin by mutual consent. They did not confess their sins. They did not forgive and forget. They merely dropped or covered them. Thus each went on his way unrepentant, and unforgotten. And for brethren to bring accusations of a public character against other brethren, and for these brethren to return the compliments and bring other accusations of which each and all are more or less guilty, and then not to confess their faults to one another, and acknowledge the errors of their ways, and offer the olive branch of peace to each other, but to squish the whole affair, is to say the least, doing that upon which the blessing of God will not descend. "Who hath ears to hear let him hear!"

They are never alone who are accompanied by noble thoughts.

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. R. MOORE, S. H. BASHOR, M. M. ESHELMAN, EDITORS.

THE BRETHERN AT WORK will be sent post-paid, to any address in the United States or Canada, for $1.50 per annum. Those sending ten names and $15.00, will receive an extra copy free of charge.

MOORE, BASHOR & ESHELMAN, Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., JANUARY 24, 1878.

THE address of Bro. HENRY TROVEL has been changed from Gordonsville, Texas, to Post Oak, Clay Co., Texas.

THE debate between Bro. STEIN and Eld. D. B. RAY, will not likely take place until some time in February. Due notice will be given of time and arrangements.

WILL our readers send us the address of every brother or sister who is not taking the BRETHERN AT WORK? We wish to send each of them a sample copy of the paper.

BROTHERS D. E. PRICE and J. C. LADMAN are now in Wisconsin preaching. This mission field has become quite interesting, and the prospects for a large ingathering of souls are said to be good.

Up to the time of going to press the weather is beautiful, being more like Spring than Winter. Very little snow has fallen here this season, though we have had considerable rain and much mud.

BROTHER C. F. DETWILER, a talented young man, was recently called to the ministry in the Oakland church, Tenn. The Lord bless him in his new sphere of labor, and make him useful in bringing souls to Christ.

UNDER date of Jan. 15th, a brother at Waynesboro, Pa., informs us that Bro. Bashor and wife had arrived there, and that meetings were in progress. Congregations large, interest and attention good. Hope their visit may be pleasant, and productive of much good to precious souls.

THE Brethren in Ashland county, Ohio, are having a refreshing season this Winter. Numbers have been added to the church, thus causing much rejoicing among the saints. God grant that they may be as successful in contending for "glory, honor and immortality" as they have been in adding to the church such as should be saved.

WE call attention to the article in another column, entitled "The Appeal for Help." Bro. PECK is a minister, and has resolved to do his part towards responding to some of the calls for ministerial aid. He has a desirable property, and any one looking for a home in this section of the country should give him a call. We write this because we think Bro. Peck's resolution a good one, and may, if carried out, accomplish a great amount of good.

WHILE getting out this issue, the office was in a disordered condition, having made some changes, preparatory to putting in a steam engine. We hope, therefore, our readers will bear with us should the matter not be so very interesting this week. Bro. Moore was absent part of the time, having been to Chicago to purchase type, engine, &c., and the amount of labor is such that one person cannot well do it without missing some points.

NOT often that we need to repent of having said too little. Tears and bitterness often, because we said too much. Never regret our patience under insult and scorn, but sorrow oft because of our haste and resentment. No heart-breaking and pining because we treated our fellow-man with love and respect, but plenty of poverty within because of our rudeness. No mourning because we helped to care for the sick, and eased their dying moments, but abundance of anguish because we did too little. No "lean-ness of soul" because we helped our poor brother, and sympathized with him in his troubles, but plenty of "poverty of heart" because of our selfishness. On all sides, on every hand, regrets and sorrows strike us because we did not as the Master teaches. Will we turn just where He turned, walk as He walked, be rich in love and good works, or will we go on in the ways of the world and suffer the torments of the damned?

AT this season of the year, when many changes are being made in subscriptions, and hundreds of letters must be handled, mistakes will occur. This we believe most of our readers understand, and are ever ready to exercise patience, if all things do not move along smoothly. Should any of our subscribers, however, fail to receive the paper promptly, notify us at once by postal card or letter. Do not wait three or four weeks, for it would be better that you receive two papers of one issue than none. We want every subscriber to receive his paper and enjoy it.

CONSIDERABLE stir has been made in the religious world over the position that SWINN, BEECHER and some others have taken on the subject of everlasting punishment. God says of certain characters, "They shall go away into everlasting punishment." Again, "I am alive forevermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and death." We know that there is death, and God says He has the key of it. The same God says He has the key of hell. Now if there be no hell, according to BEECHER, why speak of its key? Let God be true, even if every man should be a liar.

NEARLY every letter contains some kind, complimentary reference to the BRETHERN AT WORK, and we feel that you sufficiently appreciate our position to excuse us for not publishing them all. God will take care of the results. However we feel grateful to you for your words of sympathy and comfort, and are always glad to receive them, for editors need encouragement as well as others. You can help us; in fact our interests are one, and if we labor together in unity, the world will be the better for it. We shall aim, as heretofore, to give you good food—food that has in it the life of Him who died and lived for us. We desire to work in His name, according to His directions, and in harmony with His whole counsel. Let every pen, hand, foot, tongue, and body strive to do likewise.

NOW since there has been a change in the weather, the roads in better condition for traveling, we hope to hear of meetings being held in all parts of the country. We do not believe in being inactive, but as our Master ever was, vigilant, careful and judicious, moving on the enemy's works. We want to hear of the result of your meetings, what the Lord did for you, your hopes and joys, all to the honor and glory of Him who hath called us with a high calling in Christ Jesus. In apostolic times, the result of the Lord's doings among the people was heralded forth to cheer the saints and urge them to steadfastness of faith. The joyful news of sinners returning will have the same effect on us, if not mixed too much with "chaff," hence we earnestly request brethren and sisters to keep our readers informed as to the progress of the work in their respective congregations.

A REMARKABLE BOOK

IT is as old as the Bible, yet not the Bible. It is not inspired, yet it has lived in all ages of the world. It reads the same, from the bottom to the top. It may be read backwards without destroying the sense. It teaches no good thing, yet is widely read, was never translated, yet more or less known among all nations, tribes or kindred of the earth; when lost, is easily found, and when found, not easily lost. "What is it?" says one. "Well, it is no value, yet much used; whenever torn, mends itself; no new editions ever appear, though its numbers never diminish. Each person who owns one, increases and decreases its pages at will. It is neither bought nor sold in the markets, though its circulation is immense. Schools do not use it, yet it is there in abundance; was not designed for churches, not recommended by the Lord to His people, yet very frequently found among them. "Well, well," say you, "what is it? Tell its name."

On the outside of the first cover you will find "SUPPOSITION;" on the last, "EVIL SURMISINGS." The first chapter is devoted to the "Value of Suspicion," the second on the "Importance of Envy," and the third on the "Worth of Jealousy." Several pages are devoted to "Back-biting," "Wrath," "Strife," "Emulations," and "Love of Self." As before stated, it reads the same backwards as forwards, and is well adapted to the taste of the reader. Not kept at this office. M. M. E.

BOTH WENT INTO THE WATER.

SOME years ago, in the rural districts of Pa., a pedo-baptist evangelist conducted several very successful series of meetings, and at each place allowed his converts, as usual, to select their own way of being baptized. At the one, of which we speak more particularly, a young lady from a Baptist family, requested to be immersed, but the preacher objected, saying, sprinkling would do just as well, besides immersion was not decent, and he would catch cold if he went in the water, and he would not baptize her, unless by sprinkling or pouring.—The lady refused, saying, if he would not immerse her, that she would go to the Baptists.

This was a stunner for the good brethren, until one of them said, as the sister was from a very influential and wealthy family, it would not do to lose her, and if Bro. — would agree to immerse her, if it was arranged so that he need not enter the water, he thought all could be arranged satisfactorily.

The preacher agreed to the proposition, and a day was appointed in which to attend to the rite. When it was announced how the baptism was to be performed, many went out of curiosity. Among them a very old lady, who stood near the water, and when the minister came, a long slab was brought, with long legs in one end. This bench was now adjusted, one end on the bank, the other end in the stream, thus forming a scaffold on which the minister walked high and dry as he led the penitent into the water.

The formula was repeated: "I baptize thee in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Then,—just as he made the motion to immerse,—his scaffold broke, and he came down into the water up to the waist.

Just as the excitement was over and the minister was trying his best to recover, the old lady on the shore clapped her hands, saying: "That's the way my Bible reads: 'They both went down into the water!'"

It is only necessary to remark, that notwithstanding the minister ruined his broadcloth, many on the bank learned a good lesson.

THE CONTRAST.

THERE can be no contrasting without two things. The two things to be contrasted in this article, are God and man. "I am the Almighty God" and "God is greater than man," there cannot be a greater without a lesser. If there be a lesser, then there is a greater. If there be a difference, then there is also a dependent, and there can be no dependent without something to depend upon; hence there is an independent.

- 1. There is a subordinate,—that is man.
2. There is a superior,—that is God.
3. Man can originate nothing.
4. Man was originated, and since man cannot originate anything, and was himself originated, it follows, there must be an originator.
5. All things in existence show arrangement, hence there must be an arranger. It is God. There must be a creator of harmony before there can be harmony.

Thus in tracing all matter to its origin, we find God there. "Without Him was not anything made that was made." Before anything was made, it was planned. Before the plan was executed it was a thought, and there can be no thought without a person. God, therefore is a person.

Materialists claim, that we do not know that there was not "a second God who designed the first God, and a third that designed the second," and so on. "A design must have had a designer, and this designer a designer; for every design is to have a designer." Lyman Beecher was once approached by his students with the question, how they should answer skeptics who told them that the argument from design proved too much: "They say to us," said the students, "that there may be twenty gods; for every design must have a designer, and every designer a designer, and so on." Lyman did not know how to meet the difficulty in a scientific way, or at least he did not give them the scientific answer: "These men say there are twenty gods?" "Yes," "Well, you tell them that if there is one God it will go hard with them, and if there are twenty it will go harder yet."

In many things man is like God, having been created in His likeness and image. God thinks; so does man. God talks; so does man. God moves, reasons; so does man. But there is a limit to man's power; there is none to God's. Man wears out, and dies; God does not. Man is earthy; God spiritual. Man is dependent; God independent. Man needs a Savior; God does not. God is in all, above all; man is not. Man is the subject; God the Lord. Man needs grace; God does not. God can pardon; man needs it. God calls; man can't listen. God loves; so can man. God asks man to believe Him. Man can do what God asks of Him. God sent a Savior to man; man never sent a Savior to God, for He needs none. No Savior ever died for God; one died for man.

The contrast between God and man is so great that any unclouded eye can see it. The open eye beholds it with awe and reverence; the closed eye sees a faint light, but is powerless to discriminate. The believer not only looks over walls, but through them. To them the Sun of righteousness affords light enough for all times and seasons. Keep God above you, let the Christ stand beside you, and walk with you, and the victory through Him will be complete.

M. M. E.

QUERIST'S DEPARTMENT.

Questions touching the meaning of Scripture, relating to history and practical subjects of religious interest will come in place. The querist's name must accompany all communications. We shall labor to avoid giving any just occasion for strife and contention over unimportant questions.

Brethren Editors:—

I want you or some one else to give an explanation of the 15th, 16th and 17th verses of the 18 chapter of Matthew. What is the difference between the words "the," and "thou?" JOHN B. ELLER.

The word the is by some called a "Definite Article," because it points out some definite object or thing, as: The man, the field. Others call it a "Specifying Adjective," because it specifies or notes some particular thing. Both definitions are correct, being similar. The word the is never used to denote the name of a person or thing.

The word thou is a simple, personal pronoun, second person, and usually refers to some individual of the human family. In the Bible the word thou is used instead of the word you. Read the verses named with the word you instead of thou, and you will get our idea. We now turn to the Emphatic Doublt and give the verses as translated by Wilson:

"Now, if thy brother be in error, go, convict him, between thee and him alone. If he hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother. But if he hear thee not, take with thee one or two more; that by the testimony of two or three witnesses, everything may be proved. But if he disregard them, inform the congregation, and if he disregard the congregation also, let him be to thee as a pagan and tribute-taker."

When a case, according to the Scripture has been brought before the congregation, it has reached its third stage, and must there be disposed of; for there is no religious judiciary on earth higher than the church, and the church has no law save "the perfect law of liberty."—By this all cases must be adjusted, if we would please the Lord.

The case being presented to the church, every member is more or less affected; for "whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it" (1 Cor. 12: 26). If, after a fair and impartial hearing, the offender does not hear the church, then the congregation is empowered to hold him as a heathen—an unconverted man, not because he would not hear the offended brother, nor the two or three, but because he disregards the church. And for precisely the same reason is the offended brother to consider him as an unconverted man, not to have Christian fellowship with him.

Great care should be exercised in the adjustment of difficulties that are brought before the church. Self-interest, partiality, malice, ill-will are no more qualified to sit in judgment than thieves and murderers, but are themselves subjects of judgment.

M. M. E.

THE APPEALS FOR HELP.

THE appeals for ministerial help the past year have been numerous, and I fear but few have been heeded. In the last week's issue of the BRETHREN AT WORK, I again noticed a call for help in Kansas.

S. J. PECK,

Lynch, Ill.

ANNUAL MEETING NOTICE.

NOTICE is hereby given to the Brethren of Indiana, that there will be a State Council meeting, the Lord willing, on Friday the 8th of February 1878, commencing at 9 o'clock A. M., in the Sparrow Creek meeting-house near Hoan, Wabash Co., Ind., for the purpose of making further arrangements for the Annual Meeting.

Eld. J. S. ROSENBERGER.

Monticello, Ind., Jan. 17th, 1878.

TO YOUNG BRETHREN AND SISTERS.

BY JOHN FORNEY.

NEAR ye not therefore, ye are of more value than many sparrows" (Matt. 10:31). The above are words of consolation which Christ gave to His disciples, when He first separated them from the world, and called them into His service, to go forth as sheep in the midst of wolves, to have them know that He is their Shepherd, that is caring for them, as well as to have them know that they are exposed to danger on every hand; but they should be the latter prepared to watch and pray, that they fall not into temptation.

My young brethren and sisters in Christ, let me say to you by way of encouragement, but not when you suffer a little persecution. Just let us remember Christ our Master. He was persecuted before us. It tempted, we know He was tempted in all points as we are, yet without sin. I say to you, sin not when you are tempted, let us take Jesus for our example. When He was baptized, the spirit immediately led Him into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil; but He did not give Satan's bidding.

But He is able and willing to help you in time of need. (Heb. 1:15, 18). For in that He himself hath suffered, being tempted, He is able to succor them that are tempted" (Heb. 2:18). "For ye were as sheep going astray; but are now returned unto the Shepherd and Bishop of your souls" (1 Pet. 2:25). Therefore remember Christ said, "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me; and I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any pluck them out of my hand" (John 10:27-29). Here brethren and sisters, is a sure anchor for all His children, for He so loved you that He laid down His life for you. "I am the good Shepherd. The good Shepherd giveth his life for the sheep" (John 10:11). Young lambs, I pray you all, keep close to the flock and to the good Shepherd; He will protect you if ye abide in the fold with the flock, and with the Shepherd and Bishop of your souls. If the world should hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you. "If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you" (John 15:18, 19).

My dearly beloved, do not try to be conformed to this world to please the world, or to be a friend of it in that way; if so you are sure to become the enemy of God. (James 4:4). "For that which is highly esteemed among men, is abomination in the sight of God" (Luke 16:15). But He giveth more grace, wherefore He saith, "God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble" (John 4:6).

May the Holy Spirit guide you into all truth and grace to serve God acceptably with reverence and Godly fear, is my prayer. Amen.

VALUE OF TIME.

BY M. E. HORSER.

LET me call your attention to the importance of improving your time. The infinite value of time is not realized. It is the most precious thing in all the world, the only thing of which it is a virtue to be covetous, and yet the only thing of which all men are prodigal.

In the first place, then

READING

is a most interesting and pleasant method of occupying your leisure hours. All young people have or may have time enough to read. The difficulty is, they are not careful to improve it. Their hours of leisure are either idled away or talked away, or spent in some other way equally vain or useless, and then they complain that they have no time for the cultivation of their minds and hearts.

Time is so precious that there is never but one moment in the world at once, and that is always taken away before another is given. Only take care to gather up the fragments of time, and you will never want leisure for the reading of useful books. And in what way can you spend your unoccupied hours more pleasantly than in holding converse with the wise and the good through the medium of their writings? To a mind and altogether devoid of curiosity, books form an inexhaustible source of enjoyment.

It is a consideration of no small weight, that reading furnishes material for interesting and useful

CONVERSATION.

Those who are ignorant of books, must of course have their thoughts confined to very narrow limits. What occurs in their immediate neighborhood, the state of the market, the idle report, the tale of scandal, the foolish story, these make up the circle of their knowledge and furnish the topics of their conversation. They have nothing to say of importance because they know nothing of importance.

A taste for useful reading is an effectual preservative from vice. Next to the fear of God implanted in the heart, nothing is a better safeguard to character, than the love of good books. They are the handmaidens of virtue and religion. They quicken our sense of duty, unfold our responsibilities, strengthen our principles, confirm our hopes, inspire in us the love of what is right and good, and teach us to look with disgust upon what is low, grovelling and vicious. A diligent use of the means of knowledge accord well with your nature as rational and immortal beings. God has given you minds, which are capable of infinite improvement. He has placed you in circumstances peculiarly favorable for making such improvement, and to inspire you with diligence in ascending the shining course before you. He points you to the prospect of an endless existence beyond the grave.

Brighton, Ind.

CHRISTMAS DAY.

BY ENOCH EBY.

"GLORY to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will towards men" (Luke 2:14).

The above text of Scripture was the language of a multitude of the heavenly host at the time and place of our Savior's birth. Shepherds would not likely be out with their flocks last night or to-day in Denmark; yet around Bethlehem they may have been.

From the above consideration many doubt the propriety of spending the 25th day of Dec. in memory of that great event, fearing they may be deceived in the correctness of the time, who attach more importance to time than the event recorded.

Times and seasons have changed more or less since that time, as was predicted; but that does not affect the truthfulness of the language of the angel, which said: "The joy shall be to all people." The heavenly host said: "On earth peace, good will towards men." He has brought joy to many people, but not to all, for the Jews and many others would not receive him. He also was peace to many, but not to all (save for the Adamic sin, he made peace with God for all). Christ Himself said: "I came not to send peace on earth but a sword" (Matt. 10:34).

Only those who received and do receive Him, have peace of mind, which is the answer of a good conscience towards God. But the peace of mind of a few does not bring peace on the earth and never will till the Savior comes again; and the devil, instead of walking up and down in the earth, often spoiling the peace of many of God's children, and hissing the nations at one another, causing thousands to butcher each other like lions and tigers,—will be bound and shut up in the bottomless pit, and for one thousand years will have no power over the nations. Then there will be universal peace; O, glorious thought! The nations shall then beat their swords into plough shares; and their spears into pruning hooks, and will learn war no more (Is. 2:3). One can't learn well without a teacher.

Then the peace will be so great, that the lion shall lay down with the lamb, and a little child shall lead them, etc (Isa. 11). And in that day nothing shall hurt or destroy in all my holy mountain, for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea. Then in those days shall the God of Heaven set up another, or a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, and shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever (Dan. 2:44).

Then the great voices in heaven will, and can say: The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever (Rev. 11:15). And although the nations will get angry (verse 18), and even make war with him (Rev. 19:19), but the day of his wrath has come and the time of the dead that they should be judged, and that he should give reward unto his servants, the prophets, and to the saints, and to them that bear His name, both small and great, and that he should destroy them which destroy or corrupt the earth.

Mark, the reward is given to the prophets and saints at the same time, and that is, when Christ comes to reign on the earth. "Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his works shall be" (Rev. 22:12). For he "shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom" (2 Tim. 4:1).

How very suggestive to the children of God who have hope in the promises, are the words in the Lord's prayer: "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." The sentiment contained in the above words is the prayer breathed forth by every one that has the spirit of Christ, yet, Lord Jesus, come quickly.

Seeing then, dearly beloved, that we look for such things, let us be diligent, that we may be found of him without spot and blameless; for in such an hour as we think not, the master of the house may come" and finding us lacking oil, will consequently close the door against us; or we be found with our talent wrapped up in a napkin, and therefore bound hand and foot and cast into outer darkness, where there is weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth.

"Not all that say: Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but they that do the will of our Father which is in heaven." It is possible for us to have a name that we are living, and at the same time be dead. The Lord wants lively stones in the spiritual house; it will not do simply to believe in the second advent of our blessed Redeemer, and the fulfillment of His glorious promises in setting up His reign, and making all things new, and to pray, "Thy kingdom come," is not enough; we must act accordingly and show that we are pilgrims and strangers on the earth, seeking a better country, a city, whose maker and builder is God.

The people of the kingdom of Denmark hold this day, (Christmas) very sacred, having worship at all the churches, and all the business doors closed. No work is done by anybody, while Sunday is utterly disregarded by many, especially the non-professors, some of whom are working all day, and all business doors are opened from 4 o'clock P. M. till bed-time. The habit of presenting gifts to one another is also prevalent, but not so much vanity connected with it, as in America. To-day, 26th, is held as sacred as yesterday.

Hjorring, Denmark.

RAILWAY CARRIAGES PREDICTED BY ISAIAH.

(Isa. 66:20.)

Dr. Joseph Wolff, the celebrated Jewish missionary, addressed a letter to the Morning Post, in the year 1854, in which he says:

"I saw in your paper of last Saturday, the question addressed to the learned, whether the translation of the words 'swift beasts,' in Isa. 66:20 is correct. I answer No! The word in Hebrew is kirkaroth, from the singular number of karkar; whence our English word carriage is evidently derived. And the late Rev. Mr. Hamilton, a learned clergyman in Ireland, who had learned Hebrew from books, without knowing the real pronunciation, gave to the Hebrew word the sound of carriages. The Arabian lexicographer, Kamus, as well as Richardson, in his Arabic dictionary, translates the word kirkaroth, 'machine turning round with the swiftness of the clouds.'

Cardinal Mezzofanti, the greatest polyglot upon earth, in all times and in all countries, who read with me the 66th chapter of Isaiah, when passing through Bologna, in April, 1818, translated kirkaroth, carrozze, i.e. carriages. I, therefore, am convinced that coil carriages have been predicted in this chapter.

St. Jerome more correctly translates it in carrois, i.e. in carriages.

The Osbeks in Bokhara, and the Circassians of Merse, call their swift carts karkaroth.

Mesrop, the greatest man of the Armenian nation, the celebrated translator of the Bible, translates it swift carriages.

Luther translates it karren, i.e. swift run-ners. The very word in Hebrew, Arabic, Turcomanish, evidently is an imitation of the sound produced by the turning of wheels—karkaroth, being myself a humble student of prophecy, I was very much interested in the question of the inquirer."—Baptist Bathing.

THE EASTERN WAR.—The Russians having captured 25,000 Turks at Shabla Pass, the Turkish Government begins to see its weakness, and has sent ambassadors to arrange terms of peace. The Grand Duke Nicholas notified them that he could only treat with them at Adrianople, to which the Turks at once assented, and withdrew their troops. The Turks in the meantime are retreating towards Constantinople, burning their principal cities as they evacuate them. It is hoped that peace may soon be restored and the horrors of war discontinued.

VICTOR EMANUEL'S FUNERAL.—The funeral of Victor Emmanuel took place at Rome on the 17th inst. The body of the dead monarch was placed on the funeral car at nine in the morning, and the procession started at the Quirinal about ten. It was headed by fifteen military detachments, with three bands, and the clergy bearing tapers.

The Home Circle.

READ AND OBEY.

"Husbands, love your wives."
"Wives, obey your husbands."
"Children, obey your parents in all things."

Edited by M. M. Eshelman.

ALWAYS seek the riches of Christ Jesus.

NEVER say, "I won't" to your parents. The bright "I will" never brings gray hairs upon the heads of father and mother.

Your love for others never hurt them. If it did them no good, it was because their heads and hearts were wrong. It is hard to find comfort among thorns. They do not even make good shade.

As you daily learn from our Master, my little friends, remember that Jesus does not say, "Give me quarter or half of your heart, but the whole of it." God calls for full possession—all of it, or none.

WHEN any one gets so full of his own plans and improvements, he will forsake God. Of course he will. He does not feel the need of a Savior. Not until he sees his nakedness and poverty will he ask help from so good a being as God.

CHILDREN, read the Bible. Do not only read it, but study it, remember its lessons and practice them. Other books may afford you pleasure, but none so great and lasting as the Bible. It tells you all you need to know about salvation.

If any man should throw away a dollar every minute, he would be considered foolish; but thousands are constantly throwing away their time, which is more valuable than gold, and yet they pass for wise men. Things are not always as they seem.

UZZIAH or Azariah (strength of Jehoahaz) was the tenth king of Judah. At the age of sixteen he ascended the throne, and reigned for a period of fifty-two years. Under his rule the kingdom attained great strength and prosperity. "As long as he sought the Lord, God made him to prosper." He began to govern Judah about the year 810 before Christ.

A BROTHER writes: "The letters you publish from the little boys and girls seem to be very interesting to the children. Our son, only nine years old, urges me to read them to him. I also read him the letters from grandpa, and the boy, which caused him to weep for some time, wishing that he could write."

This is a sample of the many letters received, expressing the pleasure which children have in reading words of love from each other. They need a place in the paper as well as older people, and trust they may be made better by having the privilege of speaking.

With the following named little friends please write a short article on the Bible subject opposite their names, and send it to us for publication?

- J. Rattenour, Schwenksville, Pa.
Noah
Ella E. Snavely, Hudson, Ill.
Mel
Ella W. Lohman, Franklin Grove, Ill.
Hannah
Bla Clemmer, Mt. Carroll, Ill.
Eve
Ella Berkeleyale, Toledo, O.
Joshua
Emma J. Gable, Lost Nation Iowa.
Ruth
Tell us much about these persons as you can. Your papa and mamma will help you to find these names in the Bible.

Query. Who wrote "The Epistle to the Hebrews?"

It is generally supposed that Paul wrote it. The following is a part of the testimony in support of that idea:

1. Most of the ancient writers, a few of the Latins excepted, regarded Paul as the author. It was ascribed to him by Polycarp in 108, or about 43 years after it was written; by Clement in 191; Origen in 234; Dionysius in 217; Theognostus in 282, and scores of others at different periods down to 1670.

2. The agreement in style and phrase in some instances with other of Paul's writings. Compare Heb. 2:4 with Rom. 10:13, 14; 12:12; Also Heb. 13:18 with Rom. 13:20; Eph. 6:18; 1 Thess. 5:23; 2 Thess. 3:1. These are only a few instances of similarity. He wrote as a Hebrew to Hebrews, and is supposed to have withheld his name because they were suspicious of him and not a little prejudiced against him.

FAREWELL TO SADIE.

BY HATTIE MILLER.

BENEATH that mound our Sadie lies, Who once was with us here; God sent a summons from the skies, And claimed our Sadie, dear.

Yes, Sadie dear has gone to rest, With those who've gone before. And in her angel garment dressed, She stands on Zion's shore.

My loving cousin, Sadie dear, We can see you no more; But in spirit we may be near, As in the days of yore.

On earth when often we did meet, We found the passing moments sweet. But time's swift motions did compel Us bid you a long, long farewell.

Clarence, Iowa.

BOYS AND THEIR MOTHERS.

MOST boys need constant care from their mother. And the mother must learn to bear with the awkward and clumsy ways of her son. There exists a relationship between mother and son that it will not do to ignore by either. Sometimes boys are full of doubts, because they love to be independent. The best independence, however, is for all boys to love and respect their tender parent—their own dear mother. For such a boy there is always hope. The world is made better by having such boys in it.

But when a boy has lost his love and respect for his mother, he is in a bad road. He should be proud of his mother, that is, he should feel that it is an honor to have a mother who is always ready to help him, advise him, and encourage him up the rugged hill of life. And then too, mothers should ever remember that a son is full of weakness when he thinks he is strong. He don't run through the room, upset chairs and burn up the carpet so much because he can, as because he thinks it looks manly. That is just where he misses it. It is manly to be quiet in the house and to obey mother. It is manly to carry wood and water for her, to build the fire, clean butter and run errands when required.

Mothers, do not scold your boys. The desire to be independent strikes a boy at a very early age, and with this seed in his heart you have need of patience and forbearance. Never fan the spark into a flame by rudeness, scolding and fault-finding. When you see the "water beginning to boil," check it with coolness. Of course you do not need to be icy, but show yourself under full control, and your boy will be the wiser and the better for it. You need to dwell in the same house as mother and son—just what you really are, and peace will be plentiful in that mansion.

TO ALL THE CHILDREN AT WORK.

I LOVE to read all your little letters, for it looks as if you were working for Jesus. I am happy to see you all religiously inclined, and that is what I so much admire. I expect, from the tone of your letters, that you are all well behaved at church and Sabbath-school. You should be good at all times, but more especially in the Lord's house. I sometimes think that it is sorely disgusting in the eyes of the Lord, when children drag their feet in church and make unnecessary noise instead of being as quiet as possible, and change their seats and go in and out during services, or whisper and laugh. I will now tell you why I think such behavior displeasing to the Lord. I think all parents teach their children better than this, and then if they act in this way it is disobedience. And we read in the great and good Book, "Children obey your parents in all things; for this is well-pleasing unto the Lord." You see it is good to be obedient in all things. The Lord did not say He would be pleased with naughty children; so I know you will all try to please Jesus, while you are little, and then it will be very easy for you to obey Him when you are grown up.

I wish all of you dear little people could visit our Bethel once and see what good behaved little children we have here during church services. I am not boasting of our little folk, but then they should know that grown-up persons notice and appreciate the good conduct, and thus be encouraged; and the same is calculated to cause the children of other churches to take pattern; for we read, "Let us have no man better than he follow Christ." So when one child can pattern after another, that pattern after Jesus, as much as to show forth a meek and quiet spirit, they are safe. Then you see children, you are quite safe when you take your pattern after good, obedient children. But you should shun the rude, boisterous children. No, not shun them, but their ways. You should encourage them to leave off naughtiness and take up with all the good; try to get their parents to subscribe for the BROTHERS AT WORK, so that their children can enjoy the "Home Circle" as you do. If you cannot succeed in this, when you have finished reading the paper, give it to those that do not take it; thus it will be doing good.

Now little friends I have, this evening, taken time to give you some advice, and I hope you will all study it, and perhaps I will address you again. You may all know from this that I love all of you. I am a friend to you all.

REBECCA SNAVELY.

Hudson, Ill.

COME UNTO ME.

Dear Children:—

I PROMISED to tell you how you can come to Jesus. No doubt you have been told that Jesus is away up in the skies beyond the bounds of time and space. Then you hear the preacher say that Jesus is everywhere present and invites you to come to Him "just now," and these seemingly conflicting theories have so far confused your little minds, that you don't know what to do in the premises, don't even know just how you could come to Jesus if you were ever so willing to do so. Now let me assure you that not one of you is too little to come to Jesus, or perhaps I should say commence to come to Jesus. It is true that Jesus has gone away off into a far country personally, and has told us that he would come back again; but He is not gone beyond the bounds of time and space, because that would be simply nowhere. It is also true that He is, or at least can be everywhere present in spirit. What does that mean? It simply means that if your father would go to Denmark or some other foreign country, that his mind would often revert back to his pleasant home where he left his loving wife and dear children, that his wise counsels and good impressions would seem more vividly present now, than when he was with you, and if you are good children, and love him very much, his influence for good among you would not be very much diminished. This is what I understand by being present in spirit. Only this much more that Jesus is able to make His influence felt to a much greater degree among His children, than any of us could do among our children when personally absent.

But how can you come to Jesus when He is in a far country? and especially when you are too little to be baptized and join the church? My dear children, coming to Jesus is not the work of a moment, and does not consist in being baptized or joining the church. You may be too little to be baptized or join the church, but you cannot be too little to take the first step toward coming to Jesus.

Coming to Jesus is in reality, the work of a lifetime, terminating in that happy day when He will come again and receive us all into Himself, that where He is, there we may be also. Children, just as soon as you know the difference between obedience and disobedience, you are large enough and old enough to make the important first step toward coming to Jesus, for every time you do as your good parents bid you, you are obeying God, and taking one of the many necessary steps to complete the great journey to the golden City where Jesus and His holy angels dwell, and where all His good and obedient children will one day meet to part no more forever.

Being baptized and joining the church are by no means the first or the best steps in the journey, though necessary steps to be taken at the proper time. Then children, if you have not already taken the first step of obedience to parents and teachers, do so at once, keep on in the line of duty, and you will surely reach the celestial shores of everlasting bliss.

J. H. PRICK.

Linnick, Ill.

LIFE WASTED.

IT is a wonderful story, when the eye of life arrives, to be constrained to sigh, "I have lost a lifetime." God gave me one lifetime, and I was once in my power to spend it as Lydia and Priscilla spent the time Paul spent his, as Phileas spent hers. But now that only life is closing, and we are not how have I bestowed it? In making pin cushions and playing the piano, in paying morning calls and evening visits. And I? I have spent it in reading newspapers and novels, in dancing and singing songs, and telling diverting stories.

CHILDREN AT WORK.

To H. P. Brinkworth. — My Dear, Good Friend:—Your cards and poetry are to hand, and I thank you ever so much. I like you, too, because you are trying to teach the people of England to obey Jesus in all things. I feel so glad when I can read about our Savior. I want Jesus to bless you, and take care of you. He will if you ask Him. Your little friend, Vinnie Eshelman.

From Myley Miller. — Dear Editor:—You must have some little boys and girls of your own, for you know just what little people like. I am a little boy, and have a little sister Grace and brother Stephen. I left lots of playmates in Ill. when we came out here two years ago. Would like to hear from them. I like to get father and mother to tell me Bible stories. It was curious about the axe swimming.

From Ella Forney. — Dear Editor:—I cannot say that I have a dear mother to take care of me and give me good advice, for she died when I was only two years old, and now I am twelve. Dear children, who have kind mothers, you do not know how much you would miss them till they are gone; therefore treat them kindly. I live in Kansas with my sister. She has one little girl. My father lives in Nebraska, and he comes to see me often. He travels most of the time to preach. I go to school and to preaching too. The Brethren have preaching here every four weeks. There are no members here, only my sister and her husband. They would like to live where there are more brethren. Lyons, Kan.

From a Little Boy. — Dear Editor:—As you wish the little folk to write, I will try for the first time to write a few lines. I see in number fifty-one of the BROTHERS AT WORK, a question for the little folk about the son. The prodigal story was told by Jesus Christ, and He wanted them to learn from it the joy in heaven over the repenting sinner.

Phasant Mount, Ill.

From Anna D. Ashenbrenner. — Dear Editor: I belong to the church of Christ. Was baptized the 16th of June 1874. My dear friends, I will say to you that have not yet come to Christ, that it is sad. "To-day if you will hear his voice, harden not your hearts" (Heb. 3:7, 8, 15). It seems sometimes the more we try to do right, so much more the enemy works with us and tries to overcome us, but let us therefore "come boldly to the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy in time of need."

Garrison, Iowa.

From Katie A. Snavely. — I live about two miles from uncle Thomas. Do you know uncle Thomas? If not, it will not take you long to get acquainted with him. I know you would like him, for all who know him do. I go to meeting at the Bethel church. This is near Hudson. I hope I may see a letter in the Home Circle from Lizzie. I have three brothers and sisters that go to school. Hudson, Ill.

From Julia F. Arnold. — Dear Editor:—I am a little girl twelve years old. I am afflicted and cannot go to school. I like to read the BROTHERS AT WORK, and I like to read the letters from the little girls. I thought I would write one too. I have three brothers and three sisters; all in the church but me and Willie. I have a little sister dead, she is an angel. I like to go to meeting and hear the brethren preach. I never attended Sunday-school any, but I learn at home. Linnick, Iowa.

From Mariba J. Eisenhuse. It is with pleasure that I write these lines for the Home Circle. At Sunday-school today I recited two hundred and nine verses. I am happy to see that even the children are taking an interest in reading the papers published by the Brethren. It is also our duty to read the Holy Bible, for it is the book of God, and in it we are taught to love and obey God and our parents.

From Cassie Appelman. — Dear Brethren Editors: We take your paper and like it very much; and as we like to read church news I thought I would write some. Our church still prospers, but was very dull after my dear papa died, it is now reviving again. I go to church every two weeks. We live two miles from the meeting-house. I attend prayer meeting every week. We have about thirty-five young members here from twenty down to ten years of age.

Every day and every hour, Let me feel Thy cleansing power; May Thy tender love to me, Draw me closer Lord to Thee. Plymouth, Ind.

From Galesburg, Kansas.—On the evening of the 16th inst. at the usual place of meeting, an able discourse was preached by the son of our beloved elder. Three years ago he was elected to the ministry. Six months later he left us without an attempt to fill his office, but he has now returned to preach in the same school-house where he was educated. After singing and prayer, he arose and announced his text, "What have I done." He told us of what God has done for us, of what God has required of us to do etc.

He preached nine successive sermons and then suspended to go with his father (Eld. Sydney Hodglen) to attend a series of meetings in an adjoining county. We expect their return on the 13th of Jan. to continue our meeting, and hope to gather the golden seed that he has sown. The seed sown was good, and we believe some has fallen in well prepared ground.

When Bro. Hodglen was elected to the ministry, he was nineteen years old with a common school education. Many thought we had acted unwisely, but now the common remark is "Who would have thought that it was in that boy to make such a speaker." But he has only confirmed us in our belief, that ministers ought to be put to work while young. I do not mean, put to the housekeeping, for we have fathers to do that, but make the young men work in the ministry.

A MEMBER.

Dec. 30, 1877.

From Rosendale, Mo.—Dear Brethren: Bro. Jacob Honbarger commenced a series of meetings on the evening of the 14th inst. at what is known as the late school-house in Nodaway Co. The roads were bad and the weather cold. Bro. Honbarger proclaimed the Word in its purity to the anxious hearers, who turned out quite well, considering the inclemency of the weather. On last Sunday eleven made the good confession, and were baptized, and arose (we hope) to walk in newness of life. He baptized them in the view of a large crowd, who paid the very best attention.

Bro. Honbarger closed the meeting at that place, and came down into Andrew Co., and preached a sermon at Hickory Point. On Monday evening he took us farewell, and took the cars for home on Christmas morning. May God add his blessings to all that has been said and done.

WILLIS WHITE.

Dec. 27, 1877.

From Maple Grove Church, Ohio.—We commenced a series of meetings on the 5th inst. and continued until the 14th, having meeting every day and evening. We did not send off two or three hundred miles for a preacher, but invited two of our brethren from an adjoining church, H. S. Jacobs and William Diefer came to help us; after continuing the meeting one week, the interest seemed to increase and we gave an invitation so that if any wished to join in with the people of God, they should arise to their feet or otherwise make it known by coming forward. Eight came forward and desired to become the children of God. On Sunday morning two more made application, making ten in all.

Bro. D. N. Workman, of Ashland church, preached for us on Sunday forenoon and he volunteered to perform baptism; and oh, the scene at the water; some had collected there, perhaps out of curiosity to see these dear young converts go into the liquid stream made of snow and ice. Many tears were shed on the occasion and the scene will long be remembered. The joy we felt words cannot express, those our children coming into the fold before they have got so far into the wilderness of the world. We have had a fair increase since last harvest; have baptized twenty-two, mostly young persons. May God add his blessings to our little flock.

GROVER WOOD.

GLEANINGS.

From Jos. L. Myers. We now have meeting going on at John's Corner. Attendance good considering the condition of the roads. Bro. Geo. Zedler was with us over Sunday. Brethren J. J. Fannert and Levi French continued with us up to date. Bro. E. will leave this evening, while Bro. T. will stay awhile longer and continue holding forth the Word of Truth. Hope much good may be done. — St. Louis, Ill. Dec. 19th, 1877.

From J. W. Steiu. I see you made a mistake in the heading of correspondence between Cunningham and myself. He is a Campbellite, not a Baptist. In my remark, "a peculiarity of baptism," should have been, "a peculiarity of Babylon."

From Enoch Eby.—Christmas day quite stormy; high wind with a little snow; not cold. Brethren Hope and Eckelsten went about twenty miles North along the sea coast, to hold meetings; we declined, having to go on foot. Calls for preaching still increasing. East Sunday there were two appointments about twenty miles apart. Our health is still good, and the brethren and sisters are in good health as far as I know. Our mail has not been very regular for some time. We are looking anxiously for another paper, and several letters. Hope they will soon come. Love to all. — Hjorring, Denmark, Dec. 26, 1877.

From D. B. Sturgis.—I hope to soon prepare some articles for your valuable paper, which I prize very highly. Hope it may have a very extensive circulation, not only among the Brethren, but it should be read by the so-called popular Christian denominations, as well as non-professors.—South Bend, Ind.

From Levi Hoffert.—Our dear brethren Fadely and Ives came to our midst on the 7th inst and preached for us a few sermons. Truly the Brethren shunned not to declare the whole counsel of God. We had no additions by baptism during the meetings; but blessed be God, two members were again restored to the church. We trust the members were built up and encouraged to continue faithful in the cause of our Master. May God reward our Brethren for their labors. — Corleton, Neb., Jan. 13th, 1878.

From M. D. Benton.—Our meeting-house is situated one and one-half miles north of Bloomville, Ohio. Our church is in a prospering condition, having received, during the past year eleven by baptism and reclaimed one, making in all twelve. May the good work go on, and may many sons and daughters be brought into the fold of Christ. — Hickory, O., Dec. 17th, 1877.

From B. F. Stamp.—Not having gone to meeting to-day on account of cold weather, I will try and write a few lines for your paper. We appreciate your noble effort in distributing the glad tidings of salvation; warning the sinner and cheering the pilgrim on his way. We expect ministering Brethren from Kansas, to hold meeting in our neighborhood this week, viz: brethren Merica Luyenbeel and Fadely. We hope much good may be done. — Davenport, Neb. Jan. 6th, 1878.

From I. Price.—We had meeting several days at Green Tree. Eleven baptized last Sunday. Likewise a meeting in the Coventry church—Lawrenceville Branch. Baptism to-morrow at the Home meeting-house, and on Friday at Lawrenceville, in Chester Co., Pa. Thirty-five names sent me as candidates for baptism on those four days. Meeting to continue all this week.

From Henry W. Strickler.—It has seemed good to me to write you a few lines in the way of introducing myself to you; thinking perhaps you are not so well acquainted with me as I am with you. Knowing therefore the delicacy of so many brethren, I would simply suggest a further and more thorough acquaintance between us, would be by your making me a friendly visit, say as early as you can in January, with the BRETHREN AT WORK and repeat it once a week for twelve months, and I dare say, we will be better acquainted.

[Thank you brother, we will be happy to visit you each week during the present year, and hope our new-formed acquaintance may ripen into great love for each other. The Lord help us to be faithful to each other. — Eds.]

A WEALTHY lady of Edinburg, with more money than brains, recently had a favorite horse shod with gold shoes. The shoes weighed twelve ounces each, and were fastened to the hoof with gold nails.

Just 1,400 years ago, one of the most memorable battles of the declining Roman Empire, was fought on the plains of Adrianople. Forty thousand Romans were slain by the Goths. Will the last great battles of the Turk take place on the same plains?

DR. HERMAN ALDER has been telling the English people that the Talmud records that eighteen hundred years ago certain rabbis among the Jews invented telescopes, lightning-rods, or conductors, and others, and used gold for filling teeth. They had also a knowledge, he declares, of the use of anæsthetics. The object of the lecture was to show that many of the wonderful discoveries of modern times, had been anticipated by the heathen men among the Jews.

The so-called Evangelical Alliance ordained work before but as the work of prayer, but God has ordained that we shall "Pray without ceasing."

All Baptists have built a chapel in Rome for $15,000. The Pope's blessings will hardly rest in that house; nevertheless it may flourish.

A serious Railroad accident occurred near Hartford, Conn., on the night of the 14th inst. The bridge over the Farmington River gave way while two engines and nine cars were upon it. The cars were filled with people returning from a Moody and Sausky meeting in Hartford. Thirteen were killed and about forty-six wounded.

DANISH MISSION FUND.

| | |
|------------------------------|----------|
| Silver Creek Church, Ill., | $ 51.00 |
| Arnold's Grove Church, Ill., | 15.00 |
| West Branch Church, Ill., | 10.25 |
| Yellow Creek Church, Ill., | 60.00 |
| Previously reported | 1385.63 |

Total: $1527.90

C. P. ROWLAND, Treasurer.

Lanark, Ill., Jan. 19th, 1878.

BOOKS, PAMPHLETS, ETC.,

FOR SALE

AT THIS OFFICE.

—O—

Pengilly's Guide to Christian Baptism.—Price 50 cents.

Quinter and Snyder's Debate on Immersion.—Price, 75 cents.

Cruden's Concordance to the Bible.—Best edition, Imperial 8vo, Cloth, $2.75; Library Sheep, $3.50.

History of Palestine, or The Holy Land. By M. Russell, LL. D., Engravings 18 mo., Cloth, 75 cents.

Christian Baptism.—With its Antecedents and Consequences. By Alexander Campbell. Cloth, $1.25

Ancient and Modern Egypt.—View of Ancient and Modern Egypt. By M. Russell, LL. D., Engravings 18 mo., Cloth, 75 cents.

Nead's Theological Works, or a Vindication of Primitive Christianity. By Elder Peter Nead. Bound in cloth; 472 pages; price, $1.25.

Reason and Revelation By R. Milligan. This work should not only be read, but carefully studied by every minister in the brotherhood. $2.50.

Christianity Utterly Incompatible with War. Being one of Twenty Tracts, for a change in my church relations. By J. W. Steiu. Price, 25 cents; 25 copies, $5.00

A Sermon on Baptism.—Delivered by Bro. S. H. Bashor in the Elk Lick Congregation, Somerset county, Pa. A neatly printed pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 20 cents.

Family Rules and Regulations.—By J. W. Steiu. Beautifully printed in three colors on good end board. Is intended for framing, and should be in every family. Price 20 cents.

Voice of the Seven Thunders; Or, Lectures on the Book of Revelations. By J. L. Martin. Among modern books this is really a curiosity. You can't help but understand it. $1.50.

Duck's Theological Dictionary.—Containing definitions of all religious terms, a comprehensive view of every field in the system of Divinity; account of all the principal denominations; and an accurate statement of the most remarkable transactions and events recorded in ecclesiastical history. 8vo., Sheep, $2.50

The Pillar of Fire; or, Jesus in Bondage.—Being an account of the Wonderful Scenes in the Life of the Son of Pharaoh's Daughter (Moses). Together with Picturesque Sketches of the Hebrews under their Task-masters. By Rev. J. H. Ingraham, LL. D., author of "The Prince of the House of David." Large 12mo., Cloth, $2.00

Trine Immersion Traced to the Apostles.—Being a collection of historical quotations from modern and ancient authors, proving that a threefold immersion was the only method of baptizing ever practiced by the apostles and their immediate successors. By J. H. Moore. 64 pages—price, 25 cents; five copies, $1.00; ten copies, $2.00

The Last Supper. A beautiful colored picture, showing Jesus and his disciples at the table, with the supper spread before them. He has just announced that one of them should betray him. Each of the twelve present is pointed out by name in the margin of the picture. Price, one copy, 15 cents; 2 copies, 25 cents; 10 copies, $1.00

True Evangelical Obedience. Its nature and necessity, as taught and practiced among the Brethren in German Regions. By J. W. Steiu being one of his twenty reasons for a change in church relations. This is an excellent work, and should be circulated by the churches all over the country. Price, 20 cents; 7 copies, $1.00; 15 copies, $2.00

The Origin of Single Immersion. Showing that single immersion was at first the only mode, and as a practice, cannot be traced beyond the middle of the fourth century. By Elder Levi Quinter. It is a tract of sixteen pages and the Brethren should take an active part in giving it an extensive circulation. Price, 2 copies, 40 cents; 6 copies, 25 cents; 10 copies, $1.00

Certificates of Membership in Book Form. They are neatly printed on good paper, ready to fill up, with duplicate attached and all well bound together in neat book form, some with letter style of blank note books. One of these books should be in the hands of each congregation, then, when a member calls for a certificate, one of these can be filled out, signed by the officers, cut off from the duplicate and handed to the member. The duplicate has on it, in bold face, what is in the certificate. This remains in the book, thus enabling each congregation to keep a record of the part of her business. We put up two sets of each. No. 1 containing one hundred certificates, price 75 cents; No. 2, containing fifty certificates, price 50 cents. Those who buy a book containing two hundred certificates, can obtain them for $1.25

The "One Faith," Vindicated. By M. M. F. Johnson. 10 pages, price, 10 cents; Sheep, $1.00; advocates and earnestly contends for the truth here delivered to the world.

Student's New Testament History.—With an Introduction, comprising the History of the old and New Testaments. Edited by Wm. Smith LL. D. With maps and woodcuts. Large 12mo., Cloth, $2.00

Philosophy of the Plan of Salvation. 179. By J. B. Vinton. This is a treatise of one hundred and eleven chapters, each chapter treating of one of the points of our faith, and is a most valuable work. Price, 2 copies, $1.00; 5 copies, $2.00

Why I Left the Baptist Church.—By J. W. Steiu. A tract of 16 pages, ornamented with an extensive illustration and the Baptists' reply. Price, 2 copies, 40 cents; 5 copies, 25 cents; 10 copies, $1.00

The Perfect Plan of Salvation. 97 pages, and. By J. H. Moore. Showing that the position occupied by the Brethren is infallibly safe. Price 1 copy, 15 cents; 2 copies, 25 cents; 10 copies, $1.00

Passover and Lord's Supper. By J. W. Steiu. An able work of 200 pages, and should be in the hands of every person who wishes to thoroughly understand this subject. Bound in good cloth, 25 pages. Price, 75 cents.

One Baptism.—A dialogue showing that trine immersion is the only ground of union, that can be conscientiously occupied by the leading denominations of Christendom. By J. H. Moore. One copy, 15 cents; 10 copies, $1.00; 25 copies, $2.00.

Truth Triumphant. In six numbers of four pages each. Baptism, Grace and Truth, Feet-washing, Brotherly Kindness, Non-resistance, Non-Essentialism Measured, and Found too Short. Price 1 cent each, or 80 cents per hundred.

The Throne of David.—from the consecration of the Shepherd of Bethlehem to the rebellion of prince Abalom. By the Rev. J. H. Ingraham, LL. D., author of "The Prince of the House of David," and the "Pillar of Fire." With five splendid illustrations. Large 12 mo., Cloth, $2.00

Campbell Weighed in the Balance, and Found Wanting.—A written sermon in reply to Elder C. By J. H. Moore. It is a well printed tract of sixteen pages, should be circulated by the hundreds in almost every locality. Price, 2 copies, 10 cents; 6 copies, 25 cents; 25 copies $1.00; 100 copies, $3.50.

Sabbatism.—By M. M. Eschelman. 16 pages, price 10 cents; 15 copies $1.00. Treats the Sabbath question, briefly showing that the observance of the seventh-day Sabbath passed away with all other Jewish days, and that the "first day of the week" is the preferred day for Christians to assemble in worship.

Eusebius' Ecclesiastical History.—This author lived in the fourth century, had a thorough knowledge of the History of the church, and his writings are therefore of considerable value to the student of Ancient History. 8vo., Cloth, 2.50

Campbell and Owen Debate.—Containing an examination of the Social System, and all the systems of Skepticism, ancient and modern. Complete in one volume. This will always remain a leading work on the evidences of Christianity. $1.75.

Brethren's Envelopes.—Prepared especially for the use of our people. They contain, neatly printed on the back, a complete summary of our position as a religious body. Price 15 cents per package—25 in a package—50 cents per hundred.

Brethren's Hymn Books.—1 copy Turkey Morocco, post-paid, $1.00; per dozen, post-paid, $11.00; per dozen by express, $10.00. 1 copy Arabic, post-paid, 75 cents; per dozen, post-paid, $8.25; per dozen by express, $7.25. When ordering hymn books sent by express, it is expected that the purchaser will pay the express charges at the office where the books are received.

Biblical Antiquities.—By Dr. John Nevin. We know no work intended to enlighten the reader on Bible customs, etc., that we so recommend to all Bible readers more cheerfully than this volume. It should be in every library. 12mo., Cloth, 1.50

Union Bible Dictionary. A Bible Dictionary giving an accurate account and description of every place, as well as a history of all persons and places mentioned in the Bible. It will be found particularly useful to all Bible students. 100 pages, with maps and numerous illustrations. Cloth, $1.50

Reynoldsburg Debate.—An oral debate between Benjamin Franklin, of the Disciples and John A. Thompson of the Baptists. The reader will likely get more information from this work on the design of baptism, working of the Holy Spirit, etc., than any other book of the same size in our language. $1.25

The Prince of the House of David, or Three Years in the Holy City being a series of letters, giving a life-like picture, and related as by an eye-witness, all the scenes and wonderful incidents in the life of Jesus of Nazareth, from His baptism in Jordan to His crucifixion on Calvary, by J. B. Ingraham. Neatly printed, and well bound in cloth. It will be sent post-paid for $2.00

Josephus.—The works of FLAVIUS JOSEPHUS, the learned and authentic Jewish historian, containing twenty books of the Jewish antiquities, seven books of the Jewish war, and THE LIFE OF JOSEPHUS, written by himself, and embellished with elegant engravings. The work is a large octavo volume, neatly printed, and well bound with good leather. Sent post-paid for $3.50

The Doctrine of the Brethren Defended.—This is a work of over 100 pages, lately published in defense of the faith and practice of the Brethren on the following points: The Divinity of Christ and the Holy Spirit, Immersion vs. Abusion, Trine Immersion, Feet-washing, the Holy Kiss, Non-conformity or Planness of Dress, and Atonement. The work is complete and presents a logical and fair argument on each subject, and is a very good and useful book. It should have wide circulation, both among members and the world. The work is printed on large plain paper, is neatly bound in cloth, and sells at the low price of $1.00 per copy by mail. When ordered by express, a charge of 10 per cent will be added. The express charges will be paid. The work may be had in any office or from the author, E. H. Miller, Chicago, Ind.

The Holy Land.—This is the name of a beautiful illustrated book, 24 pages, a plain 12mo. copy of the Holy Land, and contains 110 observations, at a glance, of all the cities, towns, rivers, lakes, valleys and mountains in the Holy Land. It is a perfect picture of the whole country from Damascus to the Gulf of Suez. It is the most complete thing of the kind ever seen. By a series of colored maps, the different places mentioned in the Bible about Palestine, may be plainly seen in the hand, making the reader as familiar with the location of the different places, as the unity in which they are thus coming home in understanding the Bible. Those who think there was not a word enough in Palestine to make a people should study the Bible. It is printed on beautiful paper, suspended on rollers, and may be had in any office or from the author, E. H. Miller, Chicago, Ind. $1.50

Buy any of the above works out post on receipt of the amount price. Address:

MOORE, BASHOR & ESHELMAN,

LANARK, Carroll Co., Mo.

W. U. R. R. Time Table.

Day passenger train going east leaves Lanark at 12:21 P. M., and arrives in Baymont at 1:43 P. M.
Day passenger train going west leaves Lanark at 2:10 P. M., and arrives at Rock Island at 7:50 P. M.
Night passenger train going east and west, next and last leaves Lanark at 2:21 A. M., arriving in Baymont at 4:00 A. M., and at Rock Island at 1:00 A. M.
Night and Accommodation trains will run west at 12:50 P. M., 10:40 A. M., and 12:20 P. M., and east at 1:00 A. M., 1 P. M. and 4:30 P. M.
Tickets are sold for above trains only. Passengers from the above connection at Western Union Junction.

G. A. SMITH, Agent.

Passengers for Chicago should leave Lanark at 12:21 P. M., and for the Western Union Junction, they should not be late for the train. For the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul passenger train and their reach Chicago at 7:50 P. M. For the same evening train which leaves from Chicago, go to the Port Wayne depot, take the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul train at five in the evening, run with it to the W. U. Junction, change cars for Fourth, and arrive here at 2:21 in the morning.

forsaken by his pretended friends that the common attention to a sick man had been withheld from him. The skin of his body was in some places worn off, which greatly increased his sufferings. A nurse was provided for him, and some medical comforts were supplied. He was mostly in a state of stupor, but something that had passed between us had made such an impression upon him, that sometime after my departure he sent for me, and being told that I had gone from home, he sent for another friend. This induced a valuable young friend (Mary Roseue,) who had resided in my family and continued in Green-wich during a part of my absence, frequently to go and take him some little refreshment suitable for an invalid. Once when she was there three of his dear disciples came to the door, and in a loud, unbecoming manner said: "Tom Paine, he is said you are turning Christian, but we hope you will die as you have lived, and run your way." On being according to Mary Roseue, he said, "I can see what miserable comforters they are."

Recently Rev. Joseph Cook, in one of his Boston lectures said, that 20,000 copies of Paine's "Age of Reason" were yearly sold and distributed among the operatives of New England factories. But in what esteem was this book held by the very author in the last hours of his mortal existence? Hear his own words. One who asked him, the noble and faithful friend, in a abandonment of his mind, "if she had ever read any of his writings, and on being told that she had read very little of them, he inquired what she thought of them, adding, "From such a source you I expect a correct answer." She told him that when very young his "Age of Reason" was put into her hands, but that the more she read it, the more dark and gloomy she felt, and she threw the book into the fire. "I wish all had done as you," he replied: "for if the devil has ever had any agency in any work, he has had in my writing that book."

Who ever in Russell and his infidel companions may establish by submitting the matter of Paine's death-bed troubles to a court of arbitration, one thing is certain, whether he died Athiest, Deist, or in our almost persuaded to believe while incapable of believing, his closing days were singularly unhappy, the conclusion article in the Chicago Times to the contrary notwithstanding. The Golden Cause.

THE BLOOD APPLIED.

BY C. ROSS.

"The blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin" (1 John 1:7). I was asked, when, where, and how does the blood of Christ apply to the sinner? I answered, We are all sinners by the fall; "For as by the transgression of one man, sin entered into the world, and death by sin; so by death passed upon all, for that all have sinned." And then the blood of Christ cleansing from all sin, the proposed Atonement already seen as a "Lamb slain from the foundation of the world" (Rev. 13:8), cleansed all upon whom sin and death had "so passed," and were holy, for "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

But upon arriving ourselves at the tree of knowledge of good and evil, every one of us has tasted "and when hath conceived it bringeth forth sin;" and we knew to do good and did it not, and so were sinners, not only by nature, but of violation. And here appears the immensity of the magnitude of God's mercy, and the extent of the atonement. For again it applies itself to our wants at our request, upon the terms and easy conditions of reconciliation. Again, offering to cleanse us even from this second degree of sin. But being now pardoned and cleansed by His blood upon His just conditions, and bidden as "little children, these things I write unto you, that ye sin not," "And whosoever is born of God doth not sin." The apostle, here doubtless speaks of this second stage of sin, (willful, malicious trespass), for again, he saith, "if we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us," and again, "if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous." This then, implies that though we are not malicious sinners, being born of God, yet do we need an "Advocate with the Father, who can be touched with the feelings of our infirmities," having Himself been "tempted in all points like us, we are, yet without sin" (Heb. 4:15).

And could we believe that He could so intercede, had He not shed His blood according to the prophecies which foretold of it? And as "without the shedding of blood, there is no remission of sins," but the blood of Jesus Christ, His Son cleansing from all sin; does it not apply itself in the great redemption of the world, and also as a means of pardon in our regeneration, and then seal the covenant with which we are sanctified? by His meditation and intercessions for us while probationers here, and by these means we are purifying "our souls in obeying the truth?"

MAN, LORD OF CREATION.

BY C. ROSS.

"CAN any man deny this self-evident declaration? Can even the most confirmed infidel, deist, or atheist? And yet behold him in his lordship; grappling in sin, darkness and great depravity. Ever since the fall of Adam, his ways have been the most revolting to all the other works of God's creation. For all things else, both animate and inanimate, cry the design of their existence, and thus reflect honor on Him who created them, and also reveal to the human mind, that there is a great, good, all-wise and all-powerful Being at the head of all these things. And yet if we would undertake to learn the ways of God, from the ways and works of man; we would almost have to turn atheist, and doubt the existence of such a Being. But to find a man, indeed and in truth, we want to turn back over 1800 hundred years ago, and find him fully made known in the person and character of Jesus Christ our Lord. And still the infidel comes up and tells us that He was but a mere man like us, possessed with a more than ordinary intelligence.

And still further he says, that all the miracles as recorded in the Testament concerning this holy Man, and all other miracles set forth in the Bible, are but falsehoods or whims of the brain. And he further claims, that all things that are done, must come about through certain fixed laws in nature, and outside of them, God does nothing. Oh shame! it is enough to make any man blush with shame to even think of the idea, let alone having the soul contaminated with the thought that man in his long example of depravity, corruption and blood, is not moving on in the way God had designed him to go. This way of looking at things would make God a being, not easily understood, making man lord of all His creation; and yet making Him the most depraved, mean and wretched of all His creation.

Oh! vain man. When will you learn your real condition and fall prostrate before the throne of God, and implore Him to have mercy upon your whole being; before it is eternally too late. For God's Spirit will not always strive with man. He has made known the riches of His mercy upon the cross for your sake; and has shed His precious blood that you might share with Him the riches of heaven. Has borne, is bearing with your wicked ways, and inviting you home to His kingdom. But this will not always last; for in the fullness of time His wrath will fall upon a wicked and rebellious world, "for as it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the days of the coming of the Son of man."

Hagerstown, Ind.

AN EXTRAORDINARY SENTENCE BY A JUDGE.

THE following extract is taken from a sentence recently pronounced by Judge Reading, of Chicago, upon the liquor dealers who had violated the law by selling it to minors. It will pay a careful perusal:

"By the law you may sell it to men and women, if they will buy. You have given your bond and paid your license to sell to them, and no one has a right to molest you in your legal business. No matter what the consequences may be, no matter what poverty and destitution are by your selling according to law, you have paid your money for this privilege, and you are licensed to pursue your calling. No matter what families are distracted and rendered miserable; no matter what wives are treated with violence; what children starve or mourn over the degradation of a parent; your business is legalized, and no one may interfere with you for it. No matter what mother may agonize over the loss of a son, or sister blush at the shame of a brother, you have a right to disregard these all, and pursue your legal calling—you are licensed. You may fill up your lawful place of business in the most enticing and captivating form; you may furnish it with the most costly and elegant equipments for your own lawful trade; you may fill it with the allurements of amusement; you may use all arts to allure visitors; you may skillfully arrange and expose to view your choicest wines and captivating beverages; you may induce thirst by all contrivances to produce a raging appetite for drink, and then you may supply that appetite to the full, because it is lawful; you have paid for it—you have a license. You may allow boys and children to frequent your saloon; they may witness the apparent satisfaction with which their seniors quaff the sparkling glass; you may be schooling and training them for the period of twenty-one, when they, too, can participate—for all this is lawful. You may hold the cup to their lips; but you must not let them drink—that is unlawful. For while you have all these privileges for the money you pay, this poor privilege of selling to children is denied you. Her parents have the right to say, 'Leave my son to me until the law gives you a right to destroy him. Do not anticipate that terrible moment when I can assert for him no further rights of protection. That will be seen enough for me, for his sister, for his mother, for his friends, for the community, to see him take the road to death. Give him to us in his childhood at least.— Let us have a few hours of his youth, in which we can enjoy his innocence, to repay us in some small degree for the care and love we have lavished upon him."

"This is something which you, who now stand prisoners at the bar, have not paid for; this is not embraced in your license. For this offense, the court sentences you to ten days' imprisonment in the county jail, and that you pay a fine of seventy-five dollars and costs, and that you stand committed until the fine and costs of this prosecution are paid."

—Exchange.

PRIDE AND VANITY.

BY SARAH M. SAUNDERS.

NOW this is a topic upon which we hear a great deal, both from the pulpit and press; we hear it denounced as a thing greatly to be abhorred; but we sometimes think there is not a proper distinction made between pride and vanity. In nine cases out of ten the whole theme seems to be based on superfluity of female attire, which we are inclined to think is hardly fair.

Now we believe pride is an over-estimate of one's own importance, while gay clothing is merely an index to a vain and foolish desire of the heart or covardice, that is, we cannot bear to have the finger of scorn pointed at us or to be "old-fashioned." Yet we have seen persons arrayed in gay clothing, who in their conduct and conversation, were quiet and unassuming, not displaying the least sign of pride; and we have also seen persons clothed in the habiliments of the worst subject of poverty, while their bearing plainly manifest a feeling of arrogance and superiority. We have even beheld it behind the sacred table, loudly and vehemently denouncing pride in others; and as soon as the meeting was concluded, we have heard them, in private conversation, the theme of which was, what "I said" "I did" "I told them" &c., loudly boasting of their great influence and ability, speaking in tones of sarcasm of their superiors which often makes one shudder to contemplate the influence of such an example. We like to hear meekness and humility preached to all, but better than all, we like to see "living equities read and known of all men." We somewhere saw a production which we think contains a volume of meaning, which we insert here.

If your ears you would save from jeers—
The things keep closely hid,
Myself and I and none and my,
And how I do or do.

"FIRST ON THE LIST."

1. Keep a list of your friends; and let God be first on the list, however long it may be.
2. Keep a list of all the gifts you get; and let Christ, who is God's unspeakable gift, be first of all.
3. Keep a list of your mercies; and let pardon and life stand at the head.
4. Keep a list of your joys; and let joy unspeakable and full of glory be first.
5. Keep a list of your griefs; and let sorrow for sin be first.
6. Keep a list of your enemies; and however many they be, put down the "old man" and the "old serpent" first.
7. Keep a list of your sins; and let the sin of unbelief be set as first and worst of all.

The Home Circle.

READ AND OBEY.

- Husbands, love your wives
Wives, obey your husbands.
Fathers, provoke not your children to wrath
Children, obey your parents in all things

Edited by M. M. Eshelman.

As the cold, piercing frosts of Winter seek to penetrate our bodies, so does sin enter to reach our souls.

This week Aunt Katie comes out and talks to the children; and she knows how to know so that you can all understand what she means.

We must ask our little writers to change their writing a little. You know if you all tell where you go to school and what you study, it will soon tire you.

SISTER J. S. THORNTON, of Philadelphia, writes: "Little Eva has written a capital letter, being very much in sympathy with the little boy whose father is to go to the Brethren at Work."

ISRAEL IN CANAAN.

OUR young readers who read the Bible so abundantly will be surprised to learn that some of the Israelites never left their own land.

They soon felt their bondage to be severe, hence cried unto the Lord to deliver them. The Lord heard their cry, and sent an angel to them.

I have given you this bit of Israel's troubles, that you may be a warning to yourselves. Remember that the first sin opens the way to another, and that it is not safe to tamper with the golden rule.

TO BOYS AND GIRLS.

I WILL here relate to you how naughty a boy was one time. His name was Alfred. When he became a man he told the following story to his boys.

"Nothing," replied Alfred. Soon his mother came to the door and said, "Alfred, my son!"

"Now, Alfred, what will you do?" she asked. Alfred replied, "I will go to school."

"I know there is not one so bad," Alfred writes to the Home Circle.

DO ALL THE GOOD YOU CAN.

THEY read your nice little letter. I like to see the good men you tell, but you say you are an angel. And in your letter you tell me of a boy named Alfred.

I thought you were a good boy, and I hope your parents have taught you that. He has a nice new wagon for his own good.

Yours truly, MARY KATH.

TO EMMA A. GILLER, OF PLYMOUTH, IND.

AM person by a perfect stranger to you, know only what I learned from your good letter, which I received on the 14th of the Brethren at Work.

That you are but a few years old, and with pleasure write these lines to me. In this you have taken the right step.

Since Bro. Eshelman has taken charge of the "Home Circle" department, and has a special column for the children, I am positive he will welcome more of your little letters, if you write them as good as the one you sent.

Yours truly, EMMA R. STEEL.

Hallsburg, Pa.

A WARNING TO THE YOUNG.

DEAR Brethren:—I read in the Brethren at Work, that you would like to have all little girls and boys write letters to you.

"I will be thirteen years of age in this month," she writes. "I will now begin my subject."

"I will be thirteen years of age in this month," she writes. "I will now begin my subject."

Let us attend to His cries before we become old men and women, and the case with a poor old man of ours, who could not attend to our dear Saviour's cries.

Read and Obey.

DON'T, GIRLS.

DO NOT think that you are good-looking, and that you will add one particle to your father's estate.

Selected by J. W. GLENN.

To her, Ind.

It is our philosophy of courtesy or impertinence that runs forward and undertakes to say that God's providence works in this way or that way.

CHILDREN AT WORK.

From Mary J. Syler.—I am young in years, but have come out from the world and am trying to serve the Lord.

Thy Spring, Mo.

From Iva M. Thomas.—Thy Editor:—I am nine years old. I go to school, am in the fourth division, secondary.

Mr. C. B. Lambert. In answer to your question I will say, the little boy's name was Samuel, and was about four in the second class.

From Nancy E. Reynolds.—I am ten years old. I go to school and my studies are reading, writing, spelling, and arithmetic.

From Nancy E. Reynolds.—I am ten years old. I go to school and my studies are reading, writing, spelling, and arithmetic.

From Nancy E. Reynolds.—I am ten years old. I go to school and my studies are reading, writing, spelling, and arithmetic.

From Nancy E. Reynolds.—I am ten years old. I go to school and my studies are reading, writing, spelling, and arithmetic.

From Nancy E. Reynolds.—I am ten years old. I go to school and my studies are reading, writing, spelling, and arithmetic.

If you would be kind, good, useful and happy, control your temper. Never allow yourself to be disturbed by mere trifles.

CORRESPONDENCE.

HOME MISSION LABOR IN EASTERN OHIO.

ACCORDING to previous arrangements, and announcement, Bro. G. V. Kollar, of New Philadelphia, Ohio, arrived at Warnock, Ohio, on the evening of Jan. 24th, and commenced a series of meetings on the evening of the 10th; continuing from day to day, closing on the evening of the 15th, having five accessions during the time occupied. The Word was preached with power. While sinners were made to rejoice in the precious promises of the Gospel, sinners were made to tremble under its fearful condemnation. There were many almost persuaded to be Christians; may God help them to speedily turn from their pernicious ways, and come to Jesus, that they may be saved upon the easy terms of the Gospel, without money and without price; that they may choose that good part that will be for their present peace and eternal happiness.

One of those that united with the church, came about twenty miles, through the storm, having never heard the Brethren preach until at our series of meetings in November last; there he heard the Truth as he never heard it before, and now is in the church with us.

We have a large field here for laborers, and there is now a base, or center formed, around which may be gathered many precious souls. The field is now open; come brethren, labor with us in building up the blessed Master's cause. The brethren and sisters here are all in earnest, from oldest to youngest, and ranging from fifteen to seventy-nine years of age; our oldest brother being seventy-nine, and never learned so much as the English alphabet, will get up in our social meeting and bear testimony for the blessed Master and the religion for which he endured persecution, died and was buried, and rose again to establish; and all the members are full of faith and zeal. May the Lord increase their faith, and confirm their hope, and perfect them in love.

We will now make our desire known to the Brethren, and I speak the sentiments of every one of our brethren and sisters at this place, and was earnestly requested to do so by Bro. Kollar, to say to the church, and the committee of arrangements for Home Mission labor, of the N. E. District of Ohio, that, through the labors of the brethren that have been sent to this point, and the blessing of God upon their labors, in the salvation of twenty-one precious souls at this place of mission labor, that the number requisite, and the time has arrived, that there be an organization effected at the next appointment which is announced to be Feb. 5th. We think it necessary to organize at this place, in order to a better discipline and course of instruction among us, as many of our members are young, and need instruction, that they may grow in grace, and in the light and knowledge of the Truth, as it is in Christ Jesus.

D. SBYRIG.

Warnock, Ohio.

FROM GRANT, PA.

Dear Brethren:

THIRTY years ago or more, there were a few Brethren, who moved from other congregations into the place, about where our church now stands, which formed the nucleus around which others gathered afterwards, from time to time by migration and intercession, until at length it was thought prudent to organize this little band into a regular church organization. The said number brethren worked hard and zealously for the good of their souls, and of others, until the year 1850, when a large number of the Brethren, who were the nucleus of the church, were called to their eternal home. The church was then in a very low state, and it was thought prudent to discontinue the church, and to leave the place to the world. It was not until the year 1860, that a few Brethren returned to the place, and commenced a series of meetings, which resulted in the organization of the church, as it now stands. The church has since that time been in a flourishing state, and has many precious members. We are now in the midst of a series of meetings, which are attended by a large number of people. We are glad to see the church in such a state of prosperity, and we are confident that it will continue to grow and flourish for many years to come.

more frequent, until now we feel very much encouraged with our number of about ninety, of which three are ministers, and four deacons. We have no ordained elder. We are rather scattered, and poor; notwithstanding, all seem interested in the cause they have espoused, and press forward in the good work they have begun. The greater part of the members I believe, take the church papers. The body of our congregation lives about twenty miles from the nearest railroad point. On this account, we are not so often favored with visits from traveling brethren, as those who live along the main lines of railroad travel.

Our ministers have been ably helped this Fall, by brethren J. W. Beer, J. B. Wampler and J. A. Sell, reviving us, and directing us in the good work we have begun. If our home ministers are not always able to give us scholarly discourses, they are always able to tell the story of the Cross, and teach us great and good lessons by their exemplary lives, conversation, their intercourse with their neighbors, and others with whom they come in contact. I sometimes feel that we do not discharge our duty toward our ministers, giving them the necessary encouragement they so richly deserve, in doing so well as they do; so many of them having such a limited education, and fighting the enemy at such great odds. Brethren, it was our voice that put them where they are, now let us, with one accord, take them by the arm and help them over the rugged steps they have to climb. May that Power that ruleth over all, help us to see and realize their position.

I am a reader of all the papers published by the Brethren, BRETHREN AT WORK, Primitive Christian, Viadictor, Young Disciple, and The Children's Paper, edited by Bro. Kirtz. We welcome them all to our home. Time always seems so long awaiting the weekly visits of the BRETHREN AT WORK and Primitive Christian, for I know, with them will come a feast of good things for the soul, and a season of rejoicing coming out of the news of the prosperity of Zion. Oh, how I do love to hear of the many souls that are brought to Jesus through the enterprise of the church papers, and the energetic ministers, who are placed on the walls of Zion, proclaiming glad tidings of good news to perishing creatures, furnishing for the Bread of Life!

God bless you dear brethren, and humbly continue in the great work you have begun, is my prayer. The children's papers are doing a good work too—a noble work I dare say. They should be taken in every family, and placed in the hands of every child of the church, and as many children out of the church as possible. If members of the church are not able to take the papers, I believe it is the imperative duty of those brethren who are more favored with this world's goods, to supply such. Brethren, apply the golden rule, place the poor in your stead, and you in theirs, then think what you would have them do.

With my best wishes and prayers for the success of the enterprise in which you are engaged, I remain,

Yours affectionately,

E. BRADLEY.

FROM KANSAS.

LEFT my home in Huntington, Mo., on the 10th of December for Kansas. As the call for preaching soon to be announced, I concluded to throw in my route. I first went to Neosho county. I ended there the 10th and was soon under the parental roof, having been absent only the space of "Brethren and children's papers." We commenced meeting soon after. Had good attendance most of the time, and a large number of accessions. The church was in a very low state, and it was thought prudent to discontinue the church, and to leave the place to the world. It was not until the year 1860, that a few Brethren returned to the place, and commenced a series of meetings, which resulted in the organization of the church, as it now stands. The church has since that time been in a flourishing state, and has many precious members. We are now in the midst of a series of meetings, which are attended by a large number of people. We are glad to see the church in such a state of prosperity, and we are confident that it will continue to grow and flourish for many years to come.

A great many brethren come to Kansas from the northern part of the State, and come to the southern part of the State as well as elsewhere. People listen with great interest, as the doctrine to them is new, though eighteen hundred years of age.

Went from there to the southern part of Neosho Co., where we held some meetings. There was not a very good interest, some seem to be asleep. I am now in Labette Co., writing from the house of Bro. Wall. Have had three meetings. Brother D. Harader is with me here. The prospects are not very encouraging, bad roads and bad weather work against us, here as well as elsewhere.

We expect to commence a series of meetings in Bourbon Co., on the 8th inst. Hope our labors will be blessed with success. There is call after call for preaching here in southern Kansas. Much good could be done, if the brethren would show more of a missionary spirit. Other denominations have not the money to hire salaried preachers; now is the time to work.

D. HODGENS.

Jan. 12, 1878.

CHURCH NEWS.

From Shiloh Church, Va.—On the 25th of Dec., we started to Shiloh church, Barbour Co., W. Va., to attend a series of meetings which had commenced on the 25th; arrived at place of meeting in the evening, found brethren M. Fike and James Liller of German Settlement there. The meeting continued, and on the 29th, brethren Z. and G. W. Annon from Thornton Station came. They remained until the 31st. Brethren Fike and Liller had left the day previous. During this time one precious soul was added to the church, and one reclaimed, being a minister in the first degree. The rest of the brethren having left, we remained and labored with them until the sixth of January. Eleven more were added by baptism, and there are eleven more applicants.

The meeting, upon the whole, was one of the most interesting I ever attended. Many of those who came out were young; may the Lord help them to put on the whole armor of God, and may they fight the battles of the Lord valiantly and endure hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ. The brethren and sisters have my thanks for their kindness to me while with them.

W. A. GATST.

From English Prairie, Ind.—Brethren Jeremiah Gump and Samuel Fields came here and held a series of meetings at our church, and also at the M. E. church, four miles Northwest of our church. They commenced meeting on the evening of the fourth inst., and continued until the evening of the tenth. The result of their labors was one soul made willing to unite with the people of God, and we believe many more were almost persuaded to come to Christ. May the Lord help them, so they do not put it off, till it is too late. The church, we trust, has been built up in that most holy faith. May their labors be as broad cast upon the water, that it may be seen many days hence. May the Lord bless them for their earnest labors while with us.

E. HORSNER.

Brighton, Ind., Jan. 13, 1878.

From Pine-Creek Congregation.—We are still trying to labor in the cause of our Master, and while we see from time to time, turning to God, we are made to thank God and take courage.

We commenced a series of meetings on Sunday, the 6th inst., at the Grove meeting-house. Bro. John W. Miller, from Portage, and Bro. John Kinley from the Pine-Creek were with us and labored hard, sparing no pains in leading out the hundreds of hungry souls. Continued until the 14th inst., then closed. A number of meetings were held at this time, North-Creek, near Portage, and a larger house, the congregation being about 100. The meetings were well attended, and many souls were made willing to unite with the people of God. We are now in the midst of a series of meetings, which are attended by a large number of people. We are glad to see the church in such a state of prosperity, and we are confident that it will continue to grow and flourish for many years to come.

J. N. PERRY.

Portage, Ind.

From Fayette, Mo.—Bro. R. H. ... We are now in the midst of a series of meetings, which are attended by a large number of people. We are glad to see the church in such a state of prosperity, and we are confident that it will continue to grow and flourish for many years to come.

living there, were much taken up with the preaching and thought that there was a foundation laid for good results in the future.

Then we came home on the 15th and, on the 16th Bro. Troxel commenced preaching in our church in Greene. Continued every evening until Sunday night. Congregation not so large but the interest very good, and we think good impressions were made on the part of our members in their holy calling, as well as those that stand outside, waiting for the moving of the water.

J. F. EIKENBERRY.

Greene, Ia., Jan. 22, 1878.

From Dunkirk, O.—I will now give you a few items of church news, which may be of some interest to your many readers.

The Lord has blessed us in the past, and by this we feel greatly encouraged. On the 5th inst., Bro. John Wise of Pa., came to us and remained with us until the fourteenth inst., during which time he held forth the Gospel in its great beauty and strength, not shunning to declare the whole counsel of God. Though no immediate manifestations were expressed to embark with us in the good cause yet the interest increased as the meeting progressed and we think lasting impressions were made.

Just as the rock was ready to break, the meetings broke up, a circumstance which too often occurs, and our beloved Elder went on his mission to another field. But the good seed was sown and to our joy, on the 16th inst., while we were in the sanctuary, attending to our Father's business, a worthy young man, Mr. J. Wheeler came forward and desired to enter the church, and now we congratulate ourselves that another brother in Christ is born into the kingdom of God. We hope that many more will soon come and labor in the good cause of our blessed Master.

S. T. BOSSERMAN.

Dunkirk, O., Jan. 20, 1878.

From the Woodbury District.—At a late council meeting held in the Woodbury District, Bedford Co., Pa., the Brethren agreed to build another new meeting-house, 35 by 40 feet, located on the north end of said district. Love and union seem to prevail among us here. Souls are coming to Christ, but many are yet out of Christ. May God help us to let our light so shine, that many may be constrained to follow our example.

D. S. REPLOOLE.

Marion, Pa.

From Maple Grove, Ohio.—Our church is in a healthy condition at present. We commenced a series of meetings on the evening of the 5th of Jan., and continued meeting twice a day, until the evening of the 14th. Brethren Henry Jacobs and Wm. Keifer of Congress, O., came at the commencement and remained till the close, having the assistance of D. N. Workman on the evening of the 12th, and during the 13th, accompanied by the general attendance of our own laborers, and the presence of many of our brethren and sisters, who were very active in singing songs of praises, and offering prayers to the great "I Am," while the zeal manifested by the speakers, held the audience in a chain of attention, evidently appreciating a good and successful meeting. The occasion was one of solemnity and rejoicing; solemn, because many souls were not in a state of salvation; rejoicing, because the brethren and sisters were much built up, and when God sent a visitation of His power among them, they wept for joy, to see how many willing to follow Jesus. Such a rejoicing never was witnessed before in our meetings here. When we went to the water, a large number of people attended to witness the baptism, although I rained all the time, nearly all remained till the close. All the candidates, except one, were young people, and several quite young, not only ten years of age. Many tears were shed on the occasion, all of the candidates were very anxious, and we sincerely wait till the next meeting, that they may be baptized. The occasion was one of solemnity and rejoicing; solemn, because many souls were not in a state of salvation; rejoicing, because the brethren and sisters were much built up, and when God sent a visitation of His power among them, they wept for joy, to see how many willing to follow Jesus. Such a rejoicing never was witnessed before in our meetings here. When we went to the water, a large number of people attended to witness the baptism, although I rained all the time, nearly all remained till the close. All the candidates, except one, were young people, and several quite young, not only ten years of age. Many tears were shed on the occasion, all of the candidates were very anxious, and we sincerely wait till the next meeting, that they may be baptized.

Now and then some of us were witnesses of the great power of the Holy Spirit, and may the Lord increase the number of such manifestations, that prayers may be yours in this life, and joys ever new in the kingdom of God.

Wm. SAMPSON.

Maple Grove, Ohio.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK.

"Behold I Bring You Good Tidings of Great Joy, which Shall be unto All People."—LUKE 2: 10.

Vol. III.

Lanark, Ill., February 7, 1878.

No. 6.

The Brethren at Work.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY

J. H. Moore, S. H. Bashor, M. M. Eshelman.

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

- R. H. MILLER, LADORA, IND.
- J. W. STILES, NEWTONIA, MO.
- D. VANAMAN, VIRDEN, ILL.
- D. E. MENCHER, WAYNESBORO, PA.
- MATTHEW A. LEWIS, URBANA, ILL.

THE HEAVEN ON EARTH.

BY M. M. ESHELMAN.

Beyond the bound of time,
Above the bound of life,
Where passion follows form and loss
In angry strife—

There is a land so bright,
That mortal cannot gaze,
But wondering stand upon the verge
In lost amazement.

The hills of glory tower,
Majestic and sublime,
Above the snow-capped peaks of earth,
The Alps of time.

Your square the city stands,
The paper walls that rise,
Are garnished bright with precious stones
Of Paradise.

No storm cloud ever throws
Its shadows on that shore,
No lightning flash along the sky,
Or thunders roar.

The air is pure and bright,
All is serene and calm,
Naught ever enters there that can
The holy harm.

But from the throne of God
There flows a crystal stream,
And heaven's pure light upon its clear
Bright waters beam.

And where that river flows,
The tree of life appears,
Yielding its monthly fruits throughout Eternal years.

Beneath the shadow bowers,
Robed in immortal green,
Grow fairer flowers than mortal eye
Eath ever seen.

There might shall never come,
Nor heaven's long day be o'er;
God and the Lamb shall be their light
Forever more.

Throughout that wide domain
Joy beams in every eye,
While angel voices join in praise
To God most high.

There white-robed spirits bow
Before the great I Am,
And worship Him who pardoned them
Through Christ, the Lamb.

Walter, Jan 1.

A LEAF FROM THE TREE OF LIFE.

BY C. H. BAYBUTT.

NO Wounds are too deep for the healing of Jesus. The Anti-type of the good Samaritan has a hand and wine for every bleeding heart. Although He is constantly pouring out His sympathies for the relief of the millions who supplicate His aid, His vessel of grace is as full as ever. "In Him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily," and the offerer, we come, the more we need and ask, the more is He glorified and glorified. Neither the Universe nor Eternity can empty the Infinite. He gives without diminution; but He gives not His best indiscriminately. He has gifts for all, but not His rarest and sweetest (Matt. 5: 45). If we would have the Gift of gifts, we must be made conformable to His death, and know the fellowship of His sufferings, and the power of His resurrection (Philp. 3: 10). Blessed elect, To such all things work together for good, because called a coming to the Divine purpose (Rom. 8: 28). Having died and risen with Christ, His security is theirs. They can perish only when He becomes bankrupt in power and mercy. They can boldly take up the challenge of Rom. 8: 31, 35. Not only suffering and then glory, but glory in suffering.

Afflicted saint, your sorrows are in form, not ordinary. It is seldom that an heir of Heaven is so outrageously treated. But in substance we all sorrow alike. Griefs vary, but grief is one in its ultimate analysis. The child that weeps over its shattered doll, beings into reality the same constitutional soul-elements as the person who agonizes over the coffin of the most cherished idol of conjugal affection. You are mourning the living dead. You are a widow without a shroud or grave. Your spirit-drops are within, and embalm the dead hopes and joys of the past. These are crushing misfortunes. But Jesus lives, and roves. For all your wretched heart-throbs, He has a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. Your wailing woes and irreparable bereavement have bound up in them unbidle songs, if you allow Jesus to take the place of the violator of your confidence. You have a mighty struggle to maintain, but you are on the way to victory and in due time it will be yours. Turn to Matt. 12: 20 and pass meaning enough into the word "till" to include all God's intentions and all your utmost endeavors to meet them.

Remember, Christ is resus; He reigns in the flesh and over it. Col. 3: 1, 2, 3 is the key of your triumph and joy. You will yet be able to rise so high above all human attachments and human deserts, that with a glad heart and responsive conscience you can pray Matt. 6: 12. Have faith, and enlist all the energies of your soul in the great crisis. May the approaching Christmas be to you a blessed ante-past of the coming glory of Rom. 8: 18. May the Everlasting Kingdom combat you out of the fathomless depths of His changeless Heart.

ON ELECTING MINISTERS.

BY B. P. SAYLOR.

I PRESUME that it is generally known that there are brethren who have doubts of the Scriptural authority for electing brethren as to the ministry in the order of our church. Some have spoken, and some have written on the subject, yet the minds of some seem not to be fully enlightened, and I presume will not be soon, until I may say, but I give my mite freely. I have given this subject much thought, and have concluded the legitimacy of my call. Some saying that a majority of all the members in the church is necessary to make the call valid, I was told that I have even more than a majority, but I have given the subject serious thought to know whether the order is the order God. Word will justify. Again I have been in the country a long time, and soon will be twenty-eight years that I have served in the capacity of an Elder. It has been my lot to serve as elector, and installation, the subject being for a long time a serious one. I am however fully satisfied that the order of the church is feasible and Scriptural.

The harvest being plentiful and the laborers few, was true now as it was when the Saviour declared it to be, and it is just as necessary that we pray the Lord of the harvest to send laborers into His harvest now as it was then. While the Saviour was on earth, He did this personally. He did not have men elect themselves to go, but He appointed, and sent them, first the twelve, and afterwards the seventy (Matt.

9: 37; Luke 10: 2). Now Paul says the church is the body of Christ, in which we are members, and each member must perform its part in the body, the church. And as the Lord while on earth personally chose, and sent forth in the ministry, it follows that He now does the same through the members of His body, the church, which is also the ground and pillar of the truth. And as the body is not one member, but many, the foot does not say, Because I am not the head, I am not of the body. Even so in the church, one member cannot say, because I am the or that, and you are incompetent to decide who shall be called, I will debate to you &c. No brethren, this is not Christ's order in His church. In Christ there is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, neither male nor female, but all one in Christ Jesus.

I am fully convinced that God in Christ through the church calls the ministry; and although in the church there is diversity of gifts, and those members we may think less honorable, upon the Lord may be far more abundant honor; for while He gives authority to His servants, He gives to every man his work, and we have no right to doubt the competency of any member of the body doing its part. I know that some members think that certain brethren should be named, or nominated, and from these the members should elect one, and for a precedent refer to Act. 23. I have considered this suggestion, but as it does not apply to the selection of the common ministry, it is not feasible. In that case one was to be chosen to the apostleship to fill the place of Judas who by transgression fell; and the one eligible to fill this place, must have some peculiar qualifications which apply to that position only. "Wherefore of these men which have accompanied with us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us, beginning from the baptism of John, unto that same day that He was taken up from us; must one be obtained to be a witness with us of His resurrection." And they appointed two.

We would say, they nominated two, for whom they gave forth their votes (as we say). In that case this order was feasible, for when we consider the unpopularity attached to a follower of Jesus, who was set for a sign to be spoken against, the would-be-columbar when he heard Jesus tell him that the foxes have holes, and the birds have nests, but He had not where to lay His head, his armor soon abated; and when His followers heard that His flesh must be eaten &c., became offended, went back and followed no more after Him, it is very presumable that Barabas and Matthias were the only two who had the required qualifications. If so, they could readily be nominated. But the election of brethren to serve in the ministry in our age of the church is a different matter. Who can judge a brother's ability to preach? This can be known by trial only. Who shall, who will dare to name, appoint, or nominate brethren to be voted for? Surely the elders will not, who then will? Why every member of the body of Christ, the church for their eyes will say, who it will be called. The electoral board brethren may be voted for, amounts to nothing. It is not certain that all cast their lots for Matthias, yet he was numbered with the eleven. Neither is it at all certain that one of a half-dozen nominated brethren for whom all the members would be obliged to vote for, would command a majority of the whole vote, or any one that is in the church's order, even today. At the elections I have been present, very respectfully when the elected brother had a majority of 1 the vote cast. On several occasions there being a tie vote between two brethren, the church was called together and informed that two brethren had a tie vote, and then under the circumstances it would be for the members to decide whether both should be declared elected, or the election to be void. In every such a case when I was present the unanimous vote was both elected. In a few cases where I was present, it happened that one brother had but a few more votes than the other, and in these cases the church was informed of the condition of things, and asked again to vote whether she will have both, or only the one who had a few more votes than the other. I believe I have witnessed three such cases, and in two of them the unanimous voices of the church was, both elected. Brethren, I feel assured there can be no improvement on the church order of electing officers.

Suppose we admit the idea that some members are incompetent to decide who to vote for, and in such cases allow a certain sort of election-calling; that is, some competent member tell the incompetent ones who to vote for. Would this insure unanimity of thought? If there was but one member so to elector, this incompetent floating vote might be concentrated, but would that be the voice of the church? Might not the member a well come forward and cast so many votes for him, as to send forward so many of his proxies to do it? But suppose there are several members in the church that feel themselves competent to instruct the incompetent members for whom to vote; and each one of these competents has a favorite nephew or friend to vote for, then how will it be? May not this floating vote as well be scattered among a dozen brethren, as to be in this way concentrated upon half that number? But who are the incompetent members? I find as much division among the officials in the church as among the laity.

On several occasions I remember when the Elder was nearly alone in his choice, and in each case the election was a success. In one of the cases the Elder has since said to me, I am sure of my choice. Who then should dictate? The only election-calling that is admissible is PRAY-ER. Plead with God for guidance, not for myself only, but for all the members, and the result will amply upon.

A BEAUTIFUL SYNONYM.

BY E. R. STITLER.

A NEW subscription also was written over him, in letters of Greek, and Latin and Hebrew: THIS IS THE KING OF THE JEWS" (Luke 23: 38).

We have all doubtless many times read the story of the crucifixion. We wish here to show how, in originally the inscriptions, or the number of languages contained therein, with the names given in the command for Pilate, could Pilate write these different languages at the same time? We would not suppose he could. We would name from the different languages used, that to write in Greek and Latin and Hebrew, that it would have to be written at three different times, and we learn that the object of this was that none might be misapprehended or deceived.

It was written in Greek, which was the general language of even across Western Asia, and which would be familiar to many Jews from Canaan, Egypt and elsewhere; it was also written in the Syriac, called "Hebrew," the vernacular language of Palestine; and it was written in Latin, probably for the use of the Romans, many of whom would pass along at Jerusalem during the "passion week," or Jewish Passover. Pilate was so exact in writing the subscription, so that none who came should be deceived or misapprehended; how do we not suppose that God was equally as exact in expressing His language concerning His mode of baptism, as given in Mat. 28: 19. And then not in any accents contained in this body and essential command, as there are languages used in the subscriptions? and yet how many read, preach, and practice it as one act, omitting the first and second, and applying the third action of the Godhead only, for the "remission of sins," and thereby expecting to receive the gift of the HOLY GHOST.

THE HOLY BIBLE.

GOD'S holy Bible, precious Book, On which I oft with rapture look!

In childhood years, so fair and bright, We read God's Word by morning light;

But now some men have grown so wise, That they the Scriptures lightly prize.

Sometimes I question if indeed The holy men delight to read The sacred Scriptures every day.

Let others take the course they will, I shall esteem the Bible still; In all its truths I will believe.

Die with the Bible at my side.

THE LITERAL MEANING OF THE INSPIRED PRECEPTS OUR ONLY SAFE GUIDE IN RELIGIOUS FAITH AND PRACTICE.

"Thou shalt love God, thyself, and thy neighbor." (Psalm 73: 24)

NUMBER II.

1. The departed heathen world, not an infidel, yet here and there of religion, faith and practice. Now, as then, Christian, and not heathen nation.

some falsely plead. We can then by no means accept the popular doctrine of the world "it makes no difference what a man believes if he is only sincere."

Once a friend of mine, who had been initiated in the faith of affusion for baptism, but because persuaded that the Scriptures contained no precept or example for any mode, but immersion, if anything instead of the baptism authorized by Christ and taught in his Divine Law, be administered to those, whose consciences have been duped to accept the traditions of men in lieu of the commands of Jesus; they may be ever so conscientious, and yet it will not be true that "Baptism" will have been the "answer of a good conscience" to them.

Such is the horrid and blasphemous, though legitimate conclusion of the doctrine that "it makes no difference what a man believes, if he is only sincere."

5. Human tradition is not an infallible guide, in matters of religious faith and practice.

Tradition means "handed down," hence I allude to it as the medium through which any thing is transmitted from one to another. Tradition may be a good thing or a bad thing. We are enjoined to despise the tradition of men, whether communicated by word or epistle (2 Thess. 2: 15; 3: 6).

bitter displeasure of God which awaits all who sin against light and knowledge. The way of ignorance may be the way of death, but the result of known and deliberate transgression is inevitable ruin (Jas. 4: 17; Matt. 11: 25, 22; Luke 12: 47, 48).

LAND MARKS.

BY S. S. MOHLER.

NUMBER I.

FOR I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation unto every one that believeth (Rom. 1: 16).

This is the language of experience, Paul before this writing had realized much of the prediction concerning himself recorded in Acts 9: 16, "For I will show him how great things he must suffer for my name's sake."

The inquiry however, reflects the popular mind on the subject, and the multitudinous denominational efforts, are just that many efforts to meet their inquiry; hence while some, taking the authority of the Gospel, urge baptism for the remission of sins, others object, and say, baptism is in nowise an essential condition of pardon, but is simply to represent the death, burial and resurrection of Christ.

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE,
S. H. BASHOR,
M. M. ESHELMAN, } EDITORS.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent post-paid, to any address in the United States or Canada, for $1.00 per annum. Those sending ten names and $15.00, will receive an extra copy free of charge. For all over this number the agent will be allowed 10 cents for each additional name, which amount can be deducted from the money, before sending it to us. Money Orders, Drafts, and Registered Letters may be sent at our risk. They should be made payable to Moore, Bashor & Esheleman. Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE, BASHOR & ESHELMAN,
Lamarck, Carroll Co., Ill.

LAMARCK, ILL., FEBRUARY 7, 1876.

THE city of London now covers 122 square miles, and contains a population of 3,489,428, among whom are 222,986 more women than men.

THE Brethren at Ashland, Ohio, have been having a glorious meeting. Forty-six were added to the church by baptism, and several applicants besides.

BROTHER Lemuel Hillery is engaged in his missionary work in the Central Illinois missionary field. His family remains at their home in Shannon, Ill.

IT is said that thirty thousand people have emigrated from Georgia to Texas and the Western States during the last year. "Westward the star of empire takes its way."

WE want the name and address of some one in every family of members where the BRETHREN AT WORK is not taken, so that we can send them sample copies. Send the names along.

AN exchange says, that among the curiosities owned by Dr. Douglas, of Phoenixville, Pa., are bricks made by the children of Israel in the day of Pharaoh, and a mammy 4,000 years old.

THOUGH the famine in India is over, yet the effects of it are still felt in all parts of the country. About 120,000 children have been made orphans by the calamity. Famines and pestilences will come.

IT is said that the President and Mrs. Hayes, though frequently invited to attend the Washington theatres, have so far declined them. This is certainly a good example, whatever else may be said against them.

JUST at this time some of the Americans are doing all in their power to throw the Bible out of public schools, but in England there is being issued, in detached parts, an annotated edition of the Bible for the use of schools.

WE are about out of some back numbers, and therefore cannot furnish complete sets of the present volume. New subscribers will commence with the present number. The price of the paper from now till the end of the year will be $1.40.

A CARD just received from the Primitive Christian office informs us that they are out of the Brethren's Almanacs, and hence we can fill no more orders for them. Those who have sent money for Almanacs will please inform us what they want done with it.

AN excellent way to follow up revival efforts, is to place a copy of the BRETHREN AT WORK for one year, in the hands of all new converts. A change of heart demands a change of mental food. If you want to save young converts, and make of them useful members of the church, see that they are well supplied with good, wholesome reading matter.

IT is more than likely that the brethren sent to Denmark, are now in England on their way home. If a good opening presents itself, they may spend a few weeks preaching on the island, proclaiming the same Gospel that tradition says was preached there by the apostle Paul more than eighteen hundred years ago.

DURING the past week we were favored with an unusual amount of visitors, and among them brethren Luerborg and J. L. Meyers of Lee Co., Ill. They had been west preaching in adjoining churches, and were on their way to Pine Creek, thinking of spending considerable time preaching during the remainder of the winter.

THIS week we publish an interesting letter from Enoch Eby, the reading of which will cause all lovers of the Danish to rejoice, for they can see that their united efforts in contributing to the support of the mission has not been in vain. The church is now fully organized, and no doubt in a good, healthy, working condition. This is certainly encouraging to the missionary cause.

BROTHER Benjamin Miller, of Cedar Co., Iowa, pulled our latch string one day last week. He always meets us with a warm grasp and is full of cheer. He contemplates returning to this part of the county. Lamarck (or Jerusalem as some call it) possesses strong attractive properties, and those who once lived here, and have moved away, find it pleasant to return and worship with the Brethren on Mt. Zion, (for our meeting-house stands on Zion's Hill.

AN ingenious minister brings out the following as a new revision of the five points of Calvinism. He concluded that the ism was old enough to be revised; at least the new version is not much less logical than the first:

1. A man gets religion when he don't want it.
2. When he has got it he don't know it.
3. If he knows it, he hasn't got it.
4. If he has it, he can't lose it.
5. If he loses it, he never had it.

THE Baptists of England propose to take care of their aged and infirm ministers, and have already raised a considerable sum for that purpose. It is a disgrace to the common cause of Christianity the way some denominations are neglecting their poor and infirm. Not only the disabled ministers, but the poor of other classes need the special care of the church. No church should allow her ministers to suffer, after having worked hard and spent all their means in defense of the truth. We have but little faith in any congregation or church that will allow a worthy, disabled minister to suffer for the wants of the comforts of life, especially when possessed by the church in abundance.

ELDER D. B. Ray, editor of the Baptist Battle Flag, is writing up and publishing a series of articles on Baptist succession, claiming that Jesus Christ is the head and founder of the Baptist church, and to make good their claims, endeavors to prove a line of Baptist churches from the apostolic churches to the present time. There is one thing we would like some one to clear up, and if possible, make plain. We have read a number of works on Baptist succession, and every one of them, in tracing the Baptist churches to the times of the apostles, run the line through churches practicing trine immersion. Why is this? Why do they not run the line through churches practicing single immersion? Will some one explain?

SOME months ago the whole country was startled by the discovery of what was supposed to be a petrified giant of huge proportions. The stone man was examined by the learned, and pronounced a petrified human being, and supposed to have belonged to some extinct race that existed thousands of years before the creation of Adam, the first man of the Bible. As the giant was in possession of a tail about two inches long this was regarded as proof that man descended from the monkey, and hence showed the Bible a fable and of course not true. But it has now turned up that the Cardiff Giant is one of P. T. Barnum's humbugs, was made by a man whose name is Hull, who has deceived the people more than once. Thus another effort to find man beyond the date the Bible assigns to his origin, has proved itself false.

LAST week we enjoyed a pleasant visit from Eld. John Wise, of Pa., accompanied by his wife and their two sons. We were pleased to find them in good health and enjoying themselves in sweet fellowship with the children of God. Bro. Wise preached for us, several times at Georgetown, and three telling discourses in Lamarck. From here he went to the Arnold's Grove congregation, where he will remain a few days and then to Waterloo, Iowa where he will locate for the time being. As a preacher of ability, Bro. Wise is extensively known among our people; small of stature, yet an excellent voice; was favored with a good education in early life; applied himself diligently to the study of the Scriptures and hence has done much in the furtherance of the cause. He was elected to the ministry at the age of twenty-two, and has served in the office thirty-four years, twenty-two of which he has been an Elder. His travels have been extensive, amounting to as much as fifteen thousand miles in one year. He left his home in Pa. five weeks ago, and has filled sixty-two appointments since. God bless him in his labors, that he may be spared to accomplish still more good in the world.

"It would seem," says a certain writer, "as though ministers of the Gospel might find enough to preach about without dragging the silver question into the domain of theology. What extraordinary knowledge have they of the currency question that they should presume to put men down as thieves who interpret the provisions of a bond somewhat differently from themselves? What chapter and verse of the Bible gives them warrant to arraign the intention and honesty of financiers and statesmen as a problem of economics or finance? If these men knew how much discredit they reflect on their candor and good sense in the treatment of religious doctrines by their dogmatic and vituperative handling of purely secular questions, they might be more slow to use their ministerial standing quite so dogmatically in support of positions which, to say the least, are questioned by men as devoted to public morality as themselves." Ministers should learn to hold the pulpit too sacred to discuss purely secular subjects, having no bearing whatever on religion. Above all things do keep God's things separate from those belonging to Caesar. If preachers will see to it that they shun not to declare the whole counsel of God, they will have enough to keep them at work one life-time at least.

BOOKS.

AMONG the valuable books just received at this office are the following:
Josephus Complete Works, in one large volume, bound in leather,.....$3.50
Cramer's Complete Concordance, large size, well bound in leather. Just the thing for every Bible student,.....3.50
The same in cloth binding,.....2.75
Prince of the House of David. Every family ought to have this book,.....2.00
Pillar of Fire,.....2.00
Biblical Antiquities,.....1.50
Campbell and Owen's Debate,.....1.50
Campbell on Baptism,.....1.20
Reason and Revelation,.....2.00
Voice of Seven Thunders,.....1.50
The Philosophy of the Plan of Salvation,.....1.50
Any of the above works will be sent post paid on receipt of the annexed price. Address this office.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

JUST now there is much interest manifesting itself over the Eastern Question, and not a few are carefully examining the subject in the light of prophecy. Some days ago we listened to a discourse by Eld. J. M. Stephenson, of Chicago, in which the speaker presented his views, of which the following is a summary:
According to prophecy there were to be two invasions of Turkey by Russia before the final move. The first to fail, the second to succeed; but neither to result in the last "great battle of God Almighty," and that before the last great conflict "the land of Canaan" must be brought back from the sword and re-settled by the Jews, who will have been gathered from all nations; and that this grand result may grow out of the present war—that at all events, the present difficulties will be amicably adjusted. He also stated that England would be the leading nation to restore the Jews, and to protect them in their own land; that it would be a master stroke of policy to restore the nationality of Israel; that they would do more toward maintaining the equilibrium between the Orient and Occident, than a standing army from Europe and Asia; that, if England ever gets her pay from Turkey, she must take it in landed estate; that the only part of Turkey's domain that can be sold for money is Palestine; and that the rich Jews having a mortgage on that land for money loaned the Sultan, would gladly purchase England's title.
The speaker said, that there would be a time of peace and prosperity for the Jews, after their restoration, as evidenced by the declaration of the prophet that when Gog, the emperor of Russia, shall send his armies to rob the rich bankers and merchant prince of the Jews, they will find them dwelling in unvalled villages or cities, showing that being at peace with the world, they will have made no preparations of defense.
He also stated, that no national policy will prompt the proud ambassador to become the imperial robber of the Jews—that no interest, except a sordid love of gold, will prompt him to say to his cabinet, "Come, let us go to the land of unvalled villages that has been always waste, but is now brought back from the sword, and against the people who are gathered out of the nations to take a spoil, to carry away gold and silver, and to take a great spoil."

The speaker also stated that England will be his great contestant, who, to oppose him, will form an alliance with half the world, against which the other half will be arrayed, headed by great Gog in alliance with whom will be Prussia, Germany and Italy. That in the midst of this conflict for the supremacy of the world, Christ will come to overthrow the assembled nations, organize His kingdom, and rule the world in righteousness.

ONE BAPTISM.

Brother Moore:—
WHAT does Paul mean in Eph. 4:5, where he says, "one baptism?" A few evenings ago I heard a preacher read it "one immersion," and tried to prove that was what Paul meant. Give us your views through the BRETHREN AT WORK. A BROTHER.
REMARKS.—By the term one baptism, Paul did not refer to the number of actions required to constitute Christian baptism. There is not one particle of evidence in all antiquity favoring the idea that the apostle is referring to single immersion, while on the other hand, every ancient Greek scholar, without one known exception, who has written on the subject, says that it refers to the three-fold immersion. Every known Greek witness from the early ages of the church is on the side of trine immersion.
As before remarked, Paul in this case is not writing about the number of actions in baptism; he is speaking of the ordinance itself, and if we want to learn the number of actions that are required to constitute Christian baptism, we must go to Matt. 28: 19, where it is taught in full. Had Paul meant to teach single immersion he would have said, "one Lord, one faith and one dip" (bapto), but he did not say so. In the place of bapto in the Greek, he has baptismo, which, when properly rendered into our language, is dipping, hence one dipping, making it admissible of more than one action, and with this agree all records of antiquity.
Chrysostom, one of the ablest Greek scholars of antiquity, a man who is said to have been able to repeat the Bible in Greek, from beginning to end, and who lived and preached in a church that was established by the apostles themselves, when speaking of this passage says: "Christ delivered to his disciples one baptism in three immersions of the body, when he said, 'go teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.'" Here Chrysostom connects Paul's one baptism with the great commission, making them both refer to trine immersion.
It should be borne in mind that the mode of baptism was not a matter of dispute at that time, therefore to use Paul's language as evidence against the three-fold practice is not logical. Christian baptism is one in the same sense that the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit are one, that is, one in the sense of these being one. The apostle was reasoning on unity, showing the oneness of different characteristics of the New Testament revelation—showing that in all its parts it was the same for both Jew and Gentile, both bond and free, never once alluding to the different parts of which certain things consisted.
To render the term one immersion does not better the case, for immersion is anglicized Latin, and no better than baptism, and when we go to Latin scholars of antiquity, they say Christian baptism consists of three actions. Men who mix up the English and Latin in order to get the phrase one immersion before the people, and thereby deceive them, instead of giving the pure English rendering, one dipping, deserve to have their logic exposed. Immersion, all scholars will admit, is anglicized Latin, and therefore must mean whatever the pure Latin term, from which it is derived means. If it, when prefixed by the numerical adjective one means but a single dip, how does it come that the whole Latin church, composed of members who spoke and read the Latin, practiced trine immersion from the earliest ages? Did they not understand their own native tongue? I do not object materially to the rendering of the term by one baptism, provided men will tell the truth of what lays behind it. But for men, who claim to be scholars, to attempt to pass off such erroneous doctrine as truth when it is directly opposite to all evidence on the subject, is going considerably farther than they have papers for.
The best Greek authority in existence says, one baptism refers to trine immersion, and the united practice of the Latin world shows that those who read and spoke that language as their native tongue, believed that the term immersion also referred to the same method of baptizing, and when it comes to a modern scholar, who knows but little about the Latin, standing up against the united practice of millions of competent judges, it amounts to but little in the scale of evidence.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Dear Paper:— ON the night of Jan. 9th, at 12:30 A. M., in company with brethren Younce and Eshelman, myself and lady took the train at Waterloo, Iowa, en route for Ill., Ind., and the East. At 9 A. M. we arrived at Freeport, Ill., where Bro. Eshelman separated from us. He to return home to comfort the little ones, and pen glad tidings for our numerous readers, and we to journey East-ward. Arrived in Chicago, and after a delay of five hours, entered one of the elegant coaches of the B. & O. B. R. Co., and were soon steaming out of Chicago, the Garden City of the West, into the darkness, and over the prairies and woodlands of Ind., among whose people we spent so many seasons of refreshing and joy, weeks and months before. At three in morning, as we neared Syracuse where Bro. Younce resides, the approach whistle from the locomotive, scolding through the stillness of night, brought from him the exclamation, "There, my wife heard that," and then we thought of the happy meeting at home, and the "God bless you," as he told of his labors at Waterloo, and of sinners turning to God—then came the old, old reverie of absent loved one, in the home of repose, and wondered if, when the pines of life's train grew monotonous and slow, and the bugle sounds near the station of death, if then we could look as happy as Bro. Younce did, leaving his earthly home, and eagerly look beyond and say, there, they hear that in heaven and I'll soon be at home? God grant us all in death, this eager, anxious longing, and this blissful end.

Without giving in detail all the incidents of our journey, will only add that sister Kate Saylor, whose name we failed to mention before, was in our company, adding much to its cheerfulness, until near W. Va. line in Ohio, where she stopped off to visit her brother, who is attending school there, preparing for usefulness in future life; trust it may result in good toward only this world, but to the enlarging of God's house also.

We arrived at Greenville in the afternoon of 12th, where we were met by Bro. Dr. Bolcher and a son of Eld. J. F. Oller, who conveyed us, with some friends from Cumberland Co., Pa., to Bro. Oller's house in Waynesboro. After the greetings and supper were over, we held a session of prayer with quite a number of visitors, experiencing what really comforts the heart in any stage of Christian life—gratitude to God for life preserved, hospitable and entertaining friends along with a pleasant home and place to rest.

Next morning, in company with Bro. Oller, we attended services at the "Hale" church, large audience and good interest. In the evening, back to Waynesboro, where an overflowing house greeted us, and by request, our efforts in the interest of Truth were continued for a few evenings; preaching principally, on Christian duty and doctrine. Found the church generally in union, and much interest manifested in the discourses preached. This being more of a meeting for the members and building up of the faith of those already in Christ, we did not anticipate any results, yet we feel confident, had our meetings continued longer, many would have accepted of the Truth. During the day-time we spent the time in visiting friends, among them the family of our "special contributor," Bro. D. B. M. Oiler. The only one of us could express a feeling that was: "Dear God, it was like a glorious vision or a powerful prayer." "The heart" Bro. M. Oiler has a pleasant home, good library and a love for the church, and has promised to still continue his articles for our columns, and with this promise our readers can look for something of occasion by reaching 19th. We also had the pleasure of meeting our esteemed brother Eld. Henry Koenig, now in his eighty-fifth year. His eyes are growing dim and his steps feeble, though not sufficiently so as to cause him to remain away from the solemn assembly and 12 hours of prayer. His last day are here, and soon all will be numbered, and then—Ah, what! A home in heaven? Yes indeed, and amid the shades of the celestial paradise, and beside the crystal river, and the great white throne, perpetual day, eternal spring, everlasting youth, and the songs of redeeming love with the union of the sanctified, worshipping and praising God forever and evermore. Will we meet him there? Yes, by God's grace, and the patience and blood of Jesus Christ.

On Saturday 19th inst, Bro. Oller, wife and daughter Annie, accompanied us to this "Mun- or" church. On the way we stopped in Hagers-town at the residence of Bro. E. S. Miller; spent an hour pleasantly and then passed on. Were kindly received by the members here, and up till to-day have had but two meetings, rain and mud hindering. Of our visit here, will have more to say in future. Saturday I go to Browns-ville to remain a few days, leaving my companion here.

May God, in His infinite mercy, bless His people and church every-where. All our correspondents can address me at Dunkirk, Ohio, as we will reach there Feb. 12th. Small-pox is raging in Huntington, Pa.—Primitive home, Bro. E. D. Kindig's wife died with the disease. Trust all our Primitive friends will be spared.

W. M. F.

CULBERTSON AGAIN.

OUR readers will remember that in Vol. 2, No. 51, we gave place to an article from C. L. Culbertson, followed by some comments on his theory of the "invisible church." In reply to my observations, Cornelius L. Culbertson has sent in an article about six feet in length, the first half of which he addresses "Mr. E." at least seventeen times. Just why he should get so much "Mr. E." in his article, and so little Lord and Master, I fail to see; for "Mr. E." is not salvation nor the way of salvation, but is himself a man of "like passions" with others. (Acts 14:15). A portion of the remainder of his article is here given, not simply to reply to him, but to set some things right in reference to baptism and regeneration, two things that our opponents frequently confound, in opposition to the belief we maintain on those questions. Now hear him:

"The particular texts are John 3:5, and Titus 3:5, on which much of the stress of this controversy is laid. But in considering them attentively, I find nothing in either of them to lead us to think baptism is the regeneration spoken of there. As to the former of them (John 3:5), when our Lord says, 'Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.' It is (after all the contempt with which that interpretation has been treated) very possibly he may mean by a well-known figure, to express one idea by both those clauses, that is, the purifying influences of the Spirit cleansing the mind as water does the body; as elsewhere to be baptized with the Holy Ghost and with fire. (Matt. 3) signifies to be baptized by the Spirit operating like fire; but if there there is implied a reference to baptism in these words, (which I own I am much inclined to believe) it will by no means follow that baptism is regeneration."

"If by no means follows that baptism is regeneration." Not at all! If baptism be regeneration, then regeneration must be baptism. There is no evading this. "Then cometh Jesus to John to be baptized of him." Did Jesus need regeneration? "Know ye not, that so many of us as were regenerated into Jesus Christ, were regenerated without death?" How does that sound? and this? "Buried with him in regeneration." Was Christ regenerated? "John preached the repentance of repentance." I want the reader to note this, for father our friend C. come to the defense of the opinions of many learned divines on this subject, and seems to cross his own path in this matter.

Baptism is one of the means on man's part, of attaining a regenerate state, and is not the regenerate state itself. Baptism is one of the means, and the regenerate state the effect. Faith, repentance, and baptism must be attended to by man, then God pardons, gives the gift of the Holy Ghost, the hope of eternal life; and when man has all these, he is in a regenerate state. We must not confound God's work, and the work assigned to man to attain regeneration. The thing to be done to the body, the outward acts, is given to man to perform, while the work of the soul God supplies. God promises to do certain things for us, if we do certain things for ourselves. He always telling us what to do, and what not to do.

But friend Culbertson insists that "Mr. E. must acknowledge that many learned and pious divines have taught and contended, that regeneration does, in the strictest propriety of speech, signify baptism." He says I "must acknowledge" this. There is no dodging; I must, hence I do; but what of it? The question is not what many learned and pious divines have taught, nor what some learned divines have taught, and do teach, but what does God teach? This is the important query, and the only one that can be answered with safety, and that is worth answering. "According to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost" (Titus 3:5). Here we have God's answer, which is regeneration's washing, i. e., the regeneration that comes by baptism—not by baptism alone, but by faith, repentance and baptism. In the same connection we read of the "renewing of the Holy Ghost," meaning not that the Holy Ghost is renewed, but that man is renewed by the Holy Ghost. All these perform an important part in the induction of a man into Christ, and he who attempts to drop one, or substitute something else in place of them, launches his vessel on the great sea of doubts and perplexities, and sails he knows not whither.

Friend C. next attempts to prove that the penitent on the cross was no preacher! Well, who said he was? These are the words I used in my former argument on this subject: The poor penitent was baptized and a preacher. "Hold! where did you learn that?" says one. Learn it? Well in the same chapter that Mr. C. finds evidence that the poor penitent was first in the "invisible" church. It is called the chapter of supposition. Does he not see the point? If not, let him read the first chapter of supposition again. But hear him a little farther:

"God is no respecter of persons; consequently He will not take some to glory on an exception, and require others to observe all the duties pertaining to this life. If He did, He would be a respecter of persons."

Well, but you say the penitent on the cross did go to glory without baptism, and then turn round and say, if so, God is a respecter of persons. You insist that a man must be baptized in order to get into the Baptist church, but still he can get into the "invisible church" without it. Then a man can get into the invisible church with less conditions than into the Baptist church. Has the Baptist church added anything to the conditions of salvation?

True, God is no respecter of persons, but then He is a respecter of character and principle, and this is just what He respected in the poor penitent on the cross. He did not save his body there and then, but then He did respect the poor penitent's soul, and remembered him. One more point. Jesus was not yet dead,—had not died for the sins of the whole world—hence had not sealed His Will with His blood; and so long as the Testator liveth He has perfect right to change His Will. When personally present, He had power to say, "Thy sins be forgiven thee," and it was so, but when He ascended and left His Will, His Word and Truth, this was from that time forth the only "power of God into salvation," and this same power remains with us unto this day. By the New Testament, therefore, we must be governed. It contains all the rules of faith and practice, and God's manner of dealing with His people, that are necessary. There is no other revelation from God, that shows how and what we must do to be saved.

VERMOREL has a new law by which criminals convicted of murder and worthy of capital punishment, shall be imprisoned for two years before execution shall take place, so that if the innocence of the prisoner can be established, he may have the benefit of it.

With more truth than poetry, an old sage has divided the world into two great parties: One goes ahead and works for the public good in the best way they know how. The other stand off with their hands in their pockets, and with the heartlessness of true grumblers, ask why things were not done in a different way. This is like some men waiting for something to turn up, while others go to work and turn something up.

News from the Eastern war somewhat mixed. Peace negotiations going on, yet the Russians, with victorious armies closing in on all the roads leading out of Constantinople.

SATURDAY NIGHT.

Sweet Home.

WHAT is home? A place of rest from the toils of the day. A sweet resting place where we can meet the loved ones who dwell there. Long years ago, a man who never had a home, wrote the beautiful words, "Sweet home." Yes, sweet home. The best place on earth. The paradise of this world. What would we do without a home? No place at which to rest from the cares and toils of the day. It would be miserable. Yet how many are there who have no home? There are thousands who never knew what a home is. They have been cast out into the world with no one to care for them. Have not even a place where to lay their head. What a pity it is, to have no home; no kind mother; no good father to provide for the wants of the helpless; no brothers and sisters to help bear the burdens of life.

To-night it is cold. The ground is covered with snow, but I am at home, yes, sweet home—where all is bright and cheerful. Nothing to mar the feelings of any one. It is pleasant. Have been hard at work all week, from early dawn to near the small hours of the night. Working hard to feed hungry souls with suitable healthy food. This is not a task, it is a pleasure. It makes one feel good to think he has spent the week doing his duty. Then when the week's work is over, to have a cheerful home where he can rest and be refreshed.

While sitting here at the desk, we think of even the many sad homes in the land. May be at this very minute there are thousands of homes where all is sad. Not one ray of cheerfulness to brighten up the thorny pathway of life. A mother may be weeping over her little infant that has just closed its eyes in death. Poor mother! It is hard for her to give up the precious little object, yet she must. Then we think of the broken-hearted young wife. Her head is buried in her hands, and her heart almost ready to break. What is the matter? Enough to break a woman's heart. She moved in respectable society, is from a well-to-do family. She gave her heart to the man she loved. She gave all into his hands. She was happy, with bright prospects before. But alas! she was betrayed. She knew not that she was marrying a tippler. She trembles, is in constant dread. Don't know where he is. Poor girl! God pity the drunkard's wife. But we think of other places, can't call them homes, they are not—where a poor, broken-down mother is struggling with poverty. Her clothes are thin; no food in the house. The fire is getting low; the children are crying for food; they draw near mother and bury their heads in her bosom, but she is only weeping, she cannot help them. Where is their father? Ask the saloon keeper. How thankful we ought to be that we have good comfortable homes.

How many sweet homes are there to-night? How many places where all is sunshine? where the family love each other, and take pleasure in each other's society? where there are no angry words, no quarreling, naught to mar the beauty of the home circle. God bless the sweet homes to-night, and help the inmates to live happy, and do all in their power to make each other happy. How I wish I could impress on the mind of all, the necessity of making home a little paradise; a happy little Eden here on earth, where all the family can meet and enjoy the closing of the week. Clouds may come and go, and even dark, gloomy hours may pass, yet all should labor to make the best of it, and if possible have a happy home.

Not all wealthy homes are happy homes. Some of the finest palaces of the land are the abodes of broken-hearted people. There is a place in the heart that wealth cannot fill. There are many neat homes inside of rude huts. Around the large fire-place the family can sit and sing

"Home, home, sweet home."

But think of the thousand who this night are shivering in the cold—they have no home, but little clothing, no food, all is misery. God bless the home-ess. There is a happy home in the Great Beyond, in the other world—where all is sunshine. We hope to meet thousands there. Many of them have no home on earth, but the great and good Spirit can give them one above. Let us hasten on, we will soon be at home—A. B. MOORE.

"NORMAN" can be more absurd than the idea of "looking guilty" proves guilt. An honest man charged with crime, is much more likely to blush at the accusation than the real offender, who is generally prepared for such an event, and has his face ready made. The very thought of being suspected of anything criminal will bring the blush into an innocent man's cheek nine times out of ten.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO GEORGE BUCHER.

Dear Brother:—

I WROTE you two unsatisfactory letters on the subject of interpretation, and I now write a third, which may prove equally unsatisfactory. When I referred to the established principles of interpretation, I had no thought of any rules authorized by man, but that which is the nature of mind and of revelation necessitate. The rule is missed by most readers, and the application is difficult. Say has so deformed us, that what is plain to a sinless being, is obscure to us. Just in the degree that we have the mind of God, will our mind think with Him.

- The principles I had referred to, are these: 1. What is the object of revelation? 2. What are its relations to nature, which serves as its medium? 3. What is its relation to man, which is to appropriate it? 4. What is its correspondence to the complex constitution of Christ as God and man?

This comes very difficultly in the Bible. — These principles are established, essential; without them there would be neither God, nor man, nor nature, nor revelation. If we understand and apply them, there will be no two striking opinions throughout the whole church. Nature, the middle term between the Revealer and His creation, is too much ignored by the brethren. Most of us want to look only to the Spirit for the unfolding of the Holy Oracles. So did not Jesus. He was always dealing with the visible as the finger board to the invisible.

In the constitution of Christ, the natural and supernatural complemented each other, and spoke to each other. To know His nature, is to know the true principles of revelation.

L. H. BURTON.

IN MEMORIAM.

On the 1st of Feb., Sophia Winters of Malheur Co., Ore., died at the residence of her father, Bro. Peter Phoez.

Sister Sophia was one that was loved by all who knew her. She leaves a husband and four children, mostly small, to mourn her loss. Her father is to them indeed a No more will be a comfort and a reward for their daily work and labors. Her fatherly voice will be heard; but we may well deplore the loss of a good and pious woman, who was a laborer in the Kingdom of God.

Sister Sophia was a very early and devoted member of the church, and her loss is felt in the church as well as in her numerous friends. — Sister Sophia's death is a heavy and great position, and we are all united in good courage, and we commend her to the arms of our Father in heaven, who will receive her into the church, when you next appear. — I have been acquainted with her for many years, and she has been an example for all. Her husband, who is within the fold, we hope, while he is mourning the loss of his dear companion, he will give a course of ponder over the Gospel truths and seek his Saviour, while it is yet all a day, so that when death shall claim him, he may be prepared to go and stand gloriously with those who have gone before.

The funeral services were conducted by the brethren from words found in Amos: "Prepare to meet thy God."

L. HENRY.

New Sharon, Iowa.

THE CHURCH AT WORK.

Dear Brethren:—

The year 1877 seems to foretell a glorious future for our brotherhood. — Far and home, with a growing interest in the subject of religion as presented by our people and a commendable zeal for still greater effort by the church itself, is a prospect most encouraging.

Letters from brethren, at work in new fields—North, South, East and West, show that the flame is spreading. — The weekly report of conversions is a living witness that the work is well appreciated by those outside, and the field is really widening. Ministers at work in States of our own happy country, hitherto untouched by us; some also at work in Canada, one in Old England, with four in Denmark, we think the most glorious prospect our people have ever had. It is certain at least, that it is what we have never had before. — We know that many will say: "Thank the Lord for it." And it would seem that our people are now determined to make the Lord's prayer a practical one: not merely to say: "Thy kingdom come," but to work for it as well, that it may indeed come, first to ourselves and families, then to our neighbors and lastly to strangers.

Never before, do we think, the prospect for our people, and for the truth as they hold it, as bright as it is now. Never before could we say, that the church was so fully alive to its own work, and that the church was at work. — "But it is good to be zealously affected always in a good thing" (Gal. 4: 18). This work is most certainly a good thing, both for ourselves, our nation, and for the world, because it cannot be for the injury of any one; therefore we think the zeal so marked for the time, is most commendable. May it continue to spread, and may all the efforts be made in love and union, is my prayer.

Such is the close of the present year, and such is the opening of the next one. — The last has been an eventful one, not only to us as a people, but to the world as well, and what other great events may come even in the next year, none but God can tell. But that the truth may prevail with all and in all, is our constant hope.

LONDON WEST.

FROM GRUNDY CO., IOWA.

Dear Brethren:—

We feel to send you a report of the meetings, lately held at our meeting-house, ten miles West of this place (Grundy Center). On the evening of the fifth of January our dear brother W. J. H. Bauman arrived at our meeting-house and preached for us that evening. He continued until Thursday, Jan. 17, having all twenty meetings. During this time, twelve precious souls were added to the Kingdom of God, and hence united with the church by baptism.

We are just now impressed with a few words, spoken by one of these young and tender lambs for some of his young comrades: "God is working here, there is power in this thing."

Again we think of what one of the young ones said: "I once enjoyed myself in sitting back, and every now and then whisper a little to my young comrades; but now I want to be in every word that is said by the minister. My light is now in that direction."

This is certainly a change of heart, and oh, how glad we are to hear such words, they are cheering to our poor souls.

On the evening of the 17th of Jan., Brother Bauman came to Grundy Center and preached five sermons for us; having our last meeting on Sunday, the 20th. At this meeting Bro. Wetzler opened in English, and Bro. Bauman followed in English, and in the closing remarks, there were but few in the house but what had to shed tears. O, what a feast this was to our poor souls! We could look forward to the time when Christ shall come again and take his faithful child, in home to glory, when we can sing the sweet song of Moses and the lamb.

Bro. Bauman goes from here to Marshall Co. into a new field of labor. May the good Lord ever be with and help him to preach the Word, so that many sinners may be called home to Jesus, our Saviour. — Two precious souls came out on the Lord's side here, making in all four precious souls, counting the cost. May they soon come and drink of the riches of God's grace.

J. M. SSVOLA.

Grundy Center, Iowa, Jan. 22, 1878.

LIFE IN THE WEST.

Dear Brethren:—

THERE shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust" (Acts 24: 15).

This was the text to-day, but God preached the sermon.

It was in this wise: In this far West there was a father and a son. They lived together in a sad-house.

Did any of my eastern brethren ever see a sad-house? — Did you ever see a "dug-out?" — Well, "necessity is the mother of invention," and poverty sharpens our wits.

I remember an expression made by my father, when he first landed in Iowa, twenty-one years ago. He raised his eyes, looked over the broad prairie, stretching away as far as the eye could reach, not a house in sight. "It's no wonder," said he, "that land is cheap here, there is so much of it."

Now, when we have lots of land and nothing else, we must put forth all the ingenuity we can muster to make that land go as far as possible.

We go to a hill side and "drift in," cover with poles and sod. This makes the stable, — Pile a few sods around in a square, this forms the pig pen. Then the chicken house, also made of another earth.

Now comes the dwelling house, not marble, nor frame, nor slats, nor logs, but earth, mother earth, primitive mother earth makes the parlor, the kitchen, the dining hall, the bed chamber, the walls, the floors, the partitions, the foundation and the roof.

Now, brethren, when you smile as you read this, remember, that though this may be fun to you, yet it is stern reality with thousands of us on the frontier.

But our Father sends us this message, "If we love Him, He will come and make His abode with us," and no reservations with regard to the kind of houses we live in.

But death also finds his way into our primitive dwellings.

Scene: A little house, ten feet square, a little bedstead of poles and ropes, a bench, a stove, an earth cupboard, shelves of earth, ceiling of sun flower weeds, poles and hay, earth roof, earth walls, earth floor. — For toilet, a few bottles, for clothes press, some pegs (driven into the wall, for light a few panes in an old sash.

Beneath this is the coffin, covered all over with mourning, inside the remains of a young man, eighteen years of age.

Day before yesterday that young man was slightly unwell. Yesterday morning he rested across the bed with the feet to the stove, raised up his head, and a lead-les father for medicine, fell back and was in faintly dead.

To-day Bro. Bauman preached over the remains in a school-house and the temperature out side, standing only a little above zero, but inside the house was packed with warm hearts, sympathetic neighbors and eager listeners. — There was no keeping in church, no li-belous, no cold indignities, but eyes that gazed anxiously at the position, ear that heard, and that seemed hung for every word, seemed to strike a responsive chord in the congregation's heart.

After all, is not this preferable to any, dull-out, religious, death.

All affectionately Yours,

JAMES L. SWITZER.

Worth, Kansas, Jan. 6, 1878.

CHRISTIAN INFLUENCE.

THIS subject has been brought very forcibly to my mind lately by reading one of Bro. Enoch Phoez's letters from Europe, in which he told several interesting incidents, one of our brethren have to the Continent. What a great pity that some brethren seem to be so much inclined to use their influence rather to hinder than to promote the cause of Christianity.

The last and one of the most important commands that our Lord gave to those who should preach the Gospel, we find to be: "Go ye therefore and teach all nations." — In this world we must expect to meet with some opposition, when we would like to hold forth the doctrine of our life and love. — But we are sometimes very faint in our times, saddened to find that some of the brethren, our own brethren who are more, and in fact, average than encourage such a high and holy undertaking — It is probable that brethren do not always think beforehand of the evil influence, such a course might exercise.

Our brethren who are expected to preach God's Word, need all the encouragement which a sympathizing and devout church can give, in order that they may be enabled rightly to divide the word of Truth and work much good — It is not likely that there are many who fully realize the amount of good or evil, that they may accomplish through words of encouragement and comfort; or words of censure and disapproval. — I mean, not many who have not learned through experience the important lesson.

How much better of our brethren in Denmark and at home were encouraged by a sympathetic and pitying brotherhood, than that they should be greeted with words of distrust, if not of open censure. — Let us all try to learn that we exercise an influence for the good of mankind. — Let us study well that we may influence our brethren and the world around us to do good works; we are responsible co-workers for every deed, thought and word while we live in this world.

J. P. CURRY.

Four things are grievously empty; they are a head without brains, a wit without judgment, a heart without honesty, and a purse without money.

DIED.

Obituaries should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and separate from all other business.

HALDERMAN.—In the Lower Trim district of church, Jan. 8, 1878, brother Lewis Halderman, companion of sister Elizabeth Halderman.

Deceased was a worthy brother for upwards of forty years, was a consistent member, a kind husband, and affectionate father to his children. His age at his death was 59 years, 9 months, and one day. His spirit took its flight to God who gave it, and his body was buried in the cold grave to rest, till Christ comes to raise it, and fashion it like his own glorious body.

Brother Halderman was afflicted severely, but bore all with Christian fortitude to the last. He had no desire to get well, and leaves a kind companion and seven children living; two daughters and one son having preceded him. — His remains were taken to the Brethren's meeting-house on the tenth of January, followed by a very large number of sympathizing friends and neighbors where a funeral discourse was delivered by the writer from Revelations 14: 12, 13.

A. YOUNG.

RUNYON.—Died in the Hickory Grove church, Carroll Co., Ill., Jan. 25th, 1878, sister Lydia Runyon, wife of Bro. Henry Runyon, aged nearly 51 years. Disease, dropsy. Funeral services by Bro. George D. Zollars. Text: 2nd Cor. 1: 5.

She leaves a sorely bereaved husband and large family of children to mourn their loss. — But the life and conduct of sister Lydia was so that we have reason to believe that our loss is her great gain.

J. Y. HECKLER.

WESTFALL.—On Jan. 18, at Mechanicsburg, Pa., at house of Bro. David Niswonger, Henry Westfall, aged 84 years, 7 months and 11 days. — Funeral discourse by brother Gray-bell Myers.

J. B. GARVER.

CHURCH NEWS.

From North Coventry, Pa.—I have some good news to tell you. — Bro. Hetrie held a series of meetings in our church at Lawrenceville, and during the meetings more than 30 expressed a desire to unite with the church. They are nearly all young people, and some of them are very young. There was much interest manifested during the meetings and I think there are some more that are almost persuaded.

The meetings closed last Friday. I think we will soon have a series of meetings in our church here at Coventry, and I hope that the interest which has been awakened will increase from day to day. Many of those that have just come into the church, are members of our Sabbath school, and I think the Bible class, of which I told you in my last letter, will be the means of bringing many more into the church. May God, bless and prosper you in your sacred charge, and bury the Lord that has led you in the past, and guide you still, and bring you safely to the end of the journey.

KATHIE H. STEY.

From Waterside, Pa.—Elder James Quinton came to labor for us on the 12th of Jan. — He was here on the evening of the 12th, and next morning, a 10 o'clock meeting at Waterside meeting house, with his usual fervor and warmth of coloring. — Many went to the Snowberger meeting-house, where he labored as a skillful workman in the Master's cause, twice a day, until noon of the 20th, when he went over into Snake Spring Valley to visit Eld. Henry Hershberger, who has been sick for some time. — We had a time of refreshing. — Were much encouraged and found grace to help in time of need. Nine souls came out on the Lord's side and were planted in God's vineyard. Many more were awakened to their eternal interest, and are now counting the cost. — May God help them to dedicate themselves to the service of the Lord.

J. Z. KENTGEE.

From New Paris, Ind.—Enough I am but an imperfect writer, I thought of penning a few thoughts for encouragement of the saints, myself and Bro. Monty, my fellow-laborer, so placed by the church to take turn with brethren Young and Nett, to avoid disappointments at home, did, as we frequently do, a little preaching for the Lord and to the people in our spare time, outside of our church district. According to promise we went to Wakarusa an inland town of about three or five hundred inhabitants. Four or five different churches have preaching here. Held a few meetings with a full house and the best of order. Bro. Metzler, a worthy German and English speaker of this district being with us. — One was made willing to take the cross and easy yoke of Jesus.

DANIEL SHIVELY.

From Pine Creek Church, Ind.—We again take the pleasure to inform the readers of your paper that on the 16th of January, Bro. Thurston Miller returned to the Center meeting-house in company with Bro. Daniel Whitmer from the South Bend congregation. On Friday Bro. Daniel Rothenberger joined in with us.—The brethren continued the meetings till Sunday evening. The result of their labors were, nine baptisms, making fifteen in all. This gives us courage and we hope that our dear brethren will everywhere earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints. J. N. BARNHART.

From Pottstown, Pa.—Thirty-one members were added to the Coventry church in Chester Co., Pa., by baptism, on the third and fourth days of this month, (January) and six more postponed baptism for the present on account of ill health, etc. The old Gospel ship is still afloat, and we trust it may help many more across the ocean of time and land them safely in the Golden Harbor. JAMES HADLEY.

From Lower Cumberland, Pa.—As church news seems desirable, I thought a few words might be acceptable. The good Lord put it into the heart of a few dear brethren to come and preach for us. The roads being good and the weather pleasant, most of the time the congregations were large, attention good, and we think the brethren rewarded for their labors of love. Twenty-four precious souls were made willing to forsake their sinful ways, turn their backs to the world and their idols Zionward. May the good Lord help them to go on, and would to God that many more might be persuaded. H. E. M.

From Belle Creek, Nebraska.—As I have not seen anything from here lately, I thought of penning a few lines. The members seem to be all in love and union, as far as I know. We have meeting every second and fourth Sunday of each month, by A. Taylor, and J. Eichenberry is with us whenever he has no appointments in Dodge Co. One precious soul has accepted Christ since last Fall, and I think there are more counting the cost, trusting they will come soon. C. J. BAYNE.

From Columbia City, Ind.—On the evening of Jan. 12th, Brother Joseph Leedy of Antioch, Ind., met with the brethren and sisters of Columbia City district, and commenced meeting, and continued preaching the Word with power, until the evening of the 20th; when he preached his farewell sermon to a large audience. One precious soul was made willing to put on Christ by baptism, and many more are almost ready to become Christians. May God speed the day when they will be made willing to make an application of the blood of Christ to their precious souls. D. A. WORKMAN.

From Huntingdon, Ind.—We had a very pleasant meeting in the western part of our District, which continued one week. As a reward of our labors, seventeen were added to the church by baptism on the 20th inst. We felt encouraged to still press on for that prize at the end of the race. You have our prayers for your success. Ask your return, that we may hold out faithful unto the end. Yours in hope of blissful immortality. R. K. BINKLEY.

From New Enterprise, Pa.—According to previous arrangement, brother James Quint came to our church district to hold a series of meetings. He preached at Westside on the evening of the 12th, and on the 13th at 10 A. M. On the evening of the 13th he commenced to preach at Intertown, Snowberger church, and continued day and night till the 20th.

During these meetings there was a good attendance, and I do not injustice in saying, that we had powerful preaching, and we, brethren and sisters, all felt good and revived. During these meetings precious souls came to Christ, and we have reason to believe that many more are counting the cost. NATHAN B. BROTON.

Jan. 21, 1878.

From Turkey Creek Church, Ind.—We number about one hundred and twenty-eight. Three ministers and seven deacons. Received seventeen by baptism last year. Hope we can record many more than that number during this present year. Bro. E. Leach of Bloomington, Mich. came to us on the 5th inst; next day (Sunday) we took him to our regular meeting. Preaching also in the evening. Continued meeting until the 25th. On the 26th he bade us adieu, and went to fill appointments in another district.

We have no meeting-house here. Hold our meeting in school-houses, which was very inconvenient, as we could only have meeting at night and on Sunday. Good attention, good congregations considering the inclemency of the weather. Two made application for baptism during the meeting. We believe many more good impressions were made. It has caused some to search the Scriptures, that were careless and unconcerned before. Bro. Leach's abilities for speaking, were beyond our expectations. He is a very zealous old brother, apparently, nothing but the love of God at heart. This I say, because a fireside chat generally tells where a brother or sister's treasures are, and where the treasure is the heart will be also.

May the Lord bless him with health and strength to go on in the good work; warning sinners to flee the wrath to come, and gather many into the fold of Christ. And when his labors are ended here on earth, that it may be said: "Well done good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." SARAH J. MILLER.

Jan. 28, 1878.

From Miami Co., Ohio.—This district (Middle) was organized one year ago last August. At the time of its organization it numbered forty-four; since that time thirteen have been added by baptism. There were officials when organized; viz. Samuel C. Pappok as minister, and Eli Shearer as deacon. Last Spring we held an election for two more seasons; the lot fell on Jacob Eitel and David Sollenbarger. Last fall we erected a meeting-house 40x50 with basement. Although with our prosperity, we have our trials, for we are surrounded by almost every denomination.

Sometimes we almost feel discouraged while we are battling against sin, for there are so many things to contend with, and the world is so slow to accept the simple plan of salvation of which Jesus has given to us. Brethren pray for us, for if we know ourselves we will walk in that narrow way that leads to eternal glory. Bro. G. V. Siler was with us on the 11th and preached four very interesting sermons. There were none added to church, but we think some good impressions were made. May the Lord bless him in his efforts in spreading the Gospel. O. F. YOUNT.

Jan. 28, 1878.

From Marshall Co., Iowa.—Bro. J. W. H. Ramm is with us laboring with might and power. May God crown his efforts with glorious results. The Brethren are in good spirits, feeling much revived. Health good, weather delightful. A. M. F. MILLER.

Jan. 26, 1878.

FROM ENOCH EBEL.

Dear Brethren—
 () UR second Communion season with our dear brethren and sisters in Denmark took place on the sixth day of January, and hence is now among the things of the past, but trust not soon to be forgotten.

The members were all present except three, who on account of age, bodily infirmity and wet weather, were prevented. The day being rainy, not very many people as-coulded, but though few in number, there were still more than on the occasion where Peter said: "It is good to be here," so we were made to feel, and although we did not share the same halo of light and glory and the manifestation of the kingdom of God in the firm, as Peter did, we think all present saw, and some experienced, something that directed their mind to that glorious event awaiting the children of God.

How solemn was the occasion on which the Saviour said, "I will no more drink of the fruit of the vine until I drink it anew with you in my Father's kingdom." Sorrow lifted their hearts when they remembered that Jesus was going to leave them and that their next meeting would be in the kingdom to come.

Our dear brethren and sisters in Denmark seemed to be impressed with a similar thought and feeling, one attachment to each other, having a sweet and strong, and the thought that we shall no more be permitted to eat together, till it be fulfilled in the kingdom of Jesus, and a solemnity to prevail on evening services, which can be more easily imagined than expressed.

Another feature which added much to the solemnity of the occasion, was the ordination of Bro. C. Hope to the eldership. The tears were shed as truly as is usual in the chamber of death, when our Lord and friend is about breathing forth the last gasp of life. But such tears, we think, are not so much the result of sorrow or joy, as of responsibility, and truly, the whole scene seemed to say to us, "We will bear one another's burden, and thus fulfill the law of Christ."

The church in Denmark, in answer to many prayers of the saints in America, is now fully organized according to the Gospel, and hence prepared to carry on the work of the salvation of souls, and the perfecting of the saints, and our prayer is, they may never lose their first love, nor ever allow the doctrine of the Nicolaitans, or of Balaam, or suffer the woman Jezebel to seduce

the servants of God. May she be kept in the hour of temptation and not become lukewarm, and have a name that she is living and yet is dead, and though her tribulation and poverty may be great, and the devil cast some of you into prison that ye may be tried; yet he thou faithful unto death and thou shalt receive a crown of life. Amen.

Our trip to Germany, for certain reasons, has been deferred to some indefinite time in the future. Circumstances will determine the time. We have received quite a number of letters of late, full of encouragement to perform our duty in the face of all opposition, and especially to go to Germany and England, giving us several points they wish us to stop at, with all needful instructions, for which we feel thankful and in due time will comply, if the Lord will.

If our dear brethren and sisters who have written to us, do not all receive an answer immediately, we hope they will bear with us. Some do not demand an answer, yet we would like to treat all alike, but it requires considerable time to give all the satisfaction desired, and if any do not receive direct reply, rest assured it is not for the want of love and respect.

Those who desire us to stop with them on our return, wishing to know the time, etc., will be answered as soon as we decide that matter.

Our health still continues to be good, for which we try to be thankful. Winter has been mild so far.

Yours in Much Love,
 ENOCH EBEL.

GLEANINGS.

From D. B. Sturgis.—I will inform you that we are also at work in the Master's vineyard. We were urged to aid the Brethren of the Blue River District, Whitley Co., Ind., to which we assented, and commenced on Sunday night, the 13th of January, 1878. Continued every night until Monday, the 21st. On Sunday, the 20th, the ice being out, we baptized twelve, mostly young people and children of the Brethren, this being the first addition to that arm of the church in three years. The best of order prevailed throughout the meeting, and many tears ran down the cheeks of fathers and mothers, to see their son and daughters, by the grace of God walk into Cedar Lake, led by an old gray-headed elder sixty-seven years old, and there be immersed.

The brethren and sisters of Blue River District are industrious, kind-hearted and zealous in the holy religion of Christ Jesus, and will, no doubt, feed the tender lambs as well as the sheep, and thereby prove that they love Jesus. I promised them, that if the Lord will, I will visit them again the third of March.

To-morrow I go to Logomer, Noble Co., to hold a series of meetings with the Brethren there. May the grace of God abide with all the dear brethren and sisters in Christ Jesus, is our prayer.—South Bend, Ind., Jan. 28, 1878.

From S. C. Meyers.—Seeing in your paper that elder David Keller, Cambridge Co., Pa., contemplates locating a colony in Kansas on the lands belonging to the Archon, Topick & Santa Fe R. R., we would like to know if he extends the invitation to those who have contemplated going west. If so, there are more brethren who might join their happy band. We want these new lines by way of inquiry, thinking we might get more information and particulars of the brethren, as to the country.—Rockburg, Ga., Jan. 25, 1878.

From B. P. Murray.—I have just returned from the vicinity of Chocomaung, Montgomery Co., Va., where, in company with brother Moses E. Brubaker, I held a short series of meetings. We had no singing Sunday night, Sunday morning and night. Monday and Monday night the weather was very inclement and the roads extremely bad, but we had good congregations notwithstanding, and considerable interest.

It was announced on Sunday, that we would discontinue on the form of Christian baptism, and although the evening was quite unpleasant, we had a crowded house, and interested attention during the whole time of lengthy effort, and when dismissed, the fullest demonstrations of approval were exhibited. Nearly the whole congregation came forward and bid us a farewell with a hearty shake of hands, and many eyes were moist with tears, and the expression of a number show us that they intend to save the Lord.

To have remained longer, would undoubtedly have been attended with good results, but circumstances did not permit us to do so. May the Lord ordain all for good.

From A. Hutcherson.—By your permission I will inform your readers that by the aid of the faithful brethren and sisters in Colorado, I am now enabled to set out on a mission of love to those blood-bought souls in Texas, who have been praying the Lord of the harvest to send them help, that they might be received into fellowship with the Father's children. And I expect to start for this new field of labor on the fourth of February if God permit.

I hope that I will have the prayers of all God's people, for this is an important work. No doubt many anxious hearts have been lifted to a throne of grace already, when they read the appeal made in our papers, by J. W. Chamber of Texas. I would say again, do not cease to pray, dear brethren and sisters, that your humble and weak brother may have strength and wisdom to perform this work to the glory of God and the uplifting of the Master's cause in that new country.

Any wishing to correspond with me while in Texas, will address me at Queen Peak, Montague Co., Texas.—Centerville, Mo.

From H. Landis.—Subscribers are all pleased with your paper, as far as I know. The members here, are in love and union, thank the Lord. We have been bountifully blessed in the year that is past, both spiritually and temporally.—There were about thirty-five members received last year, mostly Sabbath-school scholars. I think if there was a well-directed effort made, many more might not almost, but altogether be persuaded to be Christians.

[The following, mailed at Wawaka, Ind., explains itself. No name nor post office, hence cannot be attended to. Writers should be careful to attend to these essentials.—Eds.]

Brother Eshelman, I would like if you would just send the paper on, for we think it very interesting, but we have not the money now. As soon as we get it, we will send it to you, and will do so before May.

NOTICE!

A Pamphlet of eighty-eight pages, proving that the Scriptures do not teach the doctrine of Universal Restoration.

The price is reduced to only nine cents.—Any one sending three-cent stamps, will receive the above-named pamphlet. The reduced price will not last long; therefore send on your orders now, if you want them filled at the above low rates. Address:

O. F. YOUNT,
 TIPPECANOE CITY, MIAMI CO., O.

INTERESTING ITEMS.

A Florida paper remarks with astonishment that frost was visible in every part of the State during the week.

A Special from Norfolk, Va., says that the whole Roanoke River country is laid waste by the recent floods, and presents a startling scene of devastation. Those who have been up and down the river, say, the farms along its course for one or two miles back are nearly destroyed. Farm houses, barns and stables are swept away, and fences destroyed.

A most noted monk, Alodia, occupied himself twenty-two years in transcribing a copy of the sacred Scriptures for the Emperor Charlemagne. This interesting relic is now in the British Museum, and is valued at £750.

A mile long petition, containing 60,000 signatures, has been sent to Parliament from Ireland, asking that the liquor saloons be closed on Sunday in that country.

The Mayor of Pittsburgh, Pa., who imprisoned the crusading ladies a few years ago for singing Christian hymns on the sidewalk before liquor saloons, is now serving a long term in a Western penitentiary.

A correspondent of the Daily News who left Liverpool just before his investment, telegraphs that the town is now a little better than a large hot pot. About a hundred soldiers died daily, and two or three are frozen to death every night. Typhus fever is raging.

A rich discovery was made on the 12th inst. at the Santa mines, a short distance West of Pueblo, Colorado. Mr. Mann, an old prospector, struck a lode, the ore from which assays the enormous sum of $12,600 in gold and $1,100 in silver per ton. There is a great excitement in the camp, and many are rushing to the scene of the new discovery.

W. U. R. R. Time Table.

Day passenger train going east leaves Lanark at 12:21 P. M., and arrives in Lincoln at 6:34 P. M.
 Day passenger train going west leaves Lanark at 9:46 P. M., and arrives at Rock Island at 5:50 P. M.
 Night passenger train, going east and west, meet and leave Lanark at 2:21 A. M., arriving in Rock Island at 10 A. M. and at Rock Island at 6:00 A. M.
 Freight and Accommodation Trains will run west at 12:55 P. M., 10:50 A. M., and 12:20 P. M., and east at 10 A. M., 1 P. M., and 4:50 P. M.
 Tickets are sold for above trains only. Passenger trains make close connection at Western Union Junction.
 G. A. SMITH, Agent.

FIELDS FOR LABOR.

If you cannot on the ocean
Sail among the swiftest fleet,
Rocking on the highest billows,
Laughing at the storms you meet,
You can stand among the sailpress,
Anchored yet within the bay,
You can lend a hand to help them
As they launch their boats away.

ON
If you are too weak to journey
Up the mountain steep and high,
You can stand within the valley
While the multitudes go by;
You can climb in happy measure
As they slowly pass along;
Though they may forget the singer,
They will not forget the song.

If you have not gold or silver
Never ready to command,
If you cannot toward the needy
Reach an over-open hand,
You can visit the athlete,
Over the erring you can weep;
You can be a true disciple
Sitting at the Master's feet.

If you cannot in the conflict
Prove yourself a soldier true,
If, where fire and smoke are thickest,
There's no work for you to do,
When the battle field is silent
You can go with careful tread,
You can bear away the wounded,
You can cover up the dead.

Do not then stand idly waiting
For some greater work to do;
Fortune is a lazy goddess,
She will never come to you,
Go and toil in any vineyard,
Do not fear to do or dare;
If you want a field of labor,
You can find it anywhere.

Selected by J. H. NEFF.

THE LITERAL MEANING OF THE INSPIRED PRECEPTS OUR ONLY SAFE GUIDE IN RELIGIOUS FAITH AND PRACTICE.

BY J. W. HES.

"Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel," (Psalm 73: 24)

NUMBER III.

6. Popular opinion is not an infallible guide in matters of religious faith and practice. Local opinion may sometimes be on the side of right, but the popular opinion of the world never has been and never will be in favor of truth until the "kingdoms of this world" become "the kingdoms of our Lord and His Christ." The great majority of mankind today are Pagans and infidels, whose sentiments are as contrary to Christian truth, as darkness is to light, and if we take an impartial survey of professed Christendom, we find the great mass "have a name to live" while they are "dead in trespasses and sins." They have "a form of godliness," but the power which transforms the life and character, and subjects the thoughts "to the obedience of Christ" is wanting. Professing to be the servants of God, they are the slaves of public prejudice. Worshipping at the shrine of worldly popularity, they regard whatever divine truths and precepts array themselves against it, with feelings of derision and contempt. Overawed at the frivolous pretenses of stupid clay, they jest at the arrangements of infinite wisdom, and trample in the dust the mandates of the Universal Sovereign and following popular opinion they have really no guide at all. Fickle as the whirlwind and unstable as the froth upon the crest of the wave, its existence, character, and destiny, are subject to a thousand varying influences and circumstances. It will applaud to-day and censure to-morrow. It will bless to-day and to-morrow will curse the very object of its blessing.

Astonished and overpowered by the wisdom of Him who spake as "never man spake," it exclaims, one day, "Let us take Him by force and make Him a King," but another day when that same wisdom and uncompromising holiness and integrity, expose and reprove its villainy and deceit, it madly exclaims without a cause, "Away with Him. Crucify Him, Crucify Him."

7. The conclusions of learned men do not constitute an infallible guide in matters of religious faith and practice. I am saying nothing against knowledge. I am both a lover and advocate of true education. "Knowledge is power," and like wealth, may be consecrated to purposes of holiness and become eminently useful in promoting virtue, or prostituted to the indulgences of vice may become the prolific source of mischief. Knowledge is a good thing in itself and in its true scientific development and progress, only proves to be the handmaid of the Bible; inasmuch that the most erudite student after years of anxious study and laborious research, must yield the palm to the simplest believer in revelation. An old school of pagan philosophy taught that our earth was flat, and located on the back of a huge animal, and that when the animal shook itself the earth quaked. (World displayed). Thus they accounted for earthquakes, and this the world called "Lau-ning," (Science falsely so called.) Centuries after when the circle of the earth was discovered and demonstrated by circumnavigation, the world was ready to exclaim, "See what human labor and research have accomplished," but had they only gone to school centuries before to Isaiah one of the most despised and persecuted of Israel's prophets, they would have heard him talking about "the circle of the earth" (Is. 40: 22).

When Sir Isaac Newton discovered the law of universal gravitation by which the earth was understood to be supported and controlled in space, amid the sisterhood of revolving orbs, the whole world wondered after the thoughtful discoverer, and yet many centuries before, an ancient sage of Idumea, the patient Job, recognizing the Universal sovereignty of every universal principle and law, said "He hangeth the earth upon nothing" (Job 26: 7). In fine almost every true science will find the sum-total of its practically legitimate conclusions on the pages of inspiration, showing that God has adapted Himself to the interests of His dependent creatures, and though often unlearned in the technicalities of human science, they have that which the world does not possess, the wisdom which cometh from above. Well might the Psalmist exclaim, "I have more understanding than all my teachers; for thy testimonies are my meditation, I understand more than the ancients, because I keep thy precepts" (Ps. 119: 99, 100). Pardon this digression. I have only said this much by way of caution, that my position here be not misunderstood. We take no position then you perceive against the proper acquisitions of knowledge, but only maintain that the fact of being versed in human lore, is by no means an evidence of religious infallibility. But we need not dwell upon this thought. Facts abundantly sustain our position. Jews, Mohammedans, Pagans, Infidels and Christians are alike often celebrated for extensive learning. And the learned men of Christendom maintain as many opposites as are involved to-day in the contradictory faith and practice of their people. Every false theory depends upon the efforts of its learned advocates for subsistence.

Truth often triumphs in the hands of the simple, but error can subsist only by the sophism and shrewdness of intellectual vigor which at best must fail at last, for God overlooking the wise, mighty, and noble to a great extent, has chosen the foolish, weak, base and despised things to confound them, and "things that are not, to bring to naught things that are, that no flesh should glory in his presence" (Cor. 1: 56). Having now shown you dear readers, that the heart, the understanding, the reason, the conscience, tradition, popular opinion and the conclusions of learned men, are all fallible and need themselves the more reliable guidance of something superior. We come again to inquire what that infallible guide is? The Psalmist answers it in the language of our text. Addressing himself to God he says, "Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel." O what an inexpressible consolation to know that amid the oppositions, persecutions, bereavements, afflictions and perils of life, a Father's faithful hand vouchsafes us help. If abandoned to the weakness and follies of our carnal natures, what could we do? But at every turn in the pilgrimage of life, may be seen a heavenly guide-post. In every fiery tempest that lashes our frail bark on the surging billows of life's dark sea, may be heard the voice of an Omnipotent passenger bringing peace to the troubled land. In the din and confusion of every battle, we may hear the well known voice of the "Captain of our salvation," crying "Follow me." Yes, God will be our guide, but how will He guide us? Our text says, "thou shalt guide me with thy counsel." We believe the old and New Testament Scriptures, both to have been given by inspiration, the divine authenticity of which is clearly evinced by the character and claims of their writers and by signs and wonders, so involving the experience and observation of the people to whom they were given, as to admit of no mistake, being of such a character as to challenge imitation from Mohammedans, Pagans, Spiritualists or Mormons, and so commemorated by living monuments and ordinances, instituted at the time of their occurrence, with such inscriptions of their own history, as to utterly prevent imposition upon subsequent generations. Arrested by the very accurate fulfillment of prophecy, the satisfaction of types and shadows, the severe ordeals through which it has passed and over which it has triumphed, its transforming influence upon human character and society, and its adaptation to the aspirations and susceptibilities of man's higher intelligence and moral nature, which is unsatisfied with anything short of "life and immortality," the Bible is pre-eminently the Book of books, proving the Christian Scriptures, the last will and testament of Christ, sealed with His own blood, to be "God's counsel" to us, the "Magna Charta" and pillar of truth to guide us in faith and practice by day and night to the end of our race. But we are not here, to discourse upon the authenticity of the Bible nor the fact of its containing the divine will. On that point professed Christendom is a unit. The question now is, How are we to understand the divine counsels? Many will say, what you have said is very good, but since all denominations of professed Christians claim the Bible, and each puts its own interpretation upon it, what are the people to do? one says, "this is the way to understand it, another says, that is the way." I answer dear reader, we have no right to put any man's interpretation upon God's Word.

The Bible is its own interpretation, and here I state for a change in my church relation. I joined the Brethren because they believe in the literal interpretation of the divine precepts, regarding metaphors, parables, etc., as so many illustrations designed to impress as by object teaching the positive doctrine of revelation. Being one with them in this respect, it was natural that I should desire their sympathy and fellowship, just as kindred elements seek each other by a common affinity. We shall attempt, then, to prove the correctness of this position, and we urge it because

MY FIRST REASON

1. The condition of man and his relation to God demands it. When we communicate our wills to our children we use "great plainness of speech," especially if the subject is one of importance, and can we suppose that an Omnipotent and Omniscient God of infinite goodness and love would communicate His will, the helpless and dependent subjects of His creation, providence and grace, whose supreme interests and destinies hang on His Word, in such a way as to be incomprehensible? to give law only to aggravate and confuse the subject in ability to understand it? and yet hold him amenable to it? to give a trumpet "an uncertain sound," and yet require the people to be in battle? Such my readers, is not the character of God. Such an inference would be preposterous. His voice even in the most imperious instinctive creation, is unmistakable and if man with his higher attainments, fails to discover it in revelation, it is because his sin has so perverted his faculties and alienated him from God, that he really does not want to, or else is afraid to see. I like an expression once made by Spurgeon of London, on plainness of speech. "If I should see that house on fire over there" said he, "do you think I would stand here and say, I believe the operation of combustion is proceeding yonder? No I would cry fire! fire!! and then every body would know what I meant." So with God to us. Are we to suppose the notes of alarm and calls of duty from God, to the perishing millions of mankind, are mere theological enigmas to entertain the curiosity of speculative minds? Surely not. God has through the Gospel adapted His truth to every condition of our lost race, and the Scriptures express the will of God in language that is plain and easy to be understood or all is shrouded in darkness, doubt and uncertainty. God has revealed every part of His divine will, all of which is important, to the understanding of all who are child-like enough to believe what He has taught and obey what He has commanded, so that there is no need that His people be lost amid "the confusion of tongues," with their various and conflicting methods of interpretation, or seduced and led astray "by every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of man's hands and cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive." Suppose one of you who is a parent should send your little child on some important mission. You state its duty in plain language. It understands, but as soon as it is a little distance on the way, some designing man stops and interrogates it respecting the character of its errand. It repeats your instructions showing they were not understood, but the man interferes by saying "Your father did not mean you should do exactly that, but he wants to teach you such and such a lesson." Perhaps he states just enough truth to

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE,
S. H. BASHOR,
M. M. ESHELMAN, } EDITORS.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent post-paid, to any address in the United States or Canada, for $1.50 per annum. Those sending ten issues and $15.00, will receive an extra copy free of charge. For all over this number the agent will be allowed 10 cents for each additional name, which amount can be deducted from the money, before sending it to us. Money orders, drafts, and Registered Letters may be sent at our risk. They should be made payable to Moore, Bashor & Eshelman—Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE, BASHOR & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL.

FEBRUARY 14, 1876.

ONE day last week two persons were baptized in the stream one half mile north of Lanark.

THE brethren at Yellow Creek, Ill., recently received two persons into the church by baptism, and good prospects for more soon.

BRO. Daniel Longmecker requests us to announce his address at Plain View, Adams Co., Pa. His correspondents will please take notice.

THE address of brother T. D. Monroe, is changed from Greentown, Ind., to Slash, Grant Co., Ind. His correspondents will make a note of this.

AN appalling famine is said to be raging throughout North China. Nine mission people are reported destitute, and children are daily sold in the markets for food.

BRO. L. S. Snyder of Mt. Valley, Ind., started for Texas on the fourth inst. Any one wishing to correspond with him within the next three or four weeks, will please address him at Dallas, Texas.

PAPA, Pius IX, at the age of eighty-five years, closed his eyes in death at Rome, on the 7th inst. The conclave of Cardinals, it is announced, was summoned immediately to choose his successor.

ON the third inst., two persons were received into Christian fellowship at New Berlin, N. Y. Thus the gathering of souls into communion with Christ goes on, and there is joy in heaven and on earth.

BROTHER J. R. Wampler recently assisted the brethren of the Manor church, Indiana Co., Pa., to hold a series of meetings, and ten precious souls were brought into fellowship by their labors. Thanks be to God for the result.

When the date opposite your name, for that tells when your subscription expires. There are some that expire during this month, hence we call their attention to it. If you wish to continue right along, renew in good time.

BRO. J. D. Tottle of Langston, Md., was with the brethren in Augusta Co., Va., during the latter part of January, and labored for them effectually. There were a number of additions to the church. He expected to leave home again Feb. 2nd for Ephrata, Pa.

CONVERSING with Bro. John Wiss regarding his ministerial labors we learn that since his election to the ministry, thirty-four years ago, his travels have been quite extensive, amounting to about 160,000 miles in all, or equal to the distance around the globe more than six times. In one year, 1868, he traveled 15,000 miles.

We call attention to the article on first page, entitled: "A Puzzled Dutchman," as illustrative of a few points on immersion. It is an account of an actual occurrence, and demonstrates the great fact that truth cannot be overthrown. By request we have put it in tract form for distribution, and will be sent to any part of the United States or Canada at the following rates: 50 copies, 25 cents; 100 copies, 40 cents.

BRO. J. W. Beer, formerly assistant Editor of the Primitive Christian desires a situation in the West; will teach school, clerk, or, if necessary, work on a farm, anything to make an honest living and be useful to the church. Bro. Beer is a speaker of excellent ability and can be of great service to a church, needing ministerial aid. Brethren look around and find a place for him. Let those work who will work. Address him at Huntington, Pa.

A poor, ministering brother, who has but one arm that he can use, says: "I have seen your paper, and like it the best kind. It would be a great help to me in the ministry. Now brethren, send me the BRETHREN AT WORK for one year and I will pay for it before the year is out." Certainly we will send the paper, and are glad that the brother appreciates it. But we have plenty of good brethren and sisters who will pay for it. Let us have a few more contributions to the Charity Fund.

THERE is perhaps no one in our fraternity called upon to do more writing for the public than Bro. C. H. Balsbaugh, yet he is a poor man and ill prepared to defray the expenses of writing the immense amount of letters and articles that he is required to prepare. In this respect he is required to depend upon the charities of others, and when that drops off, he will of necessity be compelled to cease his writing for the public good. Therefore let all those who write Bro. Balsbaugh, requesting an answer or article, enclose enough to defray all expenses. Don't fail to do this, brethren and sisters. And furthermore we would like if all those who read this notice, send the afflicted brother a little gift in the name of a disciple. His address is Union Deposit, Pa.

CHOOSING CHURCH OFFICERS.

MY views on the Gospel order of electing, or setting apart, church officers, having been called for, I will, the Lord willing, prepare and publish a series of articles before long, on that subject, not in reply to any one else, but simply my conceptions of the Apostolic order.

It is not reasonable that the Lord would establish a church on earth, giving commands and ordinances to be obeyed and perpetuated, and yet not provide for the setting apart of suitable ones to perform special duties pertaining to that body. The subject is one of more than ordinary importance, and is entitled to the careful consideration of all those who love and desire the purity of the church.

Much depends on the holy and upright lives of church officials. They should be men who are models of pure Christianity; men who are living epistles known and read of all men; men to whom the church can look with unwavering confidence, for advice and holy example; men who are Christians in the fullest sense of the term. It is evident that most, if not nearly all the errors have crept in the church through the instrumentality of ministers not sound in the faith, and therefore, the best safeguard against error and impurity is, for the church to see to it that her ministers are qualified to fill the positions they are chosen to see that they are models of holiness in the Lord.

It is clear that there is a great decline in the vital piety among the ministers all over the land, and there is not that deep-seated and indwelling holiness that existed in days of yore. Preaching is now looked at from a secular standpoint, and viewed as a money-making business. Comparatively few preach for souls as they ought, and in many instances their own vicious conduct causes them to lose their influence among the people who look upon even true ministers with suspicion. May heaven speed the day when there will be more real holiness among the ministers of the land. A. H. M.

THE ORIGINAL GROUND.

IT will be not only profitable, but pleasant to examine and learn more of the position occupied by our ancient Brethren, who were first in the grand reformatory movement, with which we are now identified. The careful student can always learn from the history of the past.

To me it has, at times, been a matter of some astonishment how these ancient Brethren, amid the error and discords of that age, could settle down upon such true and noble principles, and occupy a basis that has successfully withstood the opposition and criticism of over one hundred and fifty years. That the position occupied by them was both safe and Scriptural, I have never had the least reason to doubt, and the more I examine the subject, and compare it with my understanding of the Scriptures, the better am I satisfied with it, believing it to have been predicated upon the practice of the old Apostolic church. The ground selected by them, is fully sustained by the Scriptures, if properly interpreted. Some, however, have fallen into an error regarding the position occupied by those Brethren, believing their examples, set in the early stage of the reformatory movement, should be regarded as obligatory upon all those who should follow after, nor is it an easy task to dislodge these convictions from minds that have once entertained them. But more of this anon.

It is my candid conviction that if we, as a body, would come to the Gospel ground and position occupied by our forefathers, and endeavor to live up to the principles embodied therein, that we would have but few severe difficulties with which to contend, and what few might chance to arise could be adjusted in a very satisfactory manner.

There are two prolific sources of difficulties and schisms: 1st. Meddling with, and trying to settle questions about which the Bible is as silent as the grave. 2nd. Evading or attempting to alter the plain, positive commands of the Gospel. On these points our ancient Brethren were very strict, and naturally labored to avoid all questions calculated to lead to contention and disunion. They were not content with things just a few hundred years old, nor were they willing to settle down upon the platform occupied by any known class of people. They took the Bible as their only infallible rule of faith and practice, and for their order went right back to the Apostolic age, and aimed, in all their deliberations, to build upon the foundation of Christ and the apostles. They did not attempt to lay a new foundation, nor to introduce a new system of religion, but their first and grand object was to get back to the ancient order of things, and continue therein. They labored to settle everything by the Gospel, appealing to it as their only infallible rule of faith and practice, the only existing bond of union, and their hearts were so wrapped up in the teachings of the good Book, the spreading of the Truth and the salvation of souls, that they had no time to stop and meddle with questions that God, in His wisdom, thought not worthy of notice.

Then, when we stop to inquire for the position occupied by them, we are referred directly to the Apostolic order, and the practice of the Apostolic churches, and when we go back to the Apostles, to the first century, to the Golden Age of the Christian church, then, and not till then do we occupy the same ground and position that was advocated by our ancient Brethren who were first in this grand reformatory movement. The great difference between them and the popular denominations of that period, laid in the fact that these popular churches were not willing to adopt the Apostolic order of things, they were not willing to go, for their faith and practice, back to the first century, to the Golden Age of the Christian church; they were unwilling to conform to the order laid down by the Apostles, while on the other hand, our Brethren strongly contended for the Apostolic order, the old order as recorded in the New Testament. This was the order that they so ardently labored to reproduce, and this is the ground and position occupied by the BRETHREN AT WORK. We want to build upon no other foundation, save that of Christ and the Apostles. For this foundation our ancient Brethren contended, and in all their labors and deliberations they pointed to this foundation, to this, the Apostolic order of things, and the great ideal of their hearts was, to build upon a congregation of people precisely like those that composed the churches planted by the Apostles themselves. They did not pattern after each other; they took no man for their model. They looked to a higher and more perfect source for a pattern—one that was made by the Lord Himself, one that was originated by the Father, established on earth by the Son, and sanctified by the Holy Spirit, and as such has been handed to the world as the only perfect model on the globe, and is the only one that we are justified in patterning after.

To make all things according to the pattern shown in the mountain of the Lord, is not such an easy task as some fanatics have supposed, yet the model is plain and simple, and if carefully studied, may be imitated to the letter. The world as well as the church, is too full of those who are patterning after each other, ever learning, but never able to come to a full knowledge of the Truth as it is in Christ Jesus, and as it was put into practice by those who were His personal followers. The inevitable tendency of modern Christendom in patterning after each other has been to grow worse instead of better.

They forcibly remind me of my early school days. I wanted to learn to write. A copy-book was furnished me, and my teacher wrote a beautiful copy on the first line at the top of the page, telling me to make my letters just like his. Of course I did my best, and made a pretty good stagger at it in the first line. The second line was still better, and so on for several lines, but when I got down to about the middle of the page it was too troublesome to look up at my teacher's copy, so I looked at my own writing and went on till the page was full, and now, when I look over my old copy-books, I find that the last line is the worst on the page. But I soon came across a teacher who worked things quite differently. He wrote the copy on a small strip of paper, telling me to write just like that on the first line of my book. I did so. Then I must lay the strip containing the copy, on the line I had written, and write another line below, and so on till the page was full. This way I learned to write.

How many churches are there that have been imitating each other in succession till there is scarcely any resemblance between them and the original copy? Right here is the trouble with our people; we have been looking too much at each other, and not enough at the original copy set by Christ and the Apostles. When our Brethren commenced their work in Germany in the year 1708, they procured a genuine copy-plate, and did their best to imitate it, to build up a church just like it, and in all their labors never thought of imitating each other, nor did they intend that their actions should be an infallible model to rising generations. Of course, in their attempts at following copy they made some mistakes—and who has not?—but afterwards labored to amend. They did not look through two or three generations at the Bible, but laid the good Book right over all their past actions, and endeavored to mould their future conduct accordingly. Just as fast as they passed down the page of time the copy followed right along, covering up the things of the past, but preparing them for the future. Sinners and disobedient members were always pointed to the Bible as the great standard and umpire of all disputes. By this Perfect Law they settled all questions.

Now the question arises, What was the position occupied by our ancient Brethren? What was their platform? We unhesitatingly answer that, having cut loose from the world, the conflicting and discordant theories of the then existing Christendom, they came out before the world, advocating the Bible as the only infallible rule of faith and practice, the only God authorized bond of union on earth, and hence in all things appealed to its teachings. The Bible, and the Bible only was their plea, for this they labored, and upon this foundation they stood, defying the wisdom of the world, ever contending for the faith once delivered unto the saints, the re-producing of Christianity in all its primitive purity. They did not stop at the Augsburg Confession of faith, neither did they linger at the council of Nice A. D. 325. They did not pause to wrangle over the dispute and debates of the Greeks and Latins, but left them in the rear, laying hold of the old Apostolic order, the practice and teachings of those who lived in the first century—here they found their model Christians, their model church, and then went to work patterning after it. They did not compare themselves among themselves, but laid the old Apostolic copy right before them and went to work. Their efforts were crowned with marked success, and God bless them for their zeal and good works.

I would, brethren, that we were as zealous as they, as willing to go back to the first century for our model as they were in days of yore. We may boast of learning and privileges, but if there is anything that we ought to covet, it is the zeal and honesty of those who were first in the grand reformatory movement. They left the man-made confessions of faith behind them, paid no attention to the corrupt decrees of men, but laid hold on the old Apostolic order, and endeavored to walk in their footsteps. And if we want to imitate those ancient Brethren we must go to the fountain head, where they work for our copy. We must lay the Bible right in front of us, and learn directly from its pages. We must not look at the Perfect Law of Liberty through them, if we do, we will not be following their example, for they never allowed any object to get between them and the Bible.

The example they set us to follow, is this: They went for their faith and practice to the Apostles, to the first churches established on earth. That was the example they set for us, and a better example was never set since the Golden Age of the Christian church. Now, will we follow it? Will we go back to the Apostles for our rule of faith and practice, or will we yield to the dictates of some uninspired men? If we want to serve God right, and drink from the pure fountain of unadulterated knowledge, we don't want to stop this side the very fountain of eternal Truth.

It is right and prudent that we should respect and honor our forefathers for the good they have done. Many of them endured much more than we will ever stand, and God bless them for their labors. I would that we had some more such good, pious workers among us, but they have gone to their rest, and if we do proportionally as well as they, we ought to be thankful. But I do not believe in making gods of those ancient Brethren; they were not infallible. We should not regard their opinions as law and gospel. They never intended that we should do that. They never intended that the church should be referred to them for their rule of faith and practice. They went for wisdom to the Fountain Head, and want us to do the same. They want us to have knowledge from the very place from whence they got theirs. We must also make a distinction between their hand writing and the copy they followed. It would do well enough to copy after them for a few generations, but to make a regular business of it will be just like my first lessons at school—the more I write, the worse I get. We want to imitate the copy they tried to imitate, and make things according to the same pattern they endeavored to follow. Don't take what they did for a pattern, but get the old Apostolic pattern and follow that, then, and not till then will we be like those ancient ones first in this our movement. We have been imitating each other till some of us are nearly spoiled by it. It is time we were seeking for the old paths, and endeavoring to walk therein. J. H. M.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Dear Paper:—

ON Sunday, Jan. 20th, at 10 A. M., we met in the old Minor church, Washington Co., Md., for worship, but owing to the inclemency of the weather, many were not permitted to attend, and our congregation was large for the day. Met many with whom we had formed acquaintances one year ago while there. The meeting to us, was one of pleasant remembrance associated with joyful recollections,—glorious meetings in by-gone days, when sinners turned to God. During our series of services there, and since, up till now, we were informed that near eighty in all have united with God's people. This is what induces courage—that when we look back over the past thirty months of our ministerial labor in a city (or with few exceptions) congregation where God called us to labor, a steady increase has been the result. No spasmodic revivals and their general backsliding, but a continued increase and a warming up that, to-day tells that God was in the work. We don't often like to seem disappointed, but thank God those who look on and positively prophesy "It will not in evil," have been disappointed, and to-day, in this broad land, near twenty-five hundred souls stand in full union with the church through our humble efforts, and not over a score of this vast number have label and talk. It is God's work, though in the eyes of men it be unviewed. We hope to meet all in heaven, and feel that, by God's grace we will. Men may oppose, may circulate false reports, may grow jealous and pull down, but against all this God's work will go on and His cause prosper. We have shed many tears at the prophecies made concerning the work, at the misrepresentations made, and indignities of men's work, but the knowledge of the permanency of the work, explodes all the dramatic hoodings and excited declarations, and imparts joy enough for past sorrows, and affords a grand incentive to future work, and may heaven speed the day when thousands more will come out from the world and walk in the life-giving road of Jesus Christ.

Again in the evening we met for worship. Still raining, but audience large. Monday evening came so we did not go to church; remembrance of Bro. David Long's, whose one home is in this church. It seems so much like father and mother's house, we always want to go there, and many times when far away, we think of it as home. Tuesday evening cold and rough, but good congregation, and each evening after until the close, the congregations increased till all could not get seats. In all, we tried to preach six sermons; being mostly on subjects of doctrine, and our health not admitting of much hard labor and exhortation, we did not see any results or immediate accessions, though the prospects bid fair for sinners turning to God, could we have remained longer. One or more expressed a desire to be received into the fold soon, which was promised to be attended to.

On Saturday morning, leaving our companion at the home of Bro. Long, we bade all farewell and started for this place to hold a few meetings with the Brethren here. May God bless Bro. Long and family, and all the dear ones who so kindly received and cared for us while there. Trust that the one left behind among them, may, on a more thorough acquaintance, increase the confidence so mutually begun on all sides. We are more and more convinced that, where God's people show their love to God by loving one another, and treating others courteous, that strangers will be won over to a love for the church, if not altogether to it—communion, where otherwise their confidence would be lost. Why is it that in one locality an unconverted man or woman will exclaim, "Christianity is all a farce" and "church members look down on those out of the church, and freeze us to death and drive us from the Truth," while in other places, and among those of the same profession they say, "The people are all so good, we cannot help but love them and admire the church." Who of the readers of the BROTHERS AT WORK can tell? Will Bro. Meulzer or some one of our special contributors tell us? The secret is somewhere, and now where is it? Let every one try to find the gem and possess it, and what a glorious revival we will have.

Our meetings here are said to be more largely attended than any of the kind ever held in Brownsville, and up till to-day the waters are being troubled, and sinners calling for the way of life. Will give a full report of the church, its past and present spiritual condition, and the results of our meetings next week. Our health is still improving, and we begin to feel like of old, able to labor each day for the cause, and work for the great harvest beyond.

Thursday evening we preach at Funkstown. Friday join our companion, Bro. J. F. Oiler and wife, go to Baby's Springs, Cumberland Co., Pa. for a few days' meetings, then to Ohio, Feb. 14. All letters from this on, to reach us, should be addressed to Dunderk, Hardin Co., Ohio, in care of S. F. Basserman. Find our paper is increasing in favor here in the East, and in the homes of very many more of our Brethren than we expected to see it.

Love to Bro. E. K. Boedly and all the dear Brethren at Lanark and Waterloo, and may God's grace be with all His people every where now and forevermore. S. H. M.

Brownsville, Md., Jan. 29, 1878.

"SPRINKLING, OR THE TRUE MODE OF BAPTISM"

INTRODUCTION.

BEFORE me is a pamphlet of sixty-eight pages, with the above title, by "Rev. E. Greenwald, D. D., Pastor of the Evangelical church of the Holy Trinity, Lancaster, Pa." The work was sent to the writer with the following honestly written and pasted on one of the fly leaves:

"SEARCH THE SCRIPTURES; and the history of man, for in them you will find hidden treasures."

I presume the "them" refers to "Scriptures" and best I shall so receive it, and look at the inscription accordingly. "Search the Scriptures;" so says our Lord and Master, hence good. "Not the history of man." What has this to do with "sprinkling, the true mode of baptism?" The history of man has much to do with revealing the origin of "sprinkling too baptism," but the history of man, in general, does not enter into this subject. Perhaps the sender of the pamphlet meant the history of baptism as given by men.

The Scriptures, which he invites us to search, were written by man, and they tell about persons being baptized "in Jordan," going down "into the water," and coming "up out of the water," but nothing about any one being sprinkled in Jordan, sprinkled into water—not a word about this. Or does he refer to the learned Christians of the second, and third centuries, who took up the Apostolic practice and ably defended it against all innovations and substitutes? If so, let us hear a few of them. First, Justin Martyr, who wrote sometime between the years 160 and 165.

"Then we bring them to some place where there is water, and they are baptized by the same way of baptism by which we were baptized; for they are washed in the water in the name of God the Father, Lord of all things; and of our Savior Jesus Christ, and of the Holy Spirit." Next, Clement of Alexandria who wrote sometime between the years 171 and 194. "Ye were conducted to a bath just as Christ was carried to the grave, and were thrice immersed to signify the three days of his burial."

Then comes Tertullian, sometime between 180 and 220: "After the resurrection, promising He would send the promise of the Father; and lastly, commanding that they should immerse into the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Spirit; not into one name, for we are immersed for each name, into each person, not once, but thrice." These are some of the evidences he does not want us to read, because they have not in them the sound of sprinkling a little water on a person, but like the holy Scriptures, invariably speak of immersion. We do not read and present them, because they are the "history of man," but because they are faithful witnesses of the continuation of that immersion which Christ and the Apostles set up in the land of Palestine.

"Sprinkling, the True Mode of Baptism."

The author does not say here, that sprinkling is one of the modes of baptism, nor that it is baptism, but that it is "the true mode." One would conclude from the title, that the "Rev. Greenwald," is not contending for baptism, but only the mode, but when the body is brought out, you will see that the same kind of blood don't run through the head and body, for he stoutly insists that sprinkling is baptism. We shall therefore, in a series of articles, let the rays of divine light shine on the pamphlet, according to the ability which God giveth, until its sophistry has been laid entirely bare. If "sprinkling be the true mode of baptism," the rays of divine light will only make it the brighter, but if it be a miserable substitutum for baptism, its falsity will only be the more apparent when held up to the light. We hope, therefore, that some good may follow our investigation and review, and in next issue shall endeavor to hear our first lesson from the Dr. Greenwald. M. M. E.

NOT PROGRESSION.

WHERE are some things transpiring which a popular Christian world considers evidences of religious progression, but when these evidences are turned over, looked into and carefully scrutinized, they are found to be evidences of regression into the world. The following, from the American Christian Herald, tell how church progression (?) is leading out in some places: "The latest absurdity for church lates is the plan of auctioning off the young ladies of the congregation. The ladies, being veiled or shrouded from head to foot, are sold one after another, and are the partners for the evening of those who bid them in. Almost any young man would rather select with his eyes open, than to pay three or four dollars, for a chance, with them practically shut. Young ladies would, perhaps, rather be auctioned than stand up to be kissed at five cents a kiss, as is sometimes done. Most young ladies would find other plan of raising money distasteful."

This is not a soul-enslaving text. It is not such as brings joy and peace to a Christian, though it may add a little to the flesh of a sinner. Is it any wonder that infidels are being made? Call such nonsense and beggarly element work, Christian progress! And with all such folly, the popular professor will assert that "the world is getting better." Perhaps they mean that since the world is ever ready to help "bid in" the darlings and thus replenish the depleted exchequer, the world is getting better. Jesus does not say anything about making the world better by aiming to excel in revelry and nonsense. No, Jesus did not go that way; nor do His obedient children want to go that way either.

Professing Christian, when you step into the slime and filth of the world, with the expectation of making the world better by being filthy too, you simply extinguish the flickering rays of light that may have been in you. "If the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness" (Matt. 6:23). Must young men be made the victims of a lottery conducted by Christian (?) heads and hands, and that too, in order to raise bread and butter for some hungry, idle professor of religion? And this is progression! Yes, progression in worldliness in sin, in iniquity and corruption. For once those gamblers are correct; but then do not add unto your condemnation the idea that it is progression in true, vital piety, in perfection of the holy religion of a crucified Lord.

Lives there a man or woman who has "put on Christ," been "buried with him in baptism," "renewed by the Holy Ghost, changed and made partakers of Christ's sufferings," that will go down into the pits of sin and folly as described by the article quoted? Will a pious, devoted Christian permit himself to be fettered and bound again by Satan in that manner? God help professors of religion to act like Christians and to shun the evils of this world.

God, in His great goodness, and loving-kindness, saw fit to enjoin upon His followers, to "Greet one another with a holy kiss." Though this be a fact, yet thousands of persons may be found who declare that it is not necessary to do just as God says in this matter, but then many of them can be found, who see the necessity of settling up young ladies at church fairs, for men to kiss, at five cents each. It is needful, you see, to the extent of five cents. Andas received thirty pieces of silver for his dirty work, but some of our modern, fashionable Christians (?) will do dirty work for a nickle! You see that to fulfill the injunction of the Savior, requires some self-denial and considerable love, while on the other hand, a five-cent kiss is so tender and pleasant to the flesh, and requires no self-denial. Sin lies in the root, trunk and branches of such unholy actions.

So marked has the majority of professors become in imitating the world, that even Moody enters his objections. Hear him: "How can a church prosper when turned into a theatre, with its members for amateur actors? Or how prosper by getting up fairs, oyster suppers, with grab-boxes and such things, or perhaps the sale of the privilege to kiss the handsomest woman in the room, or some such impurity?" In this manner he recently denounced sacred concerts in churches; and now we don't want spasmodic hearts to get hurt or wounded, for he who is guilty of inaugurating and participating in the abominable things herein enumerated, is already badly hurt—with sin. Give us ever the old-fashioned religion of Apostolic origin. M. M. E.

A REVIEW OF THE MODERN TUNKER, BY ULRIC VON HUTTEN."

THE above is the title of a malicious slanderous and abusive tract against the Brethren, by one Mr. Wilson, of New Market, Va., who, to his character, falsely styles himself "Ulric Von Hutten." The author has (or had a few years ago quite a surplus) stock of these tracts on hand, and I see he is adopting a plan to rid himself of them for the Brethren's money, by sending private circulars to the Brethren over the country, who are ignorant of the character of his work. A Bro. Harshberger, of Va. (I forget his full name and post office) made a short and able refutation of this attack, a few years ago. Will Bro. Harshberger please furnish the Brethren's papers with his full address, also the name and price of his tract.

Fraternally,
J. W. STEIN.
(Prim. Chies. and Vindicator please copy.)

Some temptations come to the industrious, but all temptations attack the idle. Idle Christians are not tempted of the devil so much as they do prompt the devil to tempt them. Idleness sets the door of the heart ajar, and asks Satan to come in, but if we are occupied from morning till night, should Satan get on, he must break through the door of our sober, covetous grace, and next to truth, there is no better shield against temptation than obscurity to the precept that ye be "Not slothful in business; serving the Lord."

THE DYING WIFE.

MISS JULIA E. BLANCHARD.

RAISE my pillow, husband dearest,
Faint and fainter comes my breath;
And the shadows stealing slowly
Must, I now, be near to death.
Sit down close beside me, darling,
Let me clasp your warm, strong hand,
Yours that has ever sustained me,
To the border of this land.

I've had visions and been dreaming
O'er the past of joy and pain;
Year by year I've wandered backward
Until I was a child again.
Dreams of thee and all the earth-cords
Firmly twine about my heart;
Oh, the letter, burning anguish,
When I know that we must part!

It has passed, and God has promised
All thy footsteps to attend;
He is more than friend or brother,
He'll be with you to the end.
There's no shadow on the portal
Leading to my heavenly home,
Christ has promised life immortal,
It is He who bids me come.

Do not weep so, mother dearest,
Wipe those mournful tears away;
I am going home to heaven—
I'll be there at dawn of day,
Tell my husband to love Jesus,
And when the toils of life are o'er
He may have a home in heaven
With the blest forevermore.

Do not mourn so, father—mother,
Wipe, oh, wipe those tears away!
I will soon be with the angels,
You will come some other day,
Father, scenes of life are fading:
Mother, I am almost o'er;
Brother, give your heart to Jesus;
Sister, we shall meet once more.

Clasp, my hand still closer, dearest
'Tis the last night of my life;
For to-morrow I shall never Answer when you call me wife,
Face thee well, my noble husband!
You may not wait so very long
Before you come to meet your darling
In that bright home where she has gone.

Farewell parents, brother, sister,
I can see the other shore—
I can see the great white mansion—
Farewell all, I am almost o'er.

—Selected.

Oxford, Mich.

THE LITERAL MEANING OF THE
INSPIRED PRECEPTS OUR ONLY
SAFE GUIDE IN RELIGIOUS
FAITH AND PRACTICE.

BY J. W. STEIN.

"Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel."
(Psalms 73: 24)

NUMBER IV.

But again we urge our position because

2. It is the only alternative by which to avoid the evils of human priestcraft and superstition. Much has been said about Papal intolerance.
Protestants have deeply commiserated
the spiritual serfdom of her priest-ridden subjects, because they were deprived of the Bible. But if Papists actually took the Bible from the people for many centuries, it is only what Protestants are virtually doing now. They exhort the people to read the Bible, but if they presume to believe and obey many of its plain precepts, at once the clergy labors hard to make them believe something else, and thus many are persuaded to think they cannot understand the Word without an int'preter, and being substitute of any personal reason for their faith and practice, are only the dupes of wily priestcraft, neither knowing the truth nor walking therein. Between the people of the Brethren and that of the Pope, who denies that the Bible is adapted to the understanding of the people, we hence plead a necessity for the spiritualizing system of the priesthood, there is no alternative, no tenable intermediate ground.

If you grant that one plain precept must be taken literally, you grant all we ask, for it is a precedent which will force our conclusion, and when you strip one Bible precept of its literal force, and substitute your own theory, you have adopted the controlling principle of the Papal hierarchy and granted all the Papist asks, for such a precedent will inevitably result sooner or later in priestcraft, and surely Protestant priestcraft is no better than Papal priestcraft. Deny a Christian church the right to believe they "ought to wash one another's feet" (John 13: 14, 15), observe the "holy kiss" (Rom. 16: 16; 2 Cor. 13: 12; 1 Thess. 5: 26; 1 Pet. 1: 14), the "anointing" of the sick (Jas. 5: 14, 15)
the prohibition of oaths (Matt. 5: 33-37; Jas. 5: 12), to baptize into each of the three names Father, Son and Holy Spirit
(Matt. 28: 19), or any other plain
New Testament command, and substitute a theory which will explain these away, and with the same arguments you can go further and make an onslaught upon the duty of baptism, communion, preaching the Word, praying, singing, etc., until you have nothing left, and the Bible is supplanted by a priestcraft which "makes the commands of God of none effect by its traditions," and if we depend on human priests, to those of which, of all the varying and conflicting systems shall we apply? for if dependent upon the interpretation of one, why not upon another? and who shall decide which is right?—and if the Bible is a sealed Book and its interpreters are not agreed, what are the poor masses, who are thirsting for truth, and for whom Christ died, to do? Surely if any man, or set of men, has a right to put private interpretation upon, or opinion in lieu, of any part of God's Law, then all others have, and the plain statements of truth may be supplanted by the opinions of men, who instead of obeying the Law presume to be its judges from all their varying stand-points.

You must then, dear reader, to be consistent, either to accept every divine precept, with its own Scriptural multipliers literally, or you are compelled to virtually surrender the Word of God, and endorse the policy of Papal Rome.
Which will you do? There is no half Bible and half priest here. Adhering to the same principle by which millions to-day disregard many of the plain commands of Christ and His apostles,
I could if the principle were correct,
disprove the authority of the entire Gospel, leaving it no spiritual vitality, nor practical power, but since it is God's message to man, every precept demands our faith and obedience, regardless of human opposition. While then we disclaim, as I have already endeavored to show, the right of judgment, reason, conscience or any other human faculty to substitute their creations for the Word of God, we do most earnestly maintain that the common mind, under the controlling influences of the Holy Spirit, is adapted to the thorough understanding of every divine command. But again we urge the literal interpretation of the divine precepts because

3. The very accounts and literal fulfillment of prophecy (Gen. 6: 17), proves it. Both the prediction and fulfillment of the flood were literal (Gen.
7: 1). The same source of the people, respecting the "scourging and affliction of Abraham's posterity and God's judgments on their oppressors" (Gen. 15: 13-14; Exod. 7: 11), of their promised inheritance (Gen. 17: 8; 26: 3, 4; 28: 13, 14; Josh. 1: 3, 4, 4), of the destruction of Sodom (Gen. 19: 12-26), of the seven years of plenty and famine in Egypt

(Gen. 41: 29-51), of the curse upon him who would attempt to rebuild Jericho (Josh. 6: 26; 1 Kings 16: 34). Of the destruction of Eli's sons (1 Sam. 2: 27-34; 4: 17), of Elijah's prophecy to Ahab of famine (1 Kings 17: 1), of the doom of Ahab and Jeshel (Kings 21: 17-24 22: 38), of Elisha's prophecy to Hazael of his royalty and crimes (2 Kings 2: 8 11-13; 13: 22; 2 Chron. 11: 21), of Daniel's explanation of the rise, progress, and fall of earth's universal empires viz., the Chaldean or Babylonian, the Medo-Persian, the Grecian, the Roman with its divisions and subdivisions as exhibited in Nebuchadnezzar's great image
(Dan. 7: 8-10), of the desolation of Babylon, Assyria, Moab, Egypt, Ethiopia, Arabia, Tyre, Israel and Jerusalem (Is.
8: 9, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 20, 23, 29, Jer. 19: 49, 50, 51; Ezek. 25, 31, 32). Of the prophecies concerning Christ: He was born of a virgin (Is. 7: 14; Matt.
1: 18-23; Luke 1: 26-35) in Bethlehem of Judah (Mich. 5: 2; Luke 2: 4-7), called out of Egypt (Hos. 11: 1; Matt. 2: 15), called a Nazarene (Matt 11: 23), rode into Jerusalem upon an ass (Zech.
11: 12, 13; John 12: 14, 15), offered rest to the weary (Is. 50: 4; Matt. 2: 28, 30), preached the Gospel to the poor (Is. 61:
1-3; Luke 4: 17-21), was despised and rejected of men (Is. 53: 3; John 19: 15), suffered not for Himself, but for others
(Is. 53: 46; Luke 23: 14), was betrayed for thirty pieces of silver (Zech 11: 12, 13; Matt. 26: 15), was delivered to the Gentiles (Lu. 18: 32), contrary to the laws
according to their charge (Lev. 24: 13-16) which they attempted, but failed to execute (John 8: 59). He was mocked, spit upon and crucified (Matt. 26: 19; Mark 10: 33; Luke 18: 32). They gave Him gall and vinegar (Ps. 69: 21; Matt. 27: 34). They parted His garments and cast lots for His vesture (Ps.
22: 18; Matt. 27: 35). They laughed
Him to scorn, shooting out the lip, shaking the head and saying, "He trusted in the Lord that He would deliver Him;
let Him deliver Him, seeing He delighted in Him" (Ps. 22: 7, 8; Matt. 27: 39, 40). He was numbered with the trans-gressors (Is. 53: 12; Matt. 27: 38; Mark 15: 27). He was with the rich in His death (Is. 53: 9; Matt. 27: 57-60). Not a bone of Him was broken (John 19: 33) which corresponds exactly with the paschal type (Exod. 12: 46; Num. 9: 12).
They pierced his hands and feet (Ps. 22: 16). They looked on Him whom they had pierced (Zech. 12: 10; John 19: 24, 37). He rose from the dead the third day (Matt. 28: 6; Luke 18: 32). The same is true respecting New Testament prophecies.

WORK WHILE IT IS CALLED TO-DAY.

BY CHARLOTTE L. BOND.

IT is natural for us to defer matters and imagine it will be more convenient to attend to such and such things at some future time. Today only is one, we know not what a day may bring forth, if we have a duty to perform, now is the time to attend to it, if we shouldly or until to-morrow, we may lose the opportunity, and we are among the faithful servants. There are very few persons living, who have it in their minds to serve God and prepare for death before it comes upon them, but alas!
they put the matter off until it is too late and they are forever lost. Today

if you hear His voice, harden not your hearts. Now is the time to work. If there is a good deed before you to be done, go and do it, do not wait until to-morrow, or next week; for Satan always has some mischief for idle hands to do.

Work while it is called to-day, for each day has its duties, and if you defer this day's work for to-morrow, there will be certain duties for that day also (if you should live to see it) and you must crowd two days work in one or be constantly falling behind, each duty should be filled as they present themselves. And again if we ever intend to become followers of our Savior, now is the time to begin as we have lost much time already, and should we employ every moment of our future time in His service,
it is no more than our reasonable service, and cannot make up the time we have lost. Let us therefore begin to-day and work diligently; for no man knows what a day may bring forth. To-morrow our friends may be preparing these tenements of clay for their last resting place, or these mental powers that we can exercise to-day with so much delicacy and precision, to-morrow may be paralyzed and obscured and we may be a howling maniac. Such is our mental and physical construction, that at any moment all can be destroyed. Why, then plan for the future? Let us live for to-day, casting all our care on Jesus, and trusting in God for His blessings, receiving them with thankful hearts as they come;
never harassing ourselves with imaginary evils yet to come; "Sufficient to the day is the evil thereof." Surely we can trust the One, that has given us life and health in the past, for the future. He has blessed each day as it passed, and to-day He is sending numberless blessings upon us.

The future is before us, we know not what it is to bring forth. But the same Hand that guided our weary footsteps thus far, and the same protecting Arm that is over us to-day, is able to conduct us through the rest of our journey, whether it be long or short. When the end comes He has promised to go with us through the dark valley and gloomy shadow of death, and finally receive us into His own Divine presence, where there will be one eternal day.

Accanum, Ohio.

THOUGHTS.

BY W. HERTZLER.

SELF-GOVERNMENT is a great, and good work; especially if well performed, in two ways; temporally and spiritually. Temporal government includes among others, temperance; not merely in drinking, but also eating moderately, working, sleeping, and thinking;
all of these functions well governed, brings happiness and cheerful days to the one engaged in it, in the present life.
It also qualifies the individual for duty whatever his calling may be. But when this government is wanting, it seems to have a drawback, and a downward tendency in every case. But in spiritual life, good government brings "religion undefiled," religion that rules even the mind, the heart, and brings into subjection the inner and outer man, so that the image of Christ is readily seen in man, in all his callings and movements among men. Is not religion the center of the family altar, whence the sweet influences arise unto the Lord? Yes, it is. Does not religion form the firm ground on which we stand? Yes, it does. If religion governs, it has that effect. Sometimes the disciples get the idea, they may with out power, they cannot work unless urged on by the Spirit of the Lord. Not quite so; where would free agency be if we could not work? God wants free agents, men and women that display a willingness to do what little they can for the cause of the Master, which in every case will meet with the approbation of God, and draws from above the smiles of the Savior and opens His store-house for the needy; whence they draw a daily supply. God's children must be minded, like our obedient ones. An obedient child does not want to be pushed on the work; no, that disposition or nature they abhor; but lazy ones look for it every time they work.

Now, dear brethren, let us not imitate idlers and laziness. But religion so moulds and fashions our deportment among men, that a new creature may be visible. In the morning lift up your hands to God in fervent prayer. At the table show in a few words that meat and drink "comes from above, the Father of lights" to whom honor is due. Also let us bridle our tongues, since we have to "give an account for every idle word we say." Religion also brings kindness into existence, kind talk in the family, between husband and wife, parents and children, masters and servants. Even the creatures on the yard find it out. Proper treatment is given, in feeding and working. Solomon says, "A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast." The neighbors will find tokens of love, and in all the necessary duties; the church will have affectionate members, attending meetings with joy and longing; not merely as a duty. When there, engaged in prayer for the church, for the preachers, and the welfare of mankind in general. No sleepers, nor head-heavy individuals, who must prop, or if not engaged in that business, every time the door moves there goes the face. No, religion keeps awake, creates attention, desiring to catch every word spoken, in singing, prayer, or preaching. Christ's religion stamps a "peculiar people, zealous of good works," at home and abroad.

Another thought. Some years ago it struck me sensibly as if the Brethren are rather fast in multiplying papers; and wished they would consolidate all those in existence, and then I would be satisfied. Now a partial consolidation has been accomplished, and another sprung up. And so I went to work to examine them all, and finally came to the conclusion to make choice of the youngest, being the nicest type, the easiest read, if eyes commence to fail like mine for years already. Also find it fruitful of wholesome matter every time it comes. May God speed the work, and give a special blessing to the beloved editors, and grant that their labors may be the means of doing much good among men.

Elizabethtown, Lancaster Co., Pa.

THE SECRETS OF THE LORD.

BY MATTIE V. YEAR.

THE secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him; and He will shew them His covenant" (Psalms 25:14). Great men of the earth such as kings, or rulers have their intimate or confidential friends to whom they reveal their plans, purposes, or designs. To be thus taken into the hidden or secret counsel of some great earthly potentate, is considered an honor that most persons would earnestly covet. Jehovah has His dear and intimate friends, to whom He reveals His secrets or hidden purposes. Who are they who are accounted worthy of such distinguished honor? Our text says, they that fear Him. But what is meant by the term "fear Him?" There are two kinds of fear spoken of in the Scriptures, the former is the kind of fear referred to in our text. This fear of God is a holy affection wrought in the soul, inclining the individual to obey all God's commandments, no matter how difficult, or self-sacrificing they may be.

To fear God then in this sense, is synonymous with the term love Him, and obedience is the expression, or divinely appointed manifestation of love. It would still further elucidate our text to give it this reading: "The secrets of the Lord are with them that obey Him." This explanation is still further borne out by the language of our Savior to his disciples. "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you. Henceforth I call you not servants; for the servant knoweth not what his Lord doeth; but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you." A friend is one to whom we impart our minds more freely than to others. This is what our Savior does to his followers, he admits them into a very close intimacy with himself, and unfolds unto them mysteries of his love, his grace, and his providence (see Lamentations 5:1).

But says one, this title of friend was only applicable to the apostles, or at most to some high official, or dignitary of the church. The papist would say, the clerical orders alone possess this superior wisdom, it is never vouchsafed to the laity. But what says Christ? Upon one occasion after commanding John the Baptist, he added, "But he that is least in the kingdom of God, is greater than he." That is the most lowly, the most humble, the one who has the least of self, and the most of Christ. Again our Savior addresses his Father thus, "I thank thee O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father; for it seemed good in thy sight." It is then to the humble, the poor in spirit, irrespective of his office, or position in this world, that God particularly reveals himself.

We will next try to notice some of these secrets of the Lord which our text says, are with those that fear him. Though these purposes are all revealed in his Word, yet they may very properly be called secrets, first because of the many, and deep mysteries in them, secondly, because they are said to be hid from many, because of their carnality. (1 Cor. 2:14).

A close and patient application, is necessary to the full understanding of any department of knowledge. This applies to the science of religion. One person cannot be proficient in more than one branch of knowledge. Paul knew this, hence when he chose the religion of Christ, we hear him exclaim: "I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ and him crucified." But the teachings of Christ are unique. The principles and maxims which he inculcated are nowhere else taught. The utmost stretch of human reason could never approximate its loftiness and purity. Human science was far, far too weak to explore this domain of knowledge. So now, since life and immortality have been brought to light through the Gospel, neither do we now need the aid of human science, or human bearing in any of its departments to enable us to understand these great, and heavenly truths. They emanated solely from God, and he alone can unfold unto us their true and spiritual import. And this will he do if we are humble and teachable.

That human knowledge is not necessary to enable us to understand God's holy Word, is still further deducible, from the fact that nearly, if not quite all, the errors that have so deformed the church, all the departures from the plain and obvious meaning of the sacred Scriptures, have originated with the learned. Had mankind only gone to the Scriptures for knowledge in divine things, and had they only sought the illuminations of the Holy Spirit, the church would not, as it now is, be rent into fragments. But blessed be God, there have always been some who have refused to offer incense with strange fire in their censers. They would take their coals from the altar of burnt-offering, no matter at what cost. Even in the darkest days of that overshadowing evil, the great apostasy, there was not wanting a period in which there were not some to offer a pure testimony for Jesus. In Rev. 7:1, John saw "four angels standing on the four corners of the earth, holding the four winds of the earth, that the wind should not blow on the earth, nor on the sea, nor on any tree." Now why this suspension of judgment? Why not let the trumpets immediately proclaim the vengeance of God. Ah! these restraining angels are to keep in check the impending devastations, until the servants of God are sealed on their foreheads.

A fierce and prolonged contest between truth and error, was now about to be inaugurated. That dreadful colossus, the hierarchy of Rome was being rapidly developed. Ignorance, superstition, and wickedness were about to spread themselves like a dark pall over the earth. But God was preparing a noble army of torch-bearers to hold forth the true light during these degenerate times. There must be a pause, a respite, during which period the apostasy might have an opportunity for repentance and reformation, and the true followers of the Lamb might become established and confirmed in the truth. They were sealed in their foreheads. God wrote, as it were, his Law on the tablets of their minds, to them the promise was verified. "Then shall we know, if we follow on to know the Lord." And in the others was fulfilled the saying, "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

The secrets of the Lord, or His deep mysteries, then are with his people, with those who love, serve, and obey him; to such are constantly unfolded new beauties, new wonders, and new grandours. The depth of divine love is unfathomable, but the nearer we live to the cross, the more perfectly obedient, and submissive we are, the more we shall be enabled to comprehend of this wonderful mystery. So with the providence of God. His dealings with individuals often seem strangely inexplicable, and sometimes arbitrary. We see the wicked and the nominal professors, "in great power, and spreading themselves like a green bay tree." We see them in the enjoyment of everything that this world can bestow, having health, friends, wealth everything. We see the devout and humble Christian deprived of all these, "plagued all the day long, and chastened every morning," and in a moment of despondency, we exclaim, "Verily I have cleansed my heart in vain, and washed my hands in innocency." But when we draw near to the sacred Oracles, we hear, as it were, a voice from between the Cherubim, saying to us, "Behold, I have refined thee, but not with silver; I have chosen thee in the furnace of affliction." "As many as I love I rebuke and chasten."

Now we see that there was "a need be" in all that we have suffered, whether it was mental or physical suffering, yea, necessary, that we should know that bitterest sorrows, the insincerity of friends and we doubt if greater pangs can be experienced by human hearts, than to be wounded in the house of our friends." Blessed indeed are they who have learned sufficiently in the school of Christ, to know that all these things are necessary. And so it is, when the outer darkness is thickest and densest, the inner light is most bright and glorious.

A HIGH CALLING.

BY S. M. MINNICH.

THEREFORE, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are (wore) called" (Eph. 4:1). To walk worthy is to conduct ones self in a proper manner. The Word exhorts us "to walk by faith, to walk in love, to walk honestly, to walk in the truth," and "to walk in wisdom toward them that are without." Some professors conduct themselves very circumspectly in the presence of their brethren, but very unbecomingly in the presence of "them without." "Worthy of the vocation," worthy of your calling, profession or business. A man may honor or dishonor, the humblest profession or business in life; may be an honorable tinker or a dishonorable artisan.

The called will honor the labor, or business to which he is called, more readily when called by the honorable. Reader, has father and mother called you? The church has called you. The Spirit calls; the Son calls; the Father calls.

Called "to be saints, called to fellowship with the Son; called to be children of God; called to share the life of Christ" (Eph. 2:5). Who is able for these things? Who can comprehend this high calling? Who can walk worthy of such a call and such a calling?

Only the spiritually minded can honor this calling, that calls us from death into life. "For to be carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually-minded, is life and peace" (Rom. 8:6).

Antioch, Ind.

"WHAT NEXT?"

A GENTLEMAN, riding near the city overtook a well-dressed young man, and invited him to a seat in his carriage.

"What," said the gentleman to the young stranger, "are your plans for the future?"

"I am a clerk," replied the young man, "and my hope is to succeed, and get into business for myself."

"And what next?" said the gentleman.

"Why, I intend to marry and set up an establishment of my own," said the youth.

"And what next?"

"Why, continue in business, and accumulate wealth."

"And what next?"

"It is the lot of all to die, and I, of course cannot escape," replied the young man.

"And what next?" once more asked the gentleman; but the young man had no answer to make; he had no purpose that reached beyond the present life. How many young men are in precisely the same condition? What pertains to the world to come has no place in all their plans.—Bible Banner.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK.

A RELIGIOUS WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE, S. H. BASHOR, M. M. ESHELMAN, EDITORS.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent post-paid, to any address in the United States or Canada, for $1.50 per annum. Those sending ten names and $15.00, will receive an extra copy free of charge. For all over this number the agent will be allowed 10 cents for each additional name, which amount can be deducted from the money, before sending it to us. Money Orders, Drafts, and Registered Letters may be sent at our risk. They should be made payable to Moore, Bashor & Eschelman. Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed:

MOORE, BASHOR & ESHELMAN, Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., FEBRUARY 21, 1878.

BROTHER Bashor's address, until further notice, will be Gilboa, Hancock Co., Ohio, care of I. J. Rosenberger.

BROTHER D. C. Hardman, of Felo, Mo., under date of Feb. 13th says: "The weather is mild, but the roads are muddy. Health is very good. Ten came out on the Lord's side, during the past year, and were baptized."

THE time for the commencement of the public oral discussion between Bro. Stein and D. R. Ray, of the Baptists, has not yet been made known to us. It is left for Mr. Ray to set the time when the debate shall commence.

IN this issue we expected to hear our first lesson from Dr. Greenwald on Sprinkling, but owing to the fact that so much other matter was standing and knocking for admittance, we are obliged to withhold it until next week.

BROTHER Jesse Y. Decker, of Hickory Grove, preached in the Brethren's meeting-house in this city, on Saturday evening, Sunday forenoon and evening. We always rejoice in being able to listen to good, sound Gospel preaching.

BROTHER Jacob Beeghly, of the Sandy Creek church, Fayette Co., Pa., says, the church there is in a healthy condition, and that ninety persons have been received into fellowship since last December, among the number, one who is eighty-one years old.

DO not let the length of Bro. Stein's series of articles, now being published in our paper, keep any one from giving them a careful reading. They are not only worth reading, but well worth preserving, and are calculated to instruct even the best informed.

AS an experiment, some have introduced the paper among outsiders, and find that it takes well. One agent persuaded his neighbor to take it just six months, but when the six months were up, the man would not consent to do without the paper. Readers, give it a trial among your neighbors.

BROTHER Daniel Vanman, of Virden, Ill., has in contemplation another prospecting tour in Texas. His knowledge of farming and good business qualities generally, amply qualify him to give a correct report of the country. Hope he will take his time to it, and let our readers know the results of his visit.

THOMAS D. Lyon, of Hudson, Ill., writes: "Our meetings are very interesting. We continue right along, notwithstanding the condition of the weather and roads." We know how that goes, for we have had mud here too, nevertheless we cannot do without meetings--dare not neglect the assembling of ourselves together.

JUST before going to press we received an interesting letter from Bro. Enoch Eby, dated Jan. 30th. He and Bro. Fry had spent several days in Germany, and when he wrote, they were at David Gluck's, at Hoheneck, on their way to Hamburg where their wives would join them, and then all would proceed to England.

BROTHER J. S. Flory, of Greeley, Colorado, in a recent letter to this office says: "Our Winter has been a most delightful one, but little snow, no rain--and a rare thing--health good. On last Sunday evening, the Baptists of this town had four additions to their number by baptism. The ordinance was administered in the baptistry in the church--the water made warm by the use of hot water. To-day we were present where two more were baptized in the clear, flowing river. The administrator said, 'I baptize you in the name of the Father, (but he didn't) and into the name of the Son, (but he did no such thing) and into the name of the Holy Ghost,' and then threw them backward."

WE certainly have good reason to admire the commendable degree of courtesy manifested by our contributors toward each other. We receive very few articles calculated to produce contention. They, like us, want peace in the church; want love and harmony to pervade every part of the body. "Blessed are the peace makers."

HOPKINS the Brethren at Ashland, Ohio, will pardon us for not getting the notice of their special school meeting in last issue. The notice was hung on the hook at the proper place, but overlooked in the make up of the paper. We would insert this week, but it is now too late to get the notice before the public in time. Will try and do better next time.

ELDER H. H. Miller, of Ladoga, Ind., has again been confined to his room with sickness, having caught cold while out preaching, and it settled on his lungs. He is now better, and hopes to be ready for duty soon. May the Lord spare him for still greater usefulness in the future, though he has already done much in defense of the Brethren in their faith and practice.

OUR agents, generally, have been doing remarkably well, and are still at work sending in new subscribers. Some have already sent in nearly seventy-five names, and "still more to come" they say. Hope they will keep the good work going till not one family in the church will be without it. Those wishing prospectus and sample copies will notify us and we will send them by return mail.

IN reply to the brother who wants an explanation of what is said regarding Melchisedec's genealogy, we remark that the subject was pretty fully explained in No. 3d, of last volume. We will soon publish an article by Bro. Balsbaugh relating to the same question, though his views are somewhat different from ours. Our readers will, therefore, have a chance of seeing both sides.

HOPKINS our correspondents will not think strange of it if their articles do not appear within a few weeks after being sent in. During the Winter we are usually over-run with matter, but it comes good in the Summer when people do not have time to write. We make room for articles as fast as we can, and in due time, all will be accommodated, so far as their matter may be adapted to the wants or needs of our readers.

MAN who have good homes, and are prospering well, would better keep them. The American people move too much. Let those go West who need homes, and build up the country there. But those who have good farms, are out of debt and getting pretty well up in years, ought not to face the hardships of a frontier life. We need strong, healthy men for this purpose, young and middle aged men who can work and endure the toils and privations of a new country.

SISTER Mary C. Dale truthfully says: "If Christians, when they have a matter of difference, would graciously agree to meet with each other in prayer, and pray together kindly for each other, their contention would soon end, but one will not stop, neither will the other. They are not so wise as Luther's two goats, which met upon a narrow plank over a deep water; they would not go back and dare not fight; at length one of them lay down while the other walked over him; so peace and safety attended both. Why should not Christians try this method?"

J. H. ESHELMAN, of Libertyville, Iowa, after sending in more subscribers, says: "Your welcome paper still comes with its usual weekly visits of good news to Zion, bearing throughout the length and breadth of our land, which is read with interest to both old and young, and a great many others that get to read them. I send mine out to those that have not the means to get the paper otherwise. An old gentleman, one of my neighbors says, there are some of the strongest articles in them, that he ever read. May God bless you and yours in the efforts of spreading the Gospel."

BROTHER David Norcross, of Shoals, Ind., writes as follows: "Bro. Cripe came to us on the 18th of January, and expected to remain two weeks, but we had the pleasure of hearing him only twice, as he took sick and had to return home. We had that our disappointments are great, yet we console ourselves through the precious word of God, that 'all things work together for good to them that love the Lord.' We make the best of our troubles, and try to add patience, so that we may have that rich and abounding experience which brings the blessed hope of eternal life."

BROTHER Henry Strickler, of Swan, Ind., says: "Our series of meetings have closed without any additions, but we hope that some good impressions have been made that never will be forgotten. Brethren G. W. Studabaker and W. R. Deeter were with us from the evening of the 2nd of Jan., to the 27th. Good attention was paid to the word preached. While these brethren were with us they preached the funeral of sister Andrews, aged 58 years and ten months. Her conversation, during her sickness, was altogether of the eternal world."

THIS is the way Bro. Levi Hallert, of Carleton, Neb., tells of their rejoicing: "We are having glorious meetings. Brethren Brubaker and Price from Beatrice, and Reed and Fidelity from Kansas are here, declaring the words of eternal life. We have meeting in day-time and in the evening. Five souls were buried with Christ in baptism, yesterday and to-day. A few weeks ago, two were baptized, also two reclaimed. We trust that many more are near the kingdom. May the Lord continue to shower His grace upon His servants, is my prayer."

WANTED. Not the love of money, not riches, lands, honor, worldly pleasure, but more real honesty, more of the principle that comes by eating of the Bread of Life, and drinking of the Fountain opened for sin and uncleanness. The immense amount of corruption, the dishonesty, the backings and strikes that are continually running to the surface, not only out of the church, but even in it, makes those who desire to live right, maintain pure and undefiled religion, sad and troubled. Often our confidence is shaken by men who have long been regarded as examples and models of piety and holy principles, because they have broken out with corruption and dishonesty. God help all such to stop short, confess their faults, reform, do good, and die happy.

FROM the Primitive Christian, as well as a letter received from the P. C. brethren, we are informed that the small-pox malady, in Huntington, was not so bad as was at first supposed. It seems that when the disease broke out, some of the city authorities acted a little imprudently, as also did some local papers, publishing exaggerated stories, and thus causing a panic. But now, we are informed, died with the disease, and several others had it in a mild form. In behalf of the P. C. we remark, that the readers of that periodical need not fear the disease through the handling of the paper, as the editors state that every needful precaution was used to keep their office clear of the disease. The malady has entirely abated, and things are going on in the even tenor of their way.

THE Advent Publishing Society, in one week, sent out $1296.27 worth of books. This shows great zeal in spreading their doctrine. They know that their doctrine can be very successfully spread by that means. Why cannot the doctrine of complete obedience to Christ in "all things" be extensively disseminated in the same manner? It can. Let us then, brethren and sisters, fully awake to the importance of the work, and earnestly take hold of the good cause. The Gospel Tract Association affords an excellent opportunity to thus spend the Truth. Read again, the article on this subject in No. 3, Vol. 3. Already much has been done in that direction, but the field is yet large. Will we occupy it? or will we leave it to others? What answer shall we have?

WE have received an article of some length, on the beard question, which we have not yet had time to carefully examine. Will say to those who had the article prepared and sent in, that we are very careful what we publish on that subject, not that the editors have any conscientious scruples about the wearing of the beard--just so it is plain and respectable--but it is a question, over which some people bother their minds a great deal more than over the salvation of sinners, and hence should be treated sparingly. Our motto is peace, union and general harmony, and hope that all our readers will help us to live up to it. Of the two authors here in the office, one wears a full beard and the other does not. Of course, some want to know if we ever argue the question? No, for the simple reason that we have more important matters to attend to. The article will be examined the first opportunity.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

WE have on hand a number of letters, queries and articles requiring my special attention, all of which will be attended to the first opportunity. Having fallen behind with my part of the work, it will take a few weeks to catch fully up, yet all will be promptly attended to in due time, and therefore all are requested to exercise a little patience toward us. Do not conclude that because we fail to respond to your letters immediately, that we are unmindful of the great assistance you have rendered our paper. We are always glad to hear from those who have taken much interest in our work, and are doing all in their power to help it along, though we do not, and cannot answer all their letters.

HAVING been holding meetings and preaching daily for nearly two weeks, our private correspondence has been entirely neglected, and will be for at least one week yet, until we get through with present meeting engagements. Week before last we commenced meeting with the Brethren in Mt. Carroll, and continued until Tuesday evening the 13th, when our meetings closed, with no additions however, though we had attentive congregations. On Wednesday evening had meeting in Lanark, large congregation and an interesting time of it. Meeting on Thursday evening, congregation still larger, and interest greatly increased. On Friday, at 1 P. M., meeting again. Went down to the water side and baptized three young men, one of them recently from North Manchester, Ind. Many others seemed near the kingdom. Meeting again in the evening; reads very muddy, yet good congregation. Very much regret that we have to leave for other parts. Working in the office all day, and preaching at night, is rather laborious, but being blessed with good health can stand it. Saturday morning, went to the Georgetown church to preach the funeral of sister Clara H. Eby, who died in this city, at the residence of brother D. F. Eby, on the 14th inst. Addressed a large congregation from John 11: 20-35. Immediately after the last sad respects were shown the departed, we returned home and now in a few minutes shall leave for Chelsea, Stephenson Co., this State, to labor with the brethren and sisters in our Master's cause. God grant us all a profitable season. J. H. E.

ARROGANCE.

HE spreads himself wherever he can. He thinks himself the blanket, the overcoat of the neighborhood, and others must freeze if he chooses not to cover them, and there can be no good government unless he turns the crank. Arrogance assumes what belongs to others. If he be engaged in business with others, the people must know that he is top, bottom and sides, whether he is or not. The people must believe this, whether he is or not. He swings and sweeps to his satisfaction, whether any man or woman is made richer in Christ or not. At home he is miller, waterwheel, engineer, grain-inspector, proprietor--everything, and if he chances to go from home a few days, he fails not to tell all the people that the chief miller is gone, that the clear white flour will not come rolling out as usual, but that the dear people must for a while live on unbolled meal until he returns to refresh them. And he will even go further. If the dear people will not believe this arrogant story, to have things his way, he will not hesitate to break the kneading troughs and batter down the ovens, though multitudes starve for good bread. Self, self is the outside and inside of arrogance and no chips of truth dare fall from other's hewing unless he scores first. No indeed; they would not be first class chips unless his axe first went through them. If he chances to be an officer in the church, he cares not for the injunction, "in honor preferring one another," but gets up a little injunction for himself which reads, "in honor preferring myself." Now don't say that I have been shooting at you; I aimed all the time at Arrogance, and if I hit him, he'll speak out. M. M. E.

WHISPERING.

THIS week, while Bro. Moore is absent holding forth the Word of life, urging sinners to turn to God and live, exhorting the children of God to greater steadfastness and holiness, I want to tell our readers something about him. He is my text just now, and I shall use him for our edification. Do you know that Bro. Moore cannot hear a whisper? The man that whispers to him, labors in vain. He will not hear you; he cannot. He can hear you in any ordinary low tone of voice, but it is useless to whisper to him, either low or loud. What a blessing it would be if more of us were thus favored! I say favored, for in these times of secret sin, whisperings and behind-the-back work it would be a blessing if many could not hear whispering. But brother Moore possesses another advantage. While he cannot hear a whisper, he is fortunate also in that he cannot whisper. This is still a greater blessing. Too often heads go together and engage in whispering to the detriment of church, neighborhood and nation. It may be right at times to whisper, but because it is right to do so at the right time and place, it by no means follows that it is right to run from house to house and whisper about a brother, sister or neighbor. There would be more peace, more love, more holy zeal, more real piety if there were fewer whisperings in matters that concern the church and neighborhoods. My object in writing this article is, to apprise you of brother Moore's inability to either whisper or hear whispering and thus avoid some unpleasantness at times. And then, too, I think we may all gather something for our edification from these facts, and thus become still better in our holy profession.

M. M. B.

WANTED!—A LITTLE MORE PRUDENCE.

WHAT do you suppose a general would think of his soldiers, were they, while in the midst of battle, to cease fighting and go to killing insects? He would certainly conclude that they were a foolish set of warriors. Well, there are scores of just such inconsistent soldiers claiming to belong to the army of the Lord. In the midst of the most important conflicts, they will pause and trifle with minor questions that are of no vital consequence to either God or man. They will spend more time and money to settle something the Creator never wanted settled than in the salvation of souls. To set a little supposed wrong, right, they will do more real harm than forty such imaginary wrongs would amount to. Such a course is about as logical as a man burning down his barn, with all the contents, just to get rid of the rats.

People want to learn to be consistent, and so that in their attempts at reforming, they don't do more harm than good. There are men who will run the risk of ruining the peace and prosperity of a whole congregation, just to have a member corrected of a fault that is not half so bad as some of their own. Then there are people who, when trouble comes up about their brother or sister, are wonderfully active gathering up evidence and helping (?) the case along, yet, when a project is on foot, to hold up the kingdom and advance the cause, they are as quiet and unconcerned about it as a dead forest tree. Their zeal, like the ocean tide, seems to ebb and flow as the case may demand. Their running, like a stationary windmill, depends upon which way the wind blows.

It is a good thing to be zealously affected in a good work, but a zeal without either knowledge or prudence, is detrimental to the prosperity of any cause. Men want to learn the art of balking hold of difficulties in the right way and for a good purpose; and then learn when to take hold of them. Never allow an important case to go neglected for the sake of a few minor matters. Sometimes we may see a brother or sister do something about which the Bible is as silent as the grave, yet think it a sin of the first magnitude, and will almost run the church, just to get that brother or sister set right. Such a course does not display the wisdom that should characterize the children of God. A skillful physician will not ruin the health of his patient just to save one finger, neither will he torture the whole body beyond endurance, just to cure a small bruise on one of the limbs.

If the children of the kingdom, in their generation, would display half the wisdom that is practiced by the children of the world, the church of God to-day would be better off. There is too much heading against the wind, too much time spent over unimportant questions, and not enough interest taken in the vital questions of Christianity. The man who runs his wag against a tree, just to avoid a little stump, needs to learn another lesson. Some one says, "Little boxes spoil the vines." Yes, that is true, but don't remember that the big boxes catch the chickens. It is good to watch the little boxes, but don't become so absorbed as to allow the wolves to enter the fold unimpeded, and devour the sheep.

There are numbers who will lose all their influence, and endanger the internal peace of the church, just to retain and parade before the public some unimportant hobby they have succeeded in mounting. They have their preacher, and their church, and thank God they are preachers, the congregation meet to court with what is or is given, whether it is appropriate or not. Sometimes the wants of a few hundred people will go unappreciated, just for the sake of giving one or two persons in the congregation a going over. It is disgusting to hear a minister, in public, hinting at the faults and defects of some person, and not instruct his congregation as it ought to be. A minister's business is, to preach the Gospel—tell the old Bible story as it was wont to be told in days of yore by inspired men. This they should do, and not condescend to using the sacred desk, from whence to deal out little, low personal trash. Leave that for the enemies of the Cross to do. To every minister, Christ would say, "Feed my sheep," and I don't believe in a minister letting the "sheep" starve, while he is annoying the "goats." Take good care of the Master's flock and He will reward you abundantly. Christians, like sheep, are easily managed, if properly handled, but if abused, become troublesome.

Pse consistency and judgment in religious matters as well as those belonging to the world. It is not enough to be as "harmless as doves," but we must be as "wise as serpents," using every lawful means subservient to the Master's cause. See that your efforts are calculated to accomplish good. Don't throw till you know what you are going to hit. Never shoot till you get something to shoot at. Don't make a fuss till you are sure that your reason is good. Don't cross a stream before you get to it, and above all things, do not tell a thing until you know it is true. Let us remember that the church got along before we came into the world, and I presume can get through all right after we are gone. Let us labor diligently to do our duty—keep ourselves pure, unspotted, from the world, and God will take care of the church. We don't want to fret so much about the church and its condition, but more about ourselves and our own hearts. If each member will keep his own heart right, he will not have much time left to meddle with things belonging exclusively to his neighbor. It is a good thing to watch over each other for good, but there is such a thing as a farmer bothering himself so much about his neighbor's neglected farm, as to entirely neglect his own. Let us first set our own matters right, and afterwards see to those belonging to others. "Cast out first the beam out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to pull out the mote that is in thy brother's eye," was not spoken for naught.

J. H. M.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Dear Paper—

ON Saturday, Jan. 26th, was conveyed to the depot by Bro. David Wolf, where we were met by Bro. David Emmert, one of the teachers of Huntingdon Normal School, who accompanied us to Brownsville, Md., to attend the series of meetings there. On the way down, were met by several other brethren and sisters en route for the same place. Arrived in good time, and were met by Eld. Cassel, who conveyed us to his home, where we were kindly cared for until services. This congregation, at one time, belonged to what is known as the Grosbecke arm of the church, but in latter years, when the membership increased in the valley, each side of the mountain, a division was made, forming two distinct congregations. Bro. Emanuel Slifer has presided as Bishop, since its organization; though quite advanced in years, is still enjoying good health, and retains the full powers of mind. Brethren Cassel and Yontee are his co-laborers in the cause of Christ, workers of righteousness, laboring for the kingdom of peace, and the crown of immortality. For some years the cause seemed to wane, but within the past few months, they have experienced refreshing showers, from the gracious Lord; adding over fifty in all, to the church, by confession and baptism. Our meeting began and continued with an unusual attendance, increasing in numbers each meeting, until the snow storm of Thursday, Jan. 31st, interfered, when, our time being up, we closed, and bidding adieu to all, parted, perhaps forever in this land of sorrow. During our meetings, a number made the good confession and were baptized into the Body of Christ; others confessed, but owing to the severe storm on the last day of meeting, could not be immersed. We were not closed, their number is seven. A meeting was announced for the following Lord's day, when, it is probable, they were received into the church.

We return our thanks to the church here, for the hospitality and hospitality shown us while among them. May the Lord reward and bless them all, to joy in Christ, in life, and salvation through Him in the world to come. Preached at Funkstown in the evening to a very attentive audience. Spent the night with Bro. E. S. Miller and family. Feb. 1st, took the train at Hagerstown, for Boiling Springs, Cumberland Co., Pa. At Greencastle, Bro. Oller and wife joined us, and their daughter, sister Annie, who had been with us in Maryland, separated from our company, to return home and to school. We trust the Spirit of God may and will ever guide this fair daughter in the path of purity till it ends beyond the pearly gates in the city of gold.

Arrived at Boiling Springs in time for church; good congregation and good attention. Have held services each evening since here, with large audiences in attendance, and an encouraging interest manifested. Expect, to-morrow, to see the grave opened in the beautiful stream near here, and the dead buried and raised to new life in Christ.

While we see the Lord's cause prospering at this place, other churches in the valley are witnessing the troubling of the waters. Just ten miles from here, Bro. Mohler, of Lewistown, Pa., and Eld. J. F. Oller, of Waynesboro, are conducting a successful meeting. When last heard from, eleven had been added by confession and baptism. Ten miles below here, Bro. James A. Sell is doing a good work. Farther up, a Bro. Baker of Shady Grove, is meeting with success; seven had been added when last heard from, and among them, a State Senator's son. Bro. Graybill Meyers recently closed a meeting not far from here, with twelve additions; and in other localities equal success is attending the efforts of the churches in the interest of the cause.

One thing is apparent now, and that is, that notwithstanding the fears of some, that, under our present system of church government and labor, the church will be a thing of history, only fifty or one hundred years from hence, never has it been known among us, to see our numbers increasing as fast and surely as now. Churches, which one and two years ago, opposed series of meetings, are now holding them, and hundreds are looking home to Christ. Where then there was coldness and weariness, now there is life, warmth and general activity. Where formally ruled the day, true religion now swings aloof over the fort of iniquity, and as time moves on, we look and pray for greater achievements, and brighter work. May Heaven lend a helping hand, and the old Gospel banner unfurl her folds to the breeze, and span this entire domain, and over the broad land of America be heard the shout of victory in and through the blood of Christ, and united by the followers of Jehovah rushing on to victory over the consolidated forces of hell. More of our meeting, and the church next week. May God bless all, now and forever.

S. H. B.

Boiling Springs, Pa. Feb. 5th, 1878.

A GOOD EXAMPLE.

THIS is the way Bro. Daniel Vaniman, of Virden, Ill., approves of Westward missionary work: "I presume you have noticed in No. 5 of Primitive Christian, the noble example of the little church in Boulder Co., Col., in responding so manfully to the call for help in Texas. This church, though yet in its infancy, and battling against the poverty and hardships of the frontiers of Col., and without a meeting-house, and many other conveniences enjoyed in older churches, was yet rich enough, when the earnest call for the Gospel came, to raise the means and send a minister from Mo., at once, to see after it. What a noble example for older churches to copy after!"

What other congregations will now volunteer to send some minister West, or wherever he may be needed to work in the vineyard of the Lord. We have plenty of preachers, but they want to be scattered a little more. When sending preachers, however, fancy not that they should bear the cross alone and all the church go free. Not only say "go," but HELP them go.

The Greek Anaximander being told that the very boys laughed at his singing, remarked, "Then I must learn to sing better." He is a text from which we may all learn a useful lesson—learn to do things better, ought to be the motto of every devoted laborer in the Master's cause. Do not be content with what you can do, but laugh at your mistakes, but resolve to learn to do better. If people would cultivate that habit of excellence, the world would be better off, and scholars of every grade and order, have less reason to criticize each other.

SATURDAY NIGHT.

The Preacher and His Family.

THE week's work is over. We are all one week nearer the tomb; one week nearer the time when we shall lay our armor by, and be at rest among those who have gone before. The preacher's work is not yet over. To-morrow is an anxious day, not only for him, but for his family also. He feels great responsibilities resting upon him, and must be prepared for them.

May be he has been working hard, has had but little time for either reading or meditating upon a subject. He is too tired to study much to-night—needs rest, yet it will not do to have the cause of God dishonored, and so it becomes him to apply himself diligently. Perhaps he is away from home, on a mission of usefulness, proclaiming the eternal truths of God to a lost and ruined world. Though he may be among the best of friends, and well provided for, yet he feels and thinks, "there is no place like home." The dear ones are at home, he left them in God's care, who watches them as a mother would her children. But gentle reader, will you pause and ponder a few moments, the condition of many ministers and their families to-night? Do you know how many of them suffer in executing their mission, while you are at home enjoying the fruits of their labors? Do you know that we have poor ministers, who do more for the cause of Christ, and keeping up the church, than many of those who possess this world's goods in abundance?

Nearly all our ministers are working men; most of them farmers, many are mechanics. Some are poor, yes, very poor, and have a hard time of it, working by the day to make a living; have a large family to support, and must lose a great deal of time preaching funerals, &c. I fear that in some instances they bear this cross alone and all the rest go free. Not long since, a poor minister told me that, during the first eight years of his ministerial labors, he spent five hundred dollars out of his own pocket. Then, says he, "I had to quit traveling." "But," says one, "that minister will get his reward in the home beyond." Yes, thank God, such noble actions are too good to be rewarded by anything of an earthly character. But what will be the reward of those wealthy ones, who stand by and see the poor minister, his family and the cause suffer? Ah! that is where the trouble comes in, not so much in this world as in that which is to come.

There are many men, who want to see the cause prosper, yet refuse to help bear the burden. They can see poor, useful ministers suffer, yet refuse to suffer with them. But it is not the preacher that suffers so much as it is his family. God bless the families of poor, hard-working ministers to-night, but many of them have a hard time of it; the wife especially, has more than her portion of the burden to bear, and therefore needs the sympathies, prayers and assistance of God's children. Her husband may be an able preacher, honored and respected by all, and of course has to be away from home a great deal. While on his preaching tours, is well cared for, and wants for nothing, but think of a poor, hard-working wife at home—she is alone with a family of children. They are poor, she must work hard with but few bright prospects before. Her husband is required to spend his time and means, building up the church, and she bears that soon they will be left in want, with no home on earth. God bless the poor, hard-working preacher and his family to-night, who have no home. To the wife, home is not happy under these circumstances; she spends many gloomy hours, while others enjoy life with bright prospects before them.

Some, who know not what it is to be in want, may say, the picture is too dark, it cannot be true, but the writer knows just what he is writing about, and there are ministers and their families who know the truthfulness of this. I am not writing about wealthy ministers and their well-to-do families, but about those who are poor, or in very limited circumstances. Gentle reader, have you a poor minister in your congregation? Do you help him bear his burdens, or do you let him bear them alone? When he is away preaching, do you see to it that his family is well provided for? Sisters, do you visit his hard-working wife and help her along with her work? Do you now and then make her a present of a dress? or do you just that money for buying groceries for your use? Do you occasionally give the children a few articles of clothing? or do you use that money to buy a pair of shoes for your children?

Says one, "We pray for the preacher, and encourage him." Do you know how much good your empty prayers do? Can your poor minister live on such prayers as yours? You say, God will help the poor minister and supply his wants. That is it; you want God to do it all, and you nothing. The best way to pray for such poor persons is, to wrap a sack of flour, or something useful, up in your prayers, and send it to the preacher's family. Some good, heavenly saints' prayers are large enough to wrap up a whole load of corn and wheat in. These are the prayers that do good to hearts, souls, and count up to be given as a memorial. Let your prayers be such, and you will do good works. There are a great many who are helping the poor minister along, and doing some good deeds, and hearts to be held up in prayer. If a person has a good heart, and is not selfish, and especially his family, must not be so poor, and those who are thus poor, and needy, must not Christ and His cause.—J. H. M.

The Home Circle.

READ AND OBEY.

"Husbands, love your wives."
"Wives, obey your husbands."
"Parents, provoke not your children to wrath."
"Children, obey your parents in all things."

Edited by M. M. Eshelman.

"Give me your heart," says Jesus, "and I'll make you rich and happy. I am your friend, will you be mine?"

SEEK not the riches of this world, for they bring sorrow, trouble and often destruction, but ever seek the riches of Christ—riches that are full of joy and peace.

My young friends, the Winter is passing away very fast; and soon many of you, if you live, must quit school and go to work with your hands.

VERY BAD.—It is hard to distinguish some Christian churches from unchristian theatrical associations nowadays. It is beyond the power of a microscope, magnifying one thousand times, to show the line where the world ends and the church begins.—Christum Index.

WHILE you are reading the Home Circle, learning how pleasant many homes are, and enjoying yourselves with all of the comforts of life, think of the thousands and millions who are poor, and wretched, full of misery and suffering.

WHAT an unhappy place that must be, where father and mother scold each other, scold their children from the time they rise until they go to bed. And we have heard parents even scold the pigs because they went through the fence where some careless fence-builder left a hole.

HOW THEY LOVE IT.

Dear Brother:—I THINK your youth's department adds a good deal to the usefulness of your paper. It gives the youth an eagerness to peruse your pages, and thereby lead the gentle lambs along the line of duty.

Circuson, Iowa

HAPPY HOME.

HOME, O happy home! What makes home so happy this evening? Why, it is happy because all the people in the house try to make each other happy.

Now, here comes sister Mary. She wants to sing the pretty song about Jesus, His love and grace, how He calls, and calls for people to go and do His will, and come to Him and live.

When the last word "Amen" is heard, all arise and again sing, "Take it to the Lord in Prayer," or some other pretty hymn, then the happy children kiss their happy father and mother, and each other "Good night" and then quietly go away to rest their tender bodies—and home is happy.

TO THE CHILDREN.

LITTLE children, love your father, For he has been kind to you; And be ready to obey him, What he telleth you to do.

Little children, love your mother, For she is your kindest friend; She doth care for you in childhood, And will care till life shall end.

Little children, hear the Savior— All His words are full of light; Children, now obey your parents In the Lord, for this is right.

Honor father and your mother, That it may be well with thee, And your days be long and happy, On this earth where'er you be.

Little children, hear the Savior, When He speaks in tones of love; Let them come, oh hear Him saying For of such are those above.

Little children, do your duty, Love your brothers, sisters, all; Let me say to you, dear children, Always heed the Savior's call.

UNCLE JOHN.

Lancaster, Ind.

A TALK WITH THE CHILDREN.

Dear Children:—

BEING much interested in the Home Circle, I will also try to add my mite. I will try to give you an interesting little Bible incident. Our story is about a little maid of the land of Israel.

This little girl, no doubt, had a pleasant home in her native country, surrounded by vineyards and olive gardens. We may imagine she was one of a happy home circle, having a kind father, an affectionate mother, fond brothers and sisters, but oh, how war, cruel, bloody war, changed this bright scene into wretchedness and woe.

Dear children, think of this little girl, imagine yourselves in her painful circumstances, and then say, if you haven't much to be grateful for, instead of receiving the loving caresses of father, mother, brothers and sisters, she is now a little servant, having to wait on, and attend a haughty mistress.

Now, perhaps some of our dear little readers think, if they were so painedly situated, they could do nothing but weep and repine; no doubt this maiden's little heart was nearly broken, but her conduct shows she was a good little girl. She, no doubt, had been blessed with pious parents, who had taken her to Jerusalem, where she had seen the solemn and gorgeous worship of the temple; she had also known a very good, aged man, whose name was Elisha; this man was a prophet.

Now you see, dear children, how much good a little girl was instrumental in bringing about. It all was the result of her faithfulness, and kindness of heart.

AT ST MATTHEW

DO A LITTLE.

MANY a Christian destroys his peace and usefulness, because he is not willing to do little things. He wants to speak and pray well, eloquently, edifyingly, or not at all. Because he can't do something great, he won't do anything. If all were willing to add a little to a prayer-meeting, a Sunday-school, or to the strength and influence of the church, there would not be so many praying to be excused.

CHRISTMAS NIGHT.

I WOULD like to add my mite to the Home Circle. I am eleven years old and attend school regularly. We had a nice time on Christmas night. We had pieces to speak and sing, and the teacher gave us all presents.

DELLA LITTLE.

Liberty, Ill.

ABOUT SOME QUESTIONS.

SEEING A. J. Robinson's question, asking what name in the Bible spells the same backwards as forwards, by placing the fourth letter before the fifth, I answer, Nathan.

My grandmother is here at our house, very sick. She was anointed last Thursday. She is now getting better. Our Sunday-school has closed for this Winter.

MARY J. BOWERS.

Wabash's Grove, Ill.

FROM MELISSA FORNEY.

OH, what thoughts and tender emotions cluster in those few words, "The Home Circle." How eagerly we love to peruse the page devoted to tidings from the loved ones of that circle.

Gentle reader, have you not often looked with the eye of faith beyond home, and the many loved ones that help form that circle? What innocent faith and love I see displayed in those letters from the little folks; and I think of many little jewels that embellish the coronet of our Master, and are happy in that bright circle above.

When you speak to any person, look him in the face.

Good company and good conversation are the very snows of virtue.

Good character is above all things else.

Never listen to idle or loose conversation.

Your character cannot be essentially injured except by your own acts.

CHILDREN AT WORK.

From Charles Moomaw.—Dear Editor:—I am ever so glad to read letters from little boys and girls. I have not the chance to learn, as some other boys have, I am the oldest boy, and as father has to be away preaching very often, I must stay at home and attend to things.

Purple Cone, Neb.

From Sharon R. Bosserman.—Dear Editor:—I wish to become a member of the "Children at Work." I live in the town of Dunkirk, Ohio. Like to go to meeting. My father is a minister and I often go with him to meeting.

From Louie C. Hickey.—Dear Editor:—I am a little girl, eleven years old, and go to school. I read in the sixth reader, study geography, spelling, mental and written arithmetic.

From S. H. Clair.—Dear Editor:—All the little boys and girls are writing letters, so I guess I must write one too. I am sixteen years old, and am going to school; am not gitted in learning as some boys are.

From Milton F. Keiser.—Dear Brother:—I have been reading your paper, and I find many good little letters. We have had a good protracted meeting this Winter; there were nineteen baptized and four more have applied, and I can say that I am one of them.

From Michael Overholzer.—Dear Editor:—I have five brothers and three sisters. I am thirteen years old. My father and mother belong to the church. We have meeting near school-house every two weeks; it is three quarters of a mile from our house.

From Flora Stoner.—Dear Editor:—I see many nice letters in your paper, written by little boys and girls. I am nearly twelve years old. I live with my aunt, near Columbia City, Iowa.

From John H. Nowlan.—Dear Editor:—I am a little boy, ten years old, and go to school to Mr. George Gregg. I like to go to school and meeting too. The church is on one corner of our farm, and about a quarter of a mile from our house.

Malberry Grove, Ill.

us. Our meetings commenced on the 24th of January and ended on the 11th of February. We had preaching every evening and most of the time in the forenoon of each day. The Gospel was preached so pure and simple, that no honest person could help but understand it. Our home ministers and in fact all the members, tended the meetings well, done their part nobly, everybody seemed to enjoy himself. It was truly a time of rejoicing for both saint and sinner. One of the converts said: "I am sorry I did not start six years ago." Another said: "Twenty years of the best of my life were spent in sin to no profit."

We hope to soon start meetings in other parts of the district, and we have good reasons to expect a large ingathering, as the doctrine of the Bible is preached in its purity, many seem to be willing to accept it.

Through our series of meetings twenty-five have been made willing to accept Christ and enter the army of the Lord. Now, brethren and sisters, let us pray that they may put on the whole armor of God that they may withstand the attacks of the evil one. Of the number that joined, eighteen were Brethren's children, seventeen of them under twenty years of age. Seven were persons between forty and fifty years old. We hope and trust they may all prove faithful and fight the good fight of faith, that in the end they may say with the apostle: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; hence there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

May the good Lord help us and keep us all in that strait and narrow way, that we may finally enter in through the gate into the city, is the prayer of your unworthy brother.

J. SHANLON.

NOTES OF TRAVEL.

Dear Brethren:—

IN company with my wife and two sons, I left Pennsylvania on Dec. 18, 1878, and arrived at Mansfield, Ohio, at 7 A. M. Here I put my family on board the train for Fillin, Ohio. I returned to Tuscarawas Co., Ohio, and remained with the brethren one week, and preached for them. Had a very pleasant sojourn among them. On the 27th I passed on to Seneca Co., Ohio, where I again joined my family; and remained until the fifth of January, 1878.

In company with Bro. S. T. Bosserman went to the Eagle Creek congregation, where we remained until the 11th. Then went to J. P. Ebersoh's charge. Remained until the 21st. Then went to Allen Co., where I remained until the 21th. Then to Marshall Co., Ind., where I stayed until the 29th.

My next point was Lamark, Illinois. Here I remained until the fourth of February. Then to the Arnold's Grove congregation, where we remained until the sixth. In the evening of the sixth, I spoke in Mt. Carroll, Ill., to a very attentive audience. After resting at the house of my old acquaintance, Bro. W. Clemon, we boarded the train for Waterloo, where we arrived safely on the seventh, about noon.

We had a very pleasant journey. Enjoyed good health and pleasant weather most of the time all along our journey. We had very pleasant meetings wherever I stopped with the brethren. Now I will say to my many friends in the East, who were so much concerned for us, we are now at the home of our dear Bro. Michael and sister Susan Eber. They make us feel at home as possible.

We had the pleasure of seeing some precious souls come to the church. Among them I will name the wife of Bro. Elias Fink of Green Springs, Seneca Co., O. May God bless the dear ones where we stopped, who cared for us like brethren.

JOHN WISE.

THE KANSAS COLONY.

HAVING been requested by a company to hunt a place for a location in Kansas, I did as I was directed to do. It required considerable searching, for some wanted Government land, especially the poor class. I examined the country along the Atchison, Topinka & Santa Fe R. R. a fair number. Also along the Union Pacific and the K. C. & P. Among the latter I selected Government land for a colony.

I was West for nearly 302 miles from Kansas City. Along the route the colony is going to locate, and no other, the Atchison, Topinka & Santa Fe R. R. a fair number. Also along the Union Pacific and the K. C. & P. Among the latter I selected Government land for a colony.

I am confident that I have secured a place for a colony, a fair one, and quite a large one. I have a prospect to give you, and that is, the richly improved paper. In regard to the State of Kansas I would first say, that I did not only take notice of the land along the different roads, but stopped off at many places and made search through the country. After having spent about two months, being at work all the time, I concluded that Kansas is, without controversy, a great State. The soil is deep and rich, the land is slightly rolling. There are no sloughs to be found, no stagnant water and no underdraining needed. Good roads throughout the country, and particularly along the K. P. R. R. In my judgment, three-fourths of the country is better adapted to the raising of wheat, while one fourth is better adapted to the raising of corn. Vegetables grow in abundance; also fruit, if properly cultivated, and timber of different kinds.

If any intend moving out there, and wish to get to plowing, they can get at it right away. The water is generally good through the parts I made investigation of; the depth of digging wells varies from twenty to forty feet. Along the A. T. & Santa Fe R. R. they use driving pumps because of quicksand. But along the K. P. R. R., they dig wells like they do in Pa. They will then, so there is no danger of caving in. I bought three farms, six miles South-west of Wilson for two of my sons and one son-in-law. They intend to move on those farms in the Spring. Wilson is situated 239 miles West of Kansas City. The exact place for the colony to locate is not yet fully decided. Most of our members intend moving somewhere in the neighborhood where I have bought. There are seven members in that part of the country now, and with those who intend to go here, there will be about twenty-five or thirty. No church organized there yet; but hope when we arrive there will be a sufficient number to organize a church. The nearest organized church is about forty miles North of Wilson.

I will now, in a brief way, answer some of the more particular questions I have been asked to answer. In the first place I will say that there is no government land worth while along the line of the first-named railroad. Railroad land can be bought from three to ten dollars per acre between Ellsworth and Ellis, depending how near it is to the railroad and how it lays. School-houses are built as fast as they are needed. At most of the towns they have built good, two-story school-houses; have graded schools, and use these school-houses for religious services. Some churches have built themselves places for worship, and I think the Brethren ought to do the same.

Coal may be found at many different points in the State. About three miles from Wilson is a coal mine, and eighteen miles North of same place is another one. Wood costs from two to five dollars a cord, coal three dollars a ton at the mine. The climate is very good and healthy, the towns and country fast improving.

In answer to the colony plan I would say, that the colony started on a regular colony course, checked off by, at least as far as circumstances required, before and made they have moved. Whether the colony intends to buy land and lay out a town, and then cash for those that shall be, I know not, but I think that would be done justly. The colony meet every Wednesday evening near Elmville, Cumberland Co., Pa. I have this for an answer your question. If anything more is necessary, no doubt those interested will ask.

We have a series of meetings in progress at our meeting-house in Milltown. Bro. John Miller of Millio Co. is with us. Last Sabbath day we baptized five precious souls, and tomorrow at least eight more have given their consent to be baptized.

DAVID KLEIN.

Feb. 1, 1878.

FROM PENNSYLVANIA.

[The following should have appeared some time ago, but was unintentionally mislaid, and hence a month or more late.]

AS I Sunday the 29th inst., we had meetings for the first time in a new and commodious meeting-house near Fulton station, a small village in Lancaster Co., Pa. On Sunday, Dec. 16th, we had meeting for the first time in a new meeting-house, also three churches of a name, to a large number. We had good attendance during the morning. Good music, and the Word preached. The congregation seemed to be more interested in the message, than in the same part of our service, which was a better knowledge.

We find that the two meetings were held under the same circumstances. The people are doing well, but the same number of them have been baptized. The people are doing well, but the same number of them have been baptized. The people are doing well, but the same number of them have been baptized.

for better accommodations for funerals, and also that these burial places might not go to ruin. Had consultations among themselves in regard to building a meeting-house between the two places, but not being able to come to a satisfactory agreement among themselves, as regarding the proposed situation for the house, the two parties concluded to build a house to themselves; (but all on friendly terms—no ill feeling existing between the two parties as far as I know.)

The houses have been built as "Union meeting-houses," by the community to the service of the Brethren, Mennonites, Lutheran and Reformed churches; but giving the Brethren the pre-eminence. The Brethren opened the two houses (dedicated as some say) by public worship. While at these meetings, my mind was made to wander back through the dark ages of past centuries when the followers of Christ had to meet in secluded places to worship, and were often molested while thus engaged, and by the enemy of our holy religion. I had to think, What a contrast! Our Christian ancestors met in caves and clefts to worship together, clothed with fears and anguish of soul. We come together to worship, not in caves and dens, but in comfortable houses.

The hand of a civilized State law, holds to our view the words, "Fear no molestation, but worship your God at all times, according to the dictates of your own conscience, in a land of peace and plenty. I am your guardian—I will let no molestations come upon you." I would say in conclusion, let us be thankful, and pray the Lord to give His increase to the ingathering of many souls.

L. ANDIS.

Liacon, Pa., Dec. 23, 1877.

FROM INDIANA.

ACCORDING to previous arrangements, brethren Lewis Kinsey and Lewis W. Teeter were to go to Fulton and Marshall counties to hold some meetings, and in order to enjoy these meetings and visit relatives and friends, I concluded to accompany them, the time being set to start on Friday, the 11th of January. The day previous to starting we got the sad news that Bro. Teeter was sick and consequently could not go with us. Not to disappoint the brethren entirely Bro. Kinsey and I went, and were met at Logansport by Bro. Aaron Brower (my father-in-law) who took us to his home sixteen miles north-west of Logansport, where there are no members living but himself and sister Brower. Saturday at ten o'clock, we met at Brower's school house for worship. The weather being disagreeable, and in a Catholic community, the congregation was small, but in the evening the house was pretty well filled. On Sunday morning and evening we had meeting about four miles further north in a little town called Pleasant Grove, preaching in the Disciple's meeting-house. Here we had large congregations. Tuesday in the morning was taken from Act 9: 9, and in the evening from Luke 17: 26. Many expressed themselves pleased with the doctrine and said it was the first preaching they ever heard from the Brethren. They seemed anxious to have the meetings continue longer, but the appointments were made of another year, and I did not say. On Monday evening we were back at the school house again, and a full house and the best of order and attention. This was our last meeting in the neighborhood. Bro. Kinsey held a word and war of God nobly and plainly in our little houses, and I believe by the power of the Word preached there was a new good and some conversions made. There was a same thought here that is, a regular, complete, and pure, when a good man is weakened and the enemy with a warm life, we had to give up. Now, brethren, here is a nice colony, well located at home, and one in which there might be many additions. On Tuesday, the 15th, we were taken into Marshall county, about ten or twelve miles north-east, near Arden, on the Morgan and Helm roads. Here we met with a number of brethren and sister, and at each one of the getting home to assembly with them. Last evening, about 8 o'clock, members from the Honey Brook and A. W. Hoffman and Aaron Brown, and their ministers, Bro. Abraham Miller, the elder, but does not stay in this congregation. Bro. Kinsey preached a sermon, and the following evening continuing the same, and on the 17th, the work and on Sunday had to continue. On Sunday one member was baptized, and on the 18th, one more. The evening of the 19th, was very solemn, and there was a full house, and a full house. Some conversions were made, and we were very glad to see them. On the 20th, we had a full house, and a full house. Some conversions were made, and we were very glad to see them. On the 21st, we had a full house, and a full house. Some conversions were made, and we were very glad to see them.

On the 22nd, we had a full house, and a full house. Some conversions were made, and we were very glad to see them. On the 23rd, we had a full house, and a full house. Some conversions were made, and we were very glad to see them. On the 24th, we had a full house, and a full house. Some conversions were made, and we were very glad to see them. On the 25th, we had a full house, and a full house. Some conversions were made, and we were very glad to see them. On the 26th, we had a full house, and a full house. Some conversions were made, and we were very glad to see them. On the 27th, we had a full house, and a full house. Some conversions were made, and we were very glad to see them. On the 28th, we had a full house, and a full house. Some conversions were made, and we were very glad to see them. On the 29th, we had a full house, and a full house. Some conversions were made, and we were very glad to see them. On the 30th, we had a full house, and a full house. Some conversions were made, and we were very glad to see them.

be in a prosperous condition. They had several abissions this winter. On Monday, the 21st, Bro. Jonathan Hoover took us some twenty miles to the Beaver Dam congregation. Here I met my only brother in the flesh that I have living. Had three meetings at the Nichols' meeting-house with good congregations and good order. In this church is where Elder David Beechelimer lives. He met with us at two of the meetings. The last meeting, on Tuesday evening, ended Bro. Kinsey's labors on this mission, making fifteen sermons while he was out. Hope there may much fruit grow out of his labors to the glory of God and the good of souls. We thank the Brethren and friends for their kindness toward us. Got home the 23rd and found all well, for which we feel to thank the Lord.

ABRAHAM BOWMAN.

Hagerstown, Ind.

DIED.

Obituaries should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and separate from all other business.

EBY.—In the city of Lamark, Carroll Co., Ill., Feb. 14, 1878, at the residence of Bro. D. F. Eby, sister Clara H. Eby, aged 27 years, 7 months and 20 days.

HOLSINGER.—In Bethel church, Fillmore Co., Nebraska, November 26th, 1877, Nelson Holsinger, aged 7 years, 4 months and 20 days.

HOLSINGER.—In same congregation, Dec. 1, 1877, Henry Holsinger, aged 9 years, 1 month and 7 days.

HOLSINGER.—In same congregation, Dec. 22, 1877, Sylvia Holsinger, aged 5 years, 1 month and 7 days.

WILLIAMS.—In the Nettle Creek church, Ind., on Feb. 7th, 1878, sister Susanna Williams, aged 76 years, 11 months and 5 days.

A. BOWMAN.

SPITZER.—In Ray Co., Mo., February 6th '78, Joel Spitzer, in his 73rd year of age.

BOWMAN.—In the same place, January 25, '78, Anna Bowman, aged about 57 years.

A. HARPER.

STEPHENS.—In Darke Co., Ohio, February 6th, 1878, Adeline Stephens, aged 28 years, 6 months and 25 days.

W. K. S.

BASHORE.—In the Oakland church, Darke Co., Ohio, February 4th, 1878, Mary Bashor, aged 24 years, 9 months and 8 days.

M. C. HARDMAN.

STOPFER.—In the Sandy church, Columbiana Co., Ohio, Jan. 25th, 1878, John Arthur, aged 1 year, 3 months and 11 days.

A. SHIPLEY.

CRILL.—In the North Manchester church, Wabash Co., Ind., January, 17, 1878, sister Lydia Crill, aged 45 years, 3 months and 28 days.

D. NIEL.

SWHART.—In Butler, Richland Co., O., Jan. 25th, 1878, Martha Ellen Swihart, aged 5 years, 7 months and 27 days.

W. A. MURRAY.

COVER.—In the Indian Creek Branch, Fayette Co., Pa., December 23rd, 1877, sister Elizabeth Cover, aged 72 years, 3 months, and 27 days.

D. D. HONIG.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Notes of Brethren's District Meetings, etc., should be brief, and written on paper separate from other business.

The Brethren of Northern Iowa and Minnesota will hold their District Meeting, in the Foot River congregation, Fillmore Co., Minn., on March 15, 1878.

J. OGDEN.

The "New Faith" Medicated. — By M. M. Ishelman. 10 pages, price 15 cents. 25 copies $2.00. Agents and country orders for the author sent delivered to the agent.

A Sermon on Baptism. — Delivered by Bro. S. H. Bachor in the City of Columbus, Ohio, Sunday of county, Pa. A weekly paper of 100 copies, thirty-five pages. Price 20 cents.

One Baptism. — A volume having the examination of the water and of man, that can be in a country in 1878. The author is Bro. S. H. Bachor. Price 10 cents. 25 copies $2.00.

True Evangelical Objections. — A volume containing a full and complete answer to the objections of the Brethren of the West. Price 10 cents. 25 copies $2.00.

True Evangelical Objections. — A volume containing a full and complete answer to the objections of the Brethren of the West. Price 10 cents. 25 copies $2.00.

True Evangelical Objections. — A volume containing a full and complete answer to the objections of the Brethren of the West. Price 10 cents. 25 copies $2.00.

True Evangelical Objections. — A volume containing a full and complete answer to the objections of the Brethren of the West. Price 10 cents. 25 copies $2.00.

True Evangelical Objections. — A volume containing a full and complete answer to the objections of the Brethren of the West. Price 10 cents. 25 copies $2.00.

True Evangelical Objections. — A volume containing a full and complete answer to the objections of the Brethren of the West. Price 10 cents. 25 copies $2.00.

True Evangelical Objections. — A volume containing a full and complete answer to the objections of the Brethren of the West. Price 10 cents. 25 copies $2.00.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK.

"Behold I Bring You Good Tidings of Great Joy, which Shall be unto All People."—LUKE 2: 10.

Vol. III.

Lanark, Ill., February 28, 1878.

No. 9.

The Brethren at Work.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY

—BY—

J. H. Moore, S. H. Bashor, M. M. Eshelman.

—:O:—

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

| | | |
|-----------------|-----|-----------------|
| R. H. MILLER, | --- | LADOGA, IND. |
| J. W. STEIN, | --- | NEWTONIA, MD. |
| D. VANMAN, | --- | VIRGEN, ILL. |
| D. H. MENTZER, | --- | WAYNESBORO, PA. |
| MATTIE A. LEAH, | --- | URBANA, ILL. |

THE CROSS OF CHRIST.

BY JAMES Y. HECKLER.

In Love Submitted to Bro. L. Hillery of Shannon, Ill.

I. N. R. I.

The cross of Christ,
My brother dear,
Is much despised,
By mortals here,
But if we would
Its glories share,
'Tis understood,—
That we must bear

Its burden on our flesh and crucify,
In us our carnal man, who would deny,
Ignore and nullify the work of grace,
With means appropriated to our case,
Of leprosy within. Go, preach the cross,
Love under the cross, show sinners the loss

They will sustain,
If they remain
Strangers to grace,
To truth and faith,
They will not see
The Lord, nor be Like Him, but they
Who disbelieve, —
Will all receive,
By sentence hard,
A just reward,
Of punishment, —
And banishment
From ceaseless bliss
To the great abyss
Of dark despair,
To welter there
Eternally where,
The devil reigns,
In fire and chains,
And sinners groan,
Lament and moan.
Dear brother thou,
Hast learned how
To stoop and bow
Under the cross
Of Christ because
The cross with trials
Of self-denial,
On you was laid,
And you obeyed,
Those who believe
The truth, receive
ETERNAL LIFE!

IT IS THE LORD.

BY C. H. KALSBACH.

To Brother S. H. Bashor:—

YOUR welcome missive, written from the Manor Church, Maryland, was duly received. As you gave no specific directions where to address you, I venture to reach you through this public medium.

Take care of your health. It is the gift of God, and a priceless one. The effectiveness of your ministry is largely dependent on its preservation. Heed the principle of Paul's advice to Timothy, without adopting it literally (1 Tim. 5: 23). Paul's prescription was in accordance with the current therapeutic notion, but it showed his concern for his brother, and his conception of the relation of health to public Gospel work.

All that we do has reference to law, and the efficiency of law is the presence of God. Not only is "sin the sting of death, and law the strength of sin," but God is the strength of the law. This truth unravels many mysteries in the Sacred Record. Nothing occurs, no matter how wicked the immediate agency through which it originates, which does not principle which justifies the expression of John to his fellow-disciples, "It is the Lord." If we deliberately thrust our hand into the fire, there could be no suffering as the penalty of our folly, if the act did not interfere with a law in which Deity is active, and which is the basis of suffering. If we commit sin, and suffer the hidden horrors of damnation, or repeat sin until we are petrified beyond compunction, both results are the inflictions of Divine Righteousness through the ministry of law. In its ultimate analysis all joy and all sorrow centres in the being of God, in the law of whose essential self-existence all effects are determined. There is no escape from suffering, and as little from happiness in the relation to law, whenever these diverse effects issue.

When some zealous, Christ-loving, sinners-pitying herald of the Cross becomes zealous beyond his organic capacity, and imposes a strain upon his powers, exceeding his recuperative capital, God soon "takes off his chariot wheels and makes him drive heavily." Many a Samson becomes his own Delilah, and applies the fatal shears to the locks that have their roots in the inflexible law of Jehovah. I have seen many a giant in Israel "grind in the prison-house, eyeless and lockless, with no hope of a second growth of their prime vigor, and no possibility of a great final crowning victory over the Philistine of wickedness. I recall to mind some of the noblest workers in the vineyard who sunk in middle life to the stroke of avenging law, whom God had endowed with the vital resources of four-score. When a false relation to law becomes second nature, it requires a fearful wrench to get back into harmony with God in His authoritative behests of organic law. If there is any thing which I would represent with all the energy of God-head, with all the glory and beatitude of true peace, and all the agony of self-condemnation, and all the terrors of Divine wrath, it is this: "I KEEP MY BODY UNDER, AND BRING IT INTO SUBJECTION: LEST THAT BY ANY MEANS, WHEN I HAVE PREACHED TO OTHERS, I MYSELF SHOULD BE A CASTAWAY" (1 Cor. 9: 27). Some of the most fatal violations belong to our higher nature, originating in the consciousness of moral power, and work their way down, sometimes slowly and sometimes rapidly, into the lower elements, until the man becomes an open castaway. "It is the Lord." His retributive presence accompanied every wrong thought, aspiration, and act; and in the final wreck when soul and body are quivering in the hell of self-inflicted woe, He is asserting His Eternal law of Righteousness. Sin belongs to man, but "the law of sin and death" belong to God. Hell is His, and all its horrors, but not the link that connects His law with the effect of its infringement. This link is our choice of a self-pleasing to a self-sacrificing life. The controlling thought of God, will put sanctity into the more retired relations and acts of life, and put the most ardent and unmanageable elements of our being at the command of the Holy Ghost. We will have a living sense of the Divine presence in the food and drink which is to sustain the temple of the Holy Spirit, and in our sleep and our labor we will recognize forces which are no other than the benign or blasting presence of the Omnipotent, according as we honor or disregard His arrangements. This is THE law which binds not only body and soul, men and devils and angels, but God Himself. Instead of being lawless, He is the essence of law. All our living and all our preaching, is summed up in this. All is under law, and whether we are to have Heaven or Hell here or hereafter, is decided by our relation to law. If we do well, and back in the smile of righteousness, "It is the Lord." If we do evil, and writhle in the coils and torments of the worm that never dies, "It is the Lord." Conscience is God in miniature. Hell is His final and highest expression of retributive holiness. How prone we are to disown

the Lord both in our blessings and our tribulations. We all need "line upon line, precept upon precept." Let us take home into our heart of hearts the great truth that JOHN is always the first to recognize the Divine presence (John 21: 7).

Love finds Jesus when faith is dead (John 20: 11-14). Self-keeping means harmony with God in all His laws, where we are completely beyond the reach of Satan as God Himself (1 John 5: 28). Infraction on our part means victory for the devil. "These things command and teach" (1 Tim. 4: 11-16). Forget not that to labor more than six days consecutively is a breach of the Divine order. God has given you many great draughts of fishes, in dragging which to the shore some threads in your seine broke. Save yourself awhile on the bank of Gennesaret, mending your net; and when you again "hunch out into the deep," and the blessed Jesus fills your net with precious souls, may your heart break forth in the joyous recognition, "It is the Lord."

THE FRUIT OF THE SPIRIT.

BY PIERRE WEAVERLEY.

I. LOVE.

"BUT the fruit of the Spirit is, love, joy, peace, and long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law" (Gal. 5: 22, 23). Draw aside the misty curtain of the past, and in imagination let us traverse the fruitful garden of Eden. Here, dwelling in a tower of bloom and beauty, we see a man made in the image of God, after His likeness. Careful study of the mysterious parts, which, taken together, form this complete whole, reveals to us that this human being is composed of mind and matter—the latter material substance, visible to the eye—the former we become acquainted with only by analyzing its phenomenon as presented to our observation and consciousness.

The first man, Adam, is a type of all our race. The mind of man is not complex, as is frequently asserted, but is, in reality one and indivisible. However, its activity can be exercised in different ways, and the three general divisions given by metaphysicians are these: Intellect, Sensibilities and Will. We shall consider only one department of the Sensibilities at present. The heart is the seat of affection, both benevolent and malevolent. Belonging to the former class, is love, which, Paul tells us, is a fruit of the Spirit. Gloomy indeed would this world be without its purifying influence. The heart craves some object upon whom to lavish the wealth of its affection. Deeply to be commiserated is the man who can call no human being his friend. Imagination refuses to paint such a gloomy picture. Parents love their children with a deep, intense affection; the laughing boys and light-hearted lasses return the sentiment; we all love our kindred, friends, homes, and country. But are we satisfied with these objects of affection? No, we long for something nobler, purer, higher. We look around us, and behold the world as a vast picture gallery, whose beauties are presented to our vision in kaleidoscopic splendor, and we are lost in a transport of wonder and admiration. Or "Mother earth," with a beautiful hand, lavishes rich gifts upon us—golden treasures and ebony diamonds from the mine—amber grain, incense fruits and fragrant flowers from her inexhaustible store-house—drapery of velvet softness and silken texture, a mossy carpet and stary canopy, what can the heart desire now? Are we ungrateful sons and daughters? Oh! no; for God has endowed us with an immortality that saves beyond this perishable earth, adding not its snowy wings until it searches a region of perfect bliss—even the Paradise of God.

When earthly affection fails to satisfy, He sends down His Holy Spirit to teach us of a love greater than that ever felt by fallen humanity, even that which led to an ignominious death on the cross—the innocent for the guilty, the holy for the unholy. We listen to its gentle pleadings, and believe. We look aloft and behold the radiant star of faith is shining, and we fancy the golden gates ajar, and Jesus, with a halo of glory encircling His blessed brow, smiles sweetly upon us. Our hearts glow with a new and purer affection, inspired by Him who loves us man never loved. Everything seems to have undergone a magical change. "Old things have passed away, and all things have become new."

This fruit of the Spirit, which now animates every fibre of our being, develops all the best and holiest impulses of our nature. "How sweet the name of Jesus sounds," now that we are trying to walk in His footsteps. But if we are His disciples, we must obey His commandments. "Little children, love one another." Jesus "went about doing good" and we must imitate His holy example. Thickly strewn along life's pathway, are precious souls exposed to the poisoned arrow of the enemy. Let us hasten to their rescue, and hide them under the shadow of the wings of the Most High. Our heavenly Father loved the human family with such a depth of affection that He sacrificed His only and well-beloved Son that we might receive the precious gift of salvation. "We love Him because He first loved us; but this is not enough; we must cherish an affection for all mankind and labor, earnestly help them to become partakers with us of this never-failing fountain of bliss whose source is in regions celestial, and whose crystal waters are for the cleansing of all nations. Thus, if we endeavor faithfully to discharge all the duties devolving upon us, we shall be happy in this life, and when we get up yonder, in our "Father's house of many mansions," we shall evermore enjoy unalloyed affection. "For love is heaven, and heaven is love."

Brothers and sisters, are we all bearing this "fruit of the Spirit?" The apostle says, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him" (1 John 2: 15). Let us strive earnestly—trusting in our Divine Helper for strength and assistance, to "set our affections on things above rather than things on the earth." Let us labor more energetically in the Master's vineyard, and endeavor to guide many wandering feet into the straight and narrow path that leadeth unto life eternal.

And you dear friend, who are as yet outside the ark of safety—fly to the shelter of the Rock of ages ere the whirlpool of sin engulf you. Delay not this important matter—come now.

Earthly friends oft times deceive us;
Those we love forsake and leave us;
Can we find true friendship never?
Jesus' love abideth ever.

Seek, oh seek this precious treasure;
Stay not for the world's vain pleasure;
Jesus loves you—oh, receive Him!
He will save you—oh, believe Him!

Scold not, His commandments hating,
Love His heart is animating;
Light His burden, pearly portal,
Open! See!—a crown immortal.

What a magnificent gift the Creator makes to man each successive Spring! What refreshment of mind and body, what conscious or unconscious revivals of hope in dull hearts, what profusion of things of beauty which are a joy forever, come with every Spring! O, for the thankful heart, to acknowledge that ancient promise so faithfully kept—"While the earth remaineth, seed-time and harvest, cold and heat, Summer and Winter, day and night, shall not cease."—Dr. Guthrie.

"THE NIGHT IS FAR SPENT, THE DAY IS AT HAND."

BY GEORGE D. ZOLLERS.

The night is dark, the shades are growing deeper,
As the dreary hours are rolling on,
And lo! in Zion there is many a sleeper,
Who fails to watch till the morning dawn.

The day of our salvation now is nearer,
Than when its joyful news we first believed;
And though our trials yet may be severer,
'Tis joy to hope we soon shall be relieved.

O brethren heed the Master's solemn warning,
To watch amid temptation's gloomy hour,
Until the dawn of the resplendent morning,
When He will come with glory and with power.

Sweet day of rest, for Zion's mourners
When all their tears of sorrow shall be wiped away,

Who now must bear the vile reproach of scorners
Shall wear a crown of beauty in that day.

But they who now will live in ease and pleasure
Who love to make the flesh their daily cure,
And store upon the earth a hoarding treasure
To sink them into ruin and despair,

Who wily avoid the self-denials
And shun the daily cross which they should bear,

Ah! if they fear to share the Christian's trials,
How can they hope the robes of light to wear.

Their state is sad beyond imagination,
Who do not in the love of God abide,
Who reject the laws of heaven's great salvation
The solemn warning of the crucified.

O I wish with one of old my head were waters,
And mine eyes were a fountain too, of tears,
Then for Zion precious slain, sons and daughters
I would weep day and night in my fears.

Would we heed the counsels of our Heavenly Teacher,

And follow Him upon the narrow way,
And shun the fictions of the human creature,
Which only tend to lead the soul astray.

Naught will fit us for the day of full salvation,
But obedience to the Savior's perfect Word,
And constant, meek and humble resignation,
In the trials we must suffer for the Lord.

This will yield to us the hope of consolation
And calm the struggling conscience in our breast.

Then with Christian in the night of tribulation,
We'll be longing for the day of promised rest.

Let us bring the Lord a pure oblation,
And seek the good old path our fathers trod,
Lest we hear the dread denunciation,
And sink beneath the awful frown of God.

THE LITERAL MEANING OF THE
INSPIRED PRECEPTS OUR ONLY
SAFE GUIDE IN RELIGIOUS
FAITH AND PRACTICE.

BY J. W. STEIN.

"Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel."—
(Psalms 73: 24)

NUMBER V.

Christ's prediction of Jerusalem, the destruction of the temple, leaving not one stone upon another, the long captivity, exile and oppression of the Jews, assuring His disciples' safety, and directing them when to escape, (Mark 13: 2; Luke 19: 43, 44; 21: 18-21), are striking illustrations of the literal meaning of prophecy. Josephus in his account of the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus, tells us that Turnus Rufus ploughed up the ground on which the temple stood (Wars of the Jews, Bk. 5; Bk. 6; Bk. 7, chap. 1, 2, Whiston's translation, compare with Jer. 26: 18; and Micah 3: 12). The flight of the church from Jerusalem, supposed to have taken place during the unaccountable withdrawal of Costius' army, prior to the last siege by Titus (Wars of the Jews Bk. 2: Ch. 20: sec. 1), is thus described by the historian Eusebius, "The whole body of the church at Jerusalem having been commanded by a divine revelation, given to men of approved piety, these before the war removed from the city and dwelt at a certain town beyond Jordan called Pella" (Eusebius' Eccl. Hist. p. 86; Cruse's translation). The dispersed condition of Abraham's seed for eighteen centuries, without a king, a prince, a sceptre, a sanctuary, a sacrifice, an altar, an ephod or divine communications; oppressed and persecuted by all nations, with no rest for the soles of their feet; no right of franchise or property until the last few decades, except in the United States, their interests fostered by no benign sovereign, notwithstanding the superior intellectual attraction of their men, and the unsurpassed beauty of their women; the lonely exiles of earth though the children "of the father of the faithful," is a subject too familiar to need comment.

The sympathetic heart may heave the pensive sigh and ask, "Why was all this?" I tell you they have been living witnesses to all men of the literal truthfulness of his doctrine whom they rejected, and who told them even weeping, "Behold your house is left unto you desolate." Their present condition and restoration with their thousands attendant circumstances and events, fraught with momentous interest and destiny to Christian, Jew, Mohammedan, and Pagan, and the whole moral and physical world around us, is a subject of intense and thrilling interest, to the student of prophecy who believes what he reads, and observes closely the striking prophetic coincidents of the present century. And now, dear reader, I pause to ask you, suppose the prophecies alluded to had been received, understood and prepared for according to the spiritualizing theory of the schools of modern divinity, what disappointments, chagrin and helpless ruin would have been the result? But those who believed the Word of God found it certain and its own interpretation sure.

I have read some spiritualizing works on prophecy, but could never derive much satisfaction from them, they were so contradictory, until finally concluding I could understand the Bible best by believing just what it said, and compiling and classifying its own statements. Since then my short insight into prophecy has been at least intelligent and edifying to my own mind, furnishing me a standard by which I can test the productions of men. I have also found much comfort in associating with brethren to find many here and there strangers in the flesh, to myself and one another, having never read any book on prophecy but the Bible, holding clearly the same outlines of prophecy with myself, which has often made me feel that we had been fellow-students at the same school, and learned of Jesus together.

Peter says, we have a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn and the day star arise in your hearts; know this first, that no prophecy of the Scripture is of any private interpretation. For prophecy came not in olden time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost" (Pet. 2: 19-21). Paul says, "Whatsoever things were written aforetime, were written for our learning that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope" (Rom. 15: 4). Notice then, we have a "sure word of prophecy." Is it not therefore certain and reliable? We have a Word "unto which we do well to take heed," and these things were "written for our learning." May we not therefore understand them? We have a Word that "shineth as a light in a dark place." Need we therefore abide in darkness? We have a Word through the learning of which we may have a patient and comfortable hope of the things of which we have been assured. May we not therefore depend upon it? We have what holy men of God "spoke as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." Therefore they spake what the Holy Spirit meant, not some human speculation.

We have prophecy, no part of which is of any "private interpretation," therefore we need not the spiritualizing inventions of man, nor his logical deductions from human premises which antagonize the divine Word. We have a given method by which to prosecute our Scriptural investigations, with accuracy, comfort and profit, and God's Word may indeed be "a lamp to our feet and a light to our path." But again we urge our position, because

4. The Word itself declares it. The apostle Paul says, "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works" (2 Tim. 3: 16, 17). But if any part is of doubtful interpretation when taken in connection with the whole, "comparing spiritual things with spiritual" the whole cannot be adapted to the thorough preparation and perfection of the child of God. But since it is "profitable for doctrine," it may be understood; since "for reproof," no sin need go unrebuked; since "for correction," all error may be exposed and abandoned; and since "for instruction in righteousness," we need not remain ignorant of any part of our whole duty; all, is suited to furnish the "man of God," not partially in things of doubtful character, but "thoroughly unto all good works." "The Law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul; the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple. The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart; the commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes" (Ps. 119: 7, 8). "The words of the Lord are pure words: as silver tried in a furnace of earth, purified seven times" (Ps. 12: 6). "All His commandments are sure" (Ps. 111: 7). "His Word is true from the beginning" (Ps. 119: 160). "All the words of His mouth are in righteousness; there is nothing froward or perverse in them. They are plain to him that understandeth, and right to them that seek knowledge" (Prov. 8: 8, 9). Their writers have used "great plainness of speech" (2 Cor. 3: 12), and to distort them by sophistical reasoning, or misrepresent them by injudicious spiritualizing comments, is to pervert the divine Law and utterly destroy the foundation of man's present hope, or future fruition, leaving the reader in awful suspense, respecting the Lord's will, and his own duty or destiny.

Hence, I maintain that the semi-infidelity that accepts just so much of the Word as suits it, and rejects the rest, converts "the truth of God into a lie," is one of the most treacherous foes with which true Christianity has to contend. Paul commended the Bereans because they tested the preaching of his day by Scriptural examination, "They received the Word with all readiness of mind and searched the Scriptures daily, whether these things were so" (Acts 17: 10). They could decide the character even of the apostolic teachings by comparing them with what had been written, which was plain enough for them to understand. So let it be with us. Let us humbly and prayerfully seek the wisdom which cometh from above, relying upon the influences of the "Spirit of truth." That many who profess to be influenced by the Holy Spirit, are influenced by other spirits, appears not only from the principles which they propagate, but that their teaching, not only contradict the Word, but each other.

May the Lord guide us with His counsel, for His "counsels of old are faithfulness and truth" (Is. 25: 1), that when our conflicts here are over, we may sing the victor's "song of Moses and the Lamb, saying, great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints" (Rev. 15: 3). May the Lord add His blessings.

(Concluded.)

"NO HELL."

BY J. S. FLORY.

To D. M.:

DEAR FRIEND: In response to your request, I will pen a few thoughts upon the subject of "no hell" which is the all-absorbing topic at present among many religionists. Why this great stir all at once? Why this great commotion about a matter so plainly taught in the Scriptures? Do not these convulsions in the religious world, clearly demonstrate to every right-thinking mind, that the masses instead of thinking for themselves, have a few men to do their thinking for them, especially in religious matters? How else could we account for so many running pell-mell (like a flock of sheep), the way a Beecher or a Farrar leads?

People talk of liberty and freedom while slaves to the wild views of sensationalists, who are ever studying how to keep in the way of the popular current, no matter how adverse that may be to the divine Scriptures. Let us look this matter squarely in the face. Suppose you were passing along the highway, surrounded by the light and warmth of the noonday sun, and you meet a man and he says to you, "Do you believe in there being a sun?" You say of course, "yes." He laughs at you and says, "My friend, you are mistaken, your belief is a matter of wrong education, your views are imaginary, figuratively speaking there is a sun, but really there is no such thing," you would consider the man an idiot or a man wanting in common sense. So when a man says there is no future hell you may set it down he is a monomaniac or a hypocrite in the superlative degree. If there be any one thing prominent and emphatic in the Scriptures, it is the fact set forth there is a hell for the wicked. How any man can be so inconsistent as to profess to believe in the "blood of Christ" and at the same time deny the existence of a future punishment, is something we can't understand.

The same authority that said Christ shed His blood that the world might be saved, also says, "the wicked shall be turned into hell." He that sinneth against the Holy Ghost, is "in danger of eternal damnation." That there is a sin that shall not be forgiven in this world "neither in the world to come," and many other like passages, prove most conclusively there is a terrible doom awaiting the wicked. But, says one, those terms that speak of future punishment, do not mean what they say—are mistranslations. If so, then what assurance have we for endless or eternal happiness? The term given to portray to the mind the beauties of heaven, may in like manner mean something else. Away with this infidelity that would modify the terrors of hell to suit the ideas of men; and theories that object not to the good that is in the Gospel, but would make God a liar in respect to all the sterner aspects of the free law of liberty.

Beecher and men of his mold of mind, don't go to the heaven of such a God as will "create millions of human beings and then sweep them off like flies into misery and ruin." What blasphemy, what terrible words coming from men of such influence! Is a judge a mean man because he sentences the prisoner at the bar, to death or to a life of misery behind iron bars? No, justice demands that he thus pass sentence. It is not the judge that is to blame for passing sentence; it is the law that does it. The judge gives decision according to law, and execution follows as a matter of justice. There is an inexorable law as fixed and unalterable as God Himself that shapes the destiny of all men. God's mercy has intervened to save men, and by His mercy all may be saved. But just so certain as men transgress the Law of God, that Law that raises men on a plane with Divinity, upward toward heaven and eternal glory—I say all that transgress that Law must sink down on a level with devils; there is no power can or will save them; God would have them saved, but they would not be saved, hence they cannot nor will not be saved, to hell they must go. Who can blame God for the separation when He done all in the bounds of justice to have them come to Him in union and love?

Let us reason a little on the subject. If you know that to thrust your hand into the fire, burns it, can you blame the fire for doing that which according to natural laws it will do? If a man walk, against knowledge and reason, over a precipice and meets death at the bottom, who can blame the precipice or the law of gravitation for the catastrophe? the man alone is to blame. If a man throws himself into the sea and is drowned, is the water to blame? No the man is to blame and he alone. So with men and women who in the very face of what is God's Law, choose to walk into the fire, walk over the precipice, or are drowned in the sea of iniquity, can they blame God for their folly? they and they alone are to blame.

As regards our views upon the subject under consideration, I hope I have none other than Scriptural views—they are the best. Better believe what God says, about everlasting punishment, than to even hope the views of men may be correct. The New Testament Scriptures tell us there is a heaven for the just, let us believe that with all our heart. They also tell us there is a hell for the wicked and unjust, let us believe that with all our soul. So believing, let us worship God with our body, soul, and spirit, that all may be sanctified, purified and fitted for communion with God here and hereafter we need not be perplexed about whether there is hell or not. It will be enough for us to know there is a heaven. The devils know there is a hell and the wicked shall most certainly find it out in due time.

What else hell may mean, it means separation from God and this to all eternity. Take away all the literal fire and brimstone from the lake and it will be a hell even then beyond our finite conception. My idea is that heaven and the joys of heaven, are far beyond our comprehension in what God has laid up for the righteous; in like manner the horrors of the doomed souls in eternity, are far beyond our comprehension—we have not, even in the Scriptural illustration "a lake burning with fire and brimstone," the slightest conception of the misery and woe of souls alienated from God in the spiritual state.

You, my friend, fear or intimate that you think it a bad state of affairs for men of such influence to give vent to such thoughts as Beecher did. It may be all for the better. It will open the eyes of some, we trust, to see where human theories will lead and what folly to accept of opinions that savor of the slime of the Serpent. If Satan would come out from under the sacerdotal robes so that we might see him from his horns to his cloven feet, we could see better where to throw the spear, and how to fight him. This fighting him in ambush, clothed in the "being of heaven" and with the name of Jesus on his banner, is what is doing so much mischief, and enables him to lead so many captive at his will. If he will come forth and show his true colors, how long suppose you he could stand the glare of the Gospel rays? Not long. Popular opinion invites him out—he now shirks the responsibility of eternal punishment. Ere long, (we have an idea) he will come out and through the medium of some high-minded trumpets, startle the world with the theory that the doctrine of atonement "is all a farce!" Startle not, reader, that day is not far off. Just so soon as the popular mind is ready for it, it will come.

But we are growing too lengthy. We close by saying, we have of late been reminded (while reading those extracts of sermons which modifies hell so beautifully!) of the anecdote of a certain man, who, when even he went to his prayers he would speak well of both God and Satan; not knowing into which one's hands he would fall, he wanted to keep on friendly terms with both God and Satan. So with some men these days, they would have a soft, pleasant bed made for them in Hades, it being possible they may take up lodging there.

BALDWIN'S PROPHECY.

CONSIDERABLE interest has been manifested in S. D. Baldwin's prophecy, made in 1854. We therefore print his remarkable exposition of the prophecy of Daniel. According to Mr. Baldwin's views of Daniel, Russia was to overthrow Turkey within eighteen months after the commencement of the struggle, and this seems to have already been fulfilled. We look with interest to his future predictions—Eds.

A book out of print, entitled "Armageddon, or the United States in Prophecy," written by the Rev. S. D. Baldwin, a Presbyterian minister of Nashville, Tenn., then President of South Female College, but long deceased, was published in 1854. When the work appeared it attracted very wide attention. Among the predictions was a bloody and furious war to begin in 1861, and end on the 117th day of 1865—a war which exactly fulfills the term of the late rebellion. Johnston having surrendered to Sherman April 26, 1865, and thus terminated the array of arms. From the exposition of the prophetic parts of the Bible we copy as follows:

"At the time of the end." This period was to be that between the first and last endings of the three and a half times, or between 1776 and 1878, or between the 1,200, and 1,335 days. During this period this willful king was to come to his end: but before his end, he was to engage in war for some outlying countries, and was to be interrupted by two great powers, but was to conquer and prosper till the "last end of the indignation." As this was to be the great monarchy power represented by the image that was to be broken by the stone (since it was Rome), it is evident that its head must be in Europe, and must be the empire represented by the septimo-octave head of the beast in Revelation. Now, the great power which fills half of Europe and overshadows and controls the rest, is the rising colossus, Russia; Russia, therefore, must be the power intended as falling in the holy mountain. Now, as Ezekiel, almost literally, describes Russia as falling on the mountains of Israel, in the latter day he furnishes further evidence that the fourth kingdom, in the time of the end, was to be resurrected in or by Russia. The willful kingdom was an autocrat among nations, and so is the Russian kingdom.

"The king of the south shall push or butt at him, and the king of the north shall come against him like a whirlwind, with chariots, and with horsemen, and with many ships."

The two kingdoms, under the names north and south, are to be identified by their relative positions to the Russian power, or to each other. The king or kingdom of the south would, very naturally, apply to Turkey, on the south of Russia; but as Turkey exists by the sufferance of France and England, it is possible that the two great Western powers, which hold to each other the relation of north and south, may be intended. At any rate, the southern king makes a short flight of it, if anything is to be understood by the butting at the willful king, or he brings on the flight. The kingdoms of Syria and Egypt, called the kingdoms of the north and south, held about the same close relation to each other and to Rome that England and France do to each other and to Russia; only on the east of Rome, and the case is just now reversed. The king of the north is Great Britain. This is evident from its northern position as a great power, and from the immense naval as well as land forces it possesses. No nation but a very great one would attack the autocratic king, and no nation has such a navy as Britain. This north nation was to come like a whirlwind, with his great naval and land forces, which are indicated by "many ships" and "chariots" and "horsemen." The attack was to be great and furious, but finally unsuccessful: for the autocrat moves right on to his purpose, and more than gains it, according to the prophet.

"He shall enter into the countries, and shall overflow, and pass over."

His entering the countries intimates that this was his original design, in which he had been interrupted by the two great powers that confederated against him. England and France, or England and Turkey, will unite against Russia. And it seems that a considerable effort was to be made to check Russia's designs: yet Russia is to take the countries this side of the crossings, and then to pass over into Asia, it would seem. The word "overflow" signifies the great increase of his armies and triumphs. To "pass over" implies the advancement of conquest, by some great crossing, into a new scene of warfare.

"He shall enter the glorious land." This at once reveals his advancement into Palestine, and shows that the passing over related to the conquest of Asia minor, and the Turkish Empire generally.

"Many countries shall be overthrown: but these shall escape out of his hand, even Edom and Moab, and the chief of the children of Ammon." This would literally imply the conquest of a great portion of Asiatic Turkey, with some exceptions. These were conquests in Asia.

"He shall stretch forth his hand also upon the countries, and the land of Egypt shall not escape." This expression implies the exertion of severe sovereignty. African countries are here referred to, as Egypt is used as specific for a generic term or a part of the whole. "He shall have power over the treasures of gold and silver, and over all the precious things of Egypt."

"The Libyans and Ethiopians shall be at his steps." This still further teaches the unlimited dominion over Africa in the west and south. Thus having obtained nearly all Europe, Asia, and Africa, he becomes indomitable, and his empire almost limitless: it emulates old Rome, as the possessor of three continents.—Inter Ocean, Oct. 23, 1876.

HURRY! HURRY!!

BY C. WRAY.

HURRY to be in time for the train, I thought I on my way to the railroad. Of course the time for the train's arrival was nearly up, and I had no time to spend carelessly. You who travel by railroad understand the importance of being on time. The railroad companies furnish us with maps and time tables, so that we may know when to arrive at the depot. Their maps show us every crook and turn of their roads, give name of stations and all needful information.

Suppose a traveler should request a conductor to wait five minutes or an hour until he could prepare himself for his journey, what reply would the conductor make? Would he not say, "Sir we furnish you maps and time tables, and by these you must be governed; we cannot wait on you. You knew we would arrive and depart as we gave notice, but you have been careless; we must be off." Precisely so with Jesus, our great Conductor. His train is here waiting. Soon the signal will be given, and it will then speed away, leaving us behind if we have not prepared ourselves, and gone forth with Him. He has given us this great Map—the New Testament, and if we will not heed that, stay behind we must. Paul says, "Behold now is the accepted time; behold now is the day of salvation." He says now; not to-morrow or next year.

God tells us how and where to start. Repentance is the first station. There we get on board the train. Faith, baptism and full obedience all follow in regular order. All along we must follow the Guide-book, and hold fast that which we have procured. O how necessary to hurry up and get aboard the Lord's great train! O what a glorious thought, to be ready when God calls! Then when He comes with His immense train to gather His elect, oh think of those who are unprepared! Dear sinner, Christ calls you, and you are not hurrying to the heavenly depot. Come quickly or you will miss the train.

Louquont, Col.

Wo unto you when men shall speak well of you! A man whom nobody treasures amounts to but little in this world.

See to it that each hour's feelings, thoughts and actions are pure and true, then will your life be such.

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE,
S. H. BASHOR,
M. M. ESHELMAN, } EDITORS.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent post-paid, to any address in the United States or Canada, for $1.50 per annum. Those sending ten names and $15.00, will receive an extra copy free of charge. For all over this number the agent will be allowed 10 cents for each additional name, which amount can be deducted from the money, before sending it to us. Money Orders, Drafts, and Registered Letters may be sent at our risk. They should be made payable to Moore, Bashor & Eschelman—Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE, BASHOR & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., FEBRUARY 28, 1878.

BRO. BASHOR'S address, until further notice will be Fostoria, Seneca Co., O., care of J. P. Ebersole.

CORRESPONDENTS of brother K. Heckman will please notice that his address is now Cornell, Livingston Co., Ill., instead of Tuscola, same State.

THERE is quite a demand for the "Philosophy of the Plan of Salvation." It is an excellent book—should be read by every preacher and others. Price, $1.50.

WE have on hand a quantity of Nos. 1 and 2, current volume, which we desire our readers to distribute wherever they think they will do good. Send for a lot and put them to work.

ON the 21st we received a telegram from Bro. Enoch Ely, dated at London, stating that they would start for New York, on the steamer Elysia, Feb. 27. May God grant them a safe and pleasant voyage.

OUR trade in the book business is becoming quite extensive, thus enabling us to handle a great many publications. Don't fail to send for our book catalogue giving price of the publications kept at this office.

AND the ark of the Lord is still moving on in Falls City, Nebraska. Bro. J. J. Lichty held a series of meetings there, and six precious souls were brought into fellowship. "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

THE weather in this part of the State still continues warm, more like April than February. In fact we have had no Winter of any consequence yet. Considerable rain has fallen, and mud abounds, thus rendering it very disagreeable for holding meetings.

FROM the Baptist Battle Flog we learn that the discussion between D. B. Ray and Bro. J. W. Stein, is to be held at Newtonia, Mo., commencing Wednesday, March the 6th, at 10 o'clock. The notice is rather short, but will likely reach most of our readers in time.

A TERRIBLE famine is raging in North China. 70,000,000 of persons are now starving. The imagination fails to cope with so great a calamity. Famine is one of the signs of Christ's second coming. Let us be watchful and prayerful that we be fully prepared at His coming.

BRO. Daniel Vaniman of Virden, Ill., is now traveling in Texas and finds the climate delightful. With other flowers he sends us peach blossoms, showing the advanced state of the season there. Don't fail to read his short letter on last page, and then, like us, wonder if several colonies of Brethren cannot be planted in that State, and thus spread the Gospel and build up churches?

THERE is a talk of holding an Anti-secret Methodist Convention, looking towards concert of action on the part of all those who are opposed to secret societies. It is a sad comment on a religious body, when a convention must be called to root out an evil. Why not strictly follow the good Master and avoid all such breakers?

AS the result of a series of meetings at Carleton, Neb., Bro. Levi Hoffert writes: "This informs you that ten souls have been wedded to Christ by adoption, during our meetings. Six of the number were married persons and in the prime of life. The other four are quite young. May the good Lord enable them to hold out faithful unto death. And I pray the Lord will bless our dear brethren that labored faithfully while with us. Truly we had a soul-cheering meeting, both for saint and sinner. Blessed be the Lord for his goodness."

ON the 20th inst., Cardinal Pecci was elected Pope, and assumed the title of Leo XIII. He is claimed as a liberal, but announces that he will pursue the same course towards the Italian Government as did Pius IX, so that unity of action between the two is as far off as ever. The new Pope is 68 years of age, quite tall and very dignified.

WE are always glad to receive clear and pointed articles, and to do good and reach many minds, should be brief, unless the subject really requires it. But we feel sad when we have to pay from six to twelve Cents postage on an article, that, after careful examination cannot escape the waste-basket. But we will endure all this, only send on your words of comfort, words of conviction in a brief way, and we shall all try to let patience have her perfect work.

P. T. BARNUM, in a late speech in Denver, Colorado, discussed the right of saloon keepers to sell liquor, even if possessed of license. He says, "If I had a license to show in Denver, and should release a lot of rattlesnakes in the public streets where school children passed, would my license save me from action for murder or criminal carelessness? No. Neither does a license justify a man in selling a poison which robs men of that intellect sufficient to keep them from deeds of violence."

GOD must have His sledge-hammer men—His Peters who feel the need of reformation in themselves and others, and then are fearless to take hold and work. The nimbly puny men, nicely dressed in satin, and scented with lavender water, may do as dolls, but they are mere ciphers in the work of reformation. A good, warm house, though made of roughly hewn logs, should not be despised simply because it looks rough. It shelters from the cold as well as the smooth and fancy painted house.

CORRECTION.—In No. 37, Vol. II, I presented some strictures on a sermon by Charles E. Hiscox, of Greenport, N. Y. In number 34, same volume, C. L. Culbertson came to the support of C. E. Hiscox, and I replied to him. In No. 6, current volume, we had another hearing, and now friend Culbertson informs me that he is not a Baptist, but "hopes to get to heaven by Methodist faith." I make this correction which is due him, having been erroneously led to believe him a Baptist, by his defense of Baptist theory. M. M. E.

PRESIDENT J. F. Cook of La Grange, Mo., offers the sum of $25 for the best tract on the Lord's Supper. Of course, it is understood that the supper is to be before dinner. Those proposing to write a tract on that subject for Pres. Cook will keep this in view. If they attempt to prove that the Lord Jesus, in the same night in which He was betrayed, took bread, they certainly will not get the $25. If Paul were here, he could not get it either.

IN reply to a sister who gets her mail at Philadelphia, and wants to know why the figures telling when her subscription expires are not stamped to the right of her name on the paper, we remark, that sometimes the name and number of street take up all the room in the width of the mailing galley, and hence there is not room enough to put in the figures. This is the way with most of our subscribers in Philadelphia and other large cities where it is necessary to give the number of street.

THE world is passing through a terrible crisis. Governments in Europe seem to be agitated, those in Asia are no less disturbed, and even on our continent, corruption, distrust and uneasiness seem to prevail. No doubt the present age is fulfilling some of the predictions of the prophets of long time ago. Everything points to strife and contention in the political world, while popular Christianity is running wild over the sayings of men who seek the applause of the multitude rather than the pleasure of God. With these facts before us, brethren and sisters, we need to constantly watch and pray that we be not overtaken and carried away into the whirlpool of destruction.

A BROTHER who appreciates our paper very highly, says: "Dear Brother, have just read your Editorial in No. 8; 'Wanted! A Little More Prudence,' and I must thank you heartily for writing it. If the old proverb be true, that 'Words, fitly spoken, are like apples of gold in pictures of silver,' then this article should be printed on silver, framed in gold, and hung where every one of our members could read it at least once a week. Or better still, if it could be graven on the tablets of the hearts of a class of imprudent, meddling persons, it would effect incalculable good. I am not given to fulsome flattery, but write these words out of the fullness of my heart.—Yours Fraternal-ly, D. L. MILLER."

WE are now supplied with a full stock of the Brethren's Hymn Books, and all orders up to the present time have been filled. Should any who have ordered, not receive the books in due time, they will inform us at once. We would apologize for not filling orders sooner, but have been doing all in our power to get the books, having ordered them six months ago. Our terms for Hymn Books are strictly cash, as the profit for handling them is so small that we cannot afford to sell them on credit. Those who send the cash for books, will have their orders filled immediately.

SOME months ago we published a commendatory notice of the proposed History of Carroll county, thinking that the parties having the work in charge would render satisfaction. The book is now out and being delivered, but fails to give anything like satisfaction, and has excited a general feeling of indignation against the publishers, hundreds refusing to accept the work. Some names in this part of the county were obtained by very unfair means. We say this in justice to the welfare of brethren in other counties where the same parties are getting up other books. If any of them get deceived after reading this notice, they must not blame us, as we say once for all that the history of Carroll Co., is not what the people had reason to expect it would be. Many of them are refusing to take the book, and every secular paper in the county is denouncing it. Reader, keep your eyes open.

OUR CHELSEA MEETINGS.

WE left Lanark about noon, Saturday 16th, and reached Nora, some thirty miles North of here, about five in the evening. Were met at the depot by Bro. Wm. Moore and taken to his home, some two miles out in the country. Had meeting in the evening at what is known as the Chelsea meeting-house. This is a part of the Waddam's Grove district, and is under the oversight of Bro. Enoch Ely.

Meeting the next day at ten and also in the evening. The congregations were good, and attention excellent. Had meeting twice each day Monday and Tuesday, but had to contend with considerable mud which finally became so bad as to render roads almost impassable. Our last meeting was on Thursday evening. It rained all next day, hence no meeting. Left for home Friday afternoon; arrived safe at midnight and found all well. Very much regret that the meetings could not be continued, as they had just reached the point of real interest.

Our stay among the members was a pleasant one, as it always is with the faithful, and trust that our mutual labors together were not entirely in vain, though there were no immediate accessions to the church. The members here attend meeting well, and take great interest in the prosperity of the church. We made our home with Bro. Moore and family, and found it a pleasant stopping place. Many thanks for the kind treatment received at the hands of all, however, very much regretting that we could not visit around more, and attend the proposed meetings at Waddam's Grove church, at which place we were to have preached a few sermons before leaving. J. H. M.

PRINCIPLE AND POLICY.

POLICY puts the best dress on the outside; Principle is content to have all of one piece. Policy leans on men for houses, lands, money; Principle goes about his business daily and lets God ah! these. Policy puts the best wheat at the mouth of the sack; Principle lets the good and bad run together, and shows it all before selling. Principle tells the whole truth whether men will hear or whether they will forbear; Policy will tell a little of it, and keep back the rest. Policy goes no further than bread and butter; Principle goes straight ahead whether there be bread and butter or not. Policy bows, scrapes and covers; Principle stands up without show and lets the light shine all over him. Principle is always easy, never disturbed; Policy is restless, and dreams considerably. — Principle has nerve; Policy is easily scared, and dodges.

Policy carries a twisty grindstone to sharpen axes to hew for it; Principle hews a straight line, no difference about the grindstone. Policy turns judgment into crooked lines; Principle follows the "old paths," that have along them the "marks of the Lord Jesus." Policy seeks for itself only; Principle hunts for others also. Policy works slow, to kill time; Principle strikes out right and left, and does a good day's work. Policy visits if its policy; Principle goes and comforts, and is happy. Principle is alive and green from the roots to the top; Policy is dead at the top, and a little at the roots. Policy wants to know how the multitude will go; Principle does not concern herself about that. Policy wants somebody else to abunish him who is in fault; Principle goes and tells the fault to him who is faulty. Policy is a poor fellow, and if he could only see himself, he would be straight-way ashamed, and repent.

Now let us have less policy and more principle, both in and out of the church. A little policy may be good at times for principle to work with, but it is a poor thing to put in principle's place. There is too much shirking of duty in matters that are clear and plain;—too much evasion when there should be distinct utterance. The load is often divided for policy's sake, and the innocent made to carry a heavy load, when the guilty alone should have borne the whole burden. "Bear ye one another's burden's" don't mean that one of the innocent shall carry a part of the guilty one's load, for policy's sake, but means that if there is to be any bearing, the whole body shall do it. If the ear is guilty, it is not right that simply the little finger should suffer, but let the whole hand take its part. Now let Policy step behind and permit Principle to lead as God doth most truly direct. M. M. E.

A PEACEFUL FAMILY.

A DEAR brother who is active and zealous in his Master's work writes: "I read, with tears, Bro. Moore's article on 'Sweet Home.' My heart rejoiced that God has blessed me with a little home and a pleasant family. I have a kind companion who is willing to share my joys and sorrows, and a dear little one who is large enough to help me sing the sweet songs of Zion. And in place of being scolded, as many weary husbands are, I am met with a smile and words of comfort. I can sympathize with the homeless and the tippler. I have traveled that road, and you do not know how thankful I am that God gave me the strength and moral courage to get my feet out of the broad road that leads to destruction. Ah! we can all do wonders by making use of the means of grace."

How many husbands can, with this dear brother, say, "My companion is willing to share my joys and my sorrows? Instead of being scolded, I am met with a smile?" Ah! there are too many unhappy homes—homes that should, for father's sake, for mother's sake, for the sake of the children, and the blessed Master, be made happy. If you bring up your children in a peevish, fretful manner, O, think of the misery they must endure in this life, and perhaps, also in the life to come. You should make home pleasant, because God requires it, because your duty to your children requires it. Let love through every action run, and there will be much sunshine in your home. Then be pleasant, be kind, and your children will soon learn to go that way. M. M. E.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Dear Paper:—

OUR meetings in the vicinity of Boiling Springs, Pa., continued some over a week at different places, only a few meetings at one place and that, too, sometimes interchangeable, thus lessening the power of our labors for good, especially in the conversion of sinners. Though it would have been preferable to us to have concentrated our efforts while in this church, yet we felt it our duty to submit to the wishes of the brethren, and thus labor together in harmony and good will.

This is one of the oldest organizations of our fraternity in Pennsylvania, having been established in 1791. The first speaker was elected in 1823, and since that time has been feeling the West with emigrants of our faith, who, in their work, have caused the Gospel to sound in more than one corner of the Western States. The church now numbers several hundred; all in perfect order and union, as far as we were able to see. Bro. Moses Miller is the Bishop of the lock, and has the hearty co-operation of all the workers among them. It is useless to remark much upon the life and labors of Bro. Miller, as his name and history are too well known among our people, and his position as a member, our Annual Council and committees speak out the general confidence of the brotherhood at large, and the special respect of his own district where his every day life is best known.

Bro. Miller received us with a Christian welcome, and the kindness and courtesy shown toward us while there, will ever command our respect and esteem. At Boiling Springs, confession was made by the alien unto salvation; also at Baker's, four miles from the Springs, some turned to God. Preached two sermons in Mechanicsburg, a neat little town of 3,000 inhabitants. Also had the pleasure of again meeting Bro. J. M. Mohler, of Lewistown, Pa., and hearing him preach one discourse. At the close of our meetings here, some who believed, requested to be baptized, which was attended to after we left.

On the 12th, we bid Bro. Oller and companion farewell, as they left our company for home, and on the 13th, in company with Bro. Mahler, we were conveyed to Harrisburg; took the last train West at 4:30 A. M., and soon left the East. Here we had some trouble in having our baggage checked, as the evening before it was sent to Harrisburg, in care of C. V. R. R. Co., and when we called for it, their agent was absent, and the other company would not exchange checks; but through the kindness of the night ticket agent of P. C. R. R., we were made all right, and thus lost no time. This work, probably, is synonymous with the workings of the great through train to Heaven. She does not stop to exchange baggage or checks with the world or the devil, and this too, probably, is why so many fail to make connection. They stop to parley with the world too long, and ere their pleasures and merchandising is over, the Gospel train passes on and they are left behind. At Lewistown we bade Bro. Mohler farewell, in hopes of a union above, when our labors end below, and we pass through the gloom and silent shadows of the grave-land or death-world, to receive our reward for labors below. Passed on through Huntingdon and learned that the small-pox scare was over, and business was resumed in every way as usual. The disease was not as bad, some say, as was first reported. At Johnstown we exchanged greetings with Bro. Mahlon Keim and others, thence to Pittsburg and the West. Arrived at Dunkirk the 14th inst., at 9:30 A. M. Was met at the station by Bro. S. T. Bosserman. Spent a few hours in resting, at his home; were then conveyed to Eld. E. Bosserman's, six miles out in the country, where we have been conducting meetings each evening since. The roads are extremely muddy and going about is rendered very unpleasant, yet our congregations are good and the attention and interest increasing. We hope to be able to report a profitable meeting at the close, yet the work is in the hands of the Lord, and His will be done.

Many letters come to our address, soliciting assistance in revival work, but full arrangements are completed until A. M., and after. Will not be able to reach New Philadelphia, O., before A. M. Bro. E. L. Yoder's call could be filled better, one month later. Wm. Hertzler's, in August. May the blessings of God attend the efforts of His people everywhere now and forevermore.

S. H. R.

*SPRINKLING,

THE TRUE MODE OF BAPTISM.*

NUMBER 1.

"1. We read of the Baptism of Jesus:—Was Jesus immersed? Let us examine what the Scriptures say about it. The account is given us in Matthew 3: 13-17, and reads as follows: 'Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan, to John, to be baptized of him. But John forbade him, saying: 'I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me?' And Jesus answering, said unto him: 'Suffer it to be so now, for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness.' Then he suffered him. And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water (or, as the Greek may be equally correctly rendered, 'from the water'), and lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove and lighting upon him.'

2. Jesus stood at the edge of the bank, whilst John stooped down, and dipping up in his hand some of its clear water, he sprinkled it upon the head of Jesus, bent forward to receive it. By this ceremony, the law which said, 'Take the priests and sprinkle water of purifying upon them, that they may execute the service of the Lord,' was fulfilled. The law said water must be sprinkled, and it was sprinkled upon Him. His Baptism was required by the law, and it must be done as the law directed. No other form of administration would have been according to the law. Those who came to fulfill the law, would not violate the law by acting contrary to its provisions. He came to John to be baptized, because, thus it became Him to fulfill all righteousness, and that righteousness could only be fulfilled by doing precisely as it directed. It required Him to be sprinkled, and His immersion would not have been the fulfillment, but the violation of that law. He was, without doubt, sprinkled as that law required. Thus was the one part of His consecration to His work effected.

Here Dr. Greenwald wants us to believe that "went up straightway out of the water," means "from the water." Very well if "up out of" means "from," does not "from" mean up out of? If the Doctor were in the water and would go out of it, how would he tell a man that he went out of the water? Would he say he went "down out of the water?" Not at all! But he would say, if he had been in the water, "I went up out of the water." In the original it reads thus: "And having been dipped (Baptizois) he went up immediately from (apo) or out of the water." Of course he went up from the water, from the river because the river did not go with Him. Infallible inspiration says not one word about Jews going down to the water and there being sprinkled. Had He been sprinkled, the translators would have rendered it sprinkled. But not finding chuntizo in the original, but baptizo, they were compelled to render it baptize, dipping.

The man who looks into the "perfect law of liberty," wants not simply a mode of baptism, but baptism itself; not something newly like baptism, but BAPTISM. The holy Oracles do not say that John's hand was dipped, baptized, and Jesus sprinkled. That idea has a scope only in the mind of him who seeks for a substitute, something else, and not the real thing itself. Jesus was not sprinkled, nor poured with water, but baptized in water. Jesus was the subject of the action. He came to John to be baptized in Jordan, not to be poured or sprinkled into Jordan. Nor did John sprinkle Jordan on Him, nor pour Jordan on Him, nor sprinkle a little water on Him, nor pour water on Him, but to baptize Him in Jordan, in water.

"Thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." Thus How? What was done to fulfill righteousness? Baptized in Jordan. In view of this fact, how can those fulfill all righteousness who refuse to thus fulfill it?

"His baptism was by sprinkling." This is the same old story: a thing by the same thing. A man ran by crawling, would be just as sensible. Or if creeping he running then it would be proper to say a man crawled by running. But if sprinkling be baptism, then it would be just as sensible to say a man crawled by crawling, as to say a man was sprinkled by sprinkling. If Christ was sprinkled, why not say He was sprinkled? Why say He was sprinkled by sprinkling? The Doctor well knows that his learning, his scholarship would be called into question by every well read man, were he to say "Sprinkled by sprinkling," and yet he virtually does that, when he asserts that Jesus' "Baptism was by sprinkling," i. e., if baptism means sprinkling.

When we learn from God's holy Book that persons are to be baptized "into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," "baptized into Jesus Christ," it becomes a matter of great importance to every one to know whether he has been baptized, or only received a miserable substitute for baptism. It is important for him to know whether he has himself obeyed the Lord's commandment, or simply had imposed on him, when an infant, before he had any faith, any volition in the matter, a something instead of baptism.

The Holy Spirit commanded the first persons who inquired the way of salvation after Christ's ascension, to "Repent and be baptized," not sprinkled, "in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins" (Acts 2: 38). Dr. Clarke would not allow his scholarship to be questioned by saying, Jesus was sprinkled at Jordan, but plainly remarks, "That three distinct persons are here represented." (Matt. 2: 16). 1. The person of Jesus Christ baptized by John in Jordan. 2. The person of the Holy Ghost in a bodily shape like a dove. 3. The person of the Father; a voice came out of heaven saying, "This is my beloved Son." Dr. Clarke does not say that Jesus was sprinkled in Jordan, but "baptized by John in Jordan." Luther, Calvin, Macnight, Doddridge, Geo. Campbell, Watson, and nearly all critics, expositors, translators, commentators, and reformers, take the ground that Jesus was baptized in Jordan—not sprinkled at Jordan. Dr. Greenwald stands out almost alone, evading the force of the clearest language of the Word of God, and trying to justify something not commanded of the Lord. Such work can only mislead, and confound such as trust in mere assertions and the arm of flesh. The only true way, safe way, is to set forth the way of salvation as the Lord and Apostles set it forth—show what the inquiring penitent must do to be saved, to inherit eternal life. More next week.

M. M. F.

ORIGIN OF BAPTISM.

THE following, clipped from a monthly, published in North Carolina, shows how a well-read gentleman looks at the history of baptism, though he belongs to no church. It is the history of baptism in a nut-shell:

The New Testament statements indicate that three distinct kinds of places were resorted to by Christ's apostles for the performance of baptism: Rivers, pools and baths.

The earliest known writer after Luke, was Clement of Rome; he says, baptism may be performed in a river, in the sea, or in a lake, so it is done in the name of the Holy Trinity. — Clement died in the year A. D., 165.

Tertullian describes the ordinance of baptism as being three actions. He says it is unimportant at what place one is baptized, whether in a river, sea, or lake, in standing or running water, so it is done in the name of the Holy Trinity. Tertullian died in the year A. D. 220.

Ambrose established an order of Scripture reading, singing and prayers, in the language of the people. He baptized in the name of the Father, and the Son and the Holy Spirit. He says this was the primitive mode prior to the year A. D., 360.

Pascal baptizes by immersion up to the year A. D., 444.

Cyril baptized by three actions, having a mystic reference by figure to the three days burial of Christ. Cyril died in the year A. D. 444.

Strabo says, trine immersion was the ancient mode. Strabo died in the eighth century.

Sprinkling was granted by Pope Stephen II, of France, in the eighth century, by pouring water on the head of the person in the name of the Holy Trinity.

Luther, Stephens and Calvin baptized by pouring three times on the head of the person in the name of the Holy Trinity, A. D., 1522.

It appears that there are three actions required in baptism, according to the ancient mode.

Eunomius invented single immersion in the year A. D. 360.

BROTHER Stein's series of articles on "The Literal Meaning of the Inspired Precepts our Only Safe Guide in Religious Faith and Practice," closes with this issue. Hope all our readers have carefully read them. We have on hand another series from his pen. These will be published sometime during the Spring months.

In an Autograph Album I find the following truthful saying: "No man is wise at all times." This is the experience of every man and woman of observation. The wisest of men have their foolish spells, and do that of which they would be ashamed in their deliberate moments. It is important that we learn how to take people.

Though you may not be able to accomplish great things the world is full of small ones demanding your attention. Learn to execute little things well and thereby qualify yourself for a more extensive sphere of usefulness. He that was found faithful over a few things was counted worthy to become ruler over many things and enter into the joy of his Lord. Go thou and do likewise.

G. W. FESLER, of Anderson, Ind., says: "At the District Meeting in 1877, we asked for aid to pay our church debt. We have received twenty-five dollars and fifteen cents from the Four Mile church, and four dollars from the Nettle Creek church. We are very thankful for this and would be very glad for any more that the Brethren will be so kind as to give us."

We have received another lot of Bro. Miller's defense of the Brethren's doctrine, and are again prepared to fill orders. Price, $1.60.

SATURDAY NIGHT.

Sad Homes.

WHERE are many sad homes to-night, not because the inmates are not kind to each other, but because of bereavements over which human skill has no power.

I have been preaching most of the week, but omitted one meeting to attend the funeral of a young lady who died away from home. Eleven months ago, there was a happy family composed of husband, wife, daughter and two sons; but in an unexpected moment the wife was taken away by death. The heavy stroke almost broke the husband's heart. He, however, had a kind daughter left to guide and take charge of his household labors, and thus became reconciled to his sad state. His daughter goes on a visit to relatives, but returns a corpse after the absence of a few weeks. The unhealed wounds of the father were broken afresh, and he felt the keen dart piercing to his heart.

While viewing the friends taking a last farewell look at their departed friend I thought of the many sad homes thus occasioned, and of the painful situation of those who are bereft of the loved ones. The husband and wife set out on life's uneven voyage, thinking only of the joys and pleasures awaiting. They little dream of the parting hour, little do they think of the sad years to come, of the bereavements and sufferings to which they must be subjected. This world is not all sunshine, not all bright and pleasant. Those who glide through life on "flowery beds of ease" are seldom found. Though our pathway may be strewn with roses of the most delightful fragrance, yet there are fields of thorns ahead, and often where we least expect them. A calm after a storm is no less true of nature than grief after joys.

So far many of us may have been fortunate, but still we know not what awaits us—we know not what is coming, and it is well we do not. The Lord knows what is best for all. Affliction may seem severe, yet it is often an excellent remedy. None are entirely exempt from these sore afflictions—they will come sooner or later; it therefore becomes all to prepare for them.

Gentle reader, think of the many sad homes thus caused to-night, not only among the poor, but even among the wealthy and learned. Strong hearts are bowed down in grief, and many a poor, broken-hearted wife or mother goes about mourning. We think of the sad mother who has just buried her tender lamb; she shares her grief alone, none can weep as she does, the dart comes home to her heart keenly. But what must be the secret feelings of the wife—the last ray of light seems gone—she goes from the church-yard alone, with trembling steps she enters the lonely dwelling—there is one missing—the side companion of life, the joy and comfort of her tender heart lies cold in death's embrace. There is none on earth to comfort her. God pity the poor, broken-hearted to-night. I often think of the lonely, frontier settler—the wife is left with a group of helpless children depending on her for support. She is alone with but few neighbors and little substance. Such persons need comforting.

There are husbands and fathers in grief. Though men's hearts may seem stronger than those of finer feelings, yet they can be melted by bereavements, and softened by afflictions. They feel the dart—it pierces home to their hearts, and not unfrequently follows them to the grave. To return home from the little hurrying city—enter the lonely cottage and find no wife—no tender mate—no welcome smiles from a loving companion, is enough to break an iron heart. But such things must come, may God help us prepare for them.

In view of these coming afflictions that are in waiting for the rich as well as the poor, husbands and wives should put forth greater efforts to make each other happy, and thus render the thorny pathway of life as pleasant as possible. The world is full of thorns and thistles, sore afflictions and temptations which causes many homes to be dreary and uninviting. But much of this may be alleviated by due kindness and conjugal affection upon the part of the companions of life. Forgetting their "first love," has rendered the lives of millions miserable in the extreme.

Beyond this vale of tears we look for a better clime, where the sad ones who have lived faithfully, shall meet and be forever at rest. On you beautiful shore, amid the delightful scenery in the Paradise of God, we can walk and talk of the blessedness of the redeemed. Husband and wife, father and mother, brothers and sisters can greet each other beyond the stormy waters, where sickness and bereavements never come; there they can walk and sing the song of the saved evermore. Gentle reader, are you ready to-night to leave earth with all its sorrows and join the happy and immortal throng that stands ready to welcome you home?—J. H. MOORE.

The Home Circle.

READ AND OBEY.

"Husbands, love your wives."
 "Wives, obey your husbands."
 "Fathers, provoke not your children to wrath."
 "Children, obey your parents in all things."

Edited by M. M. Eshelman.

If you find you are getting angry, just begin to count, and don't stop until the anger is all gone. It is a sure cure; try it and be happy.

This week we give up the Home Circle to our writers, for they have been very kind in sending us much good matter. Read all with care, and pray the Lord that it may do you much good.

ANSWERS to John R. Snavely's queries in No. 7.

1. Levi died in Egypt.
2. He was one hundred and thirty-seven years old.
3. He was the grandfather of Liliu, Shimi, Amram, Izhar, Hebron, Uzziel, Mahali, and Musi. (Exodus 6: 17, 18).
4. Ishmael died 1773 years B. C., at the age of 137 years.
5. Seth died 2962 years B. C., at the age of 912.

First, second, third and fifth, answered by a Friend. First, second, fourth and fifth, correctly answered by John L. Frantz. Same by Clara E. Lutz.

In answer to Iva Thomas' query, in No. 5, J. H. of Va. says, Asa.

Queries, by John L. Frantz: 1. Who was the first blacksmith? 2. Who caused iron to swim? 3. What king reigned only one month? 4. Who wrote with a pen of iron and the point of a diamond? 5. How many miracles did Jesus perform?

By A Friend: How many knives did the children of Israel take out of Egypt?

By Clara E. Lutz: 1. How many years after the departure of the children of Israel out of Egypt did Solomon lay the foundation of the temple? 2. Whom did the Lord appoint to succeed Moses?

By Michael F. Snavely: 1. How old was Noah when the flood came upon the earth? 2. Who was the first man that died a natural death, and how old was he?

FROM GRANDPA.

GRANDPA has concluded to write to the children at work in the Home Circle again.

Youth is the time to serve the Lord,
 The time to insure the great reward.

I would advise the children to do all the good they can, and forsake all evil that is termed carnal pleasures, such as pride, superfluity of apparel, all species of gambling, reveling, church suppers, and all vanities. The earlier in life you come out of the kingdom of this world and come into Christ's kingdom, (church) and become spiritually minded, the better. The Saviour says, "Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." I don't think there is one of our little readers but who wants rest. You cannot get spiritual rest outside of the church, and you will have to make a choice of a church that will condemn the above named reveling and carnal pleasures, and preach and practice non-conformity to the world. I am old now, and lived in a fashionable church for many years, and in reading what Paul says, "come out from among them," and also to "have no fellowship with them," I finally took brother Paul's advice, obeyed his teachings, and joined with the Brethren. I rejoice to-day, that I made this step. So I would say, make the right start for glory.

The best news I see in the Home Circle is, that so many children come out on the Lord's side and are baptized, and come into the church. It is glad tidings of great joy to us. Be faithful, for you have made the right start. There is one thing that I will vouch for, if you live to be as old as grandpa, you will never regret that you came into the church while young. When you hear men preach their opinion against the inspired Word of God, (which is done in many places) don't heed it, but take the Bible for your counsel, and if you or your parents can raise $1.00, get Bro. R. H. Miller's book, "The Doctrine of the Brethren Defended," and read and re-read it, and lend it to your neighbors, and resolve to serve the Lord.

Girard, Ill.

IN THE GRAVE-YARD SOFTLY SLEEPING.

IN the grave-yard softly sleeping,
 Where the cypress branches wave,
 Lies our little school-mate, keeping
 Silence in the narrow grave.
 There she sleeps, and no to-morrow
 Wakes her in that silent home;
 There she rests, no sign of sorrow
 Clouds with grief, her rural home.

There the daisies and the roses,
 Pour their incense at her feet,
 On the spot where she reposes,
 Where the grass is green and sweet.
 There the wood-lark, sweetly singing,
 With her music charms the air,
 And the busy wild bee winging
 Hum a hymn for flow'rets fair.

But they cannot wake our sister,
 On her bed within the tomb;
 Angels up in heaven missed her,
 So they came and took her home,
 Took her where the wondrous glory,
 Fills her happy soul with love,
 Where her heart can feel no sorrow
 In her blessed home above.

Selected by CLARA E. LUTZ.

Winstow, Ill.

THE CITY OF JERUSALEM.

Dear Young Readers of the Home Circle:—
 No doubt some of you have read of the wisdom of Solomon, and that beautiful city—Jerusalem.

Solomon was the flower of all the kings of the earth, and an ornament to Israel. For order and perfection none excelled him. He made Jerusalem the dwelling place of holiness and queen of all the earth. In the city on Mount Moriah, he built one of the most splendid temples that ever was erected; adorned and ornamented the marble stones, of which it was composed, with gold and silver, shining in splendor like the majestic sun. Many thousand workmen were employed in this structure for several years. All manner of carved work, lincens of various colors covered the sanctum sanctorum, the holy of holies. In it were the altar for burning incense, and the ark of the covenant. There was no city, but the city of Jerusalem, where the Almighty could be thus publicly worshipped.

Jesus, in order to fulfil the prophecy, entered the city on an ass, and therefore he sent two of his disciples to fetch it; and they placed the Lord of lords thereon. A great many people assembled themselves and came out of the city, not armed with weapons, but with green branches, in order to escort their King in triumph into the city. All were full of joy; every one looked on Jesus, who could be seen above all the rest, riding, surrounded by a host of his disciples who cried, "Hosanna to the son of David!" "Blessed is he who cometh in the name of the Lord!" The cry was so great that the Pharisees became very much displeased and went to Jesus, entreating him to command his disciples to be quiet. But Jesus told them that it was impossible now to be silent and not praise God, and that otherwise, the stones would cry out.

When he saw the city plainly, which was very handsome and splendid, and also the beautiful temple with its golden roof glittering in the sunshine, together with the white and precious stones of its walls, and at the same time, considering its future condition that would befall this great city on account of its sins, of which they would not repent, but continued to be impenitent, he wept bitterly. When he came into the city the cry was, "Who is this?" but the host that followed answered, "This is Jesus the prophet of Nazareth, of Galilee."

SUSAN WINGERT.

Franklin Grove, Ill.

LETTERS FROM THE EAST.

NUMBER II.

My Dear Young Readers:—

It gives me much pleasure to find "Children at Work" among the pages of the BRETHERN AT WORK. I see brother Eshelman is in true earnest and doing finely. So it becomes us to help him. Boys and girls are known to ask what we are put in this world for. They are not old enough to think much about it, and so this seems dark to them. If you were asked this question, "Why are we here in this world? what would you say? I think many of you could give a good answer. It is one of the greatest questions that can be asked, but the answer is so easy and simple that many good boys and girls can answer it. We are not here only to live awhile and then die, like the birds and beasts. Oh no. We are not here to drink the pleasures of the world and eat the fruits that the Lord forbids. No, no. We are here to do what God says. He has told men and women many things to do as we read in the Bible, and if they do them because they love the Lord, they become good men and good women. This is why we are in the world—to

DO GOD'S WILL.

He says in the Scripture, that boys and girls should love and hear their parents. "Honor thy father and thy mother." This is what God says. It is His will that you should do so. And now here is what He promises you: "That thy days may be long in the land." Now, look at it! long life He promises to obedient children, and how sweet life is! How good it is to live long in this world to do right and help others to do right. This is what we should live for. While we are at home with mamma and papa, we ought to be good children, and to do this we must do what a great and good preacher once said: "Children, obey your parents in the Lord, for this is right." See, He gives us the reason—it is right to do so, and of course wrong to not obey them. We ought

ALWAYS DO RIGHT.

If you do wrong because you can't help it, you must watch that point and do so no more, and so step by step you may come up to a good and great life when you are men and women. The time will soon be when father and mother will sleep to wake no more in this world, then you must take care of yourselves, and do for yourselves. How good it will then be to look back and say, "I tried to do right." Such a boy or girl can go through this life and always find friends and homes to bid them Welcome! Love only what is good, and true and beautiful. Scorn to do a mean act. Don't say bad words. Be kind to all. If some one treats you badly, try, O try hard, to do good to them. If they have any good at all about their hearts, they will be ashamed and come back, and love you all the more. Uncle Thomas will say too, this is true. Do right always toward others, and as you learn, and grow older, may you also learn to give your hearts early to the Lord. I am still,
 Your Brother,

D. B. MENTZER.

FROM IDA CLEMMER.

EVE was the first woman, and with Adam was put in the garden of Eden. Eve was also told that she might eat of the fruit of all the trees in the garden except the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. But Satan came along and told them to eat, and Eve listened to the lying words and took of the fruit. She not only ate of the forbidden fruit herself, but gave some to Adam, and he too sinned. When God saw what they had done, He was angry at them, and as He walked in the garden in the cool of the day, they heard His voice which made them afraid. God asked them whether they had eaten of the forbidden fruit, and Adam answered, "The woman gave it to me and I did eat." He did not humbly confess his fault, nor did Eve, so both were driven out of their beautiful home.
 Mt. Carroll, Ill.

FROM KATIE A. SNAVELY.

Dear Editor:—

I SAW an article in the Home Circle, Dec. No. 51, written by Daniel Brudaker, about the foolish boy, and he asked several questions about it, and wished the little boys and girls to answer his questions. I will tell you what I think about it. He wishes us to tell him who told it and what he wanted them to learn from it. I think it was Jesus told it, and He wanted us to learn that when we come to the years of understanding we should not do as the foolish boy, which means the prodigal son, and not wander away from our Father's house, and go on in sin and folly until we come to want. We then see our condition as the prodigal son did, and are glad to go back to our Father's house and ask Him only to use us as one of His hired servants. We would not think of asking God to let us be heirs of His and joint heirs with Jesus Christ, but God has said, if we return to Him, we shall be heirs of His and joint heirs with Jesus. As there was joy when the prodigal son returned, so I think there will be joy when we return; for Christ says, "There is more joy over one sinner that repenteth, than over ninety and nine just persons which need no repentance." I think Jesus is the elder son, for He never wandered away from His Father's house. If this is not correct, will some one please tell me who the elder son is?
 Hudson, Ill.

The soul is a soil which requires to be dug and stirred deeply, otherwise nothing will grow in it but weeds.

CHILDREN AT WORK.

From Annie C. Long.—Dear Editor:—I see so many letters written by little folks that I thought I would try and write one too; though it may not be as good as some of them. I go to school every day, and mamma and papa says I am learning very fast. I like my teacher, because she is so kind, and try to obey her. I am eight years old. I mean to be a good girl, but often come short. I pray to God to help me to do better, so when I get older, I can be His child, and do all His commandments. I read the good Book every day. I love to read the little letters,
 Lanark, Ill.

From Ella Lehman.—Since the first of 1877, I lost two dear sisters. Sister Ida, the first of Feb. 1877, and sister Cora the thirteenth of Nov. Five of us children had the typhoid fever this Fall for three months. Sister Cora May died with the diphtheria. Since my health has so failed in the last ten months, I do not go to school. I visited the school which my two brothers attend, last Friday. The scholars are making rapid progress. Since the Summer Sabbath-school has closed, they have it twice a month. We are eight miles from the church. On account of bad weather and muddy roads, our attendance is very irregular. I am thirteen years old.
 Marshalltown, Iowa.

From Ira Miller.—Kind Editor:—I am twelve years old. I like to read the BRETHERN AT WORK and the young folks' letters; and also the letters from the missionaries in Denmark. Hope they will return safely.
 Freeport, Ill.

From Mary C. E. E. Sider.—Mr. Editor:—I thought I would let you know what we are doing in Canada. I am ten years old. I have taken the "Children's Paper" for four years; but now my father takes the BRETHERN AT WORK and I like it better, because it contains more reading and comes oftener. I like to read good books and papers. Aunt Nancy lives with us now; she came from Dupage County, Ill., last Oct., and is a member of the church. When Michael Forney was in Canada last Nov., he paid us a visit and preached one evening in our house. My parents are members of the River Brethren. We have meeting here every Sabbath. I love to go to meeting and hear the Word preached. I have one sister and three brothers; they are all living yet. I like to read letters sent to you by other children.
 Stevensville, Ont.

From Annie Raffensperger.—Dear Editor:—I am fifteen years old. Went to school last Winter until I took sick, and have been sick ten months. I was able to go to church and Sabbath-school about three months ago, when brethren Bashor and Gibson were holding meeting here, and I was then baptized, and am now one of God's little lambs. I wish you would all know what a friend we have in Jesus, if we believe in Him, when we are sick.
 Rock Run District, Ind.

From Jennety Buck.—I attended Sabbath-school last Summer, at our meeting-house; only missed one Sabbath. My teacher was Mrs. Hattie A. Hazen. I have one sister and one brother. I love to go and see my grandma and grandpa; they live at Fremont. Mamma is taking this paper and we like it real well. I wish all the little girls would write a letter for this paper. I am twelve years old.
 Fostoria, Ind.

From Dora Simmons.—Dear Editor:—I am nearly ten years old. I never wrote a letter, but will write a little letter for the Home Circle. We have no Sunday-School here that I can go to, but I go to meeting nearly every Sunday with grand ma, in the carriage. I like to go to meeting and hear them sing and preach about Jesus. I go to school and read in the third reader. I live in the country and our school-house is only three-fourths of a mile from our house. Mr. Editor, tell Miss Vinnie Eshelman that I thank her for inviting me to come and see her. I cannot come to see her for awhile yet.
 Union City, Ind.

From Leora C. Lyon.—Dear Editor:—I am ten years old. I went to Sabbath-school last Summer. Rebecca Snavely was my teacher. I have three brothers and four sisters living, and one sister dead. One of my sisters is in West Virginia; she went away last March; I would like very much to see her. We live three and a half miles from the church. My father, mother and sister Alice are members of the church. I am going to school this Winter, and have not missed a day yet.
 Hudson, Ill.

CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM GERMANY.

Dear Brethren:—

WE left Denmark on the 22nd inst., where and when my last communication was written. Came to Reichen Saehsen on Friday evening after dark; went to the hotel and next morning started out in search of the friends we were requested to visit in that place, and preach to them.

As a matter of course in this country, the minister in charge has to be consulted first, as he has the entire control of church matters. — Hence we, in company with two of his members, paid him a friendly visit, and as a natural result, our Mission and its success and prospects, soon became the topic of conversation, and with the plainest hints possible, given, he nevertheless seemed dull of comprehension to understand us, hence did not even invite us to come to meeting next day, much less offer us the church for services. And as we did not like to leave before Monday morning, we visited some six or eight families and spoke to them from house to house. We went to meeting on Sunday and heard a polished but saltless sermon of twenty-five minutes, and as the minister lords over his flock in this country, all felt a timidity in saying, You may preach in our house; but on Sunday evening quite a number of friends met to bid us farewell. We availed ourselves of the opportunity and Bro. Fry spent about an hour in speaking to them with good effect, seemingly, and I feel persuaded they heard some things they never heard before and will most likely not soon forget.

Although liberty of conscience in Germany has, of late years, been much improved, yet the churches and schools are both under the control of the clergy; hence both closed against strangers, especially when they think their craft is in danger; we then hear them say with one voice: "Great is the Diana of the Ephesians." We think however in places good might be done if the brethren could live among them a length of time and live out what they preach, associate with the people, so they will open their doors.

But we proceeded further and came to this place, and am now writing in the house of David Glock, brother of John Glock of Auhwick Mills, Huntingdon Co., Pa., who is extensively known in our brotherhood. Here we found a similar state of things. The minister said, he had not the privilege of offering the use of the church, being employed by the government, and obliged to go according to law. — So we will shake the dust from our feet and return to Hamburg where we expect to meet our companion, and go to England.

The country in Germany is more hilly than we expected to find it. Between Hanover and Frankfurt we passed through five tunnels, one of several miles; and between Heidelberg and Ludwigsburg we passed through some smaller ones. We passed through some excellent country on our way here; but the most indescribable sight I ever saw, in an agricultural point of view is the vine-yard here in Hohneck on a hill side.

The weather is still pleasant, yet the temperature is cold enough to render traveling pleasant. There is from one to three inches of snow on the ground. Our health is still very good, and hope our companions are enjoying good health also.

Our privileges for writing are very limited in traveling around; hence please excuse for short and imperfect notes.

Yours Fraternally,

ENOCH EBY.

Hohneck, Ludwigsburg, Wuertemberg, Europe,
Jan. 30th, 1878.

THE WAY SOME GOATS WERE MILKED.

WHILE reading Bro. M. M. Eshelman's article on "Goat's Milk Enough," I thought I would give you a plan that was concocted in this vicinity for milking goats. They have been milked so long and often, they are getting pretty shy. It is getting rather difficult to decoy them into the fold when milk is wanted. But the fertile brain of the milkmen seems to be equal to the occasion.

There is a temple in Vicksburg, Mich., said to have been dedicated to God. The worshippers of said temple seem to be rather faithless with regard to God's power to provide for His own, or protect them against danger and loss. So they concluded to take it from under his kind care, and put it under the fostering care of a worldly institution. The protection of such an one cannot be had without money and price, and the sheep being short of the life-giving fluid, and undoubtedly also of the bread of life which cometh down from above; they concluded to get up an old-fashioned party. The sheep were to dress plain and in the good, old style of one hundred years ago. Some were to represent George Washington and Lady, and other noted characters of that day. The best of all was, however, they were to have an old-fashioned supper of baked pork and beans. They had old music such as Yankee Doodle and the like; Psalms and spiritual songs were counted out of order. Those things being such a novelty, they took amazingly. The goats flocked in from all quarters; they were patted, coaxed and seated around the tables with the sheep, and they all partook of their repast without asking a blessing or returning thanks to the Giver of every good and perfect gift. And while they were around the table, some of the most fascinating lambs milked them to their heart's content. The needed cash was raised, and now they are living under the kind and protecting care of a worldly organization.

There are a few members of this society dissatisfied with such things and we have the above from them. We passed around among some of them the paper, containing Bro. Eshelman's comments on Prov. 27: 27. "And thou shalt have goat's milk enough for thy food, for the food of thy household, and for the maintenance of thy maidens." They were highly exasperated, and said they had as good a right to the goats' money, as saloon-keepers and the like.

In this expression we think all the humble followers of the meek and lowly Lamb will concur; but that don't make either right. We pass your paper among those, that we think will be benefited by it; and it seems to be causing the scales to fall from their eyes. We hope the day is not far distant when they will see as they are seen, and that they will conform to the pure and unadulterated Gospel of Jesus Christ.

Vicksburg, Mich.

FRANK ALLEN.

FROM IOWA.

Dear Brethren:—

THE church is in a prosperous condition. — Since the first of January, eight precious souls have united with us and have been received into the church by baptism. They have enlisted under the banner of King Emmanuel.

To the comfort and encouragement of many, we would say that they are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints and of the household of God. They are building upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone.

O what a joyful thought, that we are building upon that good foundation that even the gates of hell cannot prevail against us. If God be for us who can be against us. "For I am persuaded that neither death nor life, nor angels, nor principalities nor powers, nor things present nor things to come, nor height nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus, our Lord" (Rom. 8: 39). The eyes of the Lord are over the righteous and his ears are open unto their prayers.

Five more have become willing to unite with us soon. May God guide them with His holy Spirit into all truth, is my prayer.

P. HEIL.

Babbain, Iowa.

HOME MISSION.

Dear Brethren:—

ON Friday, the eighth of February, Elder George Irvin came to us and remained over Sunday. He preached six discourses in all, and while he was with us, the Word of God was preached in its purity. No accessions to the church, yet we hope that his labors of love will be as bread cast upon the water, to be gathered not many days hence.

May God help us, dear brethren and sisters, that we may become more earnest in prayer, as we believe it is prayer that makes the Christian's armor bright, and without prayer we cannot enter into the rest that remains for the children of God. We are commanded to watch and pray, lest we enter into temptation.

May God help us to do all we can to persuade sinners to come to Christ and seek an interest in the saving blood of Him who died on the cross to redeem sinful mankind from their sins.

We number twenty-one members here. We have prayer-meeting three times a week, for we know it is good to wait on the Lord and to mingle our voices together in singing and praying to God as did Paul and Silas. Brethren and sisters pray for us, that we may live faithful, that others, seeing our earnestness in the cause of the Lord, may come and join with us in serving the true and living God. Pray that there may be a great and mighty church of Jesus Christ reared up here in Belmont Co., Ohio, here in the midst of sectarians of most all kinds. God is working in the hearts of many for the good of their souls.

Warnock, O.

A SISTER.

FROM KANSAS.

Dear Brethren:—

WE have seen in your worthy paper that brethren from the East were out West, looking for R. B. land to locate a colony on. — Now, why pay from 4 to 8 dollars per acre for such land, when you can come here and get just as good land for one dollar and a quarter? This land is for actual settlers, and no one can get it without living on it.

We have a beautiful climate with good water and good health, live in Sumner Co., on State Creek, thirteen miles North-West of Wellington and thirty miles South-west of Wichita. — There are sixteen members here and all willing and ready to do their part as far as they are able.

Well, we cannot close without repenting the same call: "Come and help us." Have but one speaker here and there are more calls than two or three can fill. Now, dear brethren do not stop and make first one excuse and then another, but come along and do your part, and the rest will be done. The Lord will provide for those who trust him!

Yours in the One Faith,

A. HOLLOWAY.

TEXAS LAND SWINDLERS.

AS many brethren are now looking at Texas as a place to locate, it is needful that they be cautious in the matter of fraudulent deeds. We clip the following from one of our exchanges, and those going to Texas should cut this out and carry it with them for reference.

"A few months ago a number of men were arrested at Kansas City, implicated in enormous swindlings in Texas lands. An immense number of bogus deeds have been issued. Through a special agent of the United States Postal service, the names of most of those who issued these fraudulent deeds have been ascertained, and we give their names below. The publication of the names is made for the reason that large quantities of land were sold or transferred by members of the gang in most of the Western and Southern States, and it is pretty nearly certain that all the titles which have emanated for the past eight or ten years from any of these parties are fraudulent, and of no value whatever. The names are as follows:

E. E. Atwell, E. B. Bates, Job D. Barry, John Bart, George D. Brown, John R. Davis, Thos. Dalton, H. A. Edwards, J. F. Goodman, J. R. Hammit, Aaron Hughes, John Jones, D. R. Jackson, H. C. Brown, Herman Braudt, John Hall, J. B. Hughes, A. G. Hazelton, Jonas Cheek, Job M. Davis, George Dawson, W. H. Gibbs, J. R. Hamilton, John R. Hall, Bartlett Heckman, John L. Hudson, James A. Haws, A. M. Jones, N. G. Kelley, John M. Mercer, John M. Martin, Orlando Kiger, Alexander Kelley, John T. Martin, D. A. Newberry, Zero Oakes, Allen Oakley, Luke O. Bannan, John Ryan, Uriah P. Smith, W. L. Stephens, Geo. W. Smith, Robt. W. Tensdall, B. F. Williams, Jacob J. Bates, George Arnsby, J. T. Ogden, S. A. Oliver & Co., Sylvester Orphee, E. L. Rockwell & Co., D. R. Stein, A. J. Smith, Geo. A. Stevens and Geo. H. Thomson."

DIED.

Obituaries should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and separate from all other business.

BOWMAN.—In the Wakena Branch, Mo., on the 23rd of Jan. '78; sister Annie Bowman; wife of brother D. B. Bowman; aged 56 years, 10 months and 25 days. Occasion improved from Rev. 7: 13, 14, by A. Harper.

S. B. SHIRKY.

BLIER.—At South Bend, Ind., Feb. 12, 1878, sister Nancy Blier, aged 77 years. Text: Numbers 20: 23.

J. B. WRIGHTSMAN.

RERR.—On the 31st day of January, 1878, our old and respected sister Sarah Rerr, wife of brother John Rerr, aged 70 years, 1 month and 19 days. Funeral services conducted by the writer, from 2 Tim. 4: 6, 7, 8.

J. L. FRANTZ.

GLEANINGS.

From Jesse Calvert.—I went to Newton, Miami Co., Ohio, Feb. 7th. Bro. Davis Younce was there and had held two meetings before I arrived. We continued our labors there until Feb. 11, having two meetings a day. The largest congregations we have seen this Winter, and much opposition, probably the most from the Cadwalader fraternity; but amidst all the opposition thirty-four were led down into the water and took upon them the name of Jesus. One more made her wants known, and we think will soon unite with the band; two made application to be restored, and many more said they would come soon. Several of the Cadwalader people said they were dissatisfied, and I think they will return back to the fold again.

I was in Ohio about eight weeks on this trip. Had seventy-one meetings, besides two communion meetings. One hundred and fifty-seven were added to the church by baptism, with the promise of twenty-one more. May the Lord bless all the brethren, sisters and friends. Came home on the 12th. Found all well with the exceptions of bad colds. Thanks be to God.

From G. W. Cripe.—Bro. Samuel Ulery held several meetings in the Northern part of the congregation and as the result of his labors twelve were added to the church, and prospects are good for more. Have meeting here now, Bro. Murray doing the preaching. Three have made application to be received into the church. The roads are so bad that we think of stopping for the present. Yet we have much to be thankful for. God bless the labors of all the Brethren to the conversion of many souls to Christ!—Petit, Ind., Feb. 10, 1878.

From Jacob Hiestand.—Bro. Samuel Bosserman of Dunkirk was with us, preached in the evening and on Sabbath at 10:30. The church was glad to rejoice when four precious souls were made to forsake sin and follow their Master. In the afternoon a large crowd of people assembled on the banks of the Sandusky River, where the ordinance of baptism was performed by Bro. Bosserman. Those that were received were all sisters, the youngest being eleven, the oldest about eighteen years of age. The weather was cold and snowy, but we never saw us much fortitude. The ordinance passed off quiet and orderly. May God bless them and may they keep close to the foot of the Cross!—Little York, O., Feb. 11, 1878.

From C. Forney.—Elder J. J. Lichty from Brown Co., Kansas came to us Feb. 2nd. Commenced a series of meetings which closed on the 10th. Six accessions to the church. Bad weather and bad roads on account of mud, greatly interfered with the success of the meeting. We think more are counting the cost.

As one, we feel that the benefit of such meetings need not necessarily depend only on the number of accessions. The Master says to Peter, "Feed my sheep" which was not forgotten at our meetings, and the amount of good accomplished by our brother's labors, is hard to tell. The members here seem to be in union, and growing more zealous in the good cause.—Falls City, Neb., Feb. 13, 1878.

From Della A. Bolin.—In this neighborhood most of the brethren take the BRETHERN AT WORK. Last Sunday after meeting, I went to brother Shelins', and there lay your paper on the stand, full of good news as usual. One poor old sister said she wished she could have the paper, as it has such plain print; but she is too poor to pay for it. If you have a poor fund, please send the paper to her. May God bless you in your labors of love; and may Zion prosper, that when the labors of life are over, may we find sweet rest in our heavenly home.—Niles, Mich.

From J. M. Replogle.—There are fifteen members living here, and no one to preach for us, only when we can get some one from other arms of the church. Bro. Samuel C. Stump just closed a series of meetings here. We hope the Lord will bless his labors here and elsewhere. Would be glad if some of our ministering brethren would stop here and give us a few meetings, or if some one would wish to move to a good country, we would invite them to come and see our country. Remember, Farragut is our Station.—Farragut, Ia., Jan. 28, '78.

From Isaac Wampler.—Snow at present three or four inches deep, and roads almost impassable; however our meetings are well attended. Have no minister living in this part of the district. This would be a good place for one to locate, as the harvest is abundant. We have a brick meeting-house, 40 by 60 with basement, and prospects for doing good are all that can be desired.—Knobnoster, Mo., Feb. 12, 1878.

From Daniel Vaniman.—I herewith enclose some peach blossoms taken from a tree in Lawrence and a variety of flowers which I gathered out on the open prairie while walking from Lawrence to our stopping place, one mile from Lawrence.—My brother George and I, arrived here last Friday, and spent yesterday pleasantly prospecting over rich and beautiful prairie; to-day spent the day in Lawrence. Preached in the Methodist church to a large and attentive audience at 11 A. M. At 3 P. M. went to Sabbath-school. Lawrence is a newly settled place, containing two churches, one grist mill, and a number of stores.

The citizens of both town and vicinity so far as we have learned, are all from the North, and seem so kind and sociable, that we can scarcely realize that we are in Texas. They seem very anxious for the Brethren to settle among them, and help build up the country. The weather is very pleasant and warm; roads a little dusty.—People have been sowing oats, making garden &c. The right thinking and enterprising people here, are battling against the sale of spirituous liquors, and are making good progress.

The Methodist minister at this place gave me a list of counties in Texas that had succeeded in banishing every liquor shop from their county, and others will soon reach the same important end which is accomplished by a majority of the votes of the people of a county or incorporated town.

I brought with me a bundle of the BRETHREN AT WORK and Primitive Christian. At the close of the meeting I announced what they were, and that I would distribute them free, which I did. Fifty more would not have supplied the demand. In this way people will get better acquainted with the Brethren, and thereby may be brought to know and embrace the truth.

We leave here to-morrow to prospect further in other counties.—Lawrence, Texas, Feb. 17, 1878.

From John Reichard.—I am happy that I can send you a few subscribers for the BRETHREN AT WORK. Those that are already getting the paper, seem to read it with great interest, and appreciate it very much for its plainness and sound doctrine. Seeing that men appreciate the Truth for its simplicity and plainness, we ought to be the more encouraged to show forth the Gospel Truth in all its purity, as it is in Christ Jesus.—And again, when we see men going forth claiming to be the servants of God, perverting the Truth as much as possible, and see the influence they have over some people, we are made to feel the great need of true and faithful workers for Jesus. Therefore I would say dear brethren, be not afraid to give pointed counsel to both sinner and sinner. May God add His blessings to all.—Fordwich, Ont.

From Joseph Zook.—Grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to you in your heavenly calling in preaching the Word of Life to thousands of anxious listeners or readers each week. May your columns continue to be filled with the wholesome meats for the soul, to the encouragement of those that have started in the Divine Life, that we may all go forth as an army with banners, and not faint by the way. We feel to pray with you and for you in your trials, and rejoice with you in your prosperity. The health here in general is good. The work of the Lord is prospering here; over fifty have been added to the church by baptism since last April. Weather continues to be warm, and roads very muddy.—Unionville, Iowa, Feb. 16, 1878.

From J. R. Cripe.—Your paper comes regular. It is the only preaching we have here. We live 40 miles from the church. My wife and I have been the only members here for a long time; but some of our children have now come to the church, and some have moved here. In all now we number nine.—Durchester, Neb., Feb. 18, 1878.

From W. McWhorter.—I am well pleased with the BRETHREN AT WORK. Its pages furnish us with good wholesome instruction, and we consider it worthy of a place in every family of the brotherhood. May the good Master grant you abundant success.

From Levi L. Landis.—Bro. Jesse Calvert held meeting here for two weeks; thirty-three added by baptism. He is now at Newton. Good attention paid to the Word preached. One baptized yesterday. May the Lord bless his labors here and elsewhere.—Carlington, O.

An Impostor.—The Brethren and friends are hereby cautioned in regard to a man about sixty years of age, somewhat gray. He rides a small bay animal, has an army saddle. Says his name is McGlochlin; and never tells the same tale twice. He will bear watching.

S. C. ULERY.

Liberty Mills, Ind.

From John Metzger.—Myself and son met at West Lebanon about the middle of January. Had some meetings, and baptized two. From here went to Vermillion Co., Ill., near Mariessville Meeting one week. Baptized eight at that place. There are thirteen members living there.

The ark of the Lord is still moving in our church at home; twelve were recently added to the church by baptism. Had election in our church for two deacons; the lot fell on Bro. John Blickenstaff and Leonard Blickenstaff. Hope they will be faithful in their office.—Cerro Gordo, Ill., Feb. 18, 1878.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

NOTICES of Love-feasts, District Meetings, etc., should be brief, and written on paper separate from other business.

Please announce through your paper that the brethren and sisters of the North end of the Vermillion church intend holding a series of meetings commencing on the 20th of March next, 1878.—A cordial invitation is given to all, and especially ministering brethren. The meeting to be held in Cornell, Livingston Co., Ill.

J. W. GERHART.

NOTICE.—I expect to make arrangements on the Toledo, Wabash and Great Western R. R., for the benefit of the Brethren traveling to and from the Annual Meeting at a reduced rate. I hope no one will interfere.

JOHN BERRILLY.

INTERESTING ITEMS.

STAY ON THE FARM.—This is the advice I would give every one who has lived for any considerable length of time on a farm. There seems to be a great disposition among farmers to leave their farms and move to town when they and their wives begin to get old, and work begins to go hard with them. Farmers get the impression that it is much easier to live in town than in the country. This is a great mistake as far as the wife is concerned. It is nearly as much work to keep house in town as it is in the country. If the men will milk the cows and make the garden on the farm, which they should do, and make things as convenient about the farm house as they generally are in town, which may be done at a very trifling expense, the wife will find the difference very small. The farmer will also find it much cheaper to make garden and do the milking than to buy the vegetables, butter and milk. He will also find a great difference between having marketing to sell and having everything to buy. This is much more noticeable to persons who come from the country to town, than it is to persons who were raised in town. If you have children you would better raise them on the farm than in town—more especially boys.

Country people, while living on their farms, only see the sunny side of town life. When they come to town and see persons in the street, they generally see them well dressed, especially the ladies, but it is often very different if you were to see them in their poorly supplied kitchens, but-tresses, etc.—The Farmer.

At the foot of Mount Gargano, a buried town has been laid bare, the houses being twenty feet below the surface. A temple of Diana was first brought to light, then a portico composed of columns without capitals, and, finally, a necropolis covering nearly four acres. The Italian government has taken measures to continue the excavations on a large scale, and has already discovered a monument erected in honor of Pompey after his victory over the pirates. The town is the ancient Sipontium, of which Strabo and Livy speak, and which was buried by an earthquake.

The American Bible-revision committee report that the Old Testament company have nearly finished their first revision of Jeremiah, and will next take up Ezekiel. They had previously revised the Pentateuch, Psalms and Isaiah. The New Testament company have reached the eleventh chapter of the second epistle to the Corinthians. The gospel, Acts, and two-thirds of the epistles have also had a first revision. The American committee are but little behind their co-operating revisers in England.

Miss Cook, a teacher in Missouri, lectured her class of girls on the evils of tight lacing, and gave them a lesson in anatomy and physiology. The girls, at home repeated portions of the lecture to their mothers, who decided that it was improper, and forthwith combined against the teacher, and did not rest until she was dismissed from school. Miss Cook has brought suit for damages against the directors.

Dr. Angus, Baptist, and one of the Bible Revision Committee, preaching in Glasgow recently, censured those who are not without anxiety as to the changes that may be made. He said that, when the work was done, they would find the same Testament they had been using from childhood, though there had been many changes. Chapter after chapter would be read without their observing the changes, unless by comparison. They would have substantially the same text, and the same translation.

The Milwaukee Common Council recently adopted a resolution protesting against public Bible-reading or prayer or hymns in the State University and normal schools, and also instructed the representatives of Milwaukee to present this protest to the Legislature. Vigorous counter-protests have followed from many quarters.

JUDGE Westbrook, at Utica, New York, the other day charged the grand jury, that lottery is a lottery whether conducted at a church fair or some other place, and lotteries are prohibited by law. This is unhappy news at a season of the year when church fairs are doing a reasonably good business.

BOOKS, PAMPHLETS, ETC.,

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

Fengilly's Guide to Christian Baptism. — Price 50 cents.

Quinter and Snyder's Debate on Immersion. — Price, 75 cents.

Cruden's Concordance to the Bible. — Best edition, Imperial 8vo, Cloth, $2.75. Library Sheep, $3.50.

History of Palestine, or The Holy Land, By M. Russell, LL. D. Engravings, 18 nos., Cloth, 75 cents.

Christian Baptism.—With its Antecedents and Consequences. By Alexander Campbell. Cloth, $1.25.

Ancient and Modern Egypt. — View of Ancient and Modern Egypt. By M. Russell, LL. D. Engravings, 18 nos., Cloth, 75 cents.

Mead's Theological Works, or a Vindication of Primitive Christianity. By Elder Peter Mead. Bound in cloth; 472 pages. Price, $1.25.

Christianity Utterly Incompatible with War. Being one of Twenty Reasons, for a change in my church relations. By J. W. Stein. Price, 25 cents; 25 copies, $5.00.

Family Rules and Regulations. — By J. W. Stein. Beautifully printed in three colors on good card board. Is intended for framing, and should be in every family. Price 20 cents.

Voice of the Seven Thunders; Or, Lectures on the Book of Revelations. By J. L. Martin. Among modern books this is really a curiosity. You can't help but understand it. $1.50.

Passover and Lord's Supper.—By J. W. Berr. An able work of great merit and should be in the hands of every person, who wishes to thoroughly understand this subject. Bound in good cloth; 258 pages. Price, 75 cents.

Buck's Theological Dictionary.—Containing Definitions of all religious terms; a comprehensive view of every article in the system of Divinity; account of all the principal denominations; and an accurate statement of the most remarkable transactions and events recorded in ecclesiastical history. 8vo., Sheep, $2.50.

The Pillar of Fire; or, Israel in Bondage.—Being an account of the Wonderful Signs in the Life of the Son of Pharaoh's Daughter (Moses). Together with Picturesque Sketches of the Hebrews under their Task-masters. By Rev. J. H. Ingraham, LL. D., author of "The Prince of the House of David." Large 12mo, Cloth, $2.00.

Trine Immersion Traced to the Apostles.—Being a collection of historical quotations from modern and ancient authors, proving that a threefold immersion was the only method of baptizing ever practiced by the apostles and their immediate successors. By J. H. Moore. 64 pages. Price, 25 cents; five copies, $1.00; ten copies, $2.00.

The Last Supper.—A beautiful, colored picture, showing Jesus and his disciples at the table, with the supper spread before them; He has just announced that one of them should betray him. Each of the twelve present is pointed out by name in the margin of the picture. Price, one copy, 15 cents; 2 copies, 25 cents; 10 copies $1.00.

The "One Faith," Vindicated.—By M. M. Eshelman. 40 pages, price, 15 cents; 8 copies, $1.00. Advocates and "cravestly commends for the faith once delivered to the saints."

A Sermon on Baptism.—Delivered by Bro. S. H. Bashor in the Elk Lick Congregation, Somerset county, Pa. A neatly printed pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 20 cents.

One Baptism.—A dialogue showing that trine immersion is the only ground of union, that can be conscientiously occupied by the leading denominations at Christendom. By J. H. Moore. One copy, 15 cents; 10 copies, $1.00; 25 copies, $2.00.

True Evangelical Obedience. Its nature and necessity, as taught and practiced among the Brethren or German Baptists. By J. W. Stein, being one of his twenty reasons for a change in church relations. This is an excellent work, and should be circulated by the thousands all over the country. Price, 20 cents; 7 copies, $1.00; 15 copies $2.00.

The Doctrine of the Brethren Defended.—This a work of over 400 pages, lately published in defense of the faith and practice of the Brethren on the following points: The Divinity of Christ and the Holy Spirit, Immersion vs. Affusion, Trine Immersion, Feet-washing, the Holy Kiss, Non-conformity of Pharisees or Jews, and Anti-Secularism. The work is complete, and is so arranged that the arguments on each subject may be easily found and understood. It should have a wide circulation, both among members and the world. The work is printed in large, plain type, is neatly bound in cloth, and sells at the low price of $1.00 per copy by mail. When ordered by the dozen a reduction of 10 per cent and the express charges will be made. The work may be had at this office or from the author, R. H. Miller, Logansport, Ind.

Certificate of Membership in Book Form.—They are neatly printed on good paper, ready to fill out, with duplicate attached and all well bound together in neat book form, somewhat after the style of blank note books. One of these books should be in the hands of each congregation; then, when a member calls for a certificate one of these can be filled out, signed by the officers, cut off from the duplicate and handed to the member. The duplicate has next, in substance, what is in the certificate, thus remaining in the book, thus enabling each congregation to keep a record of this part of her business. We put up two sizes of books. No. 1, containing one hundred certificates, price 75 cents; No. 2, containing fifty certificates, price, 50 cents. Those wanting books, containing two hundred certificates, can obtain them for $1.25.

Reason and Revelation.—By R. Milligan. This work should not only be read, but carefully studied by every minister in the brotherhood. $2.50.

Student's New Testament History.—With an Introduction, connecting the History of the old and New Testament. Edited by Wm. Smith, LL. D. With maps and wood-cuts. Large 12mo, Cloth, $2.00.

Philosophy of the Plan of Salvation.—12mo. By J. B. Walker. This is a work of uncommon merit, clear, instructive, and should be in the hands of all Bible students. Cloth, $1.50.

Why I left the Baptist Church.—By J. W. Stein. A tract of 10 pages and intended for an extensive circulation among the Baptist people. Price, 2 copies, 10 cents; 5 copies 25 cents; 100 copies $5.00.

The Perfect Plan of Salvation, or Safe Ground. By J. H. Moore. Showing that the position occupied by the Brethren, is infallibly safe. Price 1 copy, 15 cents; 2 copies, 25 cents; 10 copies, $1.00.

A Treatise on Trine Immersion.—Proving from the New Testament, and the Established Rules and Principles of Language, that Baptism by Trine Immersion is the only valid Baptism.—Consisting of a Grammatical Analysis of the Commission, and Analogy of the Commission and other passages, and miscellaneous proofs. By Lewis W. Trotter. Put up in a neat pamphlet form, and will be sent post paid for 15 cts., or two copies 25 cts.

Historical Chart of Baptism.—This Chart exhibits the years of the birth and death of the Ancient Fathers who have written on the action in baptism—the length of their lives, who of them lived at the same period, and shows how easy it was for them to transmit, to each succeeding generation, a correct understanding of the Apostolic method of baptizing. By J. H. Moore. Price, 25 cents.

The Origin of Single Immersion.—Showing that single immersion was invented by Lamonius and as a practice, cannot be traced beyond the middle of the fourth century. By Elder James Quinter. It is a tract of sixteen pages and the Brethren should take an active part in giving it an extensive circulation. Price, 2 copies, 10 cents; 5 copies, 25 cents; 30 copies $1.00.

Truth Triumphant. In six numbers of four pages each. Baptism, Grace and Truth, Feet-washing, Both-erly Kindness, Non-resistance, Non-Essentialism Measured, and Found not Short. Price 1 cent each, or 30 cents per hundred.

The Throne of David.—From the consecration of the Shepherd of Bethlehem to the rebellion of prince Absalom. By the Rev. J. R. Ingraham, LL. D., author of "The Prince of the House of David," and the "Pillar of Fire." With five splendid illustrations. Large 12mo, Cloth, $2.00.

Campbell Weighed in the Balance, and Found Wanting.—A written sermon in reply to Elder C. — By J. H. Moore. It is a well printed tract of sixteen pages. Should be circulated by the hundreds in almost every locality. Price, 2 copies, 10 cents; 5 copies, 25 cents; 25 copies $1.00; 100 copies, $3.50.

Sabbatism.—By M. M. Eshelman. 16 pages, price 10 cents; 15 copies $1.00. Treats the Sabbath question, briefly showing that the observance of the seventh-day Sabbath passed away with all other Jewish days, and that the "first day of the week," is the preferred day for Christians to assemble in worship.

Eusebius' Ecclesiastical History.—This author lived in the fourth century, had a thorough knowledge of the History of the church, and his writings are therefore of considerable value to the student of Ancient History. 8vo, Cloth, 2.50.

Campbell and Owen Debate.—Containing an examination of the Social System, and all the systems of Skepticism, ancient and modern. Complete in one volume. This will always remain a leading work on the evidences of Christianity. $1.75.

Brethren's Envelopes.—Prepared especially for the use of our people. They contain, neatly printed on the back, a complete summary of our position as a religious body. Price 15 cts. per package—25 in a package—or 50 cts. per hundred.

Brethren's Hymn Books. 1 copy Turkey Morocco, post-paid, $1.00; per dozen, post-paid, $11.00; per dozen by express, $10.00. 1 copy Amherst or Sheep, post-paid, 75 cents; per dozen, post-paid, $8.25; per dozen by express, $7.25. When ordering hymn books sent by express, it is expected that the purchaser will pay the express charges at the office where the books are received.

Biblical Antiquities.—By Dr. John Nevin. We know no work, intended to enlighten the reader on Bible customs, etc., that we can recommend to all Bible readers more cheerfully than this volume. It should be in every library. 12mo, Cloth, 1.50.

Union Bible Dictionary.—A Bible Dictionary giving an accurate account and description of every place, as well as a history of all persons and places mentioned in the Bible. It will be found particularly useful to all Bible students.—100 pages, with maps and numerous illustrations. Cloth, $1.50.

The Holy Land.—This is the name of a beautiful lithographic map, giving a complete Bird's Eye view of the Holy Land, and enabling the observer, at a glance to behold all the cities, towns, rivers, brooks, lakes, valleys and mountains. In short, it is a perfect picture of the whole country from Damascus to the desert of Gaza. It is the most complete thing of the kind we ever saw. By a few hours' careful study the different places mentioned in the Bible about Palestine, may be firmly fixed in the mind, making the reader as familiar with the location of these different places, as the county in which he lives; thus aiding him in understanding the Bible. Those who find there was not water enough in Palestine to number of people should carefully study this map. It is printed in beautiful colors, suspended on rollers ready for hanging, is 27 by 35 inches in size, and will be sent by express for $1.50.

Any of the above works sent post-paid on receipt of the unexpressed price. Address:

MOORE, BASHOR & ESHELMAN, LANARKE, Carroll Co., Ill.

W. U. R. R. Time Table.

Day passenger train going east leaves Lanark at 12:25 P. M., and arrives in Racine at 6:15 P. M.

Day passenger train going west leaves Lanark at 2:11 P. M., and arrives at Rock Island at 5:50 P. M.

Night passenger train, going east and west, meet and leave Lanark at 2:18 A. M., arriving in Racine at 9:00 A. M., and at Rock Island at 6:00 A. M.

Freight and Accommodation Trains will run west at 12:40 A. M., 10:50 A. M., and east at 12:10 A. M., and 1:45 P. M.

Tickets are sold for above trains only. Passenger trains make close connection at Western Union Junction.

G. A. SMITH, Agent.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK.

"Behold I Bring You Good Tidings of Great Joy, which Shall be unto All People." — LUKE 2: 10.

Vol. III.

Lanark, Ill., March 7, 1878.

No. 10.

The Brethren at Work.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY

—BY—

J. H. Moore, S. H. Bashor, M. M. Eshelman.

—:O:—

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

| | | |
|-----------------|-----|-----------------|
| R. H. MILLER, | --- | LADOGA, IND. |
| J. W. STEIN, | --- | NEWTONIA, MO. |
| D. VANMAN, | --- | VIRDEX, ILL. |
| D. B. MENTZER, | --- | WAYNESBORO, PA. |
| MATTIE A. LEAR, | --- | URBANA, ILL. |

OUR SISTER IS GONE.

BY LYMAN EBY.

ONE dear sister has left us,
To receive her blest reward,
To be with her blessed Savior,
And the angels of the Lord.

She was patient in affliction,
But the Lord her help was near,
Pouring oil of consolation
And in speaking words of cheer.

She was dear and kind toward us,
Helping us with heart-felt glee;
But in heaven she now rejoices,
Singing songs of jubilee.

Her dear sisters left behind her,
Mourn her loss with heart-felt grief,
But in Jesus our dear Savior,
They do trust with strong belief.

Her dear brothers now heart-broken,
Are bereft of one they loved,
For she was to them a token,
Of the love which she adored.

We no more can bow together,
Round the altar here below;
For thou art removed up higher,
Up where heavenly anthems flow.

But in faith we can look forward,
To the time when we shall meet;
Before Jehovah's unsheathed sword,
At the throne, the mercy-seat.

Where we then can join in singing,
Songs of joy and songs of praise;
With the saints of heaven joining,
In the chorus and the lays.

Lanark, Ill.

I, YET NOT I.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

To Elder D. P. Saylor:—

GRACE and peace be multiplied. I am too weak to write, and in constant suffering, not violent as sometimes, but a kind of dumb agony that gnaws at the rootlets of life. All day something is whispering deep down in my soul, write to Brother Saylor. Yesterday two angels entered my hermitage, in the persons of dear brethren Trostle, of Langanore, and George Bucher, of Cornwall. Trostle tendered me the greeting you committed to him, which I lovingly accept. I perceive by your contributions that you still write with the energy of twenty years ago. I am glad it is so. You seem to carry the heart of youth under your heavy locks. A young old man in the best sense, is a blessed demonstration of the rejuvenating, sustaining power of the Holy Spirit. The supremacy of Jesus in us prolongs, freshens, sweetens life. The wisdom of experience gathered from a long life devoted to the interests of the soul and the glory of God, is most valuable, and when scattered like leaves from the Tree of Life through our papers, is an inestimable God-send to the Church. If we have dove's eyes, such eyes as the Holy Ghost alone can give, we cannot fail to discover that many of the leaves which are offered for the heading of the nations, are plucked from the Tree of knowledge of good and evil. It requires a wonderful unswerving of the soul in God to gain such acquaintance with self as to make it a facile vehicle of His Holy Spirit.

This is the urgent and solemn lesson for us all to learn. Preaching, praying, writing, conversing, are often so heavily charged with self, that to a Spirit-taught soul it is sickening. "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father," is in many instances so lost in signs and symbols, and so overlaid by the tangible and natural, that "the powers of the world to come" are missed in the commanding, eloquent outgushing of a richly gifted carnalism. To be born of God, and grow up in Him, taking our childhood into our manhood, is indeed a glorious attainment, and rare as glorious. To live Christ, to speak as "the oracles of God," to write as "of the abundance that God giveth," to wait ever at "the gate of Righteousness" for the communication of the Divine Mind, to keep the moon beneath our feet, and the sun as our vesture—O this is a work which in very deed requires the indwelling of the Holy Trinity, the inweaving of the very life of God with our life, the blending of the Holy Spirit with our spirit, the origination of all the soul's activities under the Divinely natural influence of a veritable incarnation of the All-Holy.

What shall I write, what shall I speak, how shall I give the most force to my arguments, the most loftiness and originality to my ideas, often engage mind and heart more intensely than the far more solemn and practical question: What am I? How am I related to God? How deeply and really are the expressions of my life the unfoldings of the indwelling Christ? (Gal. 2: 20), is the only fundamental qualification for the ministry of the Word of God, whether with tongue or pen, because it is the one central condition of Divine illumination and power. "The end of all things is at hand," the seventh angel is preparing to put the trumpet to his lips for the final peal, and all things in and out of the church call upon us for the most thorough, soul-investigating scrutiny of the real character of Christianity, the cardinal terms of salvation, and our own personal relation to Almighty God. O Brother Saylor, let your sanctified wisdom, your Spirit-impelled pen, break forth mightily in your closing ministry in behalf of the higher themes of the Gospel, and the deeper necessities of our nature. The Brotherhood is as impregnable a bulwark of the sacramental side of Christianity, as were the Jews of the ancient dispensation. But have not we, like they, to an alarming extent overlooked and denied the deep cementing bond that constitutes our saving fellowship with God, in the attention we bestow on "the outside of the cup and of the platter"? This tendency is an invariable accompaniment of all religion, and how easily is it developed into a fixed, ruling, soul-destroying idolatry. I know that your Christ-loving heart has often bled over the sad evidences of a form of godliness covering up, as with a fig leaf apron, a hypocrisy which denies that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh.

Blessed be the Most High, there are yet many in Zion who are in very truth the children of God, who have been crucified with Christ, who "know Him and the power of His resurrection" to whom the outward is nothing save as it is the sincere expression of the life of Him to whose presence it owes its validity. To fill the symbols of grace with the life of their Author is to put them to Christian service, and make them both exhibitions and channels of salvation. "In us to LIVE IS CHRIST." This only is redemption. All else is deception, hypocrisy, and perdition. O the grandeur and glory of a true life—a reproduction in human mould of the life of God! O how prone is every soul to live in itself. A self-centered, self-reposing, self-governed soul is lost, lost. "Our life is hid with Christ in God." "CHRIST IS OUR LIFE." These are the God-born. These are joint-heirs with the Only-begotten.

WATCHING JESUS.

BY D. B. MENTZER.

THE WORLD WATCHING.

NO passage from the writings of the evangelists is so full of mingled interest to the believer as that recording the arrest, mock-trial and crucifixion of Jesus of Nazareth, our Adorable Redeemer. It is not my purpose to describe this wonderful series of events happening within a night and a day, for I should fail to be satisfied with my insignificant effort.

But come with me, dear and dying reader, let us go near, and look upon the scene and gather some lessons for our profit and pleasure in Christ.

It is a hill on the north-east side of Jerusalem, and a place specially appropriated to the crucifixion of malefactors, or transgressors of the civil laws of that immediate country. Matthew, Mark and John call it Golgotha, but Luke writing about twenty-five years after Matthew, calls it Calvary. Both words mean the same thing—"The place of a skull"—in two different languages. The idea is, the place where criminals are put to death.

Here sin was made to appear in its most hideous form, for nothing could be more so than the lingering death of the crucifixion, bringing upon the victims the most painful and shameful death. Here death gained its victory in the most cruel way possible. Here man was degraded to the uttermost degree, and in that condition severed forever from this life.

To this desecrated spot was brought the Lamb of God, our Savior, to be crucified. Here the "Good Shepherd" was brought to lay down His life for His sheep—His lost sheep. Here is the place we see Jesus saving His people from their sins by the offering up of Himself, the Only Sacrifice to the insulted and barred Heavens. Grand and glorious "suffering and death!" But O the pain, the agony! Three hours of unutterable anguish!! My heart sinks within me. Our nature pities and sorrows, but our spirits leap for the joy of salvation. So we watch and are comforted. But the world is watching too. Jesus is crucified and enduring the death agonies. The Roman soldiers are watching. They put the vinegar and gall to His innocent lips. They took charge of His outer garment, and cast their lots or votes for the soldier whose it should be; then "sitting down, then watched Him there." O the sight to them! Never did they see such a striking object. Many were here executed but all were criminals. No one professed what Jesus did. He taught that He was the Messiah, the Son of God, the Savior of the world. So correct was His deportment in life that even Pilate, His judge was made to say, "I find in Him no fault at all." He did justice, loved mercy, and walked humbly. Condemned though acknowledged guiltless; delivered to a base people to die a cruel and ignominious death, and yet pronounced innocent. How singular this conduct! He pities His foes. He prays for His murderers. He comforts the mourners. He was greatly misrepresented. Few took of Him a right view of His character, or speak of Him as He truly deserved. But such is the world's reproach of Jesus and His true disciples, then and now. Wherever the worldly spirit is found it sits down on the stool of depravity and watches for advantages.

THE CHRISTIAN WATCHING.

The more our eyes are anointed with the eye-salve of Heaven (Rev. 3: 18), the more we love to watch Jesus, "The King in His beauty." Nothing is more precious than the Story of redeeming grace. Our feeble sight traces the lines of the inspired Word of God, and it becomes a mirror of wonder and delight.

Let me illustrate: say you stand on the bank of a pure stream of water on a clear day when the sun shines in its splendor. You look down into the water, and you think you see the sun down there in its beauty and brightness. It is only a reflection. So it is with the written Word. We look into it and we think we see Jesus, but it is only His beautiful, wonderful reflection. Yet, a little while, my faithful brethren, sisters, and we shall look up into "the Heaven of Heavens" and "see Him as He is." If so beautiful, and lovely, and interesting now, what must it be when we shall behold Him on His White Throne, and surrounded by all the hosts of His Heavenly Kingdom!

But let us commune together of His relations to our present life that we may prepare and be in waiting for "His glorious appearing." May the memory of His life and death be so impressed upon the tablets of our hearts that we may carefully go through life and society as "living epistles, known and read of all men." Should we be so wise and fortunate as to attain to this, we will doubtless see and feel the propriety of non-conformity to the world in our doctrinal views, our personal dress, conduct, indulgence and association. In any of these things we may be condemned with the wicked. If then we are not to be conformed to the world, let us by any means be conformed to the church, for also shall we be conformed to Christ the Head, as well as to the Church His Body. These self-denials will bring us away from the world, so that Christ, and Christ only, will have our eyes, and ears, and hands, and feet; yea, we will "glorify Him in our body and spirit which are His." Then shall we watch Jesus and follow Him wherever He leads, through prosperity and adversity, through joy and sorrow, through health and affliction. The soldiers of the world watched the expiring Savior that no one should come to Him and take Him away. Not so with the soldier of the Church. (I compare the Church and the world). The Christian soldier watches Jesus that He may learn of Him, imitate Him, and partake of His Divine Nature. Again, he sits at Jesus' feet and watches, not to guard Him as the Roman soldiers did, but that men may really come to Him and take Him with them into life, and "live godly in Christ Jesus." Every view of Him is wonderful. Every trait of character is full of interest. Every word has a meaning to invite us heavenward. O to watch Him, and love Him, and know Him in all He suffered for me! O for His grace more and more to follow Him whenever it goes ill or well. Soon He will come to gather the faithful to His Palace above. Let us be faithful.

THE FORCE OF BREVITY.

BE brief. Come to the point. Begin very near where you intend to leave off. Brevity is the soul's wisdom as well as wit. Without it you can seldom obtain currency. Only the gems of literature are treasured up and quoted; and gems are not reckoned by gross weight.

How compact all that comes down to us from olden times! In how few words we have the commandments and the history of creation—hardly embracing so many words as are now employed to welcome an adderman, or to make a complimentary present of a spoon.

The efficacy and value of compression can scarcely be overrated. The common air we beat aside with our breath, compressed, has the force of gunpowder and will rend the solid rock; so it is with our language. Eloquence will never flourish in a country where the public taste is infantile enough to measure the value of a speech by the hours it occupies.

A gentle stream of persuasiveness may flow through the mind and leave no sediment, let it come at a blow, as a cataract, and it sweeps all before it. It is by this magnificent compression that Cicero confound Catoine, and Demosthenes overwhelms Esclines; by this that Mark Anthony, as Shakespeare makes him speak, carries the heart away with a bad cause—non Bonum.

THE SINNER.

BY JAS. Y. HECKLER.

How terribly wicked the sinner must be,
Carousing in sin and iniquity free!
How vile the ungodly! How wretched in sin,
The man who rejects reformation within.

The pleasures of sin enticed him away
From innocence while he was young and was gay.
To worship the devil until he is old,
His feelings are hard, his affections are cold.

The sinner will lie, and to cheat is not loath,
Blaspheming the name of the Lord with an oath.
He seemeth to challenge the judgment of God,
Nor fears to endure the effects of His rod.

He maddens his brain with the fumes of the bowl,
And sips of the fire to poison his soul;
Profanity follows; nor distant in time,
We see that his hands are polluted with crime.

Now selfishness reigns in the whole of his heart;
He cannot repent, nor from evil depart.
The lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eye,
And the pride of his life, his repentance defy.

He scorns to repent, for he sees not his sin;
Perceives not his moral corruption within,
Nor reads in his Bible the law of the Lord,
Or reads it, blindfolded, to reap his reward.

Before him are rolling the flames of despair;
And blindly he saunters away to get there;
Behind him is brandished a great flaming sword;
Retreat there is none from the wrath of the Lord.

O, could he awake from the sleep of his sin,
And see his corrupted condition within,
Methinks, it would give him a sensitive shock,
And cause him to hide in the cleft of the Rock.

Surrender, surrender: 'tis all that you can do;
The best for your life which you never will rue;
Accept the Redeemer embraces his good word,
And try to obey the commands of the Lord.

The Cherubim stand in the presence of God;
They do His behests when they smite with His rod,
But sinners in darkness and error will grope,
Like groveling creatures without any hope.

Though sinners by thousands are moral and kind,
And fair to each other; in Scripture not blind;
And yet they neglect or refuse to repent,
Rejecting the message Jehovah hath sent.

But what will their kindness and fairness avail,
If faith and obedience be lacking or fail?
They all will be doomed to the flames of despair,
To dwell, in eternity, eternally there.

THE SEVENTH DAY.

BY R. H. MILLER.

ARE we under obligation to keep the seventh day a sabbath unto the Lord? This is an important question, and unsettled in the minds of some good people, and settled wrong in the minds of others.

In order to determine this question correctly, it is necessary to know what the law on that subject was, by whom it was given, whom it was given to, and what it was given for. When we have learned all these things concerning the seventh day, we may know whether it is to be kept under the Christian dispensation. All these questions are settled in the 16th chapter of Exodus, where the seventh day is for the first time given as a law. Then it was given to Israel, and bound upon them alone. In the 25th and 26th verses, God, by Moses, commands Israel to gather manna six days, but on the seventh day their should be none. Then he says in the 29th verse, "See, for that the Lord has given you the Sabbath; therefore He giveth you on the sixth day the bread of two days. Abide ye every man in his place. Let no man go out of his place on the seventh day." 30th verse, "So the people rested on the seventh day."

These Scriptures show what the law of the Sabbath was, and how it was to be kept when first given to Israel. They were not to go out of their houses, or tents, on that day. Surely such a law is not binding upon us in this age; it only could apply to Israel under their peculiar circumstances at the time it was given. We would observe, too, that this command was given before the law at Sinai—before the ten commandments were given to Israel, but when they were given, it was included among them. The manner in which it was given at Sinai shows that it had been given before, (Exodus 20: 18): "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." This phrase, "Remember the Sabbath day," shows that it is a renewal of the former command given in the 16th chapter.

Further, concerning the law of the Sabbath given to Israel, (Ex. 35: 2), "Six days shall work be done, but on the seventh day there shall be to you an holy day, a Sabbath of rest unto the Lord; whosoever doeth work therein shall be put to death." 3rd verse "Ye shall kindle no fire throughout your habitations upon the Sabbath day." This law that a man should build no fire on the Sabbath day, surely could not be intended for the whole earth. How could it be kept in the cold regions, where Christianity has spread, in countries covered with ice for months?

Again, in Numbers 15: 32-36, "And while the children of Israel were in the wilderness, they found a man gathering sticks on the Sabbath day, * * * and all the congregation brought him without the camp, and stoned him with stones, and he died; as the Lord commanded Moses." From these Scriptures we learn that this law was a part of a penal code which belong to Israel alone, and could not be incorporated into the church now unless it was changed. But we have not the right to change God's law so as to suit us, and then keep it in our own way. If we were under that law now, no man could build a fire on that day. If he carries a bundle of sticks to build a fire, he must be stoned to death. Would it not be terrible thing now to see a congregation of professed Christians stoning a man to death for gathering sticks on the Sabbath day? Yet that was the law given to Israel, to teach them the awful consequence of violating the commands of God.

Surely this is enough to convince us that the law is not in force now. But the Sabbatarian says, we shall keep it in a different way. Then if we change the manner of keeping it, we must have divine authority for the change. But as we have no divine authority for changing that law of the Sabbath, adapting it to the Christian dispensation, we cannot believe that, that law was ever changed, but taken out of the way and nailed to the cross, as the other carnal ordinances were. We know nothing of any way of keeping the Sabbath, or seventh day, by divine authority, except the way God gave it to Israel; and as none will contend for keeping it in that way, we now have a right to demand of those who ask us to keep it, to give the law teaching it to be kept in a way different from that given to Israel; for we cannot keep it in that way. Then let no man put a yoke upon us which neither we nor our fathers were able to bear. Paul gets this subject before us in its true light, in Eph. 2: 14, 15, "For he is our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us; having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances." This shows that the law which was given to Israel did not survive the death of our Savior; and for that reason is not binding upon us. Paul says again, "We are free from the law, that being dead wherein we were held."

We might rest the whole matter here, and call upon the Sabbatarian to find a law for keeping the seventh day, different from that given to Israel; for until that is done, we are under no obligation to keep it. Not only that, but he must find a law teaching us how it is to be kept under the Gospel; and still further, he must show that keeping the law in a different way from that given to Israel, will be acceptable in the sight of God. Until this is done, (and we are confident it never will be), we are under no obligation to keep the seventh day as a Sabbath.

We would observe further, that the world was more than two thousand years old when this law of the Sabbath was given in Exodus; and since it was taken out the way by the Savior when He died upon the cross, the Sabbatarian must find something as evidence to prove his cause besides the law given to Israel. And in order to do that, he takes this position, that the seventh day was blessed and sanctified before the law was given. From this fact, he argues that the seventh day, or Sabbath, should be kept after the law was taken away. But that kind of reasoning is not sufficient to sustain his cause, where there is no command of God or divine precedent under the Gospel to support it. That course of reasoning, if admitted as an argument, would bring the sacrifices of the patriarchs over into the Gospel church; for they, too, existed long before the law was given and never accepted of God in their worship. In Gen. 4: 4, "And Abel he also brought of the firstlings of his flock, and of the fat thereof. And the Lord had respect unto Abel and to his offering." Here we see that sacrifices were accepted of God from the very beginning—long before the law was given; and when the law was made, these offerings were incorporated into it like the seventh day, and made a part of the law. Now we might argue, like these Sabbatarians, that the sacrificial offerings should continue after the law was taken away and as give the reason that they were accepted of God from the beginning—long before the law was given.

If, then, the seventh day must be kept because it was blessed before the law, and did not depend upon the law for its existence, so the offerings of Abel, which God accepted, must be continued under the Gospel; for they, too, were before the law, and did not depend upon it for existence. Such reasoning, or argument, founded on the existence and acceptance of either the sacrifices or the seventh day because they were sanctified or accepted in the days of the patriarchs, cannot without a plain command of God be made a law in the Christian dispensation. It requires a command and precedent to enjoin either of them upon the Christian, just as much as it required the command and precept to enjoin them upon Israel. The command to Israel does not enjoin them upon us; and the command, if there had been one, to the Patriarchs would not bind either of them upon the Christian, in the absence of Gospel command and precedent. We have a right to demand of the Sabbatarian an example or command, of some one of the inspired men, for the church to keep the seventh day after the Jewish law was abolished. We want them to show one Christian assembly meeting to worship together on the seventh day; then they will have an argument. The apostles met with the Jews and Greeks on the Sabbath, because they there had an opportunity to preach the Gospel to them; but those meetings were not Christian congregations; they were Jewish assemblies, therefore, not a precedent for us. But before we are done, we will find the precedent of the apostles' meeting with Christian congregations on the first day of the week.

We will now return to the second point to be noted, that is, by whom was this law given? We would not notice this point, were it not a fact that the Sabbatarian makes an unwarranted distinction, which leads him into error, when he says, "God gave the decalogue and Moses gave the law," when the truth is clear that God is the author of the whole law; as the apostle says, "Holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." God gave the law through Moses. The error in making a distinction here, as Sabbatarians do, when they say the law of Moses passed away, but left the ten commandments binding upon us, is proved to be a dangerous theorem, by the language of our Savior in Matt. 22: 26-40. A lawyer says to the Savior, "Master, which is the great commandment in the law? Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets."

Here are two commandments, on which all the law and the prophets hang, and neither of the two is in the decalogue. As the ten commandments are a part of the law, and all the law and prophets hang on these two commandments, and they have passed away, according to this error of the Sabbatarian, then, the law and the prophets went with them, and the decalogue must have gone too, for it would have nothing to stand on. As this is the result of his own logic, he has nothing to hang the seventh day upon; and it, too, is gone. We refer to this for the purpose of showing that the Savior condemns the unwarranted distinction they make between the ten commandments and the law given to Moses, when he gives us two commandments which lie at the foundation of the law, yet not in the decalogue.

We will now notice the third point in reference to this law of the Sabbath, that is, To whom was it given? We presume none will deny that this law was given to Israel, and not to the church under the Gospel. All its ceremonies and penalties had reference to Israel alone. The manner of keeping it, prescribed in the law, applied to none but Israel. And that law to Israel did not bind the Christian any more than it did the Patriarch. Then we have several important questions settled in regard to the law: 1. It was given to Israel alone; 2. It was not binding upon the patriarchs, for it was given after their day; 3. It was not given to the Christian, therefore he is not under obligation to keep it; 4. It must have passed away when the Jewish dispensation wound up, for they were the only people to whom it was given. But the Sabbatarian says the seventh day was given to the patriarchs before the law.

We say, too, the sacrifices were given to the patriarchs before the law. Then when their dispensation was wound up and ended, like the Jewish dispensation, its laws ended with it, and are not binding upon the Christian dispensation, unless made so by the command of God and precept of inspired men.

We will now notice the fourth point, that is, the object for which it was given (Gal. 3: 19). "Wherefore then serveth the law? It was added because of transgressions till the seed should come." There we have one reason why the law given—"because of transgression;" and also the length of time it should stand—"till the seed (Christ) should come." In Romans 7: 6, 7, we read, "But now we are delivered from the law, that being dead wherein we were held. * * * Nay, I had not known sin, but by the law: for I had not known lust, except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet." Paul makes three points here worthy of note: 1. The law under which we were held being dead, we are freed from it; 2. In the sixth verse, he declares the law to be dead; 3. In the seventh verse he connects the phrase, "thou shalt not covet," with the law which he tells us is dead; and notice, that is part of the ten commandments, showing again the Sabbatarian to be wrong, when he makes his distinction between the ten commandments and the law, saying one passes away and the other is perpetuated.

When God gave the law of the Sabbath to Israel, he said, (Ex. 16: 4), "And the people shall go out and gather a certain rate every day, that I may prove them, whether they will walk in my law, or no." Here we have the object for which the Sabbath law was given to Israel—"that I may prove them," not to the Christians, or Gentiles, or Patriarchs, for they are to be proved by a different law. It was given to see if Israel would "walk in it or no;" not to see if the Christian, Gentile, or Patriarch would "walk in it or no."

In conclusion, upon this point, we would observe that the law was given to Israel to fence them in—to separate them from other nations—constituting them a peculiar people; making them the depository of God's law until Christ, the promised seed, should come. When Christ came, it was His work to break down "the middle wall of partition between" the Jew and Gentile, "to make in himself of twain one new man"—one new church; not to revise the old law and re-enact it; not to revise or change the old seventh day and re-enact it; but to take it out of the way. The Scriptures do not teach that the Jewish Sabbath is changed to a Christian Sabbath; but that it is taken away and a new one, with a new law, made for the Christian. Then we shall not try to prove that the Jewish Sabbath is changed, but taken away, and kept no more by inspired men after the law was dead.

THE FIRST DAY OF THE WEEK.

We now come to consider the authority of keeping the First day of the week, in the new church, as a sacred and holy day. In this investigation, we do not contend that the Jewish Sabbath, or seventh day, is changed to the Christian Sabbath, or to the first day; but the old one is taken away, and the first day is a new day of rest, given by a new law, in a new church, to be kept in a new way, by another people, where there is neither Jew nor Greek. When we come to the new church, we ask for a command to keep the Jewish Sabbath; but we ask in vain, for there is none given to the new church. We ask for an example of the apostles in the primitive church, keeping the seventh day as a day of meeting together, a day of rest; but we ask in vain, for there is no such example in the Gospel.

Then, as the Christians in the apostles' day must have some set time—some set day—on which to meet as a congregation to worship God, we ask when that day was; on which day of the week did they assemble for that purpose? If they assembled for that purpose, and kept the Jewish Sabbath, then we know the Christian should do so now; but if they assembled on the first day, and kept it as a day of worship, then we are assured, by their example, that the church should follow their divine precedent at this time. To determine this question, we must go to the inspired men—to those who were led by the Holy Spirit.

The first case which has a bearing as evidence on the subject of the first day as a day of peculiar, special, and great importance to the Christian, is predicated on the first that occurred after the Jewish law was taken away. The resurrection of our Savior was on the first day of the week. On that day, while the disciples were assembled together, the Savior met with them, and gave them His blessing, saying, "Peace be with you;" and talked with them, teaching them the truth concerning the resurrection. That first Lord's day was spent in such a manner as to consecrate it in the mind of the first Christians, by their meeting together at one place, and Christ's meeting with them; the teaching on the great subject of the resurrection; the blessing of the Lord there given, as recorded in John 20: 19-22, "Then the same day, at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut, where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus, and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be with you." Here is the first Lord's day, the first Christian assembly, and the Lord Jesus meeting with them after the law is taken away.

Now these same disciples must soon pass a Jewish Sabbath, while the Savior is yet on earth. If they meet on the Jewish Sabbath, to keep it in the worship of God, it will then be good evidence that it should be kept now. Do they? No; they pass the Jewish Sabbath, and say not a word about it. There was no meeting with the Lord on that day, which must have left the first day of the week—the resurrection day—the day when the Lord met with them in their assembly, and blessed them, and breathed on them the Holy Spirit that they might understand the Scriptures—impressed deeply upon their minds and hearts. The resurrection, the meeting of the disciples, the presence of the Lord, His blessing and teaching consecrated it in their hearts in such a manner that they, by the Spirit, have given it to us as set apart for Christians to meet and worship God; and it was continued in the church as a meeting day, during the apostolic age, as we shall hereafter prove.

The second case of evidence is in John 20: 26, couched in the following language: "And after eight days, again His disciples were within, and Thomas with them. Then came Jesus, the door being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, Peace be unto you." Here it is most likely the phrase "after eight days" alluded to the same day of the week on which they had met before, for the apostle says, "And again His disciples were within," and adds, "the door being shut." And Jesus again meets with them, and blesses them, showing the same kind of a meeting, on a stated time. As the time included by both meetings would be eight days, it seems the apostles had the first day as a stated time to meet. One thing is evident in regard to these meetings, that is, neither of them was on the Jewish Sabbath; for they pass over that period without making any reference to it whatever. The question then is settled, that when the disciples met on the first day for the worship of God, and pass the seventh without such meeting, or in any way keeping it, they are accepted of Him; for when they did so, Jesus met with them and blessed them.

The third case which has a bearing on the subject is in Acts 2: 1, reading as follows: "And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place." Here is another example of the disciples being assembled together on the first day of the week. Pentecost being fifty days after the Passover Sabbath, it hardly leaves room for doubt that this Pentecost was just seven weeks from the resurrection of our Lord. Then it was that the Holy Spirit descended upon them, marking the first day of the week in their minds, with still more of the important wonders of the new dispensation. All the great miracles of the Christian religion being wrought on the first day of the week—the resurrection, the baptism of the Holy Spirit—shows that day as a proper time to commemorate, in solemn worship, the great work of man's redemption. The seventh day to the Jew did commemorate the creation of the world; but these solemn meetings of the disciples, when Jesus met with them and these greatest events ever witnessed by man, do fitly commemorate the new creation in Christ Jesus, when he "had captivity captive and gave gifts unto men;" when he was declared to be the Son of God with power by the resurrection from the dead. These three witnesses—the apostles three times assembling together on the first day and the Lord blessing them on that day—stand up in the church as sacred examples, ever commemorating the resurrection of our Lord, and giving us assurance of divine approbation, when we after their example, meet on the first day of the week to wait upon the Lord; while our meetings like theirs, keep in memory the wonders of His resurrection. Then since the Lord blessed the disciples in three meetings within fifty days after the resurrection, and all these meetings were on the first day of the week, and in that period there was no resting on the seventh day—no mention of keeping it in any manner—these facts make the way of the Christian so plain, clear, and safe, that we need not hesitate a moment on this subject. But we have more evidence than this.

The fourth case as evidence is in Acts 20: 7, where we read: "And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread." Here is important evidence on this subject. The apostles came to Troas, and abode seven days. Then they must have passed over the Jewish Sabbath again as though there had been no such thing known among them; for they say nothing about it; but when came to the first day of the week, then they came together as the Lord's people, in the Lord's name. Now if we follow the example of the apostle and the church at Troas, we must have the first day set apart for the worship of God. And this is another example of importance, because it is by the apostolic church and the apostle led by the Spirit of Truth.

The fifth case of evidence is in 1 Cor. 16: 2, where Paul says, "Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store, as God has prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." Notice this passage closely. The apostle does not tell them to come together on the first day of the week, but he commands them to do a certain work of charity on that day; and the way he commands it, shows conclusively that they were in the habit of assembling on that day. He says, "That there be no gathering when I come;"

and the contribution made in the assembly, is the only way that could prevent the gathering when he came. If they had not kept the first day of the week, and assembled on that day, how could these directions make anything ready against the time of his coming. There is no fact more clear than this. If we would write to a church in the habit of meeting on the first day of the week, that we wished them to do something on that day, we would use just such language as Paul did; but we cannot see how writing in that manner to a church which kept Jewish time could prevent the gathering. That would be telling them to lay by their contribution the day after their meeting; and how that could save gathering when Paul came, is something that cannot be explained; therefore we believe it is not true.

The sixth evidence is in Rev. 1: 10, John says, "I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day." Here is a day distinguished from the Jewish Sabbath; because the Jewish Sabbath is not called the Lord's day. This phrase, and this day, are peculiarly Gospel in their appointment and importance. And what other day could be so well called the Lord's day as that of His resurrection? for that day in the Christian Scriptures is potent with great events, the most sacred and holy, and must ever be consecrated in the heart of the new church, built on the death, burial, and resurrection of our adorable Redeemer, as its great essential truths.

HISTORICAL EVIDENCE.

We will give another class of evidence before we close our arguments in favor of the first day. This becomes necessary, because some have said, that the first day was established as a day of worship by the authority of Constantine. But this is a great mistake, as we will show. Long before the time of Constantine, Ignatius, who was made bishop of Antioch about the year A. D. 70, a part of his life being contemporary with the the apostles, was sent by the Emperor Trajan to Rome, in the year A. D. 107, a captive for his faith as a Christian, to be devoured by wild beasts. He received his sentence with joy, exclaiming, "I thank thee, O Lord, that thou hast condescended to honor me with thy love, and has thought me worthy, with thy apostle Paul, to be bound in iron chains." On his way to Rome, he wrote from Smyrna to the church at Magnesia in these words, "Wherefore, if they who were brought up in these ancient laws came nevertheless to newness of hope, no longer observing Sabbaths, but keeping the Lord's day, in which our life is sprung up by Him, and through His death, whom yet some deny." He further says, "It is absurd to name Jesus Christ and to Judaize; for the Christian religion did not embrace the Jewish, but the Jewish, the Christian, that so every tongue that believeth might be gathered together in God." Epis. to Mag. chapter 2. How similar this to the language of Paul, (Col. 2: 16), "Let no man therefore judge you in meat or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath day."

We would observe further that Pliny, Justin Martyr, Tertullian, Irenaeus, Origen, and the learned Bengel, all unite to prove that the first day of the week was kept instead of the Jewish Sabbath, from the time of the apostles. There is no fact in the Christian religion that can be traced back to the apostles with more certainty than that of keeping the Lord's day as consecrated to public worship. And the Lord's day was kept from the very first in contradistinction from the Jewish Sabbath.

OBJECTIONS ANSWERED.

We will now speak of some objections that are brought against the first day, then we are done for the present.

We will first note that the Sabbatarian demands of us to prove that the seventh day has been repealed or changed. No need of proving that it has been repealed, until it is first proved to be a law given to the church. We deny its being a law given to the church, but that has passed away with the law. Then it is evident that we need not, and could not, prove the repeal of a law until the law is proved to exist. So far as the Jewish church is concerned, we can easily prove the law to have existed, and just as easily can we prove the death of the law, and the end of the church; but so far as the Christian is concerned, it is not, and cannot be proved a law, therefore we could not prove the repeal of a law that did not exist. So far as the Patriarchs are concerned, it might have been a law to them, like the sacrifices of that age; it might even constitute a part of their religion.

The Brethren at Work.
PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE,
S. H. BASHOR,
M. M. ESHELMAN, } EDITORS.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent post-paid, to any address in the United States or Canada, for $1.50 per annum. Those sending ten names and $16.00, will receive an extra copy free of charge. For all over this number the agent will be allowed 10 cents for each additional name, which amount can be deducted from the money, before sending it to us. Money Orders, Drafts, and Registered Letters may be sent at our risk. — Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE, BASHOR & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL. MARCH 7, 1879.

Over 1,200 citizens of New Haven, Conn., have signed a petition, asking the board of education to reconsider their vote, excluding the Bible from the public schools.

EXPERIMENTS have lately been made with electricity to light up synagogues and streets. The light is not only much better, but a great deal cheaper. Some cities talk of trying it.

THERE is no lack of work for those who wish to do something personally, to extend the Gospel. If the holy will unitedly engage in the great work, they can accomplish an untold amount of good.

PRINTERS, having No. 1 of Vol. I of the BRETHREN AT WORK and do not wish to preserve it, will confer a favor by forwarding to this office. We would like to have several copies.

BRO. J. S. Flory has changed his address from Greeley, Colo., to Longmont, Colorado. The change is made in order to locate in the midst of the members in Boulder Co., and also to facilitate his business.

BRO. Bashor closed his labors in Eagle Creek church, O., the 27th ult. The immediate result of his labors were ten additions by baptism and one more applicant. Among the number received into fellowship was a Methodist preacher.

A young brother writes: "Some days ago Bro. — sent his little son to my hermitage with a basket of provisions." This is the kind of praying that makes the heart rejoice and God will bless all such for their acts of kindness. — Remember the poor and do them good.

By request it is re-announced that the District Meeting of Northern Indiana, will be held in the English Prairie congregation, May 9, 1878, commencing at 9 o'clock. Those coming from the South will stop at La Grange Center, and those from the North at Lima, where they will be met by the brethren.

ALL our readers are anxious to know something about the Stein and Ray debate, and we are going to do our best to accommodate them. Remember that the paper will be sent from the beginning of the debate to the end of the present year for $1.20. Now let each of our present subscribers endeavor to send us at least one new subscriber.

BRO. D. B. Gibson of Perrin, Mo., says: "The more I read your paper, the better I like it. — Your "Saturday Night" in last number, is a gem, and I am glad that there is one preacher that has the humble boldness to speak it right out, and appeal direct to the hearts of the brotherhood. Go on in the way you have begun, and the Lord will bless you."

ON a Sabbath, while at church with her mother, a little girl, about five years old, heard the preacher praying very loud. Turning to her mother, and beckoning the maternal ear to a speaking distance, she whispered: "Mother, don't you think, that if he lived nearer to God, he wouldn't have to talk so loud?" Such a question is worth a volume of eloquence in prayer.

SUSAN W. Denton of Sulphur Springs, Texas, though not a member, speaks very highly of the paper, pamphlets and tracts, the members have been sending her. She says: "I am a Baptist, but esteem your church very highly, as I learn its tenets from the literature which has been kindly sent me for distribution. I have given it out to my neighbors and sent it off by mail and other ways to parties at a distance, and almost every one seems to be well pleased with it."

A MINISTER who knows how to gladden poor hearts writes thus: "Please find enclosed two dollars (half the amount recently received for a little matter of my service, the other half sent to the P. C.) towards sending the papers to brethren who are unable to pay for them." "Go thou and do likewise" on the part of many others, might result in great good to those who hunger and thirst after righteousness.

ON another page will be found an able article on the Sabbath question from the pen of Bro. R. H. Miller. It was published in the Primitive Christian some years ago, but as many of our readers need some assistance on this subject, we give them the article entire, trusting that from it they will be able to glean something of great worth in defending the doctrine of the Brethren.

CARDS are in circulation containing the following which persons sign as a pledge:

"I, the undersigned, do pledge my word and honor, God helping me, to abstain from the use of profane language, and that I will by all honorable means, encourage others to abstain."

This is a good thing among those not professors, but evidently not needed among Christians, for they have already signed a pledge which reads, "Swear not at all."

IN writing to this office, please be kind enough to give name, post office, county and State plainly written. We are generally able to read everything in a letter, but the way names are sometimes written, is too bad. There are some people, it would seem, just try how careless they can write their address. This is one reason why so many fail to get what they order—their letters are easily read, but when it comes to deciphering the address, it is terrible. A hint to the wise is sufficient.

A MINISTER being asked why he made his sermons so long, remarked: "I haven't time to make them short." This means more than some people have an idea. It takes work to compress a long sermon into a short space, just like it takes time to analyze and rewrite an article, making it occupy but half its former space. The ability to condense matter is as rare as it is useful. Ministers, instead of studying how to string out their discourses, ought to be cultivating the habit of abridging them.

LIZZIE K. HOWE, formerly from Wadsworth's Grove, Ill., writes from Texas, under date of Feb. 20th as follows: "We are within nine miles of our destination. Although we are in a strange land, we do not feel like 'strangers' at present, as we are stopping with Bro. Wagman. We can hardly realize that we are so far from loved ones; these large and beautiful prairies remind us of Northern Illinois. What a beautiful consolation in the thought that God dwells here as well as elsewhere, and has the same care for His children in this place as where they are more numerous."

THE Ashland (Ohio) Times of Feb. 21 reports a successful meeting by the Brethren in the interest of the Ashland school. We would judge from present indications that their prospects are good, and ere long they will have things on a good working basis. The quiet and steady manner in which they have been working up the enterprise, is quite commendable, and shows what can be done by a careful, steady aim. The Board of Incorporators have already secured the charter of the institution, under the name of "The Ashland College." The election of twenty-one trustees was to have taken place on the 23rd.

THERE is in Constantinople an old church building, erected by Justinian in the year 532, and called St. Sophia. It was the most magnificent building of the age, and was to the old Greek church, what "St. Peter's" is to Rome. For nearly a thousand years it stood as the admiration of the Greek or Eastern church, and then fell into the hands of the Mohammedans and was made by them a mosque. But now since the "king of the North," has marched down and conquered Turkey, it is supposed that Russia will demand the restoration of St. Sophia to the Greek church, thus giving her a strong hold in the great capital of the East.

IN reply to a correspondent who wants an explanation of his dream, we remark that we are not skilled in that kind of business. In fact we never had very much confidence in the generality of modern dreams. We are not required to believe in the dreams of these times, nor is it needful that we know the interpretation thereof. God has given us the perfect law of liberty, containing all about heaven, and divine things, that He intended we should know in this life, and therefore for a more thorough knowledge of that pertaining to our duty toward God and man, it becomes us to appeal directly to the Scriptures. If in all things we will hearken unto "that prophet" we need not be alarmed about either dreams or anything therewith connected.

AMONG the Gleanings, will be found a scrap from Bro. Enoch Ely. It appears that instead of meeting their wives at Hamburg, they returned to Hjørring and expect to leave there for England soon after the fifth of February. — The telegram received, shows that they reached London in safety, and that they are now on the ocean; hence by the time this reaches our readers, they will be nearing the port of New York, if the Lord gave them a successful voyage. They earnestly request the prayers of the brethren and sisters, that they may return in safety to those of like precious faith, and loved ones at home. Bro. Ely says: "We think we have experienced since we left, that the prayers of the faithful are of great advantage. Will He not avenge His elect, which cry unto Him day and night? Yea, speedily."

THERE are, at the present time about fifteen or twenty members in Chicago, but living in different parts of the city. These, including the members' children living there, might, if collected, make up a pretty fair congregation. The Brethren have held no meetings in the city of late, though they did some years ago. It seems however, that no special effort was made to build up a church, as there were but a few members in the place at the time, and the encouragement not very good. The house in which the Brethren preached is still standing, and belongs to the Winebreennarians. We think that some efforts should be made to hold some meetings in the city. We would like to have sent us the names of all the members in the city, and on what street they live. As we visit Chicago quite frequently, it would afford us much pleasure to call on them and become acquainted. Brethren, let us hear from you.

THE JEWS OF JERUSALEM.

THE crowded state of Jerusalem is becoming quite unpleasant of late, and is materially affecting the present condition of the sacred spot. The country is flooded with paupers of every grade depending on the charities of others for support; while the agricultural resources of the land in its present state of cultivation are not sufficient to supply the wants of all. Unless something is done to prevent the present rapid flow of emigration into the city, its suffering condition will become alarming.

A late writer says: "The heads of the different communities, especially of the Polish and German Minhagim should adopt the most stringent measures to stop immigration altogether. Persons arriving at Jerusalem without means of existence should not be received into any of the congregations. Circulars should be forwarded to the principal congregations of Poland, whence pauperism is mostly recruited, informing them that after a certain date, destitute strangers arriving would not be helped by any existing charity or private individual. Of course, all harshness, even in appearance, should be avoided in dealing with persons whose misfortunes may be attributed to the faults of a system rather than to their own. When the countries and classes supplying the flood of poverty flowing towards Palestine become convinced that the pretence of studying the law no longer suffices to secure the free maintenance, even of the poorest description, we may expect to see an amelioration in the state of the Jews in the Holy Land. Some scheme for the emigration of those who are physically competent to work, but are unable to find employment, might perhaps be devised. Several countries might be selected to form experiments of this nature."

THE STEIN--RAY DISCUSSION.

ON March sixth the discussion between Bro. J. W. Stein and Elder D. B. Ray of the Baptist church, will commence in Newtonna, Mo., and continue several days. Our readers may look for an interesting synopsis of the debate, as Bro. Moore left here on the afternoon of the fourth to attend the discussion throughout. The main arguments of both parties will be presented in our paper, thus affording our brethren not only an excellent opportunity of noticing the difference between the Brethren and the Baptists, but the world also can glean matter for serious reflection.

Would not this be a good opportunity to disseminate the Truth as we believe and practice it? The discussion is entered on the part of Bro. Stein, in order to do good,—that persons in the immediate vicinity of the debate may be induced to obey the Lord in "all things," whatsoever He has commanded. If it should reach hearts and convert them when hearing it orally, why not also reach some writtenly? We believe it will; therefore suggest and kindly request that each of our readers make an effort to send us subscribers. Have you a neighbor or a friend who would likely be benefited by reading our paper the balance of the year? Then extend to him the privilege, and if he refuse, or is not able to pay for it, then do the next best thing if you can—pay for it yourself and send it to him. Do not wait for a prospectus, but at once resolve yourself into an agent, go to work and let us see how active the army of Brethren at Work can be—how many new readers we shall have commencing with the Newtonna Discussion. From that, until Jan. 1st, 1879, the paper will be sent to any part of the United States or Canada, for $1.20. Put the amount in a well sealed envelope, address it plainly, Moore, Bashor and Eshelman, Lanark, Ill., and we shall run all risks. Don't fail to give this your attention. We will not publish a full report, but a synopsis of the discussion, and our readers may depend upon it that Bro. Moore will make it interesting for them, and well worth the price of the paper. Now let us see how many new subscribers we shall have. M. M. E.

NAAMAN.

IN the fifth chapter of second Kings we have an account of Naaman, the captain of the host of Syria, and how he was cured of a loathsome disease.

Naaman was a captain, or commander of the army of Syria. A man not only of rank, but evidently of great wealth. He wielded an influence of no small moment, not only with the king, but over the army of which he was commander. He had a loathsome disease known as the white leprosy, said in that country to be incurable.

With all his wealth, rank, learning and influence he was of no real enjoyment to either himself or any one else, because of his unpleasant and disagreeable disease. He had in his family a Hebrew maiden that was captured and carried from her native land, and became a servant in his family. This little maiden one day remarked that she wished her lord were with the prophet in Samaria, that he might be cured of his disease. Then the king of Syria gave Naaman letters, and sent him over to the king of Israel. But when Naaman presented his letters to the king of Israel, the king became exceedingly angry and said, "Am I God to kill and make alive? Why send such a man to me with a disease that is incurable? Does not the king of Syria know that the white leprosy cannot be cured? and now sends a case to me which I take as an insult."

But there was an old prophet, by the name of Elisha, in the land of Israel, and when he heard how the king of Israel had rent his clothes in anguish, he sent word for Naaman to come to him and he would show him there was yet a prophet in Israel. Naaman made his way to the humble dwelling where the prophet was, and halted with his splendid outfit and dazzling army in front of the prophet's house, expecting that something remarkable would occur. He was a man of rank and wealth, and therefore, as he thought, should be treated accordingly. When the prophet sent him word to go and wash himself seven times in Jordan and he should be cleansed, he was completely unnerved. He did not suppose that the prophet of God would tell him to do such a little insignificant work. He expected him to come out, strike his hand over him in some grand style, call on the name of his God and thus cure him.

Naaman wanted to be cured—had no desire to remain in the condition he was, and willing to do any great thing that the prophet might demand of him. He was like some people are now. They are sinners, away from God, and without hope. They want to be saved, but wish to have their own way about it—are willing to do any great thing that God may ask or require of them. Naaman became disgusted at the prophet, not because the prophet told him to do something, but because he did not tell him to do some great thing. In short he wanted to be cured, but wished to have his own way about it. He begins to reason: Are not the rivers of Abana and Pharpar—beautiful streams of clear water—better than all the waters of Israel? thus trying to evade God's positive command to go to Jordan. But if Naaman did not have good judgment he had servants with him who did. They told him if the prophet had bid thee do some great thing, wouldst thou not have done it? Naaman could not answer a word. If doing some great thing according to the command of the prophet would cure you, how much rather when he saith to thee, wash and be clean. Naaman consented to go down to the river Jordan, and dips himself seven times according to the sayings of the man of God, and came forth a cured man.

But the question comes up, what cured Naaman? He goes down into the water a diseased man and comes up cured. Was it the water that cured him? I say nay, for there can be no real virtue in water. Was it the prophet that cured him? Not at all, for man has no power over such a disease as that. Was it the seven dips that cured him? We answer nay, for he might have dipped himself forty times in some other place and would not have been benefited in the least. Then again, what was it that cured him? We answer, it was God. The prophet of the Lord had told him if he would dip himself seven times in Jordan he should be cleansed of the leprosy. He went and did just what God told him to do, and then God, according to promise, cleansed him of his leprosy. A parallel case to this may be found where the Saviour told the blind man to go wash in the pool of Siloam, and he should come seeing. The blind man did so and his sight was restored immediately. It was a divine power that restored his eyes and not the water in which he washed.

From these, we may learn valuable lessons regarding other divine commands. The truly penitent believer is told to be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sin. Paul was told to "arise and be baptized and wash away thy sin, calling on the name of the Lord." Was it water that washed away the sins of the three thousand Pentecostians? That could not be, for there is no sin-pardoning virtue in the simple element of water. Water has no power to wash away sin—the virtue does not lie in the water, but in the power of God. No power, but divine power, can cleanse the sinner of his sin. Nothing but a super-human power can remove from the transgressor, the great burden of sin resting on him. We are told that, without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin; and also, that Christ's blood cleanseth us from all sin. The sinner is told to believe, repent and be baptized. These three things constitute the human part for the sinner to perform, or duties enjoined upon him. On condition he does these three things, God promises to pardon his sins. The virtue then is not at the beginning of the command, not in the middle, but at the end. God places the virtue at the end of the commandment. Then those who obey Him, come in contact with that virtue and are cleansed of their sins. Thus it was in Naaman's case. The virtue was placed at the end of the seven dips, and when he came to the end of the seventh dip he came in contact with that virtue, or power of God, and became a cured man. So with the blind man at the pool of Siloam. He too came in contact with that virtue at the end of the command. Likewise do we in obeying the commands which God has enjoined upon us.

Our divine Law-giver has told us just what to do in order that we may be pardoned; then, when we do that, He fulfills His promise and remits our sins. Then friendly reader, you perceive that it is not man that pardons our sins, it is not the water in which we are immersed, but it is God who gave us these commandments, that does the pardoning. To Him, and Him alone, be all the honor and the glory for our salvation from sin.

A. H. M.

SPRINKLING.

THE

TRUE MODE OF BAPTISM.

NUMBER II.

DOCTOR, if you are ready, we will hear you repeat it again. There is so much repetition in your lessons that we shall simply hear from you on pages 13, 16, 17, 22, 23, 24 and 25, this time.

"2. The Scriptures speak of Baptism with water, and Baptism with the Holy Ghost. Was either of these by immersion? These two are almost always united. Jesus was baptized with water, and, at the same time, with the Holy Ghost, also. In His conversation with Nicodemus, He speaks of being 'born of water, and of the Holy Ghost.'

In Acts 1: 5, we are informed that our Lord uttered to His disciples, ten days before the pouring out of the Holy Ghost at Pentecost, these words: 'John truly baptized with water, but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost, not many days hence.' We note here that the same word 'baptized,' both in English and in the Greek, is applied to water and to the Holy Ghost—'baptized with water'—'baptized with the Holy Ghost.' As the same word is used in connection, both with water and with the Holy Ghost, the mode of the one must be the mode of the other. If to baptize with water, means to dip into water, then to baptize with the Holy Ghost must mean to dip into the Holy Ghost. The word must, of course, have a meaning, and if it means, to dip, then it must mean, to dip, in the one connection as well as in the other. If its meaning is to dip, and as it is used in connection, both with water and the Holy Ghost, it must mean to dip, both into water and into the Holy Ghost. To dip into the Holy Ghost is, of course, absurd.

How they were baptized with the Holy Ghost, we will ascertain presently, but I wish, now, to have the attention fixed upon the fact that the same word 'baptized,' in the original, and in our translation, is used with water and with the Holy Ghost. If, therefore, to 'baptize with water' means to dip into water, to 'baptize with the Holy Ghost,' must mean to dip into the Holy Ghost.

On the very same day, Peter addressed the Jews, who were, in great numbers, attracted to the place where the disciples were speaking the Word of God to the people in every known language, and referring to the Holy Ghost as the divine cause of it, quotes the Prophet Joel, saying: 'But this is that which was spoken by the Prophet Joel. And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh.' Here, this application of the Holy Ghost, to the disciples of Pentecost, is called pouring. Of course, it was not dipping. In the 33rd verse of the same chapter, he says of the same event: 'This Jesus, being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father, the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this which ye now see and hear.' Here it is described by the words 'shed forth.' We speak of shedding blood, when it squirts out of the veins and arteries in streams; of the trees shedding their leaves, and of animals shedding their hair, meaning that they fall or drop down, or are sprinkled upon the ground. It, of course, does not mean dipping.

If we turn to the 10th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, and 44th and 45th verses, we read the account of the 'Baptism with the Holy Ghost,' as applied to Cornelius and his family. Peter was called from Joppa to the house of Centurian Cornelius, and he preached Christ unto them. Let us read the verses: 'While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word.' Here the mode of the Holy Ghost's application is stated by the words 'fell on.' We proceed to read: 'And they of the circumcision, which believed, were astonished, as many as came with Peter, because that on the Gentiles, also, was poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost.' Here it is described by the words 'poured out.' When Peter saw them thus visibly baptized with the Holy Ghost, he said, 'Can any man forbid water that these should not be baptized who have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?' And he baptized with water those who had been baptized with the Holy Ghost. As he had the pattern of the 'Baptism with the Holy Ghost' before him, he no doubt administered the 'Baptism with water,' then and there, according to that pattern. When Peter came to Jerusalem, and was called to account for going into the house of a Gentile, and baptizing them, he defended himself in these words (Acts 11: 15): 'And as I began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on them, as on us at the beginning. Then remembered I the word of the Lord, how that he said, John indeed baptized with water, but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost.' Here he expressly calls the falling of the Holy Ghost 'as on us at the beginning,' i. e., with the same luminous tongues descending from the ceiling upon the inmates of the room. 'Baptism with the Holy Ghost.' How was this their 'Baptism with the Holy Ghost' effected? Was it by dipping? Every one perceives the contrary. The Holy Ghost fell on them—was poured upon them—and this mode of application is called their 'Baptism with the Holy Ghost.' This mode was sprinkling. Does not this case settle, beyond all controversy, the meaning and use of the words 'Baptized' and 'Baptism'? And as the 'Baptism with the Holy Ghost' and 'Baptism with water' are so uniformly used together, and are described by the same word both in Greek and in English, does it not mean the same mode in both cases?

If the Holy Ghost falling on them was 'Baptism with the Holy Ghost,' was not water falling on them 'Baptism with water'? If the Holy Ghost poured out upon them was 'Baptism with the Holy Ghost,' was not water poured out upon them 'Baptism with water'? If the Holy Ghost rained down upon them in a shower of luminous flame was 'Baptism with water,' was not water sprinkled down upon them in the same manner 'Baptism with water'? If the word 'baptized,' in Greek, described that mode of application to the person, on the part of the Holy Ghost, does it not settle the meaning of the word, and must it not necessarily be understood in the same way, when it is used in the very same sense, to describe the application to the person, of water?

"BAPTISM WITH WATER."

We will bring the Divine record and look at this 'with.' Hear it. 'John indeed dipped in water' (Acts 1: 5). The Greek en means in, and is so translated by Wilson. Jesus does not say anything about baptism with water, but baptized in water; and the man who insists on saying it differently from Jesus, is not particular about the exact truth—is a little reckless in his assertions. Do not marvel, ye sprinklers at the words "dip, dipped, dipping," for in using them I simply follow the usages of commentators, expositors, annotators, and scholars of the Greek language.

The gentleman's method of reasoning is not altogether logical. He assumes that the Greek preposition en, which, in King James' translation is sometimes rendered with, has the meaning of with. In the translation alluded to it is, "I indeed baptize you with water," but this is evidently incorrect, for en in the Greek is the same as in in the English, hence John baptized in water. The reason we say dipped is because that is the precise meaning of the original word baptizo, and is so understood by the best Greek lexicographers in the world. The people were dipped by John in Jordan. We read that Naaman dipped himself seven times in Jordan. Dipped, in Naaman's case, is from the same original word as baptizo, where it speaks of John baptizing in Jordan, hence both have the same meaning in English. Had John sprinkled with water it would stand in the original, "John indeed rhantizo with water," but fortunately it is baptized, "dipped in water."

"WITH THE HOLY GHOST."

This "with" seems to be the Doctor's entering wedge. But it happens not to be the Lord's with. Hear the Lord Christ: "John indeed dipped in water, but you shall be dipped in the Holy Ghost, after a few days" (Acts 1: 5). This is God's side. He positively says, "you shall be dipped in the Holy Ghost." Now here is the point: The Doctor says, "If to baptize with water means to dip into water, then to baptize with the Holy Ghost must mean to dip into the Holy Ghost," and then adds, "To dip into the Holy Ghost is, of course, absurd." Since the Lord said, "dipped into the Holy Ghost," it is, "of course," not absurd, for our Lord never uttered absurd things.

We have now shown that God positively says, baptize or dip in water—in the Holy Ghost, and the Doctor himself admits that if "baptized with" (in) "water" means "dip into water," then to "baptize with" (in) "the Holy Ghost" must mean to dip into the Holy Ghost.

But there is another idea connected with this question which sprinklers are always sure to overlook. Suppose the Lord had said, "with water—with the Holy Ghost," what should we understand by this? Should we not understand by the word with is meant the thing which the Lord used, rather than the manner in which it was done? When we say, 'The woman washed the clothes with water,' we understand the term with simply shows relationship between the things washed and the water employed in washing. John baptized with water,—not with sand or dust. God baptized with the Holy Ghost—not with earth. Thus we see that even if we should concede to them the word "with" they gain nothing. But the Lord wisely says, "in water—in the Holy Ghost," and that stops all caviling.

Our attention is next called to the prophet Joel. We must complain of your finding something that is not in the Bible. The prophet Joel says nothing about "baptizing by pouring, baptizing by sprinkling." We should be slow to question what is asserted by a "Doctor of Divinity," but if he will show where Joel or Isaiah or Ezekiel predicted "baptizing by sprinkling," or that Christ and His disciples taught men and women should be baptized into Christ by sprinkling, we should feel under the necessity of making a trip to Lancaster to be "baptized by sprinkling." No divinely inspired writer or preacher ever used such unmeaning terms as "baptism by sprinkling."

Now look at the language of Peter: "And as I began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on them, even as on us in the beginning. And I remembered the word of the Lord, how he said, John indeed dipped in water, but you shall be dipped in the Holy Ghost" (Acts 11: 15, 16). Not one word about being "sprinkled with the Holy Ghost." The Holy Ghost falling on them as on the apostles at the beginning, means that the room, in which were Peter, Cornelius and household, was filled just as the room was where the apostles were on the day of Pentecost. And here, as on the day of Pentecost, not one word is said about the holy Holy Ghost being sprinkled on any one. Is the Holy Ghost so little that in falling on a man, it cannot envelop him? cannot wholly cover him?

But Dr. Greenwald insists that the Holy Ghost not only fell upon the disciples, was not simply poured out upon them, but that it rained down (down simply means at or to, Doctor, hence rained at or to them) "sprinkled down" (at, Doctor) "upon them." You have the Holy Ghost falling, pouring, raining, sprinkling, baptizing on them. Come now, Doctor, we cannot get along with such higgling as this. Take your stand and do not get so many things mixed. When shall the people believe you? You want them to believe that baptism is by sprinkling, by pouring, by raining, by shedding, by falling, when the Lord says not one word about water baptism by any of those methods. If sprinkling a little water on a person is baptism, say so. Don't have it by raining, by pouring, falling, shedding, and by sprinkling. Choose what you mean and stand by it.

Why attempt to mix God's part of the work with man's part? Man is required to be baptized in water by man. When man has thus complied, then God does His part: pardons his sins, and gives him the "gift of the Holy Ghost," and if faithful, saves him in heaven. In the introduction of the "New Covenant," there were visible manifestations of the Holy Spirit, as at Christ's baptism and on Pentecost &c., but who has seen the Holy Ghost manifested in form since then? Has Dr. Greenwald? Our ears are open to hear, our hearts to conversion in this matter if it can be shown. Dr. Greenwald well knows that at Christ's baptism, on the day of Pentecost, and at Cornelius' conversion, the "New Covenant" was not yet written; the words of the Lord were not yet put in form, hence the visible manifestation of the Holy Ghost, but since we have the words of the Holy Ghost—God's Truth always with us, there is no longer any such manifestations of the Divine Spirit.

Again, it was not the Holy Ghost that was baptized; it was the people. Jordan was not baptized on the people, but the people in Jordan. The Holy Ghost was not baptized on the people, but the people in the Holy Ghost. The Holy Ghost fell on the people, but that does not prove that Jordan fell on them. If the Holy Ghost was poured out on the people, that by no means proves that the people of Judea and Jerusalem and all the regions round about, had Jordan poured on them. "The application of water to a person," is not the language of God, nor an inspired child of God. Thus far, therefore, we have not found a man or woman on whom Jordan was rained, sprinkled, poured, shed, or baptized; hence we dismiss you, Doctor, until another sitting.

M. M. E.

A RATIONALIST'S LOGIC.

A RATIONALIST, sure of his logic, accosted Mr. Moody the other day with "Mr. Moody, will you meet me on this whole question?"

"No," said Moody; "I will not."

"Just as I expected. You can dogmatize ad libitum at the Tabernacle, but you dare not meet the tests of reason."

"Look here, my friend," said Moody; "you are an educated man, and have a wide range of learning; now, do you suppose that you could make a fly understand all that you know?"

"No; of course I could not."

"Well, the difference between you and God is a million times greater than the difference between you and a fly. Would it not be more in keeping if you would not deny what you know that God has said to you through your own conscience? Settle the quarrel of yours with God, and you'll have enough to do."

There was no answer to this, because the man knew that he was having just that battle on hand.—Selected.

CORN-PLANTING is progressing in Texas, and the wheat fields present a grand appearance. Good reports from the growing wheat come from all the sections heard from.

MAN it came in like a lamb; may go out like a lion.

The Home Circle.

READ AND OBEY.

- "Husbands, love your wives."
"Wives, obey your husbands."
"Fathers, provoke not your children to wrath."
"Children, obey your parents in all things."

Edited by M. M. Eshelman.

SUNDAY MORNING.

The Poor Mother.

IT is Sunday morning. Looking around, there is not much difference between this and other mornings only it is Sunday morning. The family rise as usual. Father and sons go out to attend to the wants of the hogs, horses and cattle. Mother goes down to the kitchen, makes fire and puts things in order for the morning meal. Pretty soon Nannie, the darling child of six months, calls mother, and she goes and brings the sweet innocent and sits it on a chair in the kitchen.

About this time Mary, the only grown daughter, arises, goes to the kitchen, washes her face, combs her hair and then withdraws to the parlor, throws back the great piano lid, arranges her book, and is soon lost in the sweetness of the music. But where is poor mother? In the kitchen doing all she can to arrange a good breakfast. She says, "I must hurry; I want to go to meeting to-day." While she is thus consoling herself, fondly looking forward to the blessed enjoyments in the assembly of the saints, her lovely Nannie falls from the chair and is badly hurt. Poor child! It is badly hurt, and screams, but the loud and prolonged tones of the piano do not allow Mary to hear the child and come to mother's aid. Poor mother! Sad and worried she carries her child, in vain trying to quiet it. Soon another trouble arises. The victuals on the stove begin to burn. "Oh dear," says she, "what shall I do! My poor baby is hurt, the victuals are burning, the table is not prepared, and I wanted to go to meeting—where is Mary?" "In the parlor, at the piano," comes the answer. God bless poor mother! Her troubles come not singly. She wanted to go to meeting to-day, but lovely Nannie is hurt, and "I must stay at home." With this thought, she takes Nannie in one arm and with the other hand rescues her morning meal. In comes Levi fresh and rosy from his morning work, and asks, "Where is Mary?" Echo answers, "In the parlor at the piano." Finally the baby is somewhat quieted, and breakfast is ready.

Father comes to the kitchen and says, "Dear wife, are you going to meeting to-day?" "Oh I was so anxious to go, but Nannie fell from the chair—the poor child is hurt; I must stay at home; and then it is too late; I have the dishes to wash, beds to make up, and things here and there to set in order. No husband, I cannot go." Poor dear woman, she is almost ready to sink down with care and trouble. It is Sunday morning, and Oh how she would like to go to meeting to-day!

Mary, father and sons enjoy the meal. The repast over, Mary says, "It is nine o'clock and I must get ready for meeting." Away to her room she speeds, spends a half hour in arranging her curls and clothes to make the best appearance. And where is poor mother? In the kitchen cleaning the dishes, and caring for her baby. God bless her for her patience. She wanted to go to meeting this morning, but now cannot. This is her Sunday morning.

Soon the sons bring out the hand cart carrying and horses. Father and Mary take their seats, and away rolls the conveyance with the fair cheerful faces. And now where is mother? At home making up the beds, sweeping the rooms, and preparing something for dinner. Oh poor mother! there she is alone with her sweet child, and so lonely. No one to drop a tear for her, none to sympathize with her. She wanted to go to meeting this Sunday morning, but too much work, too much trouble.

"Oh I wish mother was with us," exclaims Mary as the wind drives a huge curl into her face. With you? The answer to that lies near the piano, near your soft-h pleasures. How glad mother would have been, had you gone to the kitchen and done your part, to the bed-room, and put them in order. Then she could have enjoyed the fellowship of the saints, the music of the birds and the beauties of nature. But this enjoyment is not hers. At home she must stay, bowed down with sorrow and care. God bless poor mother! "What would we do without mother?" queries Mary. Ah! yes, "without mother?" How you could have made her happy, but you would not. I perchance, when her toils are all over, when she has ceased over the dark river, she shall have joy, communion, eternal glory. God bless mother this Sunday morning!—En.

ABOUT BREAKING DOWN THE GIRLS.

A GREAT deal of talk is heard now-a-days about the illness and general good-for-nothingness of girls. Such talk is all very well, in its right place; and it seems to me that the place for it is a pretty large one. Some girls are too lazy for anything; and they sit around the house, and loiter in rocking-chairs, and read novels, and putter at bits of fancy-work, and talk scandal about their neighbors, till it needs a great amount of charity to believe they are really of any use in this world.

The dear girls themselves are not always so much to blame as their parents, who encourage such illness and gossiping in their children. Parents should have right notions themselves, and understand that it is a harm to a girl to be brought up to do nothing. It gives her false notions about herself, scornful to the poor and deceitful to the rich, and fills her with nervousness and other diseases. If girls have enough money to stand in no need of right hard work, their riches will only make them miserable if they grow up to do nothing at all. God has ordained that all should be busied at something useful; and any family that gets above His ways, will suffer for it sometime.

But our country has a great many girls that are worked too hard. Among mechanics and farmers and many other families of moderate means, the girls and "women folks" have too much to do. Strong and hearty fathers are apt to measure by their own strength and endurance, the strength and endurance of their wife and daughters. And for that matter, mothers who never knew sickness for a day, may measure their daughter's strength by their own. "The fathers work hard, and the family are all anxious to get on in the world; and so the girls are twitted about "playing lady," and told they mustn't be "idling around," and reminded that the mother used to work so and so, "when she was a girl." All through the family, it is work and hurry and drive, from early morning till night, just as if women were like saw mills and could run all the time.

If a girl has only small ambition, she gets disheartened and unhappy; and then she grows distaste and don't want to do anything, because she never gets any credit for what she does, and the harder she works, the harder she has to do it. Or she contrives to get away from home into dress-making or something of the kind that is light. Or else she marries the first stick of a man that comes along, for the sake of escaping from the drive and dudgeon of her father's house. So it is that many a home has brought misery into it.

But if the girl is ambitious, she determines to do her share, and not give up to anything. And the willing ones are always made to bear the burden of the lazy ones, and so have their load of hard work doubled. With the energy of a steam engine such girls work on—sweeping, cooking, washing, scrubbing, churning, and doing a thousand other things about the house. Not a moment do they rest, from early rising till late bed-time; but every minute their hands, bodies and brains are going on the jump and stretch.

Now such kind of work will break any woman. If the constitution is very strong, it will stand a good many years; but at last it will give way all at once, and the woman will die suddenly, and the people will wonder that such a strong person couldn't stand sickness any better. Poor thing! She had stood burdens and taxations all her life, and had no strength left to endure disease, but snapped under it as an old harness would snap at a moderate pull. But if it is a youngish woman who has to do such constant and heavy work, and she is small in frame and not overly tough, she breaks early. Many, many girls and young wives are taxed and ruined by work, and the parents or husband do not understand why it should be so. They want as much lifting and toiling from a slender woman as would tire out the stoutest man, and they want her to begin it in the morning as soon as they do, and to finish up in the evening two or three hours after the men-folks have quit, and are gossiping with their neighbors or snoozing on the lounge.

A woman's work should be graded by her strength, and no woman should ever be put to her full utmost. If parents and husbands want to break down daughters and wife, they can do it surely by straining work kept up day after day. And then they will spend the rest of their lives in trying to get back what was lost through a broom or in a wash-tub. But if parents and husbands want wife and daughters comfortable, healthy, and models of cheerfulness, they will watch that the burdens do not become too heavy, and regulate the work to the strength according to reason. No woman of the least ambition will ever idle if she feels well; and young women of spirit need to be stopped long before they tire and lag. This is the only way to save their constitutions; and dollars saved by being penurious about hiring enough help in the house, will cost hundreds of dollars afterwards in doctors' bills and misery.—Physio-Medical Recorder.

HINTS FOR HUSBANDS.

THERE is an article afloat in the papers, entitled "Golden Rules for Wives," which enjoins upon the ladies a rather abject submission to their husband's will and whims. Iron rules, not golden ones, we should call them. But the art of living together in harmony is a very difficult art; and instead of confuting the positions of the author of the rules aforesaid, we offer the following, as a substance of what a wife likes in a husband.

Fidelity is her heart's first and most just demand. The act of infidelity a true wife cannot forgive. It breaks the tie that bound her heart to his, and that tie can nevermore exist.

The first place in her husband's affections no true wife can do without. When she loses that she has lost her husband; she is a widow, and has to endure the pangs of bereavement intensified by the person she no longer possesses. There is a living memory in the house, reminding her of her loss in the most painful manner.

A woman likes her husband to excel in those qualities which distinguish the masculine from the feminine being, such as strength, courage, fortitude and judgment. She wants her husband to be a holy man. A wife dearly likes to have her husband stand high in the estimation of the community in which they live. She likes to be thought, by her own sex, a fortunate woman in having such a husband as she has. She has a taste for the respectable, desires to have a good looking front door; and keep up a good appearance generally. Some wives, it is said, carry this too far; and some husbands, we know, are too ready in yielding to the front door ambition of their wives. But a good husband will like to gratify his wife in that respect, as far as he can, without sacrificing more important objects.

Perfect sincerity a wife expects, or at least has a right to expect from her husband. She desires to know the real state of the case, however it may be concealed from the world. It wrings her heart and wounds her pride to discover that her husband has not wholly confided in her. A man may profitably consult his wife on almost any project; it is due to her that he should do so, and she is glad to be consulted.

Above most other things, a wife craves from her husband appreciations. The majority of wives lead lives of severe and anxious toil. With unnamable anguish and peril to their own lives, they become mothers. Their children require incessant care. Only the eye of God watches like a mother's, says Fannie Fern, in that chapter of "Ruth Hall," which depicts with such power and truth a mother's agonizing anxieties. And besides her maternal cares, a wife is the queen regent of a household kingdom. She has to think and plan for everybody. If, in all her labor and cares, she feels that she has her husband's sympathy and gratitude, it helps her when a man can help a woman, if he notices her efforts, applauds her skill, and allows for deficiencies, all is well; but to endure all this, and meet no appreciating word or glance from him for whom she toils and bears, is very bitter.

A wife likes her husband to show her all due respect in the presence of others; she cannot endure to be reproved or criticized by him when others can hear it. Indeed, it is most wrong in a husband thus to put his wife to shame; and we cannot help secretly admiring the spirit of that French woman who, when her husband had wronged her, refused even for twenty years to utter a word, and lived in the house a dumb woman. We admire her spirit, but not her mode of manifesting it. Husbands owe the most profound respect to their wives, for their wives are the mothers of their children. No man has the slightest claim to the character of a gentleman, who is not more scrupulously polite to his wife than to any other woman. We refer to the essentials of politeness, not its forms; we mean kindness and justice in little things.

A wife likes her husband to be considerate. Unexpected kindness and unobtrusive favors touch her heart. She appreciates the offering made when she is sick; she enjoys the gift brought from a distance, and everything which proves to her that husband thinks of her comfort and her good.

Husbands, reflect upon these things. Your wife has confided her happiness to you. You can make her life proudly happy if you are kind and wise. You can make it miserably wretched, if you are ignoble and shortsighted. Let the contest between husband and wife be this: Which shall do the most happiness for the other? Selected by a young husband.

Mt. Morris, Ill.

CHILDREN AT WORK.

From John B. Glock.—Dear Editor:—I see in your last paper a note, that Enoch Eby and Daniel Fry were at David Glocks in Hoheneck. That is my papa's brother. And also a letter from Mary J. Bowers, stating that her grandma was very sick, but is getting better. Glad to hear of that. She is my papa's sister. Now to her question, "Who was the oldest man?" I will say it was Methuselah; he lived 969 years and died and Enoch, his father, walked with God and he was not; for God look him. Where can the passage be found which says, the child sneezed seven times? Anghwick Mills, Pa.

From F. E. Esterly.—I had to lay in bed eleven weeks, and not until Christmas morning could I walk a step. I then got up and walked out of the bed-room on crutches. O, how glad I was! But I must tell you what happened. I was cutting off corn, and cut my knee. I had a hard time of it, and suffered much pain. I now know what it is to be in bed, sick; and now little boys and girls you do not know what you are enjoying when you are well. I go to Sunday-school. We have Sunday-school all Winter. Columbiana, Ohio.

From Cora I. Swab.—I also attend school, and try to learn. My father, mother and grandma are members of the church, and I hope I may be a good girl and join too sometime. I like to go to meeting and hear preaching. I am thirteen years old. Cherry Grove, Ill.

From Alice Price.—All the other little folks are writing; why not I? My mother is a member of the church, and tries to do right. I love to go to church and hear the truth preached. I hope we may all belong to the church soon. I think the children's letters are so nice. I go to Sunday-school, and there learn God's words. When you come to Lexington, come to see me. Lexington, Ind.

From Clinton Eisenbise.—I am twelve years old. I go to school and like my teacher very well. I try to obey my teacher, and try to be kind to my school-mates. I go to meeting nearly every Sunday, and I love our Savior. We have no Sunday-school here. I like your paper very much, and I think there is a great deal of good in it for both old and young. I am always waiting anxiously for the next paper. Palo, Ill.

From Clara E. Swihart.—Pa and I went nine miles to council meeting to-day. Came home, and then pa and ma went six miles to meeting to-night. I am a member of the church, was baptized six months ago. I have four brothers and one sister living. I think I have a great interest in the better world, as I have three sisters and two brothers in the promised land. Jesus says, "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Logansport, Ind.

From Sarah F. Yoder.—Kind Editor:—I am going to school and like it very much. I would like to attend Sunday-school, but there is none here now. I hope we will have one next summer. We don't get to meeting very often. I would like to attend meeting. I love to hear the Brethren preach. I am so glad that you have given us little folks a column in your good paper. My father, mother and one of my sisters belong to the church. I am eleven years old.

From Annie Viola Hiestand.—Dear Editor:—I read dear grandpa's letters, and was so glad. I am pleased that there is a grandpa in the church that cares for us little folks. Brethren Levi Dickey and Isaac Rosenberger were with us and held meetings. Grandpa, I wish you could have been here and enjoyed the meetings with us. O, they preached so good! I went to Sunday-school last Summer, but it has closed this Winter. I love to read this good paper. Good bye grandpa; hope you will remember all of us little folks. Seal, Ohio.

From Emma Sandrock.—Dear Editor:—I am a little girl who has seen twelve Summers. We often go to meeting, and I like to hear the Brethren preach the true Gospel. The year has gone, and where is the church in the brotherhood that has not had some loved one in the grave? There were three laid in their resting places here, and one of them was my dear grandma. Good bye, her to rest. Walnut Grove, Ill.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK, from March 1st, to Jan. 1st, 1879 only $1.20.

CORRESPONDENCE.

From Decatur Co., Iowa.

Dear Brethren:—

WE wish to say for the encouragement of the saints, that through the mercies of God we have been permitted to enjoy a season of grace at the Franklin church. Bro. J. H. Swihart of Derby, Iowa, was with us, and he labored faithfully nearly two weeks, presenting and impressing favorably the claims of Jesus. As the immediate result of his effort we record the edifying of our Father's faithful children, with five additions to the praying army by the solemn rite of Christian baptism. There are yet two more applicants for membership.

Our heart rejoices in our Savior and our God, to hear from all parts of the success of the Master's cause, and of sinners turning to the Lord. Our prayer is, that the grace of God may be sufficient for all, so that ultimately we may meet on the other shore.

"Where congregations ne'er break up,
And Sabbaths never end."

L. M. KOU.

Franklin, Ia., Feb. 22, 1878.

From Madison Co., Ind.

Dear Brethren:—

WE have just closed a series of meetings here. They were well attended. Although there were no additions, I think many good impressions were made. Saints were made to rejoice on seeing our old father in Israel contend so earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints.

Brethren F. P. Loehr of Michigan, and Rosenberger of Northern Indiana were our ministers. Our prayer is, that they may be faithful till death and then pass into the better world.

We expect to commence another series of meetings soon. May the good Lord bless us all.

G. W. FESSLER.

From the Almena Congregation.

Dear Brethren:—

WE are still trying to labor in the cause of our Master. Our annual visit is a thing of the past. We did not find all things as we would like to have them, but still our church is in a healthy working condition, for which we are thankful to Him from whom all blessings flow.

Elder Moses Z. Baer, a very worthy and self-sacrificing brother, has the oversight of this arm of the church. Six years ago he commenced his labors of love among us. We had never heard the Gospel preached in its primitive purity before; but by his unceasing labors, holding forth the Gospel in its great beauty and strength he has built up a church.

On the 13th inst., Bro. Walter Clark of Cass Co., Michigan came among us and remained until the 18th. Through his earnest labors, combined with that of our Elder, three souls were made willing to unite with the people of God, and others almost persuaded to come.— May the Lord help them so they do not put it off until it is too late.

May peace be yours in this life, and eternal joy in the world to come.

F. ALLEN.

Yackburg, Mich.

From California.

SINCE I last wrote you, we have been having a great deal of rain. Since the 15th, ult., it has rained so much that the ground is thoroughly soaked. The prospects for a crop, I think, were never better. The farmers are all in good courage. Work is progressing finely; nearly all are done seeding. Grain and grass are growing very rapidly. Health in general is good. All fears of another dry year have fled. Oh how thankful we ought to be to the Giver of all good. Truly His ways are not our ways, neither are His thoughts our thoughts. O that men would praise the Lord for His loving-kindness to the children of men.

Your paper continues its weekly visits as usual, bringing "glad tidings of great joy" to the children of God in this remote part of God's vineyard. I am so fortunate as to receive two copies of your very welcome paper. You may continue sending as before, and I will pay for the extra copy as soon as I can get the change, and I shall press it into the service of the ministry; as we need ministerial help here very much. Isolated as we are from the body of the brotherhood Brethren, we need your prayers in our behalf. "The prayer of the righteous availeth much."

J. FUNK.

Ripon, Cal., Feb. 9, 1878.

From Christine, California.

I WILL drop you a few lines to let you know how we are getting along in the far West.

In temporal things, thanks be to God, we are blest. I still think we are on the Lord's side, are striving to serve Him. Although it is hard, as we are alone—only three of us, my wife, a sister from Ohio and myself. Sometimes we feel lonesome, but the Lord has told us in His Word, that if we would draw nigh to Him, He would draw nigh to us. Then when the Lord draws nigh, we are not alone, but we feel happy and can help to make others happy, and this is one way to serve the Lord. Paul says, we should rejoice, and weep with them that weep. This is Christ-like. We are trying to live right, as actions speak louder than words. Good actions speak powerfully to the world.

In a few meetings which we have had, we tried in our weakness to hold forth the Word in its purity. We have a great many rough people here, a great many infidels. I think more than in any other place. If it were not for the beauty of the climate, its healthfulness, the rich land and good markets, I would move away. I love to be among the brethren. I still think some will come here. There is some very good government land here yet, but will not be very long, as the country is settling up very fast.

H. & N. STUDEBAKER.

Feb. 6, 1878.

From Tuscola, Illinois.

Dear Brethren:—

INASMUCH as we expect to change our place of residence from Tuscola, Illinois to Cornell, Illinois, we send you the following church news.

The members are in union and love, but somewhat lonesome. Eleven of our members have moved away since last Fall, reducing our number from nineteen to eight. Our prayer is that the few remaining may hold out faithfully and the Lord bless them.

We left home on Saturday, Feb., 9th for Ia Place, where we held meeting on Sunday morning and night, Monday and Tuesday night.— Had council meeting and all went off in love and union. After meeting we went to the water side, where prayer was offered and five precious souls buried by baptism to rise and walk in newness of life. May they be faithful until death, that they might obtain that crown of life whereof the apostle speaks, that fadeeth not away. Had meeting again at night, after which we had to bid farewell to the dear brethren and sisters. May God bless them all, and if we meet no more on earth, may we meet in heaven, is my prayer.

K. HECKMAN.

Report of Travel.

I WILL now, according to promise, drop you a few words for the benefit of the cause.— I left the Brethren in Kansas on the 25th of December. The last church I visited was Paint Creek. Found the brethren alive to the work, though they have a strong opposition by Baptists and Methodists; but we would say, brethren stand firm, and the Lord will give you a crown of life in the end.

We read and understand there are many spirits gone out into the world, but we are to try them by the Word of Eternal Truth—see whether they are on the rock Christ Jesus. We stayed with the brethren at this place until there were nineteen sermons preached in all; meeting in the school-houses in the evening and in dwelling houses in the day time. They have no meeting-house here, but will have one soon. During our stay with them, four precious souls came out on the Lord's side and were buried in baptism, and arose, we hope and trust, to walk in newness of life.

They were young people; hope they will be a light to the world. Brethren care for the young members, for they will be the bone and marrow of the church when we are gone. We think sometimes the young members are not treated with that degree of lenity that they should be, and are discouraged and driven back into the world. Then some say that is where your series of meetings runs to. By saying this, I do not intend to encourage pride, not by any means; but there is a growth of grace.

Brethren traveling through here will please remember the brethren of Paint Creek church. There are also some brethren living in Ft. Scott. I preached one sermon there. Those traveling through that part of the country, and wish to stop with the Brethren, should inquire for Bro. Everett. I feel to thank the Brethren in Kansas for their kindness shown towards me, while with them.

Myself and wife arrived here (where we expect to reside) on the 12th inst. Found all well.

DORSEY HODGKES.

Huntington, Ind., Feb. 21st, 1878.

From Valton, Wis.

Dear Brethren:—

THOUGHT that some news from the few branches that are planted into the Vine at this place, would be encouraging to the church. There are six at this place that have been received into the church by baptism. On Saturday the 16th of February, brother Caleb Fogle of West Lima, Wis., came to visit us. He preached two sermons for us, one on Saturday evening, choosing for his subject, "Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers" 1 Peter 1:18. The brother treated largely upon the trinity of Christ.

On Sunday he preached from James 2:19, giving a good discourse on the ordinances of God's house. The few branches here were watered with the dew of heaven. The meeting on Sunday was held at a neighbor's house; it was well filled. There were two ministers present of other denominations, one of the United Brethren, and the other of the Methodists.— The discourse did not suit them, so on Sunday evening after Bro. Fogle had taken leave for home, they endeavored to pick Bro. Fogle's discourse to pieces. But the Lord was with some one in the congregation, and they met with opposition. There was one that was not afraid to stand for Jesus.

May the Lord bless Bro. Fogle in his labors wherever he may be. Hope the brethren of Ill. will remember us. Would be glad if Bro. S. H. Bashor could make us a visit sometime; also would be much rejoiced if Bro. Enoch Ely could come this way sometime after he returns from Denmark. Hope the good Lord will grant the brethren and sisters a safe return home from Denmark.

J. E. D. STURT.

Feb. 18th, 1878.

From Missouri.

Dear Brethren:—

I WISH to say through the Brethren at Work to my numerous correspondents in regard to the land in this part of the country. Bro. Henry Wyland of Bloomingdale, Mich., moved here and appears very well satisfied with the description that I gave him. Also brother Michael Herman of Victor, Iowa. Bro. Herman made a pretty thorough examination of the soil here. If I understood him correctly he is quite favorable to our country. Land is being taken up fast within the last six months; yet there are several thousand acres of raw land for sale from 5 to 7 dollars per acre.

Also several farms of 160 acres with about 100 acres under cultivation. Good houses, orchards and water for 2,000 dollars. Brethren wishing to purchase some of this raw land had better do so before Spring. Land is rolling, plenty of timber and rock. Any desiring to know more can address the undersigned. Enclose stamp.

W. B. SELL.

Martinsville, Mo., Feb. 18th, 1878.

From Texas.

Dear Brethren:—

LIKE hundreds of others, we are still in Texas, learning all we can with a view of finally turning the knowledge we thus obtain to practical use. Arriving here at a late hour in the night, we put up at the hotel. Next day enjoyed the privilege of listening to a well directed discourse to the children and youth of this place. Text, "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth," (Ecc. 12:1).

The preacher first explained the meaning of the word Ecclesiastes to be the preacher.

2. That Solomon was the preacher who wrote it; and that the meaning of Solomon is "the peaceful one."

3. That Solomon was wise and received his wisdom from God; that God gave it to him because he asked Him for it.

4. He reminded the children and youth that had a desire to become wise, and the time to begin to be wise is now, in the days of thy youth, and especially pressed the thought, that "the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom," and that it must be by remembering their Creator, not by forgetting Him. People become wicked when they forget God.

5. He pressed the thought of the Bible being a lamp to our feet, and would only benefit us when we used it for the purpose of seeing where to go and what to do, the same as the lamps are used in these dark nights to enable the people to see how to keep their feet out of the mud and other difficulties they meet on the streets of Sherman.

SEEKING A DESIRABLE HOME.

It is quite instructive to see people coming in here by hundreds from many different States, seeking for desirable homes. Many will find themselves disappointed, when they get here, because they expect to find good, pleasant homes here without the necessary exertion on their part to secure and improve them. Even so it is to be feared that thousands will fail to secure a home in heaven, simply because they will not make the necessary effort to secure a title for it.

We visited Bro. LaRue's family, and there met the brother and sister, and brother P. R. Werks. We learned from them that a brother Snyder from Iowa would preach some three or four miles North, on Saturday night, Sunday, and Sunday night. Though quite anxious to meet him and other brethren and sisters, and join with them in the worship of God, in this land of flowers, our anxiety to prosecute speedily, the business for which we principally came here, in order to reach our absent families again as soon as possible, prevented us from going over, as that would have delayed us several days. The members here are well and seem to be well pleased with the country and are very desirous to have more brethren to settle in, and especially a minister, so that they might also have regular preaching.

DANIEL VANIMAN.

Sherman, Texas, Feb. 24th, 1878.

From Lower Cumberland, Pa.

Dear Brethren:—

IF some of us do complain of hard times financially, yet we have certainly had a feast spiritually. That is, we have had the bread of life richly administered amongst us. About the first of December last, brother Stooffer of Md., was with us about a week. On the 25th, (Christmas day) brethren H. Saylor and Wm. Franklin also commenced a series of meetings continuing over a week with good results.

About middle of January Bro. Grubill Myers and Christian Myers came and labored faithfully for about one week. On the first of February Bro. S. H. Bashor arrived here, preached at Boiling Springs, at Bakers and at Mechanicsburg. He was with us twelve days. Had good congregations most of the time, and taking all together, the labors of the brethren were not in vain. Since the first of December twenty-seven have been added to the church by baptism.

Hope those who have put on Christ may walk in Him, and those of us who have been longer in His service be the more faithful, knowing that our salvation is nearer than when we first believed.

H. BEELMAN.

Dillsburg, Pa., Feb. 25th, 1878.

From Fortville, Indiana.

Dear Brethren:—

THIS church formerly belonged to the Stony Creek church; but recently there was a division made, and the Eastern part is now called Beech Grove. We number near fifty members—still under the care of J. W. Caylor, the Elder of Stony Creek church. Our regular meetings are twice a month, and occasionally some brother comes in and holds a series of meetings. Bro. Jacob Rife came here on the 8th of February, and preached seven sermons.

There were none added to the church, but we hope his preaching may be as bread cast upon the waters, for we think many crumbs fell from the Master's table. Our prayer is that "nothing be wasted." Bro. Rife went from here to the District meeting at Honey Creek. He gave us a partial promise to come again next summer, if spared. May God be with him is my prayer.

We expect Bro. Geo. Studebaker here the 1st of March. He has preached here occasionally for several years, and has been the means of much good being done at this place. May God bless him in his labors.

C. A. SAVAGE.

Feb. 21st, 1878.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK.

"Behold I Bring You Good Tidings of Great Joy, which Shall be unto All People." — LUKE 2: 10.

Vol. III.

Lanark, Ill., March 14, 1878.

No. 11.

The Brethren at Work.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY

—BY—

J. H. Moore, S. H. Bashor, M. M. Eshelman.

—FOR—

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

| | | |
|-----------------|---|-----------------|
| R. H. MILLER. | — | LADOGA, IND. |
| J. W. STEIN. | — | NEWTONIA, MO. |
| B. VANIMAN. | — | YIRBEN, ILL. |
| D. H. MENTZEL. | — | WAYNESBORO, PA. |
| MATTIE A. LEAR. | — | URBANA, ILL. |

LOVE.

BY J. W. SOUTHWOOD.

LOVE should be outpouring,
From the heart and soul,
As we journey onward,
From the Christian goal.

We should ne'er be flitting,
In this Christian land;
For the cause is noble,
Work then hand in hand.

Let us love our neighbor
Even as ourself;
And if we have money,
Use it not as pelf.

We should love the Savior,
And His words obey;
Be baptized in water,
And wash our sins away.

They that love the Savior,
All His sayings keep;
Always working for Him,
Never found asleep.

Be then always loving,
Always kind and true;
Live for heaven and glory,
And your work pursue.

THE TRIPLE SACRAMENT.

BY C. H. BAIRDRAUGH.

To Be Able to Give a Reason of My Hope.

W here to give a reason for the hope that is in us. What kind of reason? Logical? Philosophical? This is not required by Scripture, and in the majority of instances is impossible. The reason of the saint is moral, not intellectual, it is life, not theory. Sectarians of all grades ask us a reason for Foot-washing and the Lord's Supper, and aver that nothing will satisfy them which does not carry the precision and force of a mathematical demonstration and be able to offer proof in that form. If we are unable to offer proof in that form, they clap their hands, wag their heads, and shout aha, aha! (Ps. 49: 15).

When they are pressed by infidels to give the same kind of proof for the Incarnation, and the presence of the Holy Ghost in the world as the Representative of Father and Son, they denounce their antagonists as unreasonable for not accepting as conclusive the kind of argument that we offer in support of what they deny. The best, most irrefragable argument in support of the Divine Incarnation is the incontrovertible historical fact of a Being in the flesh who did what Deity alone can do. The confession of Nicodemus is the most philosophical argument, without any thought of philosophy, not only for the manifestation of God as the Son of Man, but equally for Foot-washing and the Lord's Supper, and all other institutions of Grace: "Rabbi, we know that Thou art a Teacher come from God, for no man can do these miracles that Thou doest, except God be with him." When this same Person institutes a feast with wholly new accompaniments, preceding and following, and excludes from His Kingdom those who reject this arrangement, we need no other reason for the hope that is in us, as connected with these observances.

That the original Paschal Institution is obsolete no one disputes. That Christ washed His disciples' feet is equally incontrovertible. There is not a symbol found in both Testaments ratified by more positive and solemn sanction than this. "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me." What can be more awful than such an assertion from the lips of God in the flesh? What can be more presumptuous and fatal than its rejection? "If I your Lord and Master, have washed your feet, ye ought also to wash one another's feet." "I have given you an EXAMPLE, that ye should do AS I HAVE DONE TO YOU." "The servant is not greater than his Lord." What can be more imperative, more vital with the inflexible righteousness of God, than this repetition of authoritative command? Christ knew what treatment this symbol would receive, and enforced it with a minuteness and vigor found in connection with no other institution. "No part with me" unless you observe it. The argument of Nicodemus comes in here with overwhelming force. "We know that Thou art a Teacher come from God." "We know that Thou art the Christ of God. We know that Thou art God, and that thy word is without vanity and shadow of turning." Here human love is nothing. Here theological science is nonsense. Here Doctors of Divinity are "fools and slow of heart to believe."

When the God-man speaks, what need of the twofold, diluting logic of the Summary. Is not both all-sufficient? When Jehovah proclaims, I am God, He does not condescend to explain or the proof of His claims. His proof lies in the lightning and thunder and quaking of Mount Sinai, and in the impressive evidence of power and wisdom in all that meets eye and ear. When He says, "wash ye one another's feet," He has already established His right to command. The lowly, towel-girded Nazarene Carpenter who stoops to wash His disciples' feet, is the God of Sinai. In the gently spoken injunction, "wash ye one another's feet," were hid the terrific stores of Omnipotence that blazed forth in such awful majesty on the Mount of Revelation. The Christ of Moriah is the Law-giver of Sinai. "Wash ye one another's feet," has the same authority as "Thou shalt have no other God's before me." The God-Christ who will bring every idle word into judgment, speaks no idle words Himself. "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me." Awful words, and true as awful. No one can slight them with impunity. "If ye love these things, happy are ye if you do them." "He that believeth not shall be damned."

This is the preparatory to the Supper; its equal is the Eucharist. All churches accept this as obligatory. Let them show what authority attaches to this that Christ does not with equal weight impress on the antecedent two. If Foot-washing is non-essential, so is the Communion, as we had less stress on the latter than on the former. To retain one and reject the other, is the boldest kind of arrogance. It is setting the disciple above his Lord, and reconstructing the plan of redemption. Were we to urge arguments against the Eucharist such as sectarians urge against Foot-washing and the Lord's Supper, they would laugh us to scorn, and justify. There never was a plea advanced against these institutions which has not been employed with equal valdity against the existence of God, and the authenticity of the Bible. The popular Petrine remonstrance, "thou shalt never wash my feet," is only infidelity a little narrowed. To do without the requisitions of Eternal Truth is as really sheep-stealing so far as it goes, as the boldest wholesale robbery that ever cursed mankind. To admit the principle that triffles into nothing this ordinance of God, leaves not an inch of ground on which to rest an argument for the Eternal Being. This brings me back to my starting point. The proof of the Divine Existence is patent in manifold evidence apart from all logic. The proof of Foot-washing and the Lord's Supper rests on the same foundation. The time, the circumstances, the language, combine to impart peculiar solemnity and authority to all that was done in that triple transaction. The fact of Feet-washing as an act of Christ is not disputed; only its significance and perpetuity.

Its validity for all the Christian age has been shown to rest on the same ground as that of the Eucharist. The principle that demands the acceptance of the one, obligates the other. Between these two comes the Supper. And here a question springs up spontaneously, which any one who is not wholly blinded and seared by sectarianism would be ashamed to answer in the affirmative. Did Christ insert the Jewish Passover between these two Christian Symbols, in flat contradiction of His own teachings, that no man put on a piece of new cloth upon an old garment? If the meal eaten with His disciples on the night of His apprehension, was the Paschal Ordinance, He even committed a grosser blunder than He exposed in His vowed declaration of the Mind of God: "He took a cup from an old worn out garment, and patched it out a new one. Can we, in such a supposition, rely on the conviction of Nicodemus, "we know that Thou art a Teacher come from God." What has that bare-worn, antiquated Jewish wedge to do between these two Christian Ordinances? Why not disjoin the Bread and Wine with a wave-breast, or heave-shoulder? (Lev. 7: 30, 32). Who would plead for such an innovation? And yet those who would be the first to denounce such infringement, contend that Christ mixed a central Jewish ceremony with institutions characteristically Christian. To tear away Foot-washing is to tear the Eucharist with it. To defend the Communion is to rely on principles that Christ Himself applies with equal stringency to Foot-washing.

To admit the perpetuity of Foot-washing is to allow the inconsistent insertion of an effete ceremony as a disconnector between two Christian symbols, or else admit that the Supper is an institution that concerns us as much as it did the original group who first partook of it. I repeat the question, if Foot-washing has the significance that Christ has given it with such marked emphasis, what has the Paschal intension to do between two ordinances that demand the practical faith of every follower of Jesus, until He comes the second time without sin into salvation? Let those answer who trample on the authority of Jesus. If Foot-washing is not a Christian symbol of perpetual obligation, exhibit your proof that the Eucharist has that character. If neither has, then the Supper is also void. If one has, both have, and if both one introducing and the other consummating the meal authorized by Christ, then the three are truly symbolical and obligatory, as the Holy Trinity is Yea and Amen. If Christ may be gagged here, and His authority set at naught, He is not the Word that was with God, and was God, and Faith and abode with forever. When He says Foot-washing, He does not mean blacking boots as some affirm. When He institutes a Supper, guarding it on both sides with corresponding Christian symbols, He does not perpetuate the sprinkling of the blood of lambs and kids. First the symbolical washing, then the rite of fraternal fellowship, and lastly the higher communion with God.

WATCH AND PRAY.

BY EMMA NEWLAND.

WHEREFORE let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall" (1 Cor. 10: 12). Do we take heed lest we fall? Do we think of this? If we think we stand, how shall we take heed? Watch and pray. Our blessed Savior commanded His disciples to pray that they might not enter into temptation. Did they obey? He found them sleeping for sorrow, and said unto them, "Why sleep ye also and pray, lest ye enter into temptation" (Luke 22: 45, 46). Now do we think we stand? If we do, let us watch and pray, lest we fall; and when we pray, we should pray earnestly. Think how our dear Savior, when He was in Gethsemane, His sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground; being in agony, He prayed more earnestly.

O, it is truly heart-rending to read of Him, how righteous, how calm and mild He was, and yet how He suffered, for the heavy sins that were upon Him. I have heard some persons say, that there was no use of prayer; for those who were born to be saved, would be saved anyhow. Not so, away with such doctrine. That is not of Christ, the meek and lowly Jesus, who commanded us to pray. If such stuff be true, we have no use for the Bible. What a world this would be if we had to follow the doctrines of men. But thank God the Giver of all good gifts, He has given us a better plan whereby we may be saved. I fear some of those persons who do not believe in prayer, will receive the reward of the wicked. Upon the wicked He shall rain snares, fire and brimstone, and a horrible tempest; this shall be the portion of their cup (Ps. 11: 6).

O let us watch and pray, lest we enter into temptation, take heed lest we fall, and may we be made to exclaim, let the words of my mouth, and the meditations of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord my strength and my Redeemer (Ps. 138: 14).

M. Jackson, Va.

SECRET WRONGS.

BY C. E. FELLMAN.

WE have no right to hold within our hearts a secret thought, of a wrong done to us by a brother. "Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thine heart; thou shalt in any wise rebuke thy neighbor, and not suffer him upon him" (Lev. 19: 17). "Take heed to yourselves: If thy brother trespass against thee, rebuke him; and if he repent, forgive him" (Luke 17: 3).

These directions are imperative in them; both Law and Gospel unite their sanctions. Christ and Moses alike condemn the hiding of wrongs committed by brethren within the heart, and and require us to rebuke the wrong doers. The word is not counsel, it is command, not advice, but authority; it must be obeyed. Be reconciled, heaven vents with infinite compassion over a warring and tumultuous world. God is the only source of calm repose; acquaint thyself with Him, and be at peace; and let His peace not only fill your heart, but mould your life in Jesus. "Blessed are the peacemakers; for they shall be called the sons of God."

NOT AFRAID TO DIE.

A BELLOVED friend, a young wife, lay dying. A suffering pain for a few moments, she said, "It is all easy now; it is all glory and brightness! Oh, such brightness! I never dreamed of such brightness. I, the girl I want to go" and in a little while, in a tone of perfect assurance, "Every sin is forgiven; Jesus is with me now." To the doctor who took her hand, she said, "Don't call me back; don't call me back." After which, her lips moved in prayer, and the word "Jesus" was the last spoken.

A Christian woman who had all her life been afraid of the cold waters of the river of death, said, when dying, "Wonderful! wonderful! it is only a rivulet!"

A young disciple just before dying said, "I now know what the martyr in the flames meant, who said, 'I feel no more pain than if on a bed of roses.' I bless God, I am so swallowed up of joy as not to regard my outward pains. Thy rod and staff, they comfort me." I am going to my dear Jesus," were her last words.

Another dying sister said, "Blessed be the Lord, the sting of death is gone. I wish for death. I think every day, when it is night, I am clay near my blessed home. The blood of Jesus cleanses from all sin, and has cleansed me. Jesus is my all."

GOING TO CHURCH.

If I was rich, I don't believe,
I'd go to church to show it.
Because the Maker of us all
Most sartfully would know it,
I wouldn't put on showy gear,
Of fashions grand arrayin'
And think that was the kind of garb
To fit the mind for prayin'.

I never thought the house of God,
Was just the place for showin'
All the fussy fagly duds,
Of all the fashions goin',
For ones up envyin's and pride
And keep the mind a strayin'
From holy thoughts and holy things
In prayin' and in prayin'.

A house of worship made for God,
Don't mean a place for wearin'
Of rich and costly showy gear,
With colors all a flyin',
Ter trighthen the distressed and poor,
Away from goddly teachin'
Who want to come, yet dare not come,
To listen to the preachin'.

They stand away with hungry hearts,
With souls like Lazarus' pleadin'
For crumbs of bread, yet bear to come
However much they'er needin',
Fashion and show, and lofty pride,
Shut out the needier neighbor,
Who have a right to reap a share
From Christian work and labor.

The right to come and worship God,
Unmacked by showy splendor,
And enjoy sit at Jesus' feet
For rest and pity tender,
And gather comfort for the strife
In daily toil and trial,
In all the crosses they must bear,
And all the self-denial.

—Selected.

THE CHRISTIAN.

BY JOSEPH L. DROWER.

THE term Christian is found but three times in the Bible. Once in the plural and twice singular. "And the disciples were called Christians first at Antioch" (Acts 11: 26). "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian" (Acts 26: 28). "Yet if any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed, but let him glorify God on this behalf" (1 Pet. 4: 16). The Christian is sincere, truthful and just. He believes that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and that he brought from heaven a saving Gospel. He has renounced Satan with all his pernicious ways, and the sinful pleasures of this world. He has covenanted with God in Christ Jesus to live faithful until death. He has been baptized into Christ. He has taken the yoke of Christ upon him. He leads a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty. He is good and acceptable in the sight of God. He is steadfast and immovable and always abounds in the work of the Lord. The eyes of the Lord are over him and His ears are open unto his prayers. He lets his light shine like a city that is set upon a hill that cannot be hid, and does not put the candle under the bushel.

He presents his body a living sacrifice holy and acceptable unto God. He is not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ. Neither is he conformed to the world, but transformed by the renewing of his mind, that he may prove what is that good and acceptable, and perfect will of God. He is the salt of the earth, and his righteousness exceeds the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees. He lives in a manner becoming a disciple of Christ hastening to eternity. He worships God in spirit and in truth, and lives by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. He loves God with all his heart, soul, mind, and strength. He obeys the Bible. He knows this Book is right whether other books are right or not.

Suppose the infidel and atheist could prove their doctrine right, and the Christian find the Bible to be no revelation from God? even then he is safe; for atheists and infidels are bound to admit the morals of the Bible to be good, and those who obey it are as happy as they in this world, and stand as good a chance for happiness hereafter. Then if it were possible for them to prove their doctrine right, they gain nothing, and the Christian loses nothing here or hereafter. But should they be found mistaken, as they most certainly will, eternal consequences are involved. Here the Christian is safe.

The Christian is complete in Christ and possesses a Christian character. And this Christian character is made up of various elements or parts. As the body is formed of various parts which we call members, so is the Christian character formed of various elements or principles. In the following expressive language the apostle Peter mentions the variety of parts in the Christian character. "Add to your faith, virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity" (2 Pet. 1: 5-7). In reference to the absolute necessity of these parts, Peter declares that "he that lacketh these things is blind and cannot see afar off and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins" (verse 9). From this we see that if the Christian would be "neither barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ," these things must abound in him. Further the apostle says, if the Christian does "these things" he "shall never fall." Hence we see that the Christian character is a complete character, having all the parts the Divine Law requires.

We have said the Christian is complete in Christ and possesses a Christian character. This character is an ornament. It is "the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price." Christ was of a meek and quiet spirit. "When He was reviled He reviled not again; when He suffered He threatened not," but left us an example that we should follow His steps. "Let this mind be in you, which also was in Christ Jesus." "Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, aim yourselves likewise with the same mind." When danger and persecution and even death itself, appeared before Paul he said, "None of these things move me." And why was he not moved? Because he possessed a meek and quiet spirit, the Christian ornament. "Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth."

Marion, Ohio.

WORDS OF COMFORT.

BY MARY ROWLAND.

To my dear sister Elizabeth Hay:—

DEAR sister, oh how sad our poor hearts felt when we read the news of your dear Sadie. Our hearts are in sympathy with you for your dear departed child, and how we wished to be with you in that hour of affliction, could we have done so, and beheld the countenance of our dear niece and sister once more. How little did I think when we last parted with her, that we would no more greet her in this life; and as we could not sit with you in the congregation, as a member, we tried to remember you at a throne of grace, for death is no stranger at our threshold, and well do we remember the bitter cup we drank at that time. Oh dear parents, you are now bereft of your only daughter so young in years, at the age of nineteen; you can no more see her smiling face or hear her sweet voice utter kind words of love and affection in this world, but you have a strong hope of meeting her beyond the river, "nevermore to sever." Methinks she heard the Savior's voice telling her she had no continuing city here, therefore she sought one to come. We hear she suffered much, but hope she is gone where there is no suffering. "Yes, Sadie is gone," she can no more press the kisses on her mother's cheek nor entwine her with her loving arms.

We think it almost impossible for so sweet and loving a rose to wither and die in so short a time. She sprang up and budded on earth; and we trust she is blooming in heaven. Oh, dear parents, methinks if Sadie could tell of her glorious new home, freed from all her pain and suffering, she would say, oh parents haste! O brothers come and don't delay in the pleasures of this world, which must all vanish away; but lay up treasures in heaven which shall forever stand.

This is a loud call to the young and unconverted associates; we trust it may be the means of bringing some to Christ. We hope her dear brothers who are in the far West may become willing to be the Lord's children, and obey all His commands, and try to meet their dear pious father who was called home to heaven in their early childhood. Oh, dear sister, while your eyes are overflowing with tears, and your hearts are wounded with sorrow and disappointment, "look up to Jesus," for no other help we know. Try to be submissive to the will of the Lord, for His ways are not our ways; and they are past finding out. We are often made to wonder why death comes so often to the young and useful; and leaves the old and feeble; but the Lord has an object in it, and we may see it some time. I am one, too, that is disappointed, for I always looked up to her as one that would be a help to her mother in her old age. We trust she is resting for He thought it wise to call her home, for she was not ashamed to confess Christ before a multitude; she was young and innocent, and has escaped many trials, troubles and sorrows of this life. Dear sister look to the Lord for grace to sustain you in your sad bereavement. Methinks without the aid of Jesus, it would be impossible to bear a bereavement so great. Your afflictions have been severe, and your troubles hard to bear, but the Lord is able and willing to deliver you out of trouble. He has promised to be with us and not forsake us, if we live faithful and put our trust in Him. Jesus can turn weeping into joy; Jesus can comfort the broken-hearted. He will wipe all tears from our eyes. May you say as David said, "Hope thou in God, for I shall yet praise Him." Oh that we were all freed from trials, sorrows, temptation, and could join the angels praising God; but we are not there yet. No one knows of our troubles and trials, save Jesus alone; but if we trust Him and obey His commands, He will do all things for our eternal welfare. Let us all take courage anew and when our weary feet have wandered away from the Lord's commands, let us retrace them and not stray from the fold, but cling near to Jesus.

"Safe in the arms of Jesus, Safe on His gentle breast;"

Dear sister it won't be long until we will be called to pass over the cold and icy stream of death, to meet our loved ones gone before; for if we live right, we shall die right. Then what joy unspeakable to know as we are known; and while we mourn let us not forget to pray; and pray often for ourselves and our children, for there are so many things to lead us astray, if we are not watchful and prayerful. It is hard to part with our children, but we believe it has been for our good.

Palo, Ill.

THE SIN UNTO DEATH

BY Enoch EBY.

IF any see his brother sin a sin which is unto death, he shall ask and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death. There is a sin unto death: I do not say that he shall pray for it" (1 John 5: 16). "All unrighteousness is sin, and there is a sin (or several sins, German), not unto death" (17th verse).

In the above text of Scripture we have a sin set forth much to be dreaded, more than any other sin; hence the question is often asked, what is that sin? We simply answer, any willful sin against better light and knowledge. It is not the crime we commit, but the knowledge of the crime, that makes it a sin unto death. A man may commit a crime and not have a Bible knowledge of the sin, or if he has and does not consent to it with his mind (Rom. 7: 25), but is overtaken in the temptation, hence, if prayed for, can be forgiven, for it was not done willfully, while another may commit the same crime with a perfect knowledge of its sinfulness, but yet with a less degree of temptation, but willfully and even willingly commits the crime and consequently becomes to be the sin unto death for which there is no use in praying, for there is no sacrifice for willful sin after we receive a knowledge of the truth and have been enlightened (Heb. 10: 26; 6: 4).

The Jews in searching the Old Testament Scriptures and prophecies, had obtained a perfect knowledge of the character of Christ, and when He appeared many of them believed on Him, but would not confess Him lest they would be turned out of the synagogue, loving the praise of men more than the praise of God (John 12: 42, 43). But in the face of all their knowledge and strong convictions of His Messiahship, and of the fact of Him casting out devils by the Spirit of God, they nevertheless charge Him with having an unclean spirit, and casting out devils by Beelzebub the prince of devils; whereupon He replies, "all manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto the children of men, but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, shall never be forgiven neither in this world nor the world to come." It is a sin unto death, and the apostle John would say, there is no use in praying for such a willful rejection of the Son of God, and presumptuous blasphemy against the operation of the Holy Spirit.

I do not believe that they possessed the Holy Spirit, but they evidently possessed sufficient knowledge to know that their charge against Him was a lie, and that he did not cast out devils by the power of an unclean spirit, but by the Holy Spirit. But of how much sorer punishment suppose ye he shall be thought worthy, who, after he has been enlightened and tasted the good word of God and of the powers of the world to come, if he shall fall away again, and crucify the Son of God afresh, by trampling Him under foot and counting the blood of the covenant wherewith he was sanctified an unholy thing, and doing despite to the spirit of grace (Heb. 10: 29).

And as a solemn warning and means to escape this much dreaded condition in which it is possible for the believer to fall into, he says, verse 25, in the same chapter, not to forsake the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another and so much the more as ye see the day approaching.

We should however use great caution in discerning between a willful and involuntary sin; for while some have been critical in their investigations in comparing their own experience with the Scriptures, have concluded that many of the sins which they have committed have been willful, simply because to some small degree they had obtained the consent of their mind, hence become desponding, and Satan gets the advantage of them in that way. While on the other hand, some may be too lenient in their investigations and attribute all their sins to the weakness of their flesh, and do not make use of the means of grace offered them (prayer and fasting) to overcome, and hence by degrees lose strength and fall back to such an extent that Satan may get the advantage of them in that way, and finally cause them to commit the sin unto death.

But I rejoice that I can entertain the hope that few fall into this lamentable condition. Nevertheless let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall. Written by request.

Hjorring, Denmark, Dec. 22, 1877.

VISITING THE SICK.

By A. J. BROWN.

VISITING the sick is a divine injunction enjoined on the believer. But how to do this and do it right is the point. Is it to see that they have the necessities of life, or to speak a word of cheer and comfort to them? Or do we go there out of curiosity, or to taste the medicine, and interfere with the doctor? If you do better not go near the sick. Some show very good sense in the sick-room, while others do not. If you enter the sick-room remember the following: Enter the room pleasantly, kindly, speak cheerfully, and speak no more than what is necessary. Don't stay all day unless you are asked to do so, as the cook has enough to do without preparing an extra dinner for you. If you are asked to stay, do so; if not, cull again. Make your visits short and pleasant and they will do the patient good.

If you go in a sick-room, don't go in crying. If you do you will injure the patient every time. Better not go near. Don't go in and take a long breath and then commence, my dear, Mrs. A. told me that you were very sick, but did not expect to find you so very bad; oh how deathly pale you are, and that cough. I suppose you have no appetite. Next comes in No. 2; she was here before. "Oh how much worse you look this morning." Turns around to No. 1. "Don't you think she is going with the quick consumption; Mrs. B. was just so, and she did not last six weeks. And that large family of children. I think you could not take that medicine. Had to take, and so much of it. I think you would better change doctors. Dr. O. is such a nice man, and his medicine is so nice to take. I know a case just like yours that he cured in two weeks." This caller does more harm than good; the sooner you get rid of her the better; she don't care as much about the patient as she does about the doctor.

Next comes No. 3, not much to say, but her countenance speaks louder than words, which a sick person reads very readily. As a rule now No. 2 introduces the subject and the three hold a council, if not in the presence of the patient, they go into the next room and speak loud enough for the patient to hear them. And right here if they can't all three agree on one doctor there will be some blackmailing done; if not directly, indirectly. The doctor put the patient on a diet of beef tea and toast, but these good meaning callers say the patient will starve on that. One proposes chicken, another biscuit, the other something else.

When the doctor comes in the evening his patient is nearer ready for the coffin than for a night's rest. And all through these good meaning callers the patient dies, and the doctor has the blame of killing the patient. If you visit the sick, use your common sense; cheer them up all you can. It does not concern you who is doctoring, what medicine he gives. Don't pass your opinion on something you know nothing about. If you taste the medicine you don't know what it is, or what effect it has. Don't set your judgment against that of the doctor. A sick-room is gloomy enough at best. If a person needs a word of cheer in this world it is on a bed of sickness. Scores of patients are yearly talked or scared to a premature grave by these good-meaning callers.

Lanark, Ill.

A LAYMAN TAKES HIS PREACHER TO TASK

By C. W. 10.

LOOK here, brother B., haven't you been idling away a good deal of your time lately? Brother A. was standing by a large knotty oak log, upon which he had bestowed no little labor with no great result. His pastor, Bro. B., was thus saluted by way of invitation to get down from his horse and enter into conversation. The invitation was emphasized by Mr. A. sitting down upon the log, holding the handle of his beetle with one hand and a piece of tobacco in the other. Not that he expected to entice the preacher with tobacco, but taking a generous supply of the weed to fortify himself for his argument. A. was strong in argument. While B. was securing his horse to a neighboring sapling, there was a merry twinkle in his eye and a half-concealed smile playing about the corners of his mouth, caused by an amusing train of thought. He was thinking how much like the knotty log was his parishoner, who sat on it; and thus unconsciously fortifying himself against the attack which he was about to encounter.

"Why do you ask me that question, my brother?" said B. as he approached the log and the man. "O, I just supposed you had taken no time to make new sermons lately as you gave me an old one yesterday," said A., and slowly he rolled the great mass of "the weed" across his mouth, bringing it to rest as he watched the effect of his heaviest shot. B. replied, "I am really glad you remembered that sermon a whole year. Do you remember all sermons so well?" "No, indeed," said A., a little disconcerted by the manner of his pastor. "No, but you preached about missions last year, you said enough about tobacco costing more than we give to missions. And one does not like to hear you pounding away everlastingly upon one thing."

"I am delighted to know that I made an impression upon you that lasted a whole year," said B. But you say I "said enough" then. Now let us see (taking out his memorandum) you gave fifty cents for missions then, and one dollar yesterday. It costs, you say, fifteen dollars to keep you in tobacco. Now I reckon it will take just five more repetitions of that sermon to you, provided you double your contribution every time, and the fifth time give up the use of the filthy weed and add the money saved to your benevolent contributions.

I did say enough last year to induce brother C. and D. to give up the "weed" and give liberally for missions, but the facts brother A. are proof positive I did not say enough for you. Now if you are ready to give up a foolish habit and enlarge your ability and disposition to give money for the cause of Christ in the world, I will confess that enough has been said to you upon that theme." The tobacco goes across his mouth and settles down on the other side, and it does not need that A. should speak the negative, it was apparent from the whole man. "Now I wish," said B. "to ask you the same question you put to me. Haven't you been idling away great deal of time lately?" A. is relieved, surely he will get the best of it now, and he replies with spirit, "No, sir! I am a hard-working man. Look at my farm, (rising to his feet), look at my fence and barns. Best in the country. Look at the new rails all split by these hands. Look at these hands, hardened sir, by honest toil." And by way of emphasis he caught up his beetle, and with all his force, struck the half-driven wedge two ringing blows. The perspiration was standing on his flushed face as he turned to his pastor, demanding why he should ask such a question. "Me, oh, indeed, why ask me that?" "I only thought you had not put your wedge in a new log lately, but kept pounding away on the same old piece." You just now smote that wedge twice and then complain of me for striking a wedge once a year. Do you not know I have some tough old oaks to split, as well as the straight saplings, my brother? Indeed I am only imitating your wisdom in pounding away at tough customers till the wedge goes through." - Methodist Times.

THE EXAMPLES OF CHRIST.

By JAMES WERT.

THERE are many incentives held forth in the Scriptures to induce the humble follower of Jesus to imitate His actions, and the actions of good and virtuous characters, who endeavor to maintain a high standard of moral integrity. The Savior has set the brightest example of all that is lovely and right in the nature of things for us to copy, and he says to us in regard to those who do well, "Go then and do likewise." During His youth He gave us a noble example of implicit obedience to His earthly parents.

When at the age of twelve having accompanied them to the temple in Jerusalem where they had gone to worship, and afterwards on leaving the city they found that Jesus had remained behind, they then turned back seeking Him, and to their astonishment found Him profitably engaged in an interesting conversation in the temple, in the midst of the doctors, those who were well versed in the law, both hearing them and asking them questions. However, upon the request of His mother, He willingly returned home and was subject unto them, increasing in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man.

Thus we see when children are obedient to their father and mother, they follow their Savior in this respect and do that which is right and have the promise of enjoying good days and long life. Before Christ entered upon His ministerial labors He worked at the carpenter trade and by this means He no doubt gained a livelihood for Himself and others, at least encouraged industry, and that too, to some profitable purpose, and our own impression received from the study of the Sacred Pages, is that the more we imitate His actions the more happy and useful we may be, and become an ornament to ourselves, to society, and finally to our Creator, into whose hands we commit the keeping of our souls.

There is plenty of labor to be found in God's moral vineyard, and no excuse to be found for idleness; if we are entrusted with any talent the command is, "Occupy till I come," and then receive merited rewards.

After Christ entered upon His mission of redeeming the world, his meat was to finish the work the Father gave him to do. The apostle in writing to believers in Christ, calls them workers together with him. The principle of co-operation is a grand one, and if all the members of the mystical body of Christ would unitedly put forth their best efforts in the cause of our blessed Master, Zion's borders would be extended. It is a hopeful sign that the brotherhood sees and feels the need of a unity or concentration of action in the great work for the salvation of immortal souls. When Jesus called the disciples they willingly left all and followed him, and he commanded those who sat at his feet listening to the truths which he proclaimed; and no wonder for they were such as would make them wise unto salvation if they heeded them. Those who render implicit obedience to the examples and teachings of Christ, will be made free from the law of sin and death. The apostle writes thus: "Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example that we should follow his steps." Christ himself says, "I have given you an example that ye should do as I have done." "Whatever things were written aforetime were written for our learning."

May we as the followers of Christ humbly go forth in the discharge of the duties of our high and holy calling, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith, and not become weary in well-doing; for we know if we do our work well, our great Exemplar will say to us, "Well done thou good and faithful servant thou hast been faithful over a few things; I will make thee ruler over many things, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." Christ's examples in doing good to the children of men—to alleviate their sufferings, and proclaim such good news to poor humanity, are worthy of our imitation; for our acts of kindness to the faithful in the Lord, are the same as though done for him, and will be regarded as such when he comes to gather the redeemed home to dwell in those mansions in our Father's House prepared for all who are ready to awake in the likeness of their Redeemer.

Vicksburg, Ill.

The soul into which God puts gladness can never be empty of all joy.

The Brethren at Work.
PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE,
S. H. BASHOR,
M. M. ESHELMAN, } EDITORS.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent post-paid, to any address in the United States or Canada, for $1.50 per annum. Those sending ten names and $15.00, will receive an extra copy free of charge. For all over this number the agent will be allowed 10 cents for each additional name, which amount can be deducted from the money, before sending it to us. Money Orders, Drafts, and Registered Letters may be sent at our risk. They should be made payable to Moore, Bashor & Eselman. — Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed—

MOORE, BASHOR & ESHELMAN,
Lamar, Carroll Co., Ill.

LAMAR, ILL., MARCH 14, 1878.

Do not fail to read Bro. Enoch Ely's article this week, entitled "From Europe" and gather the kernels of truth that are in it. It ought to find lodgment in every heart.

In current Vol. No. 9, there appeared an article from Bro. A. Holloway of Kan., and by some means his address was omitted. We cannot now find it, and as Bro. Geo. Haydin of Hintonville, Ill., desires his address, we take this means of procuring it.

BROTHER John Metzger lately held several meetings at Marysville, Ind., and five were persuaded to enroll themselves on the side of Christ. There are now eighteen members at that place, and it is hoped others will soon put on Christ and walk in the narrow way.

BROTHER J. M. Replege of Farrington, Iowa, writes: "Bro. J. H. Fillmore came to us on the morning of the 18th of Feb.; preached at night for ten days; had large congregations, good order and attention, and six souls were made willing to put on the yoke of Christ."

MR. Wheeler, Vice President of the U. S., has announced that no liquor will be sold in the Capital building. This will be good news to those who want to live in a community where the laws are framed by sober men. We hope it may also not be given away in the same building and thus try and keep all our law-makers sober.

Mrs. Nicholas Weiss of Fort Wayne, died in that city ten years ago. She was a woman weighing 200 pounds. Recently the body was disinterred to remove to another cemetery, and it was found to be petrified, weighing nearly 2,000 pounds. The features were as natural as at the time of burial. The body is as rigid as a stone.

A PUBLIC discussion on the subjects of Baptism, Foot-washing and Lord's Supper, will likely occur sometime this Spring at Waynesboro, Pa., between Eld. F. Bergstrosser of the Lutheran church and Bro. Bashor. Will give our readers a report, should the discussion come off. All that remains is to decide the wording of the propositions.

"Who ever heard of a Jew being arrested for drunkenness or wife-beating?" asks the Jewish Times. We never have, and it is a credit to that people that they know how to behave themselves. We in turn ask: Who ever heard of a Christian being arrested for drunkenness or wife-beating? The man that does such things is no Christian.

We are in receipt of a letter from Bro. Enoch Ely dated London, Feb. 18th, in which he says, "To-morrow we are going out to Bath to see Bro. Brinkworth, and see what the prospects are. If nothing unusual turns up to make it necessary to stay longer, we will leave for New York on the steamer Elysia, the 27th. Our health is still good, and the weather, since here, feels like May."

THE treaty of peace between Russia and Turkey was signed at Constantinople on Saturday, March 2nd. On the announcement of this, there was great rejoicing at St. Petersburg, and the opinion prevails that England has no longer any pretext to engage in war. We fondly hope that peace may perch upon the banners of all nations, for war is a fearful thing. In our solemn reflective moments we wonder how intelligent beings can deliberately shoot, mutilate and destroy each other. But then when we remember that sin lies at the root of all of it, we get an answer to our wondering.

It is said that the firm stand taken by Moody against secret societies, while in Chicago one year ago, has produced considerable opposition to him even among members of his own church. They are wedded to their secret idols, and do not want the traffic of their goddess Diana interfered with. Even religious papers, that ought to be in better business, oppose him on the ground that he preaches against secret orders, and it is evident that these works of darkness have a wonderful influence over the modern clergy, and those who dare lift their voice against them may expect to have not only the secular, but also the religious press arrayed against them.

A LETTER received from Bro. Moore just as we go to press, informs us that he arrived at Newtonia on the afternoon of the 6th and the debate was then in progress. Our readers may rest assured the report will be interesting. Bro. Stein performs his part in a cool, Christian-like manner, pouring in the solid arguments with good effect while Eld. Ray presumes to carry the fort by storm. However, the old Gospel (and "Battle") Flag still waves triumphantly over the fortifications and in the hands of able defenders, victory will perch upon the banner of Truth.

BRETHREN and sisters, please do not forget your dear brother and sister Hope. They have spent even their own earnings in trying to establish the good, old apostolic doctrine in their native country, and are unable to earn anything. If you love them, you will pray for them. If you pray for them, let it be a real practical prayer. God bless them for they have endured much. Send your contributions either to this office or C. P. Rowland, Lamar, Ill., and they will be forwarded. Or if you prefer to send to him direct, address your letters, C. Hope, Hjørning, Wensyssel, Denmark, Europe, and look to God for your reward.

We have received a communication entitled "Look, Before You Leap," in which the writer gives his experience and observations in Kansas. His conclusions are, that it is best to first go and look at the country, and we think this good advice, for no person should go head-long into a thing or place without due consideration. Just at present there is an immense rush of people to Kansas, Texas and Nebraska, and we hope that all will enjoy health and prosperity, but work as they will, there will be more or less disappointment. We hope the writer of "Look, Before You Leap" will pardon us for not publishing his article as it would likely occasion considerable ill-feeling, and create much needless and unedifying contention.

BROTHER Abraham Bowman says he is pleased with our manner of keeping accounts with agents. We hope all are pleased with it. By our present manner of doing business, we save much space for more interesting matter; and we have in contemplation some improvements in our office business which will be of vast advantage to us and all our patrons. We wish to avoid all mistakes, if possible, and do all we can to have every subscriber to receive his paper regularly. It is no advantage to us to withhold a single paper even if we wished to do so; hence a system of business that will enable us to faithfully perform our part was apparent, and we set ourselves to work to find it, and think we have. Write plainly, all names and addresses, and we shall follow your orders with pleasure.

THE subject of dancing is now being agitated in New York by popular ministers. The "no hell" theory being nearly worn out, of course another "sensational," another "agitation" must come forth. Dr. Theodore G. Thomas says, he "considered dancing a capital exercise." He thinks that the exercise that comes by a "bread-mill would be absolute drudgery," while dancing would be "pleasant companionship and amusement." One church in Chicago has also commenced an inquiring into the subject with a view of recommending it; and of course when a church once begins to look that way, they are pretty sure to go that way. It seems proper that dam any should follow the introduction of the "fiddle" and "horn" into the choir. Ere long the preacher can arise and say, "Let us fiddle, sing and dance the fortieth Psalm."

THE Christian Standard of March 2nd, says: "So far as is known to us, there is not another religious weekly published which exercises the same care to keep its advertising columns perfectly clean as it does the literary." In looking over its advertisements, we find notices of pianos, cooking stoves, gold and silver trinkets, mattresses, fashionable hats and caps, baptismal suits, bells, engines, yachts, vegetable pills, silver spoons, tobacco, bougies, &c. We present a paper that is cleaner than all that, for we are determined to leave the secular field to whom it properly belongs, the secular press and the world. Of late the Chicago Tribune and the Daily News have been dealing out some hard arguments to certain "religious papers" for admitting swindling notices. And it is astonishing to see what even professors of religion will do for "filthy lucre." Many of them do not hesitate to assure their readers that those for whom they advertise are doing a legitimate business, when at the same time it ought to be obvious to them that the men who offer to sell gold-plated watches for $3, or to reveal how a man can make from $5 to $20 per day at home, are swindlers, top, bottom and all. We have been approached and offered "rare chances" for just our insertion in the BRETHREN AT WORK, but by the grace of God we intend to have nothing to do with a kind of business that reflects nothing but disgrace upon the Christian religion when mixed with it. "Ye are not of the world" still has the same old sound in it as in apostolic times.

OUR MISSOURI TRIP.

KNOWING the anxiety of our readers to learn the particulars of the Stein and Ray debate, we concluded to do our part toward giving them a synopsis of the discussion throughout, hence left Lamar at 2:16 Monday afternoon, March 4th, and reached Rock Island at 7:50 in the evening. We left on the C. B. & Q. R. R., at 8 o'clock for St. Louis, where we arrived at 7:30 the next morning, to find that we could not get a train till 9:40 at night. This, of course, did not suit our arrangements exactly, but thought no use to borrow trouble over it, but make the best of it.

Most of the day was spent looking over different parts of the city, and especially at the large iron bridge across the Mississippi at this place. I cannot describe the huge structure; its complications are beyond all I know about bridge building; suffice it to say that it is a masterly piece of work, crossing the entire river with three spans, the ends of which are firmly held by huge abutments of well executed masonry. There are two tracks, the lower for the cars, and the upper for wagons, street cars and foot passengers. The heaviest trains moving over the bridge do not seem to jar it in the least.

I spent considerable time at the wharf watching the men unloading the boats. They were a rough looking set, yet each one seemed to know his place and business. Some of them I noticed, and in short had, perhaps, good reason for pitying all of them. Doubtless the most of them were unfamiliar with the Gospel plan of salvation, not because they had no opportunity of learning, but because they made an effort to add to "virtue, knowledge." I do not believe that the great Father will condemn any one for not doing that which he does not know, but it is evident and reasonable that some will have to give an account for not applying themselves more diligently, and not embracing the opportunities they have of learning the Truth.

This is an old city, having been settled by the French in the year 1764, and is consequently over one hundred years old. Kaskaskia, in Illinois, was also settled by the French in 1720, making it considerably older than St. Louis. St. Louis is nicely located on the Western bank of the Mississippi, but very poorly laid out. The streets are crooked and in some places very narrow, though generally clean. The city was first laid out by the French when it was thought imprudent to appropriate much land to the use of streets. The streets here forcibly remind me of some people we occasionally meet in the world. They prefer groping their way through the narrow cells of darkness, when the Lord has made light enough for them and as many more like them. But we learn another lesson from these crooked streets. They were laid out without the use of the compass, and now since the city is built upon will not do to change them, hence all who erect buildings here in this part of the city must conform to this crooked habit, and help keep the crooked thing crooked. That is just the way with some of these modern churches; they were formed and laid out, not according to the divine compass of Truth, but in harmony with somebody's conscience, and when they are shown their error it will not do to change, for that would spoil the whole church, and prove that the uninspired founders did not know what they were about.

We have churches that were supposed to have been made according to the pattern of the Lord, but on a little closer investigation of late, it is discovered that some of them practice a method of baptizing not yet four hundred years old. Some even went so far as to take the bread and wine before dinner, and then call it the Lord's supper, just as though supper came before dinner; but on looking at the old Gospel compass it is found that "the Lord Jesus, in the same night in which he was betrayed took bread." As they have all their churches built up along the crooked line, it will not do to change, for it will destroy them entirely. I presume the better way would be to consume them in the fire of the holy Truth, and lay out and start them aright, and if possible get them on the old Gospel track.

I will leave St. Louis at 9:40 to-night and soon be at the place of discussion, from which the readers will hear more in the future.

A. H. H.

SOME PLAIN TALKING.

THERE are a class of people, and the number is not very small either, who pretend to be great lovers of the Truth, their plea is the thus saith the Lord, "we will go where He commanded, but no farther." The plea is a good one, but most woefully abused by them. It seems to be a kind of sacred curtain behind which they can commit their dark deeds. They, in fact, care a little about the Bible and its sacred teachings as the drunkard does about temperance. They have their heart set on sin, there are certain things they want to do and must have some excuse for sinning against better light and knowledge.

They can do this and that just because the Bible does not in so many words prohibit it. I tell the people that it is supposed that Christians would have a little good common sense at least, and therefore, they would know some things without being told. The man who claims that he can play cards and not sin, on the ground that the Bible is silent on it, lacks a few of the essential elements required to constitute him a fit subject of conversion. I once met a sister who spent much of her time reading novels, and undertook to justify herself in the habit, for the simple reason that the Bible said nothing against it. I told her that sisters, who claimed to be guided by the Holy Spirit, ought to know that much without being told.

Just so it is with many other pernicious habits that have crept into the world, and I fear, in some instances, are finding their way into the church. We have people who will ruffle and trim their clothes from head to foot, trim themselves out in all the modern styles, and go to church that way, claiming that they do not feel condemned, for God has said nothing against ruffles and ornamental trimmings. They call for a thus saith the Lord. When we refer them to the "plain apparel" of the Scripture, and "not of costly array" then they want to know what "plain apparel" is and what is understood by "costly array." Such people care very little about the Bible, or the thus saith the Lord either. Their heart is set on the world and they are determined to walk with it. There are people outside of the church, making no profession at all, who know better than that. I have seen men and women who belong to no church, yet seemed to be a good, moral kind of people, who would not be found guilty of doing some things that some members try to justify themselves in. I think it high time for reformation in some things when worldly people are in advance of professing Christians.

Our people started out as a plain people, repudiating and opposing everything that tended toward pride. This divine feature they learned, not from the decrees of men, but from the Word of the Lord. They stood aloof from the foolish fashions and vain customs of the world, and endeavored to hand the same principle of plainness and non-conformity down to coming generations. This peculiarity did not belong exclusively to the Brethren, but was a leading feature among other denominations, but they got to pleading the Bible is silent on fine dressing, "we want a thus saith the Lord before we can consent to depart from the fashions of the world." Well they prayed for fashions, and costly array and now they have got them, and I fear that among most of them there is but little genuine religion left.

Those who are acquainted with our people know that plainness in dress is one of our distinctive features, and for it our people have ever labored, and therefore when they unite with the church, instead of going to work and doing all they can to pull down what our ancient brethren have labored so hard to maintain, they ought to help build up the cause. If they have no respect for themselves and their salvation, they ought to have some for the church, and not try to destroy it. There are congregations which have been annoyed for years by these attempts to introduce pride into the church. If making trouble and causing dissensions contrary to the Word is their object, and all they have in view, there would be nothing wrong in the church politely informing such characters that there is plenty of room outside, that the church of God was not made for unconverted people. The best thing the church can do is to withdraw herself from every brother that walketh disorderly.

Then there is another class that opposes the advice of the church, do not want to be subject to the church, but are glad to have the church to submit to them. Of course, when it comes to religion they know more than the entire church put together, and are not particularly smart either. They are ever ready to give advice, but never ready to take it without a thus saith the Lord. Some of these persons can dress just as fine as the world dare dress, engage in their amusements and run after them in their sin and folly generally. They can and are willing to learn from the world, want worldly ways, and all this too without a thus saith the Lord, but are neither disposed nor willing to learn of those older than they are. They can enjoy themselves with disobedient members rigged out in all the gewgaws and flabulals of fashion, without the first particle of thus saith the Lord, and then turn right round and make fun of and laugh at those who are dressed plainly. What do such people care for either the Bible or the church? Comparatively nothing aside from self-interest. It makes little difference with them what the Bible says.

Some may think this is too plain talking. Well I mean it, we need something that rings out clear and distinct, and the time is here that some plain talking should be done. We don't want to walk so close to the world that it takes a magnifying glass to tell which side of the line we are on. The church and the world should walk far apart, not only in dress, but in abstaining from every appearance of evil. If any find that in which they would like to engage, and the Bible is silent on it, I advise them to first go into their closet and ask God in earnest prayer to bless them in the act. If there are any who can ask God to bless them in playing cards, dancing, at the billiard table, following the foolish fashions of the world and a host of other similar things they have a different conscience from what I think they have.

J. H. W.

TEMPERANCE.

THE word temperance, from temper, which is derived from the Greek word temnain, meaning "to cut off," is a word now used to express abstinence from strong drink. To be temperate, therefore, is to cut off all that is evil, not only in the matter of drinking, but in all things else. Felix said, "Go for the present," when Paul discoursed concerning temperance or self-government. Ah, what a strong advocate of temperance was that eminent apostle! No drunkenness, no slave to strong drink was Paul. He made no apologies, no excuses for tipping and intemperance. God blessed him for his faithfulness too.

"For those who sleep, sleep by night, and the drunkards drink by night" (1 Thess. 5: 7). Drunkards drink by night, that is they bob whenever they want to drink; are ashamed to come out boldly and carry on their brutish business before the public, but as soon as the strong drink brings them into subjection, make them slaves and helpless creatures, they will show themselves to those around them. Poor fellow! First they simply tasted it; after awhile, they tasted a little more, then it went so near that they could drink more freely, and finally they became so fully overcome that they could not avoid drinking more and more until they were reeling through the streets, cursing, swearing, staggering and degraded.

God says, that unrighteous persons, fornicators, adulterers, adulterers, ebullienters, Soban-ber, thieves, covetous persons, drunkards, revelers, extortioners, shall not inherit the kingdom of God. Ah! what terrible company. Where is there joy among such? Where is there comfort in such a company? None, none. Poor drunkard! There he goes, ragged, poor, filthy, disgraced, all because he thought he could take his drams and continue temperate.

I hope no brother will try to apologize for tipping. Is there one who has "put on Christ" that has the boldness to stand up and make excuses for the traffic in strong drink? If so, read 1 Cor. 6: 9, 10, then read it again, and look at the result.

Self-government don't mean to loiter around saloons, nor even to go in them for drinks. Today the world is moving against this great evil, and why should a professional follower of Jesus fall behind the world in good works? It is the appearance of evil to go into saloons, to drink where drunkards revel and curse. Why then not avoid the very appearance of evil, as the Book enjoins? Do you know that when you join hands in the support of liquor traffic, you are virtually helping thousands on to ruin? Do you know that some of the cries of the poor orphan for bread may come up at the judgment, because you virtually helped his poor father to drink run and go down into a drunkard's grave? Do you know that by either morally, socially or otherwise helping the saloon keeper to scatter death, woe, misery and want in many families, that you are in the same boat with him? Do you know that the rum-seller's and rum-drinker's army is a poor, miserable lot of humanity that brings no comfort to the homes of the friendless, the orphan, the widow? And you'll stand in this wretched looking army and say you are a Christian? A Christian in favor of ruin? No Christian is in favor of strong drinks as vended and poured out over this land. The man who apologizes for saloons and rum holes, has set himself up against the Bible standard of a Christian, and the man that runs against the Standard, has lost his perfect title to Christian possession. Stand therefore on the Bible doctrine of temperance. Be a man, not only for yourself, but for your neighborhood, the church and all around. Let your light shine, and never put it out with strong drink. And above all stay out of those sinks of vice and misery—saloons.

And now, brethren, why not lay this matter before candidates for baptism and fellowship? The doctrine of temperance is as clearly and as forcibly taught by the Lord as non-swearing, anti-secrectism, non-conformity to the world, non-resistance or any other vital principle. Why must on these on the part of applicants and not on that? Why be so particular as to a part of the requirements and not all? Would not a step forward here redound to the honor and glory of God? Would not a little progression right here be a healthy step for the church? I am inclined to think that the fact that the doctrine of temperance is not presented to applicants in every case is simply because of neglect, or want of thought. And I shall be happy if this suggestion puts many hearts to work in this neglected matter, and thus prove to the world and the Lord that we are in real earnest in temperance, and mean to shun the intoxicating cup, teaching all that we are strictly for Bible temperance. I do not wish to be understood as asserting that the church has not believed, and to a certain extent, practiced temperance, but I do assert that more good can be done, more homes made happy, Bible temperance more vividly impressed upon the mind by teaching it publicly to penitents. And on the other hand I see no good reason why we should not do so. God grant grace that all may look to Jesus, stand firm against intemperance and at last give us sweet rest in heaven.

M. M. E.

"BUT WHOM THE LORD COMMENDETH"

PAUL, in 2 Corinthians 10: 18, has set a stake against self-commendation—self-praise. He stretched not himself beyond his measure, but as a true man of God constantly sought to glory in his Lord. True, he sometimes had to remind his brethren with whom he labored, that he too was an apostle and had somewhat to boast; but mark you, he sent the letter to the church which he wished to remind. And there can be no just objection to any brother sending a letter to any church which he has helped to build up, reminding them how he labored day and night to present them as a chaste virgin to Christ. But there is no need to send such an epistle to all the churches. Paul did no such thing.

To you, therefore, who have fallen into the habit (for it is simply a habit, I think), of reporting your own work in such a manner as to leave the impression on the mind of the reader that you are seeking undue notice, I commend you to the noble example of Christ and the Apostles. Remember that Paul's letters were private for some time, and that they were not instantly spread abroad before all the churches and the world. I can see the wisdom of that. It is, no doubt, well that the progress of the Lord's work be given to the brethren and sisters, for it seems to strengthen and enliven many a poor, weary saint—especially if he be away off from the main body of the church, but for the good of the minister, the good of the general brotherhood, let some other person do it.

Some one in each congregation should, in a brief and simple manner, state that such or such a brother labored with them, and give the results. I think a minister should be encouraged; and James says, "Brethren, if any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him, let him know that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul and hide a multitude of sins." Right that he should know it, but hardly prudent that he should tell it abroad. Let others do that, and in doing so, please let the Lord do the commending. It is one thing to tell what was done, and another thing to commend it. "For not he that commendeth himself is approved, but whom the Lord commendeth." He does not even say that another shall commend publicly, but the Lord does the commending.

Now let us all, while we are trying to reform, become better, seeking unity and oneness, endeavor to always hold up the old Palestine Glass, and if we should see any spots on ourselves, straightway endeavor to get them off. "O well," says one, "if I am not to write up my own labors in my own way, I'll say nothing." Well, if you cannot leave out all of your own, and put in all of Jesus, you would better not write. Neither you nor the world, nor the brotherhood will become any the richer by so much of your own. I can see no apostolic order in crying "reform! reform!" and at the same time pressing self into every article of ministerial labor, that the Pattern and the thing made have no resemblance whatever. Come, therefore, and let us have a real reform right here, and the world will take notice that we have been, and still are, with Christ.

M. M. E.

WITNESSES.

SUCH were the apostles, the disciples of our Master. God does not bring men and women to Himself with argument, but with testimony. He makes no apologies, no display of logic, but gives us testimony that we may believe. Jesus left a host of witnesses that He was the Christ. These said to the stiff-necked Jews: "But ye denied the Holy One and the Just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you; and killed the Prince of life, whom God hath raised from the dead; whereof we are witnesses" (Acts 2: 14, 15). Are not many denying the Holy One to-day? Do they not desire another,—one that makes no demands of them? Look at the Prince of life; look at the witnesses. They believed and practiced alike. They had one faith, one practice, one hope. God loved them for that. There are no witnesses to testify that God requires differently of us. The plan for those of the first century must be the plan for those of all centuries to the end. The Gospel then produced people that were alike in faith and practice. The same Gospel produces nothing different now. Then, all spake the "same thing." Smaller people produced in a smaller manner speak the same thing to-day. The witnesses of primitive times, speak the same testimony now, and we know that they are true, for they all speak alike.

You may deliver lecture, after lecture on the harmony of science and religion, but that does not save the soul. It is testimony that produces faith. There are many things in the Word of Truth that seem alleged to the worldly man, but faith is the Christian's weapon, not logic. It takes a Christ to put faith testimony that cannot be shaken to pieces. Will you believe the witness?

M. M. E.

SATURDAY NIGHT.

The Country Home.

I ALWAYS enjoyed the country home, for if given a little attention it is a home indeed. The man who has a good wife, a few happy children, and a farm amply improved, and out of debt, ought to be happy so far as this world is concerned. He has the little premises all to himself and the dear family. Of course no rent to pay, can raise his own produce and enjoy life generally. He ought to be happy.

Not every one knows how to make the country home happy; don't know how to make things cheerful, and some of these who do know, make no effort to put their knowledge into practice. There are plenty who know how to work, how to save money and accumulate wealth, but when it comes to making a little paradise of their homes they know not how to do it, and often care less. How necessary it is that country homes be made happy, for it is the best place on earth to raise a family and enjoy the good gifts of life.

I am just now reminded that once on a time a well-to-do farmer met me at the depot, gave me a seat in his buggy and soon had me to his pleasant home some distance out in the country. I soon discovered that it was a pleasant abode. The farmer was not rich, but had what he needed, and that is about all that any of us ought to have. They were not too rich and proud to work, nor too aristocratic to be kind to their neighbors and strangers. There was no quarreling and jarring in the family, each seemed delighted in pleasing the other. They all worked; no idlers were allowed in that hive, and it would be a good thing if none were allowed anywhere. It is said that "Idleness is the devil's workshop," and it is evident that he knows just how to make use of it to advance his own interest.

On looking around, I saw that things were neat and tidy, and well arranged. Every thing was in its place. Nothing, however, extravagant or gaudy, but conveniently arranged. When the men folks came into the house, they first cleaned off their boots well, and thus did not carry dirt into the rooms. That was right, for dirt was not made to be carried into houses; its place is out of doors, and there it will accomplish some good. It is very perplexing to mothers and sisters when the men carry great loads of mud on their boots into the house. Boys want to learn a lesson here. In the rooms were a number of deep-meaning attractions; none of those pictures that are a disgrace to a well regulated home. I allude to the pictures of persons in a half nude state. When I go into a family and see their walls covered with such tempting things, I feel like delivering a lecture on the "Proper culture of the human heart." Few are aware of the direful evils resulting from such pictures. If parents raise sons and daughters around things of this kind they need not expect but that they will fall into some disgraceful sin. Of course, such pictures are regarded as a skillful exhibition of the works of art, but their final tendency is evil in the extreme.

Hanging on the wall were some well selected mottoes neatly executed in needle work. One reads, "Thou God seeest me." Another, "The Lord will provide." But lying on the floor was a small foot-carpet on which were worked these beautiful words: "Home, sweet Home." I wonder how many sweet homes there are to-night. I would that these words were inscribed in every room, and on every heart. Near the entrance I found this beautiful prayer: "God bless our Home;" yes, may God bless all sweet homes to-night, and help the inmates of every home in the land to make their abode a happy one.

There are no homes so capable of being rendered pleasant as those in the rural districts, and yet how sadly are many of them neglected. There are thousands of such to-night where the family is discontented, they are not following the avocations of life in which they would seem to delight. They imagine that they are out of their place. The boys must be put through college and prepared for professional life; the girls must be trained to accommodate the ways and shades belonging to the upper classes of society. Home in the country, to them, becomes a purgatory; they visit it only as a matter of necessity. The old people are forsaken, or urged to enter some mercantile business for which they are in no way fitted, and the consequence is bankruptcy. Not one in this once happy group can truthfully sing "sweet home." They have no home. The country home has passed into other hands. They go to their graves in sadness because they did not labor to make their rural home pleasant.

Fathers and mothers, make your country homes happy that you may keep your sons and daughters there. Do not run them off into city avocations, for these are becoming flooded from the ranks in the country. Prepare your sons for farmers and your daughters for farmer's wives. For real enjoyment there is no place like a well regulated country home. Learn to be content with your position in life and make the best of it, knowing that the farmer is the bone and sinew of our country. The time is coming when their positions will be envied by the people of our cities. Standing behind the plow is of more real worth than standing behind the counter. Instead of the farmer envying the merchant's position the day is not far distant when the merchant will gladly exchange with the farmer. Remember these things; stay on the farm and make home happy.—J. H. MOORE.

The Home Circle.

READ AND OBEY.

- Husbands, love your wives.
Wives, obey your husbands.
Fathers, provoke not your children to wrath.
Children, obey your parents in all things.

Edited by M. M. Eshelman.

SUNDAY MORNING.

Going To Meeting.

THANK the Lord we can all go to meeting to-day, says father, as he enters the room after looking to the wants of his animals.

Now why are all so anxious, from parents down, to go to meeting? Is it because they want to show themselves? because there is to be a fair there? or a carnival exhibition?

The Bible was the chief study in that family. Jesus in the morning, Jesus at noon, Jesus in the evening—Jesus all the day long.

But finally all are ready, and they start to meeting. Does the father begin to tell some funny story just to amuse the children? No, not that.

As the father goes driving along in the refreshing breeze and pleasant sunshine, he says, "Wife, I am so thankful that we can thus enjoy life."

Thus the parents spend the time on the way to meeting, and the children, too, have been listening and have learned some good lessons.

THE CRUCIFIXION.

THE following is a curious piece of antiquity. The middle cross represents our Saviour, those on either side the two thieves, and on the top and down the cross are our Lord's expressions.

Diagram of a crucifixion with text arranged in a cross shape. Includes the word 'INRI' at the top and 'MY GOD, MY GOD!' on the left and right arms.

"TOO YOUNG."

I AM a little boy, ten years old, and go to school every day. My father is dead, I live with my mother. I want to join the Brethren church, but my grandpa thinks I am too young.

My Dear Little Friend:— Do you know that you are a sinner? If you are old enough to know that, then you are old enough to turn to Jesus.

You are not too young to love Jesus, are you? If you can love Him, and know that you are a sinner, there is no reason why you should not be received into fellow ship with God's people.

I'm not too young to sin, I'm not too young to die, I'm not too little to begin, A life of faith and joy.

Let this be your sentiment, and may God bless you in your wish to love and serve Him.—Ed.

TO SHARON.

WHILE looking over the letters in the "Children at Work," I saw one from my little friend, Sharon B. Bosserman of Dunkirk, Ohio.

Marion, Ohio.

The Brethren at Work, from March 1st, to Jan. 1st, 1879 only $1.20.

CHILDREN AT WORK.

From Emma Watson.—Dear Editor:—We had one of the most able sermons preached for us, Tuesday eve, Dec. 18th, from the R. R. Sermon, we ever had the pleasure of listening to.

From Lizzie May Johnson.—Dear Editor:—I am now twelve years old. I was baptized when nine, and I have never felt like going back into the world again, but am determined, by the grace of God, to have a Christian.

From Lizzie Miller.—I want to get a good education, and be useful when I grow to be a woman. I have been trying to labor in the Master's cause for one year, and have enjoyed myself well.

From S. Mardie Baker.—Dear Editor:—I am only nine years old; go to school, and study my lessons in the evening also. When we all have our lessons, we read in the Testament before we go to bed.

From Sarah E. Brown.—Dear Editor:—I have three brothers that have gone to rest in Jesus. I want to be a good girl so that if I grow up I may be a good woman.

From Charlie M. Mohler.—Dear Editor:—I like the "Home Circle." I am nine years old, and attend school. My pa and ma go to church, and I like to go too.

From Sarah L. Ellis.—Dear Editor:—I am quite a little girl eight years old. I go to meeting with father and mother.

From George W. Wrightsman.—Dear Editor:—I think it must tire you to publish all the letters from the little folks.

In Earnest.—"Each breath is burned with a bidding, and every minute hath its mission." Are we living useless, useless lives, tossing golden opportunities from our hands?

There is a time, we know not when, A point we know not where, That marks the destiny of men, 'Twixt glory and despair.

Triumph of Death.—The death and sleep are very much alike, the ages all tell us; but we view attractively Leigh Hunt describes the latter.

Old Age.—Old age is blessed time when, looking back over the follies, sins, and mistakes of past life—too late, indeed, to remedy, but not too late to repent—we may put off earthly garments, one by one, and dress ourselves for heaven.

Christening.—You have seen the ivy and the woodbine clustering around our walls. Well, that is just sometimes the sweetest Christian graces cling to rough and hard natures.

PRAYER, if it be done as a task, is no prayer.

CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM EUROPE.

Our beautiful vessel, Irta, conducted by Captain Wittingham, has anchored at or near the mouth of the river Elbe, where it enters into the North sea, having set sail at Hamburg for London yesterday evening at 11 o'clock and anchored this morning at 2 A. M. In consequence of a dense fog, so dense we can scarcely see the water from the deck, and notwithstanding the impudence and anxiety manifested on the part of many of the passengers, the captain will not go till he can see his way clear. Some of the passengers say, "Captain, can't you run by the compass?" "No, we may run into some other vessel and one or both of us suffer shipwreck."

We can learn several important lessons from this circumstance; as our journey through life can be, and often is, very appropriately compared to a voyage on the sea. If thousands in the world would act as cautious as our captain, they would not so likely make shipwreck. Men frequently often get into the fog, and cannot see far ahead, and how they shall or can make their ends meet, yet they will drive ahead, make promises and contracts, one after another, and all on a risk, and run headlong into some other person's interest with his good credit and fair promises, that he himself suffers shipwreck and severely injures his neighbor. My brethren, those things ought not so to be among us. When we get into the fog, cast anchor and watch for the day, and nine cases out of ten, you will be the gainer, and your religion won't suffer.

But we can also learn a profitable lesson in our spiritual voyage. We often get into the fog and can't see our way clearly; then we would better cast anchor, if it does require some patience, like in our peculiar position at present. Some of the passengers say, "Captain, I think you might move on slowly without much danger," but all to no avail; he cannot be prevailed upon; he understands his business and cannot be influenced to do differently, though he desires to go as much as any, but he is more judicious than the rest, and says, like the Lord to Moses, or Moses to the people, "Stand still and see the salvation of the Lord." There is frequently more salvation in standing still, than in moving forward, but when the way is clear, the waters divided, then the command, go forward, should be obeyed.

I learn a lesson of firmness from the conduct of our captain—a fruit taught by the apostle: "Be not carried about with every wind of doctrine." It is easy to be a Christian while the current of influence is favorable, but when this sea is everywhere spoken against, and strong opposition to meet with, it requires firmness. "Be steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord," is the apostle's injunction.

We also learn to have forbearance with each other, another apostolic injunction. While we, in our impatience, must bear with the seeming stubbornness of our captain, he must exercise still more forbearance with our impatience and annoyance. So we oft must do as Christians. Even in the church the members often think they know better than the minister or elder, or even the church, and would like to have it different, but cannot, so they must bear. On the other hand the elders desire the purity of the church, and hence must keep house in the church according to the Gospel; he often must bear much with, and from unruly members who would like to drive ahead. When those of experience say no, we must cast anchor and wait till the fog passes away; it is dangerous to move now. There is one difficulty comes up right here, and that is, we always thank the brother or sister or neighbor, as the case may be, is much more in the fog than we. For instance, in a foggy day you see a man stand a piece away from you, you think the fog is much thicker where he is than where you are. So with us, if we are not very cautious in self-examination, and drive against each other with such force as both to sustain injury, and the reason often is, we are both in the fog, and hence should have forbearance with each other; and if you see your way clearly and another one comes towards, and will likely run against you, turn to one side a little and let him come up along side, then say, come let us reason together, and the fog may vanish and both see their way clearly.

Again when we see them drop the anchor for out of sight we are made to think of our spiritual anchor, hope, which is both sure and precious, and which entereth into that within the veil, whether the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus. Oh, blessed hope! how firm it holds our vessels when storms prevail. It causes us to sing,

"Let waves like a wild deluge come,
And storms of sorrow fall,
So I but safely reach my home,
My God, my heaven, my all."

What unhappy creatures we would often be had we not that blessed hope which, being connected with the cable-ropes of faith, reaches far out of sight and holds our vessel firm amid the storms of persecution, reproaches temptations, losses and crosses of every kind, and often our little boat seems ready to sink when the waves are high, but faith looks to the promises, which are more firm than the mountains and hills, and hope firmly grasps the cable-ropes of faith and begins to sing.

"When floating on life's troubled sea,
By storms and tempests driven,
Hope, with her radiant finger, points
To brighter scenes in heaven;
She bids the storms of life to cease,
The troubled breast be calm,
And in the wounded heart she pours
Religion's healing balm."

The fog having nearly all passed away, our vessel started this morning about four o'clock, having lost about twenty-four hours. We are now out on the North sea, getting along quite pleasantly. It strikes rather much to write legible, so I will stop and finish in London, if we arrive safely.

LESSON. Had a tedious trip; instead of crossing in 36 or 40 hours, we were 75. Our clear sky did not last long; in the afternoon the fog became so dense that they were obliged to stop awhile in mid sea, could not anchor; but the sea being very calm they laid still awhile, but soon began to move along slowly till sometime in the night it cleared off, and we arrived at St. Katharine's wharf in London at 2 A. M., Sunday. And by the time we got to the Adelphi hotel and everything in order, it was too late to attend any place of worship. We spent the day in reading, writing and meditating, wondering what per cent. of the moving mass of human beings that daily crowd the streets of this exceeding great city would stand at the right hand of the judge in the judgment day. What a pity it should prove to be as small as in Sodom and Gomorrah. We do not feel inclined to judge in the matter, but if we are permitted to know the tree by its fruit, we would be forced to come to the conclusion that the salt is very scarce.

ENOCH BRY.

London, England, Feb. 18th, 1878.

From Seneca Church, Ohio.

Dear Brethren—

"GIVE me into you and peace from God our Father and from the Lord Jesus Christ." Let us thank God always for the mercies and blessings which He bestows upon us from day to day. Bro. McMullen of Richland Co., was with us four days. His first sermon was from Matt. 6:33, "But seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."

During his several discourses, he told us what the kingdom was, how to seek it, and how to enter in. It was surely good seed sown; but it remains to be seen yet, whether it fell on good ground or among thorns. He left us the morning of 20th inst. and the language of our heart is, come again brother, come again. Apply the truth enfolded to the poor unstriving brother that has the use of but one arm, spoken of No. 7, present volume of the BROTHERS AT WORK.

A SISTER.

Feb. 25, 1878.

From David Wolfe.

IN No. 7, present volume, I see over my name a communication that makes me say things that were not in my letter—neither did they occur. My brethren will think it strange when they see it, and that I may be set right, you will please publish this. I do not complain of the mistake made, but am sorry to make this correction. I have no copy of my letter; but can give the sense of the original.

Dear Brethren—

We send you our best wishes for your happiness and prosperity in all your obligations, as members of Christ's body, ministers of the Gospel; and as Editors, you may be able to copy the Divine Master; that your pens may be dipped in the fountain of Truth; and you be able to send forth to your many readers the pure Word of God.

We will give you a continued report of our mission work with Bro. Hendricks and Vinton, beginning where Bro. Vinton left off when we were at West Point, McDonough Co., Bro. Vinton going from this place to Tennessee, McDonough Co., we remaining at West Point till the 12th of December. We have no words of cheer to give you from this place.— We met with ten members in council the 11th, inst. They said they held no fellowship with us; had joined the Congregational Brethren. Two had been expelled from the church for adultery; but were received by them in their sin. Five were absent, but had expressed by letter that would go with them. One sister still remains. May God keep her as His chosen. December 12th, went twelve miles South to Bro. H. W. Strickler's. Had three meetings—baptized four. On the 14th started home—found our family in reasonable health.

Church council next day; all the members in love and union. Held an election for one speaker and two deacons; the lot fell on Bro. H. W. Strickler for speaker, and Bro. Joseph Rife and Geo. W. Miller for deacons. Preaching same evening, also next day and evening. On Monday, (17th) Bro. Hendricks was taken by Bro. John Wolfe, to Pike Co., to hold some meetings with the brethren there. We were to go the next day to the same place, but rain and mud prevented. Bro. Hendricks staid one week, and baptized one.

We had made an appointment for a church council 16 miles North-east from our place, on the 25th where our meetings first began on the 7th. Bro. Clingsmith took Bro. Hendricks on the 24th, twenty-five miles through the mud and rain to this place. The weather was so inclement there was no meeting. Bro. Hendricks started home same day—found all well. May the Lord bless the mission work.

Liberty, Ill. Jan. 21st, 1878.

REMARKS: We regret that any mistakes occurred in the former article sent in by brother Wolfe. We instruct our workmen to follow copy closely, making no corrections only where the laws of language demand it. We remember reading the manuscript and punctuating it, supposed it was all right. We endeavor to do the best we can, and ask pardon for such mistakes upon our part. While on this subject we at times experience considerable difficulty in getting church news set up just right in consequence of the careless manner in which names are written, &c.

From Blackwater Church, Va.

Dear Brethren—

BRANKLIN Co., Virginia is one among the oldest settlements of Brethren in Va.—Brethren and sisters have moved from here to nearly all of the Western States. When I united with the church, in 1860, there was but one church of the Brethren in this county. There were seven ministers, of which five were Elders. They have now all passed away, and others are in their stead. There are four congregations of Brethren—four meeting-houses suitable for communion purposes. We received fifteen into the church by baptism last Summer and Fall.

The Brethren are taking an active part in the home mission. They have regular appointments in Bedford and Pittsylvania counties.— Have received some by baptism, prospects good for more in Pittsylvania county. Hope they may build up a church there. May the Lord bless their labors.

Joni. H. FERRY.

From Vinton, Iowa.

Dear Brethren—

THROUGH the help of God, I am again permitted to send good news to the readers of your paper. I have just returned home from Marble Rock, and Greene, Iowa, where by God's aid I have been holding a series of meetings. Our meetings were well attended—indeed very good. Eight souls came out and demanded baptism at the first named place. Five were baptized while we were with them; three to be baptized soon. Some of these were members of the Campbellite church, and are leading persons of the neighborhood, one a Free Mason for many years. Many others said they would unite if we would continue the meetings, but our health and appointments, prevented us from staying longer.

While holding these meetings two others were baptized and one reclaimed at other points in this church. From this place we went to Greene, (same church). Held three meetings—the demanded baptism at the last meeting.— Our health was so very poor that we had to close the meetings; though much could have been done by continuing. We have concluded, after filling one hundred and fifty-three appointments in four months, not to preach again until our health improves. At Marble Rock we met and worshipped with brother Joseph Garber. He is 84 years old; has been a member of the church over 50 years, and a deacon for 46 years; has never been called on to answer to a charge preferred against him since he is in the church.

The old brother was born in Ky. Baptized by Jacob Olmert in Big Miami River, Shelby Co., O. He was able to attend all the meetings we held near Marble Rock, Ia. Also sister Barbara Ritter, sister of the above. She is 92 years old; was baptized by Eld. Jacob Miller, grandfather of Eld. Jacob Miller late of Ind., 72 years ago in Bear Creek church, Montgomery Co., O. This old sister said to me, "Bro. Troxel, I have never been charged with anything before the church, neither did I charge any one. I always tried to do right. I do not believe in making the church trouble by bringing every little thing to the church to settle for me. I done that myself, I never failed. Now I am too near the River to stop and make trouble." God help us to do as she has done!

She is the mother of nine children, all living. The youngest one is 52 years old. She did not attend our meetings this time. She attended our meetings last March. The above are son and daughter of Eld. John Garber of Va. Eld. John Garber was the first brother that preached in Ohio. He organized the first church of the Brethren in Ohio, (Stone Lick) and also Donald's Creek church. It is a great pleasure to converse with these aged followers of Christ.

We can hardly do without the BROTHERS AT WORK, but we are not able to pay for it. I hope the Lord will bless you in your work.

E. TROXEL.

Feb. 23, 1878.

From Dayton, Kansas.

Dear Brethren—

AS we are desirous to have the Redeemer's Kingdom prosper, we also are made to rejoice, when we hear of souls made willing to forsake sin, and turn their faces heavenward.— As it was requested of me to visit Cedar Creek church in Anderson Co., Kansas, I did so, and found the brethren and sisters in health, generally. I am in spiritual health, also in temporal health, except one brother who will have gone to the spirit world before this reaches the readers of your excellent paper. When I arrived at our Elder's house, viz: Jesse Studebaker, to my joy I found our much respected brother Sydney Hodgden at the same place; and while in that church we held six meetings, three in one school-house, and ten miles South of this we had two meetings, and from this place we went about 14 miles North-west to hold a little service by the way of exhortation, singing and prayer, and to amount brother Levi Lilly. At this meeting, I must confess, that a more impressive occasion I never witnessed; every eye was filled with tears. Those who endeavored to use words of consolation and comfort of the Scriptures, had to give place to tears and solemnity. The influence of the Spirit of God was manifested in this little meeting, and not soon to be forgotten.

This act of the church was organized five years ago with nine members; several were added the day of its organization by baptism. At this writing it numbers about sixty members. During our stay in Cedar Creek church two souls were added to the fold of Christ. One a son of brother Jesse Studebaker, and the other a young sister only 14 years old. O how the angels do rejoice when the young come to Jesus for aid, for He will surely guide them safe home. Three of Bro. Studebaker's children are now members of the body of Christ. In looking at the brotherhood, its labors, trials, privations and inequities, and at the cost of our redemption, I see many things that are wanting; and sometimes a surplus of some things; but to remedy the deficiency is what I ardently desire. I believe we are brethren. Then as such, let us divide the labor. Some to the plow, some to the mill, some mechanics, and some to the Word. Now these all receive wages; and it is right that they should; and they receive it in the present time; while the one who is to preach the resurrection morn? Brethren let us act consistently and aid the brethren who labor for the good of all.

Here in Kansas some Elders have the oversight of six counties, while in the East sometimes you have six Elders in one county. Now brethren look, and consider our condition in Kansas, and then act wisely, consistently and judiciously. We need ministerial aid, while at the same time we are poor! O! may God speed His work of grace so that both saint and sinner may have their portion of comfort, consolation and warning while it is called to-day. Time is speeding to us an awful day, and are we so little preparing for the realities of a future state? Oh! think hence than diest.

WILLIAM STOKMYER.

Feb. 25, 1878.

From New Jersey.

ON February 11th, brother J. T. Meyers of Pa., came to this congregation and commenced a series of meetings which lasted until the 18th. He preached nine sermons in all, and they were old-fashioned GOSPEL sermons. They were telling in their effect on the enemy's ranks, and the "slain of the Lord" four in number now rejoice in the God of their salvation. The flock here rejoices in their conversion. But whilst but four were made willing to ground the weapons of their rebellion, we trust MANY more are wounded by the "Sword of the Spirit." Our brother preached with power—not only was the good old Jerusalem blade turned against sin without the church, but so skillfully was it handled that "lovers of pleasure," professing godliness, were made to bow!

(O may God help His ministers to have the courage to denounce popular sin, whether in or out of the church.)

Our meetings were well attended, good order and good attention. Our house was filled most of the time to its utmost capacity. The interest seemed to increase at each meeting. I am sorry that our meetings could not have continued longer; for we believe much good might have been done. But our brother was worn out and had to go home. People said they never saw so much interest awakened in a meeting in so short a time. We hope and trust those that have been awakened and are so near the kingdom, will yet come and make of Christ their only choice, and journey hand in hand with friends that are on the heavenly road.

Fraternally,
AMOS CHAMBERLIN,
Crahn, N. J., Feb. 25, 1878.

From La Placa, Ill.

Dear Brethren:—

BROTHER Menno Stouffer from the Millville congregation was with us, and preached several sermons the first of this month. As the result of his labors, five were added by baptism, and we think many more are seriously coming the east. The church is in a flourishing condition, but we much regret the departure of so many of the beloved members who intend to go to Kansas. I hope they and us may hold out faithful; and if we never meet in this world again, we hope to meet in that better world where we shall part no more.

Bro. Stouffer also preached one week at the Ridge school-house. Five came out on the Lord's side. Hope the good work may go on here as well as elsewhere.

Press onward still, dear brethren
The cause of Christ maintain,
Add faith and virtue to your soul,
Christ's appanition gain.
Press forward, forward brethren,
Through love to God on high,
Be active in the work of Christ,
Let not religion die.

LIZZIE ARNOLD
Feb. 27, 1878.

From the Woodbury Church, Pa.

I WOULD say to the readers of the BRETHREN AT WORK, that Bro. W. Brumblough and Joseph Snowberger from the Clover Creek congregation came to us on the 24th of Feb., 1878. They preached fourteen sermons in the new meeting-house near Woodbury. As a result of their labors, four precious souls were made to have a new life, and were buried with him in baptism. And we believe that some more are coming the west. May God help them come while they have time, place and opportunity.

The weather being rainy and nights very dark, our meeting did not become as interesting as it would have been had the weather been nice. Brethren and sisters, if we want our meetings to become interesting, we must all take an active part in them. If there is a coldness on the part of the members in not attending them regularly, it shows as though the labor was not united as it should be. With the united prayers of the church, much good may be done.

D. S. RIMMONER,
Marion, Pa., March 3, 1878.

GLEANINGS.

From William Stuckmayer.—I visited the brethren and sisters in Jasper Co., Mo. While there held four meetings; interest good. At the close of three sermons, one soul was made willing to turn his face Zionward, and confessed Jesus in the flowing stream of Spring River, and rose to follow the Saviour in spirit and in truth. This arm of the church is alive in the cause of salvation of souls, and in the spreading of the Redeemer's kingdom. They had twelve accessions to the church in one year's time.

Dayton, Kan., Feb. 17, 1878.

From P. Heil.—We held a series of meetings here, and as the result seventeen were added to the church by baptism. Among these seventeen, seven were young girls from twelve to sixteen years old. We have had a season of joy. No doubt the angels in heaven rejoice over these perishing ones. May God grant them His holy spirit to guide them into all truth. May the God of truth, of peace, love and joy continue with us, that we may go on in the service of the Lord to defend the Gospel plan of salvation in all its purity and power.

Baldwin, Iowa.

From F. P. Lehr.—Bro. R. H. Miller is now engaged in preaching at New Paris, Ind. Crowded houses of eager hearers assemble every evening. And no wonder such demonstrations of the simple Gospel truth must find a lodging place in every honest heart. I have long ere this seen that God always prepared His instruments to suit times and occasions. It is therefore no wonder that just at this time where such a strong effort is being made to remove the devil and hell; and consequently no Divine and human Saviour is needed.—I say no wonder that a man hath come forth whose arguments on the divinity of Jesus, and trinity of the Godhead are unanswerable. Since it is impossible for him to appear in person everywhere, brethren ought to do all they can to introduce his work. "The Doctrine of the Brethren Defended," and thereby set up a bulwark against the assaults of Rationalism.

Lithant, Ind., March 1st, 1878.

From Thomas H. Higgs.—A few weeks ago, four were received into the church by confession and baptism. They now, we trust, walk in newness of life, and may they prove faithful by the grace of God. I am poor in this world's goods, but like to work for the ingathering of souls, hence send for some pamphlets to distribute.—God always richly pays us. What is better than to have the same filled with love. There is nothing equal to it. Thank God for the gift of the Holy Spirit, and words of life.

Prorum City, Ia., March 1st, 1878.

From J. D. Parker.—The Brethren of the Ashland church have lately closed another series of meetings. It was held in the West end of the District, at the Oak Grove church. Sixteen were baptized, and we trust, are walking in newness of life. May God receive all the praise forevermore.

Ashland, Ohio, March 11, 1878.

From Edward Thomson.—I am happy to inform you that our beloved brother Sell from Me., came to us Feb. 15th, and preached here one week in the evening only. Six persons were induced to enroll themselves on the side of Jesus by baptism, and one reformed. God bless them, and keep them faithful.

Little City, Ark.

KERATA.—In an article entitled, "A Beautiful Synonym," in No. 6 of your paper, on first page, eighth line from the bottom please read, "In their own way, as in a text," etc., instead of "And their own." E. R. STUELLER.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

NOTICE of the next District Meeting, etc., should be sent, and written on paper separate from other business.

LOVE-FEASTS.

At Beaver Dam congregation, Kosciusko Co., Ind., June 9th, 1878.

DISTRICT MEETINGS.

Northern District of Indiana in English Prairie church, May 9th.

The District Meeting for the Southern District of Iowa, will be held the Lord willing, in the Monroe church, Monroe Co., Iowa, on Friday, April 12th, 1878, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M.—Public preaching the evening previous.—Those coming from the East or West, will stop off at Freedom station on the R. & M. R. R.—Those from the North at Colquhoun station on the Iowa Central R. R. Conveyances will be at the places named to convey to the place of meeting.—Trains arrive from the East at twelve o'clock, noon, from the West at 4 o'clock, P. M., from the North at 5 o'clock, P. M.—Address: Elder Dan C. Miller, Freedom, Monroe Co., Iowa.

B. F. FLOYD, Clerk.

The District Meeting of Northern Illinois will be held, the Lord willing, with the brethren of the Shannon church, at Shannon, commencing Tuesday morning, May 21, at eight o'clock, A. M. J. J. ENSLER, J. M. M. ESTELMAN, Clerks.

DIED.

Obituaries should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and separate from all other business.

BUCK.—In New Enterprise, Bedford Co., Pa., Feb. 22, 1878, sister Mary Buck, aged 79 years, 7 months and 10 days. Funeral occasion improved by the Brethren from Rev. 14: 13.

CARSON.—Near New Enterprise, Bedford Co., Pa., Feb. 28, 1878, Bro. Samuel Carson, aged 71 years, 7 months and 4 days. Funeral services improved from Hebrews 13: 13, 14, by the Brethren.

ZIGLER.—Near Waterside, Bedford Co., Pa., March 1, 1878, sister Mary Zigler. Age about 64 years.

These three were among the oldest members of the Yellow Creek church, and have died in one week's time. J. Z. REPTOGLE.

MORTON.—February 21, 1878, friend Mary Morton, of Fairview, Ill., aged 80 years, 6 months and 9 days. Funeral attended by the writer. JACOB NEWBY.

NOAH.—In Floyd Co., Iowa, in the Rock Grove church, Harriet L. Noah, aged 1 year, 8 months and 18 days.

CHARITY FUND.

Table with 2 columns: Name and Amount. Includes M. P. Lichty $.30, Ida C. Berkeley $.50, Eliza Schmitz $.50, E. T. Robinson $.05, D. B. Paterbaugh $.25, Joel Zambra $.45, C. H. Risher $.50, C. R. Supplee $.20, Aaron Long $.35, J. C. Lehman $ 2.00, E. L. Fahnestock $.25, C. Heise $ 1.50, J. Lehman $.25, Kate McNamee $.50, Wm. H. Foster $.30, John W. Moore $ 1.50.

BOOKS, PAMPHLETS, ETC.,

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

Pengilly's Guide to Christian Baptism.—Price 50 cents.

Quinter and Snyder's Debate on Immersion.—Price 75 cents.

Cruden's Concordance to the Bible.—Best edition. Imperial 8vo, cloth, $2.75. Library sheep, $2.50.

History of Palestine, or the Holy Land. By M. Russell. 11. D. Engravings. 18 mo., cloth, 75 cents.

Christian Baptism.—With its Antecedents and Consequences. By Alexander Campbell. Cloth $1.25.

Paraver and Lord's Supper.—By J. W. Stein. An able work of 200 pages, and should be in the hands of every person, who wishes to thoroughly understand the subject. Bound in good cloth, 258 pages. Price, 75 cents.

Lucy's Theological Dictionary.—Containing definition of all religious terms, a comprehensive view of every topic in the system of Divinity, a résumé of all the principal doctrines, and an accurate statement of the most remarkable transactions and events recorded in ecclesiastical history. 8vo., Sheep, $2.50.

A Derman on Baptism.—Delivered by Bro. S. H. Bashon in the Oak Grove congregation, Somerset county, Pa. A neatly printed pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price 20 cents.

Ancient and Modern Egypt.—View of Ancient and Modern Egypt. By M. Russell, LL. D. Engravings. 18 mo., cloth, 75 cents.

Head's Theological Works, or a Vindication of Primitive Christianity. By Elder Peter Head. Bound in cloth, 352 pages, price, $1.75.

Christianity Utterly Incompatible with War. Being one of Twenty Discourses, for a change in my church relations. By J. W. Stein. Price, 25 cents. 25 copies, $6.00.

Family Rules and Regulations.—By J. W. Stein. Beautifully printed in three colors on good colored paper, intended for training, and should be in every family. Price 20 cents.

Voice of the Seven Thunder: Or, Lectures on the Book of Revelations. By J. J. Martin. Among modern books this is really a curiosity. You can't help but understand it. $1.50.

The Fall of Fire; or, Bread in Bondage. Being an account of the wonderful scenes in the life of the great Pharaoh, (Moses.) As related with striking pictures of the Hebrews in an ancient Egyptian city. By Rev. J. H. Ingraham, LL. D., author of "The Prince of the House of David." Large 12mo., cloth, $2.00.

Trine Immersion Traced to the Apostles.—Being a collection of all the references from modern and ancient authors, proving that a threefold immersion was the only method of baptizing ever practiced by the apostles, and their immediate successors. By J. H. Moore. 64 pages, price, 25 cents. 100 copies, $1.00; 500 copies, $2.00.

The Last Supper. A central, and not a picture, showing Jesus and his disciples at the table, with the supper spread before them. He has just announced that one of them should betray him. Each of the twelve present is pointed out by name in the margin of the picture. Price, one copy, 15 cents. 200 copies, 25 cents. 500 copies, $1.00.

The "One Faith," vindicated.—By W. M. Estelman. 32 pages, price, 10 cents. Sheep, $1.00. Advocate and recently corrected for the faith, and delivered to the saints.

Reason and Revelation.—By R. Milligan. This work should not only be read, but carefully studied by every minister in the brotherhood. $2.50.

Student's New Testament History.—With an Introduction, connecting the History of the old and New Testament. Edited by Wm. Smith, LL. D. With maps and wood-cuts. Large 12mo., cloth, $2.00.

Philosophy of the Plan of Salvation.—12mo. By J. B. Walker. This is a work of uncommon merit, clear, instructive, and should be in the hands of all Bible students. Cloth, $1.50.

Why I left the Baptist Church.—By J. W. Stein. A tract of 16 pages, and intended for an extensive circulation among the Baptist people. Price, 2 copies, 10 cents; 5 copies, 25 cents; 100 copies $3.00.

The Perfect Plan of Salvation, or Safe Ground. By J. H. Moore. Showing that the position occupied by the Brethren, is infallibly safe. Price 1 copy, 15 cents; 2 copies, 25 cents; 10 copies, $1.00.

A Treatise on Trine Immersion.—Proving from the New Testament, and the Established Rules and Principles of Language, that Baptism by Trine Immersion is the only valid Baptism. Consisting of a Grammatical Analysis of the Commission, and Analogy of the Commission and other passages, and miscellaneous proofs. By Lewis W. Teeter. Put up in a neat pamphlet form, and will be sent post paid for 15 cts., or two copies 25 cts.

Historical Chart of Baptism.—This Chart exhibits the years of the birth and death of the Ancient Fathers who have written on the action in baptism—the length of their lives, who of them lived at the same period, and shows how easy it was for them to transmit, to each succeeding generation, a correct understanding of the Apostolic method of baptizing. By J. H. Moore. Price, 25 cents.

The Origin of Single Immersion.—Showing that single immersion was invented by Manichæus and as a practice, cannot be traced beyond the middle of the fourth century. By Elder James Quinter. It is a tract of sixteen pages and the Brethren should take an active part in giving it an extensive circulation. Price, 2 copies, 10 cents; 5 copies, 25 cents; 30 copies $1.00.

Truth Triumphant. In six numbers of four pages each. Baptism, Grace and Truth, Feet-washing, Truthfully Kindness, Non-resistance, Non-Essentialism Measured, and Found too Short. Price 1 cent each, or 80 cents per hundred.

The Throne of David.—from the consecration of the Shepherd of Bethlehem to the rebellion of prince Absalom. By the Rev. J. H. Ingraham, LL. D., author of "The Prince of the House of David," and the "Fall of Fire." With five splendid illustrations. Large 12 mo., cloth, $2.00.

Campbellism Weighed in the Balance, and Found Wanting.—A written sermon in reply to Elder J. H. Moore. It is a well printed tract of sixteen pages, should be circulated by the hundreds in almost every locality. Price 2 copies, 10 cents; 5 copies, 25 cents; 25 copies, $1.00; 100 copies, $3.50.

Sabbatism.—By M. M. Estelman. 16 pages, price 10 cents. 15 copies $1.00. Treats the Sabbath question, fully showing that the observance of the seventh-day Sabbath passed away with all other Jewish days, and that the "first day of the week" is the preferred day for Christians to assemble in worship.

Eusebius' Ecclesiastical History.—This author lived in the fourth century, had a thorough knowledge of the History of the church, and his writings are the source of considerable value to the student of Ancient History. 8vo., cloth, 2.50.

Campbell and Owen Debate.—Containing an examination of the Social System, and all the systems of Skepticism, ancient and modern. Complete in one volume. This will always remain a valuable work on the evidences of Christianity. $1.75.

Brethren's Envelope.—Prepared especially for the use of our people. Very durable, neatly printed on the back, a complete summary of our position as a religious body. Price 10 cts. per package—25 in a package—50 cts. per hundred.

Brethren's Hymn Books.—1 copy Turkey Morocco, post-paid 50 cts.; per dozen, post-paid, $4.00; per dozen by express, $4.00. 1 copy Arabic script, or Sheep, post-paid 75 cts.; per dozen, post-paid, $8.25; per dozen, by express, $7.25. When ordering hymn books sent by express it is expected that the purchaser will pay the express charges at the office where the books are received.

Biblical Antiquities. By Dr. John Nevin. We know no work intended to enlighten the reader on Bible customs, etc., that we can recommend to all Bible readers more cheerfully than this volume. It should be in every library. 12mo., cloth, 1.50.

Union Bible Dictionary.—A Bible Dictionary giving an accurate account and description of every place, as well as a history of all persons and places mentioned in the Bible. It will be found particularly useful to all Bible students. 100 pages, with maps and numerous illustrations. Cloth, $1.50.

The Holy Land.—This is the name of a beautiful ethnographic map giving a complete Bird's Eye view of the Holy Land, and enables the observer, in a glance, to behold all the cities, towns, rivers, brooks, lakes, valleys and mountains. In short, it is a perfect picture of the "holy land" from Dan to the desert of Gaza. It is the most complete thing of the kind we ever saw. By a few hours' careful study, the traveler may be enabled to find the exact places mentioned in the Bible, making the reader familiar with the location of these different places, as the country in which they lived, thus aiding him in understanding the Bible. Those who think there was not water enough in Palestine to grow rice, should carefully study this map. It is printed in beautiful colors, suspended on rollers ready for hanging—15 1/2 by 35 inches in size, and will be sent by express for $1.50.

For any of the above works sent post-paid on receipt of the enclosed price. Address—

MOORE, BACHOR & ESHELMAN,
LANARK, Carroll Co., Ill.

W. U. R. R. Time Table.

Day passenger train going east leaves Lanark at 12:25 P. M. and arrives in Eminet at 6:13 P. M.
Day passenger train going west leaves Lanark at 2:11 P. M. and arrives at Rock Island at 5:50 P. M.
Night passenger train, going east and west, next and before Lanark at 2:18 A. M., arriving in Eminet at 9:00 A. M., and at Rock Island at 9:00 A. M.
Freight and Accommodation Trains will run west at 12:10 A. M., 10; 6:0 A. M., and east at 12:10 A. M., and 4:45 P. M.
Tickets are sold for above trains only. Passenger trains make close connection at Western Union Junction.

G. A. SMITH, Agent.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK.

"Behold I Bring You Good Tidings of Great Joy, which Shall be unto All People." — LUKE 2: 10.

Vol. III.

Lanark, Ill., March 21, 1878.

No. 12.

The Brethren at Work.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY

— BY —

J. H. Moore, S. H. Bashor, M. M. Eshelman.

— CO —

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

| | | | | |
|-----------------|---|---|---|-----------------|
| R. H. MILLER, | — | — | — | LADOGA, IND. |
| J. W. STEIN, | — | — | — | NEWTONIA, MO. |
| D. VANIMAN, | — | — | — | VIRGON, ILL. |
| D. B. MENTZER, | — | — | — | WAYNESBORO, PA. |
| MATTIE A. LEAR, | — | — | — | URBANA, ILL. |

STAND LIKE AN ANVIL.

"STAND like an anvil," when the stroke
Of stalwart men falls fierce and fast;
Storms but more deeply root the oak,
Whose brawny arms embrace the blast.

"Stand like an anvil," when the sparks
Fly far and wide, a fiery shower;
Virtue and truth must still be marks,
Where malice proves its want of power.

"Stand like an anvil," when the bar
Lies, red and glowing, on his breast;
Duty shall be life's leading star,
And conscious innocence, its rest.

"Stand like an anvil," when the sound
Of ponderous hammers pains the ear;
Thing but the still and stern command
Of the great heart that cannot fear.

"Stand like an anvil," in use and heat
Are born of earth, and die with time;
The soul, like God, its Source and seat,
Its solemn, still, serene, sublime.
—The Church.

MELCHISEDEC.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

A BROTHER of Ohio wishes to know more about this mysterious personage than the Sacred Oracles clearly reveal. I am too weak to write much at present, and am almost constantly suffering, except when asleep. On this subject I write reluctantly. People are generally most anxious about those points which are of least practical importance. I have examined every exposition within my reach, but have found nothing that answers to the portraiture drawn by the Holy Ghost. I will not undertake to decide positively as to his supernatural or merely human constitution, but I do not hesitate to say that the arguments I have met with in favor of his purely human lineage, are singularly unsatisfactory.

The author of the epistle to the Hebrews invests him with a majesty, and sets him in a dignity, out of all proportion with a merely human genealogy. He appears and vanishes, filling his brief stay with just such titles and functions as became a character after whose "order" the programme of the Eternal counsels was to be modeled. It is only reasonable to expect that, had he been simply a fellow-nature with Abraham, so far above him as the Apostle represents, he would figure more conspicuously in the ancient narrative. Elisha comes upon the scene abruptly, but he stays long enough, and betrays characteristics, that clearly indicate his human lineage.

The Mosiac account is occupied chiefly with the historical aspect of the subject. The Psalmists and Hebrews deal with the character of this strange being. In the 7th of Heb., the Apostle makes the most extraordinary statements, which are wholly doctrinal. He avers that in the Melchisedec who received titles of Abraham, there is a Life and character and office deep and high and broad enough to be the basis of an "order" of Priesthood and Kingdom in which the Eternal Son of God can find scope for all His work on earth and in Heaven. It is in this fact that the subject culminates, and makes the merely human nature of the ancient Melchisedec so highly improbable. What and whom he represents seems clear. Who he was is a problem not so easily settled. That he receives a human appellation is of no weight in the determination of the question. The "Son of God" is many times called the "Son of Man," the "Man Christ Jesus," and the Man whom God hath ordained to judge the quick and dead.

Being without father or mother is an expression so deep and wonderful, that it is the most futile of all attempts to cramp it into the fact that his name was not found in the genealogical record. Whether found there or not, if a descendant of Abraham, he had both father and mother, and the simple fact that his birth was not registered could not by any stretch or ingenuity of argument, serve as an "order" for the everlasting Priesthood of Jesus Christ.

I have a strong and growing conviction that if we could penetrate deeper into the first eighteen verses in the first chapter of John's Gospel, we would see in Melchisedec a link in the chain of Theanthropism which stretches from Eden to Gettysburg. The comprehensiveness and depth of the words, "HE WAS IN THE WORLD, and the world was made by Him," "and the world knew Him not," includes the Melchisedec which blessed Abraham. He is not an Incarnation like Christ, but a Theophany like the Chief of the three Angels, or Men at Abraham's tent-door in the plain of Mamre, or the "WONDERFUL" who appeared to Manoah and his wife in the harvest field (Gen. 18; Judges 13). In the first instance it is said, "The Lord appeared unto Abraham." He "sat in the tent-door in the heat of the day, and lifted up his eyes, and looked, and lo three men stood by him." After delivering their message, "the men rose up from thence, and looked toward Sodom, and Abraham went with them to bring them on the way." Two of them came to Sodom, still men in form, but angels in character and power. One of the Three remained with Abraham to reveal to him the fate of Sodom and her sister cities, and this was God Himself. So the Record declares. He had all the objective characteristics of a human being, washed His feet at the Patriarch's solicitation, partook of Abraham's calf and Sarah's cake, and yet was the Wine which made the word and was in it from the beginning in all the forms and ways in which God revealed Himself to man. We have so much lost sight of the essential Ever-presence of the Second Person of the Holy Three, that we overlook both the fact and the significance of the occasional human manifestations of Deity prior to the permanent assumption of humanity. In the Old Testament every thing is so intensely human and representative, that God is spoken of as though He were a superior kind of Humanity.

Such language we need, and it should not startle us to find facts that correspond. Melchisedec still lives. So Paul affirms. His order is ever the same, first "King of Righteousness, after that King of Peace." In that meeting, Abraham saw the day of Christ, and was glad (John 8: 56).

THE MILLENIUM.

BY JAMES WIRT.

THIS is a subject of prophecy, and denotes the thousand years mentioned in the twentieth chapter of Revelation, during which period Satan will be bound and helliness become triumphant throughout the world. The signs and events which are predicted to immediately precede this grand period of universal peace and righteousness, in the divine economy of God's purposes, here on earth are going into fulfillment; and in our meditations upon these events, and also those which are to transpire, during Christ's personal reign; emotions of love and hope with ardent desires for its introduction are raised in the soul, causing the devout Christian to aspire to a proper degree of attainment in the divine life; exclaiming with emphasis from their inmost being, "Thy kingdom come," as they long to appreciate the result of its accomplishment.

There are some very important events yet to take place, before the second coming of Christ. That day shall not come, except there come a falling away first (2 Thes. 2: 3). There shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world. There shall arise false Christs and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders (Matt 24: 21-24). The Jews will return to their promised possessions in the land of Palestine, and dwell there as a nation, and build the wall of cities and inherit them, plant vineyards and drink the wine thereof, also make gardens and eat the fruit of them, and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land (Amos 9: 14, 15). These long forsaken and down-trodden people, will rebuild Jerusalem, and also the temple close to the city. The prophet Ezekiel gives a concise description of this temple to which place it is prophesied Christ will repair, after the dead in Christ are resurrected; and all His true followers have been changed in the likeness of their Redeemer, preparatory to meet Him in the air, and forever be His constant guests.

From this temple shall go forth His benign law of equity and justice regulating the government of His moral subjects, who will continue to carry on all the purposes and affairs in relation to the millennial commonwealth. The saints will reign with Christ and assist in the administration, when He shall reign in Mt. Zion and in Jerusalem, and before His ancients gloriously. This honor, have all the saints to reign as kings and priests. This work of righteousness shall produce peace, quietness, and insurance among all the nations of the earth, they shall learn war no more; and their weapons of warfare shall be converted into implements of usefulness.

During this period Satan will not be permitted to go about as a roaring lion, nor his ministers be transformed as ministers of light) seeking whom he may devour, but will be shut up in the bottomless pit, to await his release and subsequent final frustration. The redeemed and ransomed of the Lord shall dwell in Zion with praise and adoration upon their tongues, and obtain joy and gladness, for sorrow and sighing shall be among the things of the past for the space of a thousand years. The earth-curse will be repealed and will then produce honorably in quick response to the willing husbandman; and all nature will teem with cheerful animate existence. Also the curse upon mankind will be taken away. "There shall be no more thence, infant of days" (Is 65: 20).

Toward the close of this period the number of those who dwell upon the earth shall be immense. Many nations shall bow before the scepter of King Emmanuel by yielding a dutiful and willing submission to His law; they shall listen to His teachings and walk in His path. The believer in Christ looks forward in joyful anticipation, when he may realize the fruition of the millennium, knowing what God has spoken by His inspired writers. He will perform, and can with patience wait and labour in the Church Militant; and through the appointed means in the economy of grace receive the purification to be admitted into the Church Triumphant, and there forever dwell with Christ, the holy angels and redeemed in heaven.

PENCIL MUSINGS.

BY S. H. BASHOR.

NUMBER 3.

I HAVE been musing over the past, present, and future. As a people, we believe that we are the "chosen of God," have taken our stand upon the "pillar and ground of the truth," following Jesus in "the regeneration." Our ministers are crying, we are the church of the living God. Viewing our beloved Zion from this standpoint, we are made to blush when we review the past; seeing how slow our people have been in evangelizing the world; but at present the prospect is more cheering, the dawning of brighter days, which gives fruitful hopes of the future.

By the census taken, we number about sixty thousand strong. This gives us an idea what the church could do in giving to the Lord of her abundance in such away that it would never be missed. Suppose every member would give into the treasury of the Lord one cent per week; in one year we would have 31,200 in ready means for the spreading of Gospel. This amount would support one hundred missionaries one year. Every State, and every county in the nation could be evangelized in less than two years. Why cannot the church do this? Each member give one cent, or as Paul says in first Cor. 16: 1, 2. I verily believe that much good could be done for Jesus; ponder this question well. By the blessing of God, we are what we are. Dear brethren and sisters, let us dispense with some of the luxuries for the sake of truth, and each one lay by in store fifty-two cents in one year, and the chime in heaven will echo back to earth "Well done."

Lanopmat, Colo.

OUTSIDE AND INSIDE.

BY E. MOOR.

WE have much in our land of the necessity of having the kernel of religion and the uselessness of the shell or husk. Does not even nature teach that there can be no kernel without a shell? Why then exist that there can be an inside without an outside in the matter of religion? If it is necessary in nature that a shell envelop the kernel, then why not allow the fruit of the spirit to have its outside also? There is a form of godliness—there is a form of doctrine which is an evidence of the kernel within.

"Well," says one, "if the blood of Christ, by faith will invariably produce the proper shell, why make so much noise about it? Why not preach about the blood alone, and leave the rest to come itself?" Simply because the apostle never advanced such a theory. The faith-alone preachers do this in order to keep the "Oye Faith" out, and make the people believe in them instead of believing on Christ. It is true that faith without works is dead, and this accounts for so much dead matter among so-called Christians. As the kernel and shell of any fruit or grain develop together, so will faith, repentance, baptism and obedience to all the commands of God, fully develop a kernel until he becomes a man of full stature in Christ Jesus. God's way of cleansing has ever been different from the sinner's. It will not better the case for a sinner to stand and argue with God; to accept or reject all he can do.

The sins of the world, and the corruption of Christendom are the same the world over, only here considerable ignorance prevails, while with you people know just enough to seemingly twist and bend the Truth to suit their saives in this life. But if they would know the Gospel cannot be bent or twisted, be their own minds are bent and turned even by strange delusions. When men know that they have neither command nor example for the man-made immersion and sprinkling, or faith without works, and then twist and turn to prove their own position, then it is pretty certain that on such will be had the plagues written in the Book of God. Let us all take heed, obey and be saved.

We rise in glory as we sink in pride.

TOBACCO UNION.

COME old and young and hear me tell
How strong tobacco smokers smell,
Who love to smoke their pipes so well,
That for tobacco they would sell
Their right to social union.

They always scent the atmosphere,
And you may know when they are near,
Though not a word from them you hear;
Their breath grows stronger every year,
Within this social union.

They clean their pipe-stems with a wire,
And fill the bowl and put in fire,
And smoke until it doth expire,
Nor do they ever seem to tire
In this laborious union.

Sometimes from three to six you'll see
Collected in one company
And every fellow in great glee,
And all must have a smoking spree,
A fatal smoking union.

With impudence they oft presume
To vex all persons in the room,
Who can't endure tobacco fume,
And they must hear this wretched doom,
Or leave this smoking union.

Oh! how the fumes of smoke will rise,
Like ascending mist toward the skies
And woe to him that has weak eyes,
Unless he takes his leave and flies
Away from such a union.

Some keep the money from the poor
And send the hungry from the door,
And haste away to some one's store,
And spend it for tobacco more
To learn in smoking union.

Those who in utter darkness lie,
May in their error live and die,
Before those persons e'er will try
Them with the Gospel to supply,
To teach them heavenly union.

I wonder how such folks can say
They have religion every day,
And love the Lord and love to pray,
When they His money smoke away
In gully conscience union.

There are some, who tobacco chew,
And though it often makes them spew,
And makes them drunk as Buechus, too,
They the practice will pursue,
At the expense of social union.

Sometimes within their neighbor's door,
They'll cast their quid some three or four
And spit on carpet, hearth or floor,
Sometimes a gill or even more,
And talk of social union.

Of times within the church you'll view,
That persons there will sit and chew,
And spit upon the floor or pew,
Until it spreads a foot or two,
And sing the heavenly union.

The quid is oft so large within;
The juice runs out and stains the chin,
And then I always have to grin
And think there is no little sin
In this tobacco union.

—Selected.

PERSEVERANCE.

BY MATTIE A. LEAR.

“NOT as though I had already attained, either were already perfect; but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which I am also apprehended of Christ Jesus. Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended; but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus” (Phil. 3: 12-14).

The language embodied in this text expressed a purpose, a fixed determination, a firm resolve. The apostle had made Christianity his choice. Upon investigating this noble system, he had found it worthy of his highest regards. He had found it sufficient. To engross all the capacities of his giant mind, to engross all the capacities! did we say? oh! the apostle found here an inexhaustible fund of knowledge. He could not fathom its depths, he could not explore its heights, or measure its dimensions. He had given it his whole attention, he had investigated it with all the strength of his deep, penetrating mind, but he had not exhausted it, and he now knew that he never could exhaust it. Hence in the language of our text he says: “Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect; but I follow after.” The more I learn, the more I examine, the more I penetrate, the more beauties I see. New and wondrous stores of knowledge are constantly being opened up to my enraptured sight. My mind is ever on the wing. I am ever following after this knowledge as my Master leads, and He is ever opening up to me new and grander scenes of ineffable glories.

The wonders that are embodied in the glorious plan of salvation, can never be fathomed by created beings. John heard the ransomed in heaven sing: “Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation,” and this he calls “a new song.” And why was it new? Not because it had never been sung before, but because of the new beauties, the new grandeur which it was ever evolving.

But why does the apostle still seek after this heavenly knowledge? Not merely to gratify his thirst for knowledge. He has another object in view, what was that object? That he might apprehend that for which also he was apprehended of Christ Jesus.

The above clause is rather peculiar and perhaps needs some elucidation. Apprehend means to seize, to take prisoner. The apostle here no doubt alludes to the time, when on his way to Damascus, full of hatred and cruelty, Christ interposed his presence, arrested him, when pursuing his wayward, misguided course, and thus brought him to a sense of the enormity of his crimes.

The meaning of Paul is this: Since Christ thus seized, or laid hold on me when I was plunging recklessly into ruin, in order that I might be guided into the way of holiness and Life Eternal, I am determined that his kind interference in my behalf shall not be in vain; but I will now persevere, and make every effort to apprehend or seize the prize for the obtaining or securing of which I was laid hold on or seized by Jesus Christ. Since he has done so much for me, his gracious purposes in my behalf shall not be rendered abortive through my neglect.

Further says the apostle: “I count not myself to have apprehended.” Paul did not feel as secure as some have felt since his day. Though he had started in the heavenly race and had made many attainments, yet he knew that he was beset on every side by dangers, and that faithfulness, embracing energy and constant perseverance were necessary to secure the prize. Paul knew nothing of the doctrine: Once in grace always in grace. At all events he never taught it. “But this one thing,” says he, “I do, forgetting those things that are behind, and reaching forth unto those things that are before.”

What a noble resolve! My time is so precious, the prize for which I am competing is so inestimable, the dangers by which I am surrounded are so many, the difficulties so great, that I have no leisure for dwelling on past events, have I made failures in the past, I will not brood too long over this, but will press on and endeavor to be more successful in the future. Have I made great achievements in the past, have I taken many strong-holds from the enemy, I have not time to regale myself too long over this. However much I may have done, there remains much, very much to be done. That portion of my journey which is yet before me, is just as beset by dangers, as that over which I have passed. Past successes will not guarantee future successes. My future success as the past, depends wholly on my faithfulness, my energy, my perseverance, therefore I will forget the past and pass over it as unworthy of my attention; I will press onward to new conquests and new achievements.

“I press towards the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.” The apostle here evidently alludes to the ancient games, which were instituted by the nations of antiquity in honor of their gods. In these games persons of the highest ranks reckoned it glorious to share and meritorious to carry away the prize. In the passage above quoted, L'Enfant thinks the apostle alludes to those who stood at the elevated place at the end of the course, calling the racers by their names, and encouraging them by holding out the crown, to exert themselves with vigor. If so, the allusion is most grand. The apostle had in his eye Christ standing at the end of the race course, holding out to him his glittering crown, and encouraging him to energy and perseverance. But the athlete were bound to contend for the prize within the measured and determinable limits of the stadium. If they deviated ever so little from the appointed course, they forfeited their prize, without hope or recovery. The spiritual contest, has also its rules and regulations, devised and enacted by infinite wisdom and goodness. These rules require implicit and exact submission, which yield neither to times nor circumstances. In all ages, in all climes, these rules must be adhered to. The combatant who violates these rules, will certainly forfeit the prize. Oh how solemn is this thought! especially when we know that thousands who are running on this heavenly race-course, are violating many of the plain and obvious rules laid down by the great Judge, or Awarder of prizes.

Again, the victors in these games, were crowned with a wreath of laurel, which was the stephanos, or victor's crown, not the diadema or despot's crown. So Christ's gracious and encouraging language to the Christian combatant is, “Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.” If thou wilt persevere, and run successfully thy heavenly race; I will place upon thy head the stephanos, or victor's crown, I will encircle thy brow with a wreath of immortelles.

Those victors returned to their native city, not through the gate, or common place of ingress, but through a breach in the walls which were broken down to give them admission. The seer of Patmos saw a door, or an opening through the walls of the celestial city, and through that opening he saw the successful Christian competitors, in all the glory of their triumph. He saw them with the victor's crown, and the victor's palm, arrayed and radiant in their celestial glory.

The successful combatants in the Grecian games, were celebrated, praised or extolled in the rapturous effusion of their poets. John heard in heaven the enlogiums of the Christian victors. “These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve Him day and night in His temple.”

FRUITS OF REPENTANCE.

BY D. P. SAYLER.

“BRING forth therefore fruits meet for repentance” (Matt. 3: 8). Much has been said by some, at Annual Meetings in reference to a charge; how, when, and where it should be given to applicants for baptism. “Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance,” is the charge John gave to those who came to him for baptism. And this charge surely was part and parcel of his preaching. And the same charge Peter at a subsequent time gave to those who asked what they must do; to be saved is implied. With him it, too, seems to be part of his preaching.

When, “John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins” (Mark 1: 4) it seems the idea took hold of the people, that under this new system all that was required to obtain the remission of sins was to go to John and be baptized; immersed, by him in the river of Jordan. This was new, and good news to them; the law had it. The soul that sinneth it shall die. But when John saw many of the Pharisees and Sadducees come to his baptism, he calls them a generation of vipers, and asked them who had warned them to flee from the wrath to come. He questioned them what their objects and motives were for coming to him for baptism. And right here let us note, John did not go among the people to coax, beg and persuade them to come to his baptism, but he preached repentance and baptism for the remission of sins; and when the multitude came (Luke 3: 7) he demanded of them the fruits of repentance as a prerequisite of baptism. Upon this it is manifest that all who came were not baptized; for while the people who heard him, and the publicans justified God, and being baptized with the baptism of John.

But the Pharisees and the lawyers rejected the counsel of God against themselves, being not baptized of him (Luke 29: 30). No doubt these all would have been baptized if John had baptized them without any fruits of repentance (Luke 3: 7). It appears that the charge to bring forth fruit meet for repentance was not only given to the Pharisees and Sadducees, but to all the people. “Then said he to the multitude that came forth to be baptized of him, O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? Bring forth therefore fruits worthy of repentance.” Then the people (the common people) asked him saying, what shall we do then? We profess repentance, but what must we do for the fruit of it. He told them, (read it). Then came also publicans (the revenue collectors) to be baptized, and said unto him, Master what shall we do? He told these, and the soldiers likewise demanded of him, saying, and what shall we do? And he told them. All these different grades of applicants must bring forth fruit of repentance appropriate to their occupation in life. I sometimes wonder whether we, in our hurried way of baptizing, do not sometimes take profession of repentance instead of fruit of it.

When we talk of our ancient brethren, the voice, not of the turtle, but of old fogies &c., is heard in the land; but nevertheless our fathers built the church in America on a sound basis; and they handed her down to us, built on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ being the chief corner stone. They would frequently detain applicants for baptism a month or more. This under ordinary circumstances perhaps longer than necessary. When the person, and manner of life is known, delay may not be proper. The apostle sometimes did quick work. But some things the apostles did, we cannot do; and others may not always be expedient for us to do. I know that to baptize all with undue haste, is not always proper. John will have fruit meet for repentance before he will baptize his applicants.

Repentance defined by Webster, is 1. To feel pain, sorrow, or regret, for what one has done, or omitted to do. 2. To change the mind or course of conduct on account of regret or dissatisfaction with what has occurred. 3. To be sorry for sin as morally evil, and to seek forgiveness; to renounce the love and practice of sin.

Repentance, is the relinquishment of any practice from the conviction that it has offended God. Sorrow, fear, and anxiety are properly not facts, but adjuncts of repentance, yet they are too closely connected with it to be easily separated.

As defined by Paul. It is the grace of God which teaches to deny ungodliness, and worldly lusts, and to live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world. And as defined by the prophets. Wash you, make you clean, put away the evil of your doings from before men's eyes; cease to do evil; seek judgment, relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow. Come now and let us reason together (Is. 1: 16, 17). And "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord" (Is. 55: 7). When all these evidences or fruits of repentance are considered; we conclude that persons are sometimes baptized who have not produced them in the lives they lived before. The theory that we teach them in the church, to bring it forth is anti-Scriptural. The fruits of repentance must precede as a prerequisite to baptism. So the Savior taught, and so the apostles preached.

Repentance too is a personal work, every one for themselves must bring forth the fruits of it; we cannot plead a religious parentage in lieu of it. For "also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees; therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire." Dear reader, pause, and ponder well; I dare not follow the subject further. I have already gone beyond the limits of a short article.

ARE WE LAYING UP TREASURES ON EARTH, OR IN HEAVEN?

BY CHARLOTTE E. BOSE.

THIS is a question we should constantly keep before us. Are we laying up treasures in heaven or on earth? It is impossible to do both at the same time. We are commanded not to lay up our treasures on earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt; but to lay them up in heaven where they are not corrupted, nor thieves do not break through or steal. Reader, do you daily consider where you are laying up your treasures? Whenever the treasure is there will be the heart, and as God requires the whole heart, it is impossible to live near God with our minds constantly engaged in earthly affairs.

Our Savior says, labor not for meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life. Hence when we spend our time laying up that which we have no need, we are living in open disobedience to the express command of our Divine Redeemer. Nature itself rebels against the sweetmeats and rich dainties we very often spend time to prepare. Plain, nourishing food is much better for the health and strengthening of the body. If the stomach is full of indigestible food, the mind is obscured and clouded, and we are in no condition to learn the mysterious truths that are in the Scriptures. These things are of more importance to us than all of the world. Besides, should we not keep ourselves in a condition that all of our mental powers can have free action? We are our Master's stewards, and woe to us if we waste our Lord's substance in riotous living. Likewise we are commanded to be temperate in all things. Now we understand all things to mean drinking, eating, wearing, together with everything that pertains to the comforts of this life; and riotous living means extravagance and waste.

If anything should happen, which is often the case, that we should lose our goods or property, we are commanded to take joyfully the spoiling of our goods; knowing in ourselves that we have in heaven a better and more enduring substance. How often do we, instead of rejoicing, fret, worry, and grieve over these matters; and never once turn our thoughts toward the treasure in heaven. Reader, our life is as a vapor, that soon passes away, the little that is required to sustain this mortal existence, is all we really need; and as we brought nothing in this world we can take nothing out of it when we go. Therefore, having food and raiment, let us be contented, and raise our thoughts to heaven where our treasure is; and by daily practicing good works continue to enlarge our treasure there. We should also bring to mind the strait gate and narrow way that the true follower of our Lord and Master must travel; we must strive to enter in at the strait gate, for many will seek to enter in and shall not be able.

We naturally suppose that those who have gathered for themselves great earthly treasures, would find it difficult to travel this narrow way, or pass through the strait gate; but if the treasure is hid up beyond the gate, the possessor can easily pass through to his possession, and we are told that it is of so glorious and sublime a character, that eye hath not seen or ear hath not heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive what it will be. A small sacrifice to give up the insignificant treasures of earth, for such a reward, —treasures that only bring sorrow and trouble for the glories promised in the heavenly kingdom.

Let us consider the character by whom these promises were made, He to whom all power was given in heaven and earth. He is not only able to give us all He promised, but has shown Himself willing by sacrificing His own life for us. Why will we grovel after earthly treasures, when we can raise our thoughts to such glorious anticipations, if we are just faithful to lay up our treasures above? At times we feel that irrepresible longing for something, earth, with all its treasures, cannot give the cravings of an immortal spirit for eternal rest. A secret dread of coming judgment will haunt us at times when our treacherous hearts turn toward the beggarly elements of earth, and begin to lay plans for accumulating earthly treasures.

Let us flee the tempter, listen not to his insinuating words; stand true to our immortal Being; love God with all the heart, trusting in all His promises, for they are sure and steadfast, our treasures are safe in His hands until He calls us home to inherit them, and then all mysteries will be made clear, all doubts and conflicts will cease. It has long been given up by man, that the ways of God are past finding out; but we believe when we enter the eternal world, all these mysteries will be revealed to us, and that our inheritance will be all that has been promised, and that our faculties of enjoyment can be exalted to a degree equal to the inheritance.

Our heavenly treasure is a free gift; we are only to accept it and live in humble submission to His will; He will do all the rest for us in spirit, He will go with us, directing our path; all we have to do is to heed the gentle Monitor. What is earth and all its treasures, when we contemplate the joys of a vast eternity? Why worry over the little trivial affairs of earth that will pass away like a shadow? A few more days or years at most we will pass away and soon be forgotten by the inhabitants of earth, our places will be supplied by new forms. But the question arises, where will we be? A question of very great importance to us. Lay up your treasures in heaven where moth or rust cannot corrupt nor thieves break through and steal. If our treasure is there we will be called home to inherit, not for a day or year, but through a vast eternity.

Arvatum, Ohio.

COME AND PREACH.

BY J. R. PECK.

LOOKING over our periodicals from time to time I am often moved by the urgent and multiplied calls of "Come and preach for us." It must be apparent to every thinking brother and sister that there are hundreds if not thousands of places even in our own country (to say nothing about foreign countries), where the everlasting Gospel, as we understand and believe it is unknown. Besides this there are many places where one, or a few members are isolated from organized churches, deprived of the pleasure of attending God's house, and appeasing their hungering and thirsting souls, with the bread and water of life; and seeing their friends and neighbors around them rushing headlong down the broad road that leadeth to destruction, unwarned, unconverted, unsaved; then it is no wonder that they cry "Come and preach for us."

The question arises, will God hold us guiltless for thus neglecting His cause? Will He say to that minister who never goes out of his district to preach, and never preaches in it, "Well done thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord?" There is no reason why all these calls and many more should not be responded to; and as the church has the means available to do this, and that without the expense of a dollar, I don't believe she will be excused for this palpable neglect of her duty.

But how can it be done? As before intimated there are a number of do-nothing preachers in nearly every large congregation, who scarcely ever preach because they can't, or don't want to, or are afraid to, because there are so many better preachers in the same congregation. These should be urged to go where good preachers are less numerous and where they would have a chance to make themselves useful, and, by practice and perseverance develop their talents and thus become good preachers themselves.

Again there are plenty of lay members that might make just as able and efficient ambassadors of the cross, as those already in the field; but not being needed in the districts where they reside, they are never called out, and so the cry must continue, come and preach for us, come and preach for us, but no one goes. Now I propose that every district elect a minister occasionally, even though he is not needed in the district; he may be needed elsewhere; but says one, will they go? I don't think all would, of course not; but it could do no particular harm to have several ministers in each congregation in case none would move away; but I feel safe to say that many would not feel satisfied to remain inactive, and would therefore move to places where they would be of service in the Master's cause, and thus many calls would be filled, many able ministers scattered over the land, many churches built up, and much good accomplished in the name of the Lord. I submit these thoughts to the further consideration of other minds.

Lanark, Ill.

READ AND BE FAITHFUL.

BY ABRAHAM HOLLINGER.

I HAVE labored in securing names for the Brethren at Work, for I do think it, in connection with the Scriptures, is a great help to us in traveling that narrow road of which we read in Matt. 7: 13, 14. "Enter ye in at the strait gate, for wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction; and many there be which go in thereat. Because strait is the gate and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it."

O dear brethren and sisters, let us see that we are traveling on that narrow way, that when we cross the dark river of death we may be so happy as to hear it said, "Come ye blessed of my Father inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." On the other hand if we do not do our duty to our God and fellow-men, it will be said, "Depart from me, ye cursed into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." Sinner, read Matt. 25, and reflect upon the banishment of the wicked from the presence of God into everlasting punishment. Take Jesus for the man of counsel and obey Him in all things, then you have the promise of rest beyond the grave.

Life is the time to serve the Lord. Then we should labor earnestly in our Master's cause with all our strength so that when we make the solemn change for eternity, that it will be for a home in heaven; where there is no sickness, sorrow, pain or death, and parting unknown; there to sing praises to the Father, Son and Holy Spirit in a world without end.

Men know how thunder and lightning come from the clouds in summer, and they want to thunder and lightning sometimes themselves; but it is better that the contents of the clouds should drop down in gentle rains, and make something grow, than that there should be flashing and resounding in the heaven, and that the oak should be crushed to pieces which has been growing for a hundred years; and it is better, not that men should produce a great racket in the world, and work destruction round about them, but that they should create happiness among their fellow-men.

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE,
S. H. BASHOR,
M. M. ESHELMAN, } EDITORS.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent post-paid, to any address in the United States or Canada, for $1.00 per annum. Those sending ten names and $15.00, will receive an extra copy free of charge. For all over this number the agent will be allowed 10 cents for each additional name, which amount can be deducted from the money, before sending it to us. Money Orders, Drafts, and Registered Letters may be sent at our risk. They should be made payable to Moore, Bashor & Eshelman. Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE, BASHOR & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL. MARCH 21, 1878.

THE following dispatch just received (noon of 16th) explains itself:

NEW YORK, MARCH 16, 1878.

Dear Brethren:—

Landed all right.

ENOCH EBY.

BRO. John Nicholson held a series of meetings from Feb. 10 to 21, inst., with the brethren at Delta, Ohio, resulting in ten additions by baptism and two reclaimed.

"THE ark of the Lord is still moving on slowly here, two more have come out on the Lord's side to live for His glory," says Bro. Abraham Wolf of Washington, Ia.

ON the third of March three persons were received into the Glade Run (Pa.) church, by baptism. May they continue to walk in "newness of life," ever looking to Him who is full of wisdom and strength.

SERGEON is said to be completely broken down in health, and has been forced to abandon ministerial labor. He has said many good things in his time, and is noted for his depth of thought and boldness in preaching.

THE house of brother Jonathan Kimmel of Somerset Co., Pa., was burned with nearly all of its contents, on the night of the 6th inst. His loss is between twelve and fifteen hundred dollars. God bless him in this his severe trial.

THE brethren and sisters comprising the Maquoketa church, Ia., recently held a series of meetings at Baldwin, assisted by Bro. Solomon Stanny, and they rejoiced to see seventeen precious souls turn to Jesus, seeking fellowship with the children of God.

BE ye holy; for I am holy, says our Master. He gives an excellent reason why we should be holy—because He is holy. Jesus always gives good reasons. "If I your Lord and Master have washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one another's feet." Here He gives the reason again, and the man who says, "not I," is hard to satisfy.

ON the 8th inst., a terrible snow storm visited the Western part of Nebraska and Wyoming Territory. The Union Pacific railroad was blockaded for a distance of 500 miles and it required a large force of workmen several days to clear the track. The weather was very cold; a number of persons perished, and in many places cattle and sheep froze to death.

BRO. Bashor writes that his health is again failing. He will return to Lanark the 23rd inst., hence his correspondents will note this in writing him. His meetings at Gilboa, Ohio, resulted in six additions to the church by baptism, one formerly a United Brethren minister. As the benefit is theirs, may God be glorified, and the children of God everywhere encouraged.

EUROPEAN complications continue to exist. Russia maintains a firm attitude, being disposed not to submit to Congress all the articles of peace, while England insists that all of them must be submitted for discussion. In the meantime active war preparations are being made in England and Austria, and Russians strengthening her positions. The prospects for peace are not very encouraging.

IN every community, in every society there are men who toil not, neither do they spin, — to make nets to catch other people's money. — They are drones and deserve to be stung out of the hive. They are never ready to do a good work unless there is ten or more per cent in it, cash down. The honey of other's gathering they delight to eat, but the honey that comes by hard work and strict honesty on their part, is always wanting. They are afraid of sunshine, hence loiter in the shade. Their display on the streets indicates millions. The facts at home show they are beggars—poor, because too lazy to work. Such go down into the pit which Satan has dug for them. You may want to help them to keep out, but they will go in. That seems to be their place.

THE weather in this part of the country is beautiful. At this writing, (15th) the roads are rapidly getting into good condition, farmers and gardeners are busy putting in seed; all no doubt having faith and hope that they shall reap. Children of Jesus, are we careful to plant God's seed—the Word of Life—in our hearts day by day? Plant and ye shall reap, and that abundantly.

IN the city of Pekin, in China there are 10,000 temples dedicated to idols. Here millions of Chinese worship, and men in this country bestir themselves to Christianize those heathen, but it is a sad commentary on popular Christianity when the fact appears that the secretism of this land is carried to China by missionaries and mixed with their teaching. "Preach the Word," and let other things die as they should.

THERE are many Jews in Russia. During the war just closed, they undertook most of the responsibility of provisioning Russian troops, and they did it so well that the Czar has granted Hebrew merchants of foreign nationality, visiting Russia for the purpose of trading, permission to become members of the first society. This places them on the same footing with Russian merchants. This is significant of the rise of the Jews.

ON the night of the 10th inst. W. Irving Bishop, successfully exposed modern spiritualism before a large audience in Chicago. He shows how slate writing is done, how hands can be held in the fire and not be burned, how persons can creep out of a tied condition and all other shams that go about under the name of Spiritualism. The Spiritualists seem to be demoralized and confounded. Thus one after the other of the humbugs come to grief after thousands have been deceived. God help them to put on Christ, and walk after the Spirit.

BROTHER, sister, do you not see some one struggling in the mire? Yes, there he is, poor sinner! Will you help him to get his feet on the Rock? Go, help to lift him up; do him good; pray with him; turn his thoughts to God and show him the riches of God's grace. Treat him kindly; for he will like it, and in that way his heart will soften for the Word of Truth. — Tell him to repent, bear fruit, put on Christ, follow Him, seek for glory, honor, immortality, eternal life. Tell him this. It will do you good too. O be not idle, but work, work, that others may enjoy God's blessings as you enjoy them.

THE Lutheran Conference of the Synod of Northern Illinois was held in this city, commencing the 12th and continuing until the evening of the 14th. Among the topics discussed were, "How to hear the Word," "How to assist the Pastor," "What the church owes the community," "The agreement between nature and revelation," "What are sensational methods in church work?" The "Women's Home and Foreign Missions," and the manner of managing church finances were also discussed. Harmony of action and zeal for their faith and practice characterized the meeting. Their last session was devoted to children who were addressed in words of kindness by a number of the delegates.

A NEW church has been formed in Brooklyn, N. Y., and named "The Church." There are already two congregations in existence. Their declaration of principles is: 1. One faith, and this essentially on the death and resurrection of Christ. 2. Condition of membership, profound dependence upon the grace of Jesus Christ alone for salvation. 3. No article of faith but the Holy Scriptures (without note or comment) and ordination of ministers without human intervention or discrimination of sex. 4. The preacher a servant and not lord over God's heritage, and not to have a stated salary, for if he cannot trust Christ for support, he is unworthy. All members of the church are to have a voice in electing their minister. 5. A board of elders, elected for their godliness, is to take charge of the finances. 6. The Passover, as fixed by Christ's authority and example (typical of His death, resurrection and coming again), to be celebrated on the first Sunday in April each year. No other ceremonies to be observed. No renting or selling of pews, by which the rich are held in greater esteem than the poor, is to be allowed. All contributions for church purposes to be voluntary and delinquent subscribers not to be held as debtors.

APOSTOLIC MISSIONARY WORK.

HAD Jesus chosen men called apostles? Yes. He had apostles. Did His apostles obey Him? Yes, they obeyed Him. Did they do missionary work, "go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature?" They did; for "they went forth and preached every-where, the Lord working with them" (Mark 16: 20).

Did God ever cease saying to His ministers, "Go and preach?" Never: for the Guide to the apostles, is still Guide to us. About this there can be no caviling unless men are unbelievers, of whom God says they "shall have their part in the lake of fire and brimstone" (Rev. 21: 8).

God, for wise reasons, has withheld from men the power to dictate to His ministers when, where and what to preach. "In season and out of season" is the when. "In all the world" is the where. "All the counsel of God"—the whole truth is the what. Any other arrangement amounts to nothing; has not on it the seal of the Lord, nor the smiles of Jehovah. God is the best Planner; not only the best, but the only true One. Since God's method is the best or only true one, it would be folly for any man, or number of men to try to make one like it or nearly like it. If God's plan is the best then none can be made better; and to make one nearly like it would be vain also. Our only recourse, then, is to fall back on God's when, where and what. These are definite and need no defining.

We look with admiration upon the apostles' missionary work. They went forth with the love of God in their hearts, the words of Truth in their minds. Their primary objects were the salvation of souls, and their own eternal welfare. What they should eat and wear was of so little importance to them that they halted not to consider it. In fact all the disciples were taught to use hospitality one towards another and to give not grudgingly, so that all were abundantly supplied. But in James' time some had become rich and their riches "corrupted" them. Those who thus allowed themselves to become entangled, were told to "weep and howl for their miseries that should come upon them" (James 5: 1). Distributing to the necessities of the saints, minister or no minister, was one of their peculiarities; and "having food and raiment" they tried to be "content."

Paul stripped some churches that he might do service in others, but is quite silent about stripping churches to preach to the heathen. In fact his faith and zeal forbade him to wait until some person or persons told him to go. God had told him to GO, and no man could do more. The apostolic method of spreading the Truth was free from all webs, intricacies and partialities. No Conference could tell them where and when to go. God had already said that. No body of men could send Paul to Spain, Peter to Rome, Thomas to Babylon, Mark to Egypt. God had already said, "in all the world." No man nor body of men could say more. It was not a question of saying, nor of commanding, but the question of doing, of obeying. It was not a question of how to get meat and drink, for God said, "I am with you alway." There was no time to get up doubts,—with them it was a matter of faith.

"How shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach except they be sent?" (Rom. 10: 14, 15) is the voice of God. No hearing without a preacher, and the preacher must be sent. God sends him, and keeps up a standing GO so that no minister can say, "I am not sent." And here is another point in our apostolic lesson. They made no noise about their intentions, but like men of God, went. When the work was done, an apostle could say of a certain church: "From you sounded out the word of the Lord not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also in every place your faith to God-ward is spread abroad" (1 Thess. 1: 8). Here Paul planted a church and from this church the word of the Lord sounded out, not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but in every place their faith toward God spread abroad. The church at Thessalonica was a real live church;—a missionary church; and the facts show that he sought not the help of others, but with strong faith in God sounded out the word of the Lord.

"Well," says one, "what kind of a plan do you favor?" What kind of a plan? There are no kinds of plan, but a plan—the old apostolic plan. Any other is not worth thinking about, much less talking and writing about. I am for the plan that has no stain upon it, the plan that is more than eighteen hundred years old, the plan that makes every brother and sister a true worker, makes them powerful instruments in the hands of God, for the spread of His Word. This apostolic plan tells who shall go, where they shall go, when to preach and what to preach. More than this no man can say; and to say less is avoiding the issue. I see nothing but simplicity in the apostolic plan. I see no long lanes with little crooks in them, through which a minister must pass to reach the sinner. I see every member in the apostolic order aliter worker. I see no drones there. I see none getting fat on the food of others. I see none getting lean through the fullness of others. I don't see some running after Peter's plan, another after Paul's and a third after James'; for these had no plan save the one given by Jesus. In fact they worked by the same rule, and left that for us. If we do not accept that rule, that plan, we accept something else; and if we accept something else we let go the apostolic order of things, and then we are woefully entangled. God grant grace to avoid the entanglement.

But I again turn my eyes towards Jerusalem and see no concern on the part of the guers how to get into all the world, where to go, but as meek and humble children, the entire body looked up to God and He provided a way for successful work. I see no cumbrous machinery, no expensive forms among the early Christians to spread the Gospel. I look over into the apostolic order and see no man, no number of men spending a penny to get a farthing for missionary work. I look into the world now, and see just such work going on. I look back again over eighteen hundred years and fail to see the mites of widows appropriated to clothe indigent men in "costly array" and to adorn their houses. I see no minister standing to be told to go with shickels of silver or talents of gold; but I see them going and the saints everywhere administering to their wants. If there were any poor, the more able were commanded to give "not grudgingly, or of necessity," but cheerfully. I see none burdened and others eased, but I see "equality" (2 Cor. 8: 14). I do not see the minister toiling and laboring, bearing the whole burden, but I see equality. I do not see the apostles but laying a money foundation and working according to this. I do not see them under the necessity of telling the saints to administer to their wants, but the saints knew this by the Word of the Lord. In fact, I see equality all along the apostolic route, hence fail to see any occasion for want or concern about money. These only come in where there is inequality; and the best medicine for inequality is large doses of the only true Gospel. Now reader, by this time you are ready to say that you are in full accord with the apostolic plan of missionary work; if not, why not? It is the oldest, purest, best and most successful. Others may be nearly as good, but the nearly-as-good are never equal to the best. M. M. E.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Dear Paper:—

OUR meetings at Eagle Creek, near Dunkirk continued several days and though the roads were the worst we ever saw during any series of meetings yet the attendance was good. Those who could, came on horseback and in big-ges, others came each time afoot. The Presbyterians had a series of meetings in progress one mile and a half distant, while the Methodists were conducting meetings within two miles, making it rather a competition religiously, yet our meetings as before stated were well attended. During this progress several united with the church, among them a man called a moralist who had by his influence been a hindrance to the church in many ways for years before; another who still exerted a greater influence against the church, being connected with, and a preacher in the Methodist church; had formerly been only an exhorter, but at the time of his baptism was a regular licensed minister among them. His brethren seemed much surprised and depressed at his change, and ours as much lifted up and rejoiced.

On Thursday 28th we bid adieu to the brethren here and passed via of Lima to Leipsic, where Bro. Shidler met and conveyed us to the church near Gilboa, where we were to hold meetings for some days. Bro. Wm. Workman preceded us several days and preached, but owing to the rain and mud our meetings were very small at first, but increased until the close, and at the close of the meetings we had the pleasure of seeing a number willing to confess Christ and change their church relations, as nearly all were from other churches. Among the number added here was a minister of the United Brethren church, making a rejoicing among God's people. He was a stranger among the Brethren in part, having just lately moved in the district. Is a man of intelligence and we hope will be an example and instrument for good in the church.

March 8th, we separated from our brethren and friends here and came to this place (Postonia) where we will remain for a few days and then return home, as we need rest and by the advice of physicians will labor in the ministry no more for an indefinite period, at least not till after A. M. and probably not then unless our nervous system strengthens and health fully returns. When we look back over our labors in the past we see many acts of indiscretion which may, to a certain extent, be the prime cause of present worn down health. Among them, preaching at night and changing beds after riding several miles through the cold or rain instead of occupying the same bed each night, and stopping near the church. Eating of everything good without reference to the laws of health, and incessant talking out of the pulpit. I used to think that men would not wear out preaching, but God will take care of no man who violates an established law; above all, that of the laws of health.

During our stay at Dunkirk we met Bro. Howard Miller and heard him preach his church extension sermon. Trust his work will end in glory to God and the cause of the church. As a people we have had too little of the spirit of missions and now that our brotherhood is awakening to its duty on the subject, we feel that the utmost care should be used in furthering it, an injudicious move at present would result in injury, and no doubt, retard the progress of the church. Trust, however, that salvation may arise in the morning of our missionary day and spread her wings over forenoon and evening until thousands enter the ship of peace and pass to the other shore, arising before God in the full triumph of redeeming love.

With kind regards to all God's people everywhere, and a prayer for those who sent word that we had not their prayers, we close our present letter, promising to give a full report of objects and incidents of interest when we arrive at home. S. D. B.

THE NEWTONIA DEBATE.

WHEN I last wrote, I was in St. Louis, spent the most of the afternoon writing, for when traveling every spare moment must be devoted to our business. Left St. Louis at 9:30 and traveled all that night and did not reach Ritehey, our stopping place, till one o'clock P. M. Wednesday, on which day the discussion was to have commenced.

After leaving St. Louis I saw but little country that I admired till after passing Springfield. In fact, Springfield is located in an excellent portion of the State, and the condition of the farms show that it is capable of much productivity, and will eventually rank among the wealthy portions of the West.

At Ritehey I was met by Bro. Peter Fahrney and conveyed by him direct to Newtonia, some four miles distant. This is a neat little village of some 600 inhabitants and situated in the midst of an excellent farming country. The church here is yet young, but in a healthy and growing condition with excellent prospects before it.

It was about three o'clock when I entered the house where the discussion was being held. Mr. Ray was then on the floor near the close of one of his speeches. He is a man about forty-two years old, heavy set, coarse features and full bodied in appearance and action. He is the most sternly man in speaking I ever saw on the floor, and it would be impossible, in print, to present his words as he emphasizes them while talking. At times he speaks so loud that it is impossible for many to distinctly understand his articulation, and hence I could not get all his arguments, and therefore, cannot report them as I would wish. He is a man of great debating talent—of good ability—and has been debating for twenty years—is an old debater, having met in discussion some of the best critics of the land, and therefore comes into this debate with all the experience that any man could ask for, thus rendering him amply and fully qualified to do all for the Baptist cause that could possibly be done by any one. In fact he is recognized as the ablest debater in the West, having held not less than thirty public discussions. He ranks very high in the literary circles as a Baptist historian, having written several works and among them a book of nearly 500 pages on Baptist Succession. Two of his public discussions have been reported and published. He is also editor of the Baptist Battle Flag, a weekly paper published at St. Louis, Mo.

Brother J. W. Stein is thirty-six years of age. He was born in Roanoke Co., Va., and descends from a respectable line of Baptist families on his mother's side, his grand-father having been one of the oldest Baptist ministers of the times. His father was from Berlin, Prussia; he came to Va. in an early day. The war prevented Bro. Stein finishing his regular college course, though he has since applied himself very diligently and thus acquired a good stock of knowledge. He was ordained to the Baptist ministry when twenty-five years of age and continued to preach for the Baptist church for nine years, when he came to the Brethren, and is now pretty well known among our people.

He enters this discussion without any experience as a debater, though well prepared for the work. Some of the Brethren were fearful that Mr. Ray's great experience as a debater would prove too much for Bro. Stein, but he proved himself equal to the task. He takes things coolly and deliberately, not once becoming unduly excited. During the entire discussion it was plainly visible that in the point of good scholarship Bro. Stein was far in advance of Ray, and entered departments where his opponent dared not follow. For instance when Bro. Stein took up the commission and analyzed it according to the rules of language, showing that it unquestionably taught the three-fold immersion, Ray just let himself down and positively refused to grapple with the question. When the congregation saw him do that, they lost confidence in his ability to refute Bro. Stein's argument thus drawn from the commission.

It is well known that the Baptists lay great claims to organic succession, claiming that the Baptist churches can be traced by an unbroken line to the apostles. This position was taken by Ray as one of his strongest arguments, and on it he placed much reliance. Bro. Stein repeatedly urged him to name just one body of Baptists, like his church, before the twelfth century. This he refused to do though challenged several times, then Bro. Stein took up the Baptist history, which Ray had written, and showed conclusively, by the best Baptist historians in the world, that the very class of people through which Ray was tracing the Baptist church were just like the Brethren. He showed that they practiced trine immersion, feet-washing, Lord's supper, the holy kiss, anointing the sick with oil, non-swearing and were opposed to war and took no part in it. This was simply overwhelming. He simply cut 1200 years off of the other end of the Baptist church, thus proving, that so far as organic succession was concerned, the Baptist church lacks 1200 years of being old enough to reach the apostolic age. No attempt was made to refute this argument. Bro. Stein demonstrated that the Baptist histories, instead of proving the Baptist claims, actually sustained the Brethren's doctrine.

On Baptist history Ray was driven to the wall, and at the end of the fourth day's discussion declared that he would not give a feather for the evidence of such historians as Orchard, Judson and Robinson.

This discussion has been in contemplation for some time, and therefore the parties were well prepared for it. Mr. Ray affirmed that "The Baptist churches possess Bible characteristics entitling them to be regarded as churches of Jesus Christ." Bro. Stein denied. The discussion commenced at 11 o'clock on Wednesday, March 6th, each party making four half-hour speeches each day. Mr. Ray occupied three days affirming his proposition. It was clear to all that he failed to sustain his proposition, for one of the strongest proofs he had to rely on was organic succession and that was taken entirely away from him, leaving a gap of 1200 years between his church and the churches of Jesus Christ. He made a great ado over the fifty million Baptist martyrs who suffered for the cause of Christ. Bro. Stein wanted him to tell who some of those martyrs were, but he refused to name one, for if he had Bro. Stein would have proven that they were like the Brethren and not like the Baptists. His eulogy over the church in the wilderness, its sufferings and trials was grand indeed, but judge of the astonishment when it was proven that all those churches he referred to practiced trine immersion, and were opposed to oaths, war &c.

On Saturday morning Bro. Stein commenced affirming the following proposition: "The Brethren (or Dunkard) churches possess Bible characteristics entitling them to be regarded as churches of Christ," and spent the most of his time on trine immersion up to Monday evening at which time I finish up and send off this report.

Up to the present time Mr. Ray has positively refused to grapple with Bro. Stein's analysis of the commission. Bro. Stein produced not less than five ancient Greek scholars who say the commission teaches trine immersion, and offered to give them all up if his opponent would produce just one ancient Greek scholar saying it taught single immersion. Ray refuses to touch the question. Bro. Stein showed that the commission taught trine immersion so plainly that it took five hundred years before a man could be found having audacity enough to claim that it taught single immersion, and that that man was a pope, belonging to the mother of harlots too at that, and then challenged Ray to produce one single person, before 500 years after Christ, saying to the contrary. Ray would not touch this question.

Bro. Stein cornered Ray completely on one thing. Ray in his book on Baptist succession said that trine immersion originated with the Catholics after the rise of the Arian controversy. This would place the origin of trine immersion near the beginning of the fourth century. But Ray was driven to admit that trine immersion was practiced as early as the second century, then Bro. Stein proved by good Baptist historians that there was no change made in the manner of administering baptism till after the close of the third century, thus showing that trine immersion was the universal mode during the first three centuries of Christianity, and then asked Ray to find just one case of single immersion during that time. The great Baptist historian and debater would not touch it.

The discussion will last two days yet. I am feeling quite well, and enjoy myself with the members here. They are a zealous and wide awake body of members. I have been preaching every night, with one exception, since here. The weather is delightful and Spring coming in beautifully. The Brethren have a fine country here. More anon. J. W. S.

QUERIES AND ANSWERS.

1. Please give your views on Genesis 1: 26. To whom was God speaking when He said: "Let us make man in our own image and after our own likeness?" J. S. FURTZ.

Genesis was first written in Hebrew, and in this language we read it thus: "In the beginning Gods created the heaven and the earth." In the original it is Elohim, meaning more than one, hence plural; and being plural, we can readily perceive why Elohim, Gods, said, "Let us make man." So far in Divine inspiration we have revealed to us Father, Son and Holy Spirit—all of whom have the title God. I understand therefore that the Father said to Son and Holy Spirit, "Let us make man."

2. Will you please tell us through the columns of the BROTHERS AT WORK the meaning of the word "Selah" which occurs so frequently in the Psalms? ESQ. DEER.

The Septuagint always translates it diapsalmaa—a pause in a Psalm. The Chaldees sometimes gives it the meaning, parva. The other versions leave it unaltered. By some commentators it is said to have the signification of Amica—a robe; mark well. But it seems to come from Sah, to raise the voice, or Sabah to scatter or spread out, meaning that the subject should be attentively considered. The most reasonable view is, that it is a direction to the musicians, something like, Presto, Largo, Allegro—play brisk and holdly; let sense and sound go together. This I regard as the most probable meaning of the term.

3. Is it safe for us to follow commentators on the Bible, or should we take the Word alone as our guide and ask wisdom of God to understand it? ENQUIRER.

It is not safe to follow commentators in all things. In historical matter they are perhaps perfectly reliable, but in doctrine, and experience, they often shoot wide of the mark. In matters of doctrine, commentators generally follow their early religious training, hence their work is more or less a reflection of the faith and practice of the society to which they belong. Here then it would not be safe to follow their reasoning, but in dates and events they are not influenced by society training, hence generally reliable. It is safe to follow the Word alone. It is not hard to understand, and "if any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God who giveth liberally." But there is only one way of asking for wisdom. We are taught to "study" and search the Scriptures, and ask for the influence of the Holy Spirit that wisdom may mark all of our thoughts and acts. A man may have great learning, yet be very foolish—have no wisdom. Wisdom in man, will manifest itself in the matter of judgment, discretion and skill. So we are taught to study God's Word, and then ask God's influence to apply that knowledge in a wise manner.

But there is an error afloat that it would be well to guard against. It is claimed that if we ask God for wisdom, He will put words in our mouth, and all we need to do is to let them out. Before the Word was written, before it was put in form, God directly inspired men and gave them words to utter, but since the words of God were put in form so that all men can see, read and obey, God does not send words some other way. The words of the Holy Ghost must be put in our mind by our own effort, and then we have a perfect right to pray for wisdom—that is, good judgment, skill and discretion to apply them, to use them. It is how to apply wisdom-words that we should seek the Lord, and not the wisdom-words themselves. These are always with us if we learn them.

4. Please give an explanation on 1 Peter 4: 6. Were these persons or characters spoken of, dead physically or spiritually? A. MOCK. B. YOUNG.

The Scripture alluded to by those brethren reads thus: "For, for this cause was the Gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the Spirit." "This cause" means that Jesus "is ready to judge the quick and the dead." Note therefore, first: The Gospel was preached to those that were dead, physically. Second: This was necessary for two purposes. 1. That those dead persons might be judged according to men in the flesh. 2. That they might live according to God in the Spirit.

They were dead physically, because I nowhere find in the Book of God, that the spirit of man dies. We read of a slumbering spirit (Rom. 11: 8), of a foul spirit (Rev. 18: 2) and of many other kinds of spirits, but nothing of a dead spirit. Dead in sin, is not a dead spirit, but a spirit in a sinful state. If there were such a thing as a dead spirit, or a person dead spiritually, it would appear then that a man could live without a spirit, which is not according to Divine arrangements. The apostle first addressed live men, and next told them something about dead men. We should understand by live men, such who are physically able to know, see, move &c. Then we understand by dead men, such whose breath of life has departed. Look at it as we will the apostle seems to allude to those who were dead, physically. M. M. E.

BROTHER, if you would be happy, let God's sunshine into your heart. Do not be under the shadow of the world, nor try to get others under. Let the peace of redeeming love rule in your house; and while that peace is there see that you are not preparing carnal weapons for war. Often on your knees in secret, will help you to scatter sunshine to others. Do not blemish its rays by the corruptible things of the world, but feed them with grace divine.

MAINTAIN purity by yielding up nothing that is God's; maintain peace by yielding up all that is your own.

The Home Circle.

READ AND OBEY.

"Husbands, love your wives."
"Wives, obey your husbands."
"Parents, provoke not your children to wrath."
"Children, obey your parents in all things."

Edited by M. M. Eshelman.

ACROSTIC.

Many people now are marching,
On the path the wicked are;
Of they're warned, but still they linger,
Round the pool of dark despair.

ALMIRA KORN.

TO THE CHILDREN AT WORK.

YOU have sent us many letters, and no doubt, you did as well as you knew how, but many of you tell the same story. I don't mean the old story of the cross, but the story of going to school, what you study, your teacher's name and so on. All this is evidence of a child-like heart, but all cannot thus see it. You must, therefore, excuse us if we leave out all such matter, and select only such points directly to our Father's spiritual work. Write short articles on Bible subjects. You know older people will read your letters, and they want substantial food.
Now try your best and see how well you can write of Jesus and His good work. M. M. E.

QUERY AND ITS ANSWER.

Dear Editor:—Please tell us who the ninety and nine just persons are that need no repentance? KATHIE A. SHAVELY.

The parable of the sheep that were not lost and the one that strayed away, teaches us a good lesson. "The just shall live by faith." These are they that need no repentance. They have been born again, washed their robes in the blood of the Lamb, and diligently follow Him. These, says Jesus, need no repentance; for they walk in all the statutes and commandments of the Lord, believe on Him, confess Him daily, hence are justified. But he who turns back, goes into the beggerly elements of the world, gets into the wilderness of the world, looks upon the hunks of carnality—such a one needs repentance, and when he is found, returns to God, even the angels rejoice. My young friends, when you reach the point where your Father's love is ready to fill your souls with joy, O, turn not into the wilderness of sin, but arrange yourselves on the side of the just, and then walk blameless before the Lord. M. M. E.

SUNDAY MORNING.

At Meeting.

THE minister arose, read the fourth chapter of Peter's first letter, and began to talk pleasantly to the people, pointing them to the words: "If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; for the Spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you; on their part he is evil spoken of, but on your part he is glorified."
He told how happy those are, who are reproached for the name of Christ. On such, rests the Spirit of glory. The kind father, mother and children who came to meeting with a godly conversation on the way, now sit looking smilingly and pleasantly at the minister and are happy in hearing the words of truth from him.
Do they spend their time in looking at others?
No. While on their knees at prayer, do they peep over the congregation to see how this or that person is dressed? No, not at all; they are not "busy-bodies in other men's matters."
Then they are not looking to the right and left as if they came out of mere curiosity? O no, but as children of God they look and listen.
This inspires the minister to work pleasantly,
and he feels that his work is not in vain.
This happy family is here to be made better.
They came to be enriched still more and more in the truth of God. God blesses them for their motives. See how they gather the rich kernels of truth! What care they for the chaff? It is the clean, pure grain they are after, and they have no time to spend in raking over matter that can do them, nor any one else any good.

God bless them for their good sense! Grave, sober, yet kind and pleasant to all. "What made brother James and sister Mary so happy to-day?" queries sister Cora as she goes home.
Happy? It was their holy living, their good conversation on the way to meeting and their attention while at meeting. Their hearts were filled with love to God and man. They looked upon others as their equals and not as inferiors.
They had no malice, no ill-will, no bad feeling towards any one. In fact they did their duty as they knew it, and were happy. O for thousands and millions of such happy people! Misery, woe, backbiting, whisperings and contentions never originate with this happy family—this Bible family. All is love with them. True they have trials and temptations, but they overcome with faith. The preacher preached plain, but they were not hurt. He told of sin, how it gets into the heart, and then shows itself, makes its marks on our bodies, our faces, lips, in our houses and all our possessions, but they were not hurt. In some things they were condemned, but they profited by it. They did not tell it abroad how the preacher's words burned their hearts, but they were made better by the preaching. They spoke not lightly about the minister's blunders. These troubled them not. They went to be made better, and were. God bless all such families in meeting and out of it! God is glorified by such happy, sensible people. The Spirit of glory rested upon them. Happy, happy, family indeed. Let their number be greatly increased. M. M. E.

TO THE DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS WHO WRITE FOR THE HOME CIRCLE.

I HAVE been thinking for some time of writing a few lines, too, for the BRETHERN AT WORK. You see I address you dear boys and girls. So you are, although strangers to me.
What makes you doubly dear to me is, to learn that so many of you have already come out from among the world and are trying to serve the Lord. I sincerely hope that time will come when every one of you will be numbered with the people of God. A good man of old advises us to "remember our Creator in the days of our youth."

I see you are all improving in letter writing;
your letters are getting more lengthy and interesting every week. If you take Bro. Eshelman's advice and write upon Bible subjects, you will improve more still. Your minds will be enriched, and the information you gain will be valuable. Letter and essay writing should be participated in by every young person. Your beginnings are small, but continu-on and success will crown your efforts. By improving the talents God has given us, and living Christian lives, we can be of great use, both to the church and the world.

H. P. ROSENBERG.

Michigan, Ind.

GOING TO CHURCH.

WHEN Christians fail to attend church on a Sabbath, they usually justify themselves by providing a suitable excuse. They are not well, tired, afraid of taking cold, or they have to remain at home to let others go—something is found easily at hand to excuse into an apology.
Not many, perhaps, are ready to acknowledge their delinquency as John Quincy Adams has done in the following extract from his diary:

"I can give no reason satisfactory to myself for having neglected attending upon the religious public services of this day.—Never in my life have I more needed faith and hope in the promises of the Gospel for relief from anxieties from sources public and private; never more fervently prayed for direction from above to lead me in the short remnant of the path before me. I have wasted the day without being aware of it till the day was gone. To the church of which I am a member there are no religious holidays save the Christian Sabbath; but personally I sympathize with those who solemnize the two anniversaries, Christmas and Easter—the birth and the resurrection of Jesus."

Such a confession is good for the soul. If every Christian, when feeling tempted to neglect his accustomed worship, would go to God, asking a blessing on his excuse and on himself for making it and carrying it out, he would find himself penitently and acknowledging that it was framed, in the first place, a concession to his want of interest in the Gospel.—Selected.

VOICE FROM THE DEAD.

MY youthful mates, both small and great,
Stand here and you shall see
A solemn sight, which is a type
Of what you soon must be.

I did appear once fresh and fair,
Among the youthful crowd;
But now behold me dead and cold,
Wrapped in a sable shroud.

My cheeks, once like roses spread,
My sparkling eye so gay;
But now you see how 'tis with me,
A lifeless lump of clay.

When you are dressed in all your best,
In fashion so complete,
You soon must be as you see me,
Wrapped in a winding-sheet.

When you unto your frolics go,
Remember that I say,
In a short time, though in your prime,
You may be called away.

Now I am gone, I can't return,
And me no more you'll see;
But it is true that all of you
Must shortly follow me.

When you unto my grave do go,
The gloomy place to see;
I say to you who stand and view,
Prepare to follow me.

The above was sung at the funeral services of one of my school scholars and I thought how much the last line should engage us all; especially the young. Our departed scholar was only fifteen years old, right in the bloom of youth.
We are sometimes made to think the young do not give their souls to God as soon as they should. Some parents will tell their children they are too young to serve the Lord, even if they make an effort.

WILFRED RICE.

Hagerstown, Md.

BEAUTIFUL EXTRACT.

I SAW a temple reared by the hands of men, standing with its high pinnacles in the distant plain. The storms beat upon it—the God of Nature hurled his thunderbolts against it—yet it stood, as firm as adamant. Heavily was in its halls—the gay, the happy, and the beautiful were there; I returned, and the temple was no more, its high walls lay scattered in ruins; moss and wild grass grew wildly there. The young and gay who revelled there had passed away. I saw a child rejoicing in his youth—the idol of his mother, and the pride of his father.
I returned and the child had become old,—trembling with the weight of years, he stood the last of his generation—a stranger amidst the desolation around him.

I saw an old oak stand in all his pride, on the mountains—the birds were cawing on its branches. I returned, the oak was leafless and sapless, the winds were playing at their pastime through its branches. "Who is the destroyer?"
said I to my guardian angel. "It is time," said he; "When the morning stars sang together in joy, over the new made world, he commenced his course, and when he shall have destroyed all that is beautiful—plucked the same from his sphere—veiled the moon into blood; yea, when he shall have rolled heaven and earth away as a scroll, then shall an angel from the Throne of God come forth, and with one foot on the sea, and one on the land, lift up his hand toward heaven, and swear by Heaven's Eternal; Time is, Time was, but Time shall be no more!"

The above is truly a beautiful extract, and I have selected it, thinking nothing so good should be lost. Reader, when the guardian angel comes forth to proclaim the above exclamation, where will thou be standing? Ask yourself this question NOW, and hastily "prepare to meet thy God." When I die shall be no more with us, there is no room for repentance. Just as life leaves us, death will find us. May death not find us unprepared. Fly to the arms of Jesus. He stands pleading for you, COME
NOW. E. R. STUBBS.

Hallsbury, Pa.

ABOUT DAVID.

Dear Editor:—
YOU wanted my brother Edgar to write something about David, but he had commenced writing about somebody else, so I will try to tell something about David.

David was Jesse's eighth son. He was the keeper of his father's sheep. One day while he was watching them the good old prophet Samuel came and called him in and anointed him

king. He was ruddy and without of a beautiful countenance and goodly to look upon. He was a cunning player on a harp and a mighty valiant man and a man of war. He was such a great man and did so many great things that I am at a loss to know what to tell first. One time there went out a champion named Goliath, who was six cubits and a span high, (Editor, how many feet is that?) and defied the army to which David belonged, but David was not afraid of him. He did not know how to fight with a sword so he took his staff in his hand and chose five smooth stones out of the brook and his sling was in his hand, and he went out and met this great man and overcame him. This was the beginning of his very eventful life. He passed through many sorrows, trials, temptations and troubles, but finally, by God's direction, he goeth up to Hebron where he is made king over the house of Judah and reigned seven years; then he went to Jerusalem and reigned over all Israel thirty-three years. He was a great singer, and wrote many of the Psalms. He died at a good old age, and Solomon, his son, reigned in his stead. DORA SIMMONS.

Union City, Ind.

[Goliath was about nine feet, six inches in height.—M. M. E.]

A room sister suggests that the "aunts" and "uncles" come out and give our readers their real names. The suggestion is a good one in some respects, for it does one good to read the letters of Paul and Peter; but had they not clearly revealed themselves, we would be worried with doubts and perplexities. I know it is not the person that should move our souls to joy and love, but the sentiments of the writer.
Nevertheless it is good to know who penned the thoughts.

SISTER E. VANIMAN writes: "I noticed in No.
7, Bro. J. B. Shirk's suggestion, and I thought his example a good one; therefore our children and myself have made up a small amount to help to pay for the paper for those who are too poor to do so. I hope more of the children will send in their mite. The children's father is not at home. Were he here I am sure he would join with us in our mite." Thank you, dear sister. God will reward your remembrance of the poor. We have many calls from the poor, and the willingness of the children, fathers and mothers to help us is highly appreciated. "The poor ye always have with you; and ye can do them good whenever you will," says our Master,
God help us to will right.

CHILDREN AT WORK.

From Susan E. Royer.—Dear Editor:—I am so glad that the Brethren are at work, and I feel that I ought to help all I can. I go to meeting whenever I have a chance, but the roads have been so muddy this Winter that we cannot go away from home to meeting. We have meeting in our meeting-house close by our house every fourth Sunday. We do not have Sunday-school in the Winter, but it will soon begin again. I love to go to Sunday-school and read the Bible. I have been a member of the church for a year and a half, and want to try to get to heaven, and hope everybody else will try to get there too. I have only one brother and he belongs to the church too; but my little sisters do not belong yet.

Monticello, Ind.

From Wm. Baringer.—While looking over the writings of those little "lambs" that are now in the flock of Jesus, I was made to rejoice as do the angels in heaven when sinners turn to serve the living God. And I especially rejoiced when I read a letter from a cousin of mine, and now a brother. It is now two years since I last my lot among the Brethren, and I still feel to press on and on to glory, for this world is not our eternal home. O, my dear cousins, brothers and sisters, let us work for an entrance into our Father's house, and then we shall run on the banks of the river of life, and bathe in its blessed tide.

Bristol, Ind.

From John W. Moore.—Dear Editor.—My popa died when I was three years old, but I have every assurance that he is at rest; also two little sisters in heaven above. I have no brothers or sisters living, but I have a dear mamma and step-father who treat me very kindly. I have been a member of the church for a little over one year, and am trying to do the best I can. Hope to hold out faithful to the end and receive the crown that is laid up in heaven for all that love and serve the Lord. Jennie E.
Hickey. The shortest chapter in the Bible is the one hundred and seventeenth Psalm.

Tiffin, Ohio.

CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM DENMARK.

[The following came too late to appear in regular order, and as there may be food in it for the saints, we now send it on its mission.—Ers.]

Dear Brethren:—

LOOKING out of our East window, my eyes rests on two meeting-houses with the date of erection on the end, figures made of iron fastened in the wall; the one 1767, the other 1780, and yet seemingly as firm as when built.

And while thus viewing them, it caused my mind to run (as this is the last day we expect to occupy our Denmark home), and think how many sermons have been preached in the one for 111 years, and in the other for 98 years; I think of the many prayers offered, the hymns sung, and the many dollars spent profitably in the service of God. But when examined in the light of the Gospel, it bears no resemblance to service introduced by the Savior and practiced by His apostles; hence must be a service of their own; and I fear the Savior would say: "This people draweth nigh to me with their mouth and with their lips they do honor me; but their heart is far from me; in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrine the commandments of men."

It is a lamentable fact that there is much, you very much of that kind of worship engaged in, at this age of the world, a fact that must be admitted by every honest Bible student; and if that diabolical doctrine were correct (which is so prevalent at the present day), that it don't matter, only so we are sincere and not inconsistencies in our faith, it would not be so important; but when the Saviour himself says, that if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch; and many will come to me in that day and say, Lord open unto us; but I will profess unto them, I never knew you. Then shall they begin to plead the merits of their false religion and say: We have cast out devils in thy name, and have done many wonderful works; but all to no avail. Away ye cursed into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels, (not for man, but if man will heed the doctrine of devils and follow his ministers, in preference to the humble doctrine of Christ, taught by his ministers, they necessarily must share the same fate, and go with him whom they followed and served in their blind zeal into the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone) will be the anathema poured from the lips of Jehovah, equal to the thunder upon Mount Sinai against all such flesh-gratifying, cross-dishonoring, heaven-insulting, devil-pleasing, God-pretending service, without any allowance for good-meaning ignorance and pure motives, and honest hearts, in this enlightened age and country of America especially, where wilful ignorance abounds, where the truth of God is changed to a lie, and a lie preached for truth, where the creature is worshipped more than the Creator, who is blessed forevermore.

The above thought with all its eternal consequences is stirring up our beloved brotherhood to greater efforts in opening the eyes of the blind, and turning them from darkness to light, and thereby making saints and angels rejoice and devils tremble. But although the brotherhood has brained Satan under its feet in the missionary cause, they must remember he will not be content with that; when he loses power in one place, he will try it in another; and if the Brethren in their great missionary spirit and zeal which at this time is manifesting itself throughout almost the entire brotherhood, are not extremely cautious in adopting plans and measures to carry out the much-desired end, the salvation of souls, they will leave some door or avenue open by and through which Satan will get the advantage of us; for we are not ignorant of his devices; and if he does not directly corrupt the Word, he may nevertheless corrupt the church in many ways, but no way can he be more successful than through the ministry.

But if the Brethren adhere strictly to the second clause of the duties of the committee of appointments and disbursements, as set forth in the report of the Meyersdale convention, there will be but little danger, which reads: "This committee shall send out only such men as ministers, missionaries or laborers in the church field, as shall represent the teachings, faith and general order of the Brethren church."

I would add to the above: "Both by precept and example, for we have many talented brethren among us who are able exponents of the Gospel and order of the church in dress as well as non-resistance and other things, in precept; but in example, where are they? You could not tell to what church they belonged; but the Brethren's would be about the last one, the mind would conjecture.

For instance, since we are in Europe, we went one Sunday to hear a man preach and one clause of his sermon required him to preach on humility, and he did it well, but at the same time he had a gold ring on one of his fingers, his hair did not look much like a Nazarene and his fashionable suit would have suited a clown better than a minister of the Gospel. Just such preaching as that, the devil glories in, and through it will corrupt the church. True, you may say, the Savior said we shall do as they tell us, but not after their works; for they say and do not. But actions speak louder than words. Send out a man with a fashionable suit, and his wife with a fashionable dress, and though he may speak with the tongues of men and angels, you will soon see a corrupt, fashionable church as the result of his preaching. What I say unto you, I say unto all, watch.

This will be our last communication from Denmark, and perhaps you may say, it is a pretty rough one. Well, if it is not true, throw it into your waste basket. My object is, by no means to throw a block under the wheel, but to give timely warning, prompted by a love to the cause and desire for the purity in the church. When the train runs fast, we ought to be the more watchful and careful to keep it on the track. No use in calling out: Fire, fire, when the house is burnt down. I have been written too, to give my opinion of the missionary movement, and whether I think it will work well, hence the above, brief hints. The Lord wants the Gospel preached among all nations, before the end will come, and if we only do it right, he will be pleased.

In conclusion let me remark, do not plough more ground than you have seed to sow, or your labor will be in vain.

To-morrow, if the Lord will, we leave here for London, via Hamburg, to which place we travel by rail; from there by water across the North or German Sea. Have purchased tickets from Hamburg to New York via London, with the privilege of stopping there as long as we wish, and to take any line from there to New York we wish; but from Hamburg to London we must take a smaller class of boats running between these two points.

Our mind now is, not to stop more than about two weeks, so as to cross the ocean before the equinoctial storms. Our stay here will be attended with a good deal of expense, as it will not justify to commence keeping house for so short a time, and cannot expect to do much good, unless we would stay all Summer, and that we could not do according to the nature of our mission and the feelings of many, if not all our dear brethren and sisters in Northern Illinois. We will and must however be controlled by circumstances, and are willing to say, As the Lord will and not we.

We received your very welcome letter yesterday, which was so long desired and looked for, hence have sufficient means to take us on our way. We rejoice in the thought that the length of time we spent in Denmark, was not altogether in vain, and that there is now a little active church planted, rejoicing in its first love, (oh, that it may never lose it) but which no doubt will be tried by Satan, that he may sift them as wheat, but, brethren pray that their faith fail not, but that it may be like the grain of mustard seed—become a great tree so that the fowls of the air (the sinners), may come and lodge in the branches thereof, and that the Lord may get to Himself a great name, not only in Denmark, but also in all the other countries of Europe.

Our separation from the church here, has associated with it, as usually is the case under such and similar circumstances, a degree of sorrow, mingled with joy. The ties of Christian fellowship are strong, and create a desire to associate with each other; and hence the pangs of separation, especially when we can use the language of the apostle, that many of you among whom we have gone, shall see our face no more. This consequently often causes weeping, falling around the neck and kissing; and that is the very kind of religion we need in such a wicked, cold-hearted world like this, where every one is seeking his or her own, and not another's welfare.

A Christianity that will not sometimes cause tears of both sorrow and joy, is not apostolic, and hence vain; but the thought that Christians will meet each other in a glorified and immortal state, gives joys inexpressible. If we must wear the crown of thorns, we shall wear the crown of glory, if we must drink vinegar mingled with gall, we shall drink of the waters of life in the midst of the paradise of God. O, what joy!

If this reaches you in due time, dear brethren and sisters, will you strive with us in your prayers to God in our behalf, that we may have a safe voyage across the great deep, and be permitted once more to meet many loved ones in America? Amen and Amen.

Excels. Evy.

Hjorring, Denmark, February 11, 1878.

From Anderson, Indiana.

Dear Brethren:—

ACCORDING to previous arrangements, Bro. William Deeter came to us, to commence a series of meetings, which took place on the 23rd of February, and continued until the 3rd of March. During that time he preached twelve sermons. Bro. Deeter is not ashamed to work in the cause of his Master, knowing that it is his duty to persuade both men and woman to come to Christ.

Seven souls made their wants known, came out on the Lord's side and were baptized. Others said they would come soon. Not only were sinners warned of the wrath to come; but saints were comforted and made to rejoice. Our meetings were well attended, and the best of order prevailed. May the good Lord bless us all, and finally bring us home, where we may hear the welcome words: "Come ye blessed of my Father." O yes, brethren and sisters, let us solve, that we may be among the redeemed ones around the great, white throne.

G. W. FESSLER.

Progress of Education Among the Brethren.

THE idea of a Brethren's school originated about the same time as that of a Brethren's paper, and with much the same object in view. Both enterprises started out in a very modest way, with a good deal of distrust from the great body of the brotherhood, lest evil might result from such enterprises.

The papers agreeably disappointed all.— Though making some mistakes, and shifting about from place to place, every move was forward, and now they enjoy the confidence of the brotherhood at large and are making their weekly visits to many thousand families, from ocean to ocean, from Canada to Texas, dispensing blessings, and cheering the hearts of more than fifty thousand readers.

In 1851, the year in which the first number of the Gospel Visitor appeared, Brethren also lent their aid in establishing high schools; but to Eld. James Quarter belongs the credit of attempting to establish a school under the exclusive control of Brethren in South-western Ohio; but the minds of the Brethren not having been previously prepared for such an enterprise, the patronage was insufficient and the burden too great to be borne by one man alone, hence the project was abandoned. The foundation however, was laid, and the attention of our church called to the necessity of providing facilities for the education of our own children by members of our own fraternity. Impelled by this desire, the Brethren in Northern Indiana, favorable to such a move, held a convention which resulted in the purchase of Salem College. The situation being badly chosen with reference to health, and no provision being made for endowing the institution, it was naturally involved in debt, and had to be abandoned.

The movement, however, was of great value to the cause, as it was clearly demonstrated that, if a school were located in a healthy situation and had a sufficient endowment, it would be a grand success. One of the instructors informed me that five hundred students could have been secured at that college, if the necessary inducements could have been held out.

Scarcely had the project been abandoned in Indiana, when another was set on foot in Pennsylvania. If the enterprise in Indiana failed for want of pecuniary means, the one in Pennsylvania failed in attempting to raise too much before beginning the building, as one hundred thousand dollars was the least sum allowed to begin with, according to the plan adopted. It is a notable fact that the Brethren in Somerset Co., raised thirty thousand dollars by subscription. Although the college was never built at Berlin, the place then selected, yet the liberality of the Brethren in Somerset Co., gave the cause such an impetus, that wherever the college will be built, a large amount of credit must be accorded those Brethren. From the time the attempt was made in Indiana, one movement followed another in close succession, for Bro. Lewis Kimmel, assisted by Bro. Howard Miller, then teaching a Normal School, made a noble effort to have their institution chartered and endowed, but some legal impediments being in the way and the distance from their school to any railroad prevented a consummation of their plan.

No sooner was it certain that Bro. Kimmel's school could not be chartered and endowed, than the Brethren in North-eastern Ohio conceived the idea of establishing a school in that section and opened a correspondence with the writer, soliciting his aid and influence, which were then withheld.

About the same time the Editors of the Pilgrim resolved to establish a school for Brethren's children at Huntingdon, Pa., and called Bro. J. M. Zuck to take charge of it. He applied himself to the task under circumstances that would have discouraged most ordinary men, devoting his time, talents, labor and means to the good of others, and with the help of his devoted assistants, dispelled much of the prejudice still existing and gradually increased the number of his pupils, and the confidence of the Brethren in such a school.

The Brethren in Ohio repeating their solicitations, the writer was induced to give their claims a careful consideration, and found more elements of success than had been existing at any previous place or at any previous time.— After examining the numerous, available places for locating the school, and consulting with many brethren, ministers and elders, personally and by letter, in the States of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, it was thought advisable to call a convention in August last, at Beech Grove church, Wayne Co., Ohio, when it was decided to locate the school at Ashland, and trustees were appointed who worked up the matter with great care and ability, taking pains to explain the subject to our dear brethren, who did not understand the movement, or who could not see the propriety of it.

On the 19th of February last, another meeting, large and harmonious, was held at Maple Grove meeting-house, where the subject was considered, we believe, in the fear of the Lord, and it was unanimously agreed that the work had sufficiently advanced to warrant the getting of a charter for the school, and everything be made safe financially.

The charter was obtained on the 20th, ult., and twenty-one trustees appointed to control the school. These trustees are mostly ministers and elders, to whom is entrusted the care of churches, while a few private members among them were selected for their prudence and wisdom in managing business.

With the motto: "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God," the Ashland College is presented to the brotherhood for the united prayers of all his children, that God would add His blessings and make it an asylum where the children of the brotherhood may be secure from the snares of a wicked world and where they may learn to walk in the "old paths" as they are learning wisdom's ways.

S. Z. SHARP.

From Virden, Illinois.

Dear Brethren:—

WE arrived safely home from Texas. After learning all we could in every way during the time we were there, we came home, regarding Northern Texas upon the whole as favorable for brethren to locate, to build up homes and churches.

The soil in many places is very rich, lays high and rolling enough to drain well; and seems to be well adapted to growing wheat, oats, barley, cotton, etc., and especially to stock-raising because of its mild climate. We saw numbers of cattle that had no feed this Winter except that found upon the range. In most localities in Northern Texas there is plenty of timber in easy reach for fuel, fencing and building purposes. Unimproved land is remarkably cheap, ranging from one to ten dollars per acre, according to quality and location.

Our conviction is, that the following would be a good way to locate in Texas:

1. Ten or more families to form themselves into a colony, and agree to emigrate at one time.
2. Let the ten colonists meet at some specified time and place.
3. Let them organize themselves into a colony by electing a President, Secretary and Treasurer.
4. Let each of the ten colonists pay into the treasury, say 2000 dollars to purchase land.
5. Let two of their number be elected by vote to locate and purchase a tract of say sixteen sections of land for a colony and make all necessary arrangements for transporting and settling families on their new homes to the best advantage; the colony paying both the time and expenses of the two sent out for that purpose.

6. Let lands be surveyed into 160 acre tracts, sixty feet wide along all section lines being reserved for roads, and a school-house to be built by the colony near the center of tract for a place for school and worship.

7. In order to have a thickly-settled neighborhood, each one of the colonists should, soon after arrival of colony, be required to select and occupy as his own home, a tract not exceeding 320 acres; the remainder of land to be kept for sale by colony to actual settlers only in tracts not exceeding 320 acres to one person.

The advantages gained in thus colonizing would be:

1. A saving of expenses in locating land and transporting goods and families at reduced rates.

2. Having church and school facilities and acquaintances for neighbors at the start.

3. It would form a nucleus around which there would be inducements for others to settle, and help to build up the church and country.

I have expressed to the Brethren a willingness to go with ten or more responsible persons and assist them in erecting the standard of Emmanuel in Northern Texas on the above plan, and am now only awaiting further developments.

DANIEL VANIMAN.

A Father's Fullness of Heart.

Dear Brother J. H. Moore:—

NOTICE in No. 8 of BRETHREN AT WORK, on page 4, in your editorial notes, you say you have neglected private correspondence, and asked patience. Who would not exercise patience while you are engaged in so noble a cause? You say on Friday at 1 P. M. not again, "went down to the water side, went down into the water and baptized three young men. One of them recently from North Manchester, Ind."

This is my beloved son in whom I am well pleased. Dear brethren, I cannot refrain from writing you, being made to rejoice in the God of my salvation on hearing of my son (H. C. Butterbaugh) making the good confession and putting on Christ in his youthful days by baptism into the church of the living God.

Brethren, I love him as an earthly parent should; hence the following devotions to God: O almighty and heavenly Father, Thou hast protected my son from his infancy until now. Thy hands have warded off all dangers and shielded him from the great miseries of the world. Praise and magnify Thy holy name for all the good Thou hast done unto him; yes for his creation, preservation, and all the blessings of this life; especially for his redemption, which has been wrought by thy Son, Jesus Christ, and for thy heavenly grace, which has taught him to see the wondrous things of Thy Law. O merciful God! I beseech Thee to not forsake him now, stand by him through the shiftless scenes of mortal life; do not withdraw Thy fatherly protection from him.

Lord, guide and direct him in the paths that wouldst have him go. Yes, he is about to enter upon the world. Give him grace to withstand the wiles and temptations that are in it, and give him courage and resolution to overcome all its difficulties, teach him Thy Laws, and grant, that, amid all his worldly occupations, he may never forget Thee! Yes, increase in him true religion, nourish him with all goodness and of Thy great mercy keep him in the same, that he may continue Thine forever, and daily increase in thy Holy Spirit more and more, till he come to Thine everlasting Kingdom, and I beseech thee Lord to extend thy goodness to all his relatives and friends about Lamark and elsewhere the wide world over. Protect them from all harm, uphold in them new desires, send thy Holy Spirit that they may think and do that which is pleasing in Thy sight.

What we have asked for ourselves, we ask for all mankind. Yes, Lord, lead and direct us all in the way that wouldst have us go. Grant that we may be one flock under one Shepherd, thy son Jesus Christ, our Lord, to whom, with Thee and the Holy Ghost be all honor and glory in a world without end.—Amen.

Should the contents of the foregoing fail to instruct, we hope that it may induce the readers rightly to think, act and PRAY.

D. S. T. BURTERBAUGH.

North Manchester, Ind.

From Winfield, Kansas.

Dear Brethren:—

FOR some time I have been thinking of writing you, but have kept putting it off until now. We have been here something over two years, and have been trying to find some of the Brethren, but cannot find any in this county. I do not belong to the church, having put it off until a more convenient season. Now there is no church here, that I can learn of. I think if some of the ministering brethren were to come here, there could be quite a church started here.

We read your paper and like it very much. — Some of our neighbors read it that never heard of the Brethren before, but like the paper, and would subscribe if the times were not so hard. — Now, if you know of any brethren living in Cowley Co., please inform us through your valuable paper. We are living about fourteen miles North-East of Winfield.

L. OWNBY.

[We know of no members living in Cowley Co.—EDS.]

From Duncansville, Pa.

Dear Brethren:—

THE brethren and sisters of the Duncansville congregation met for church council on Saturday morning, Feb. 2nd. Bro. Joseph Snowberger from near Williamsburg, Pa., was present. After earnest prayers for many years, it was finally granted that the brethren and sisters of this congregation would organize a Sabbath School the coming Spring.

We were much rejoiced, for we have always felt that the Sabbath-school is the greatest nursery the church could have. "Train up a child in the way he should go," and we feel assured from God's Word, that he will not depart from this religious training in declining age.

In connection with the church council, Bro. Snowberger delivered three able sermons. On Saturday evening he spoke from the words found recorded in Heb. 4: 9; "There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God." He beautifully portrayed to our minds that glorious, never-ending rest that awaits us away over yonder in God's glorious Kingdom. The meeting closed with remarks by Bro. B. Sell. Did not hear the sermon on Sabbath morn, but learned that it was good. On Sabbath evening he spoke from Exodus 32: 29; "Who is on the Lord's side?" Related historical facts from the Bible of several who were on the Lord's side, and what favor they found in the eyes of the Lord. Spoke of the goodness of Joseph and of the unkindness of his brethren towards him, and what favor he found in the eyes of God. Here he spoke especially to the young hearers of his audience. Concluded by able remarks by Bro. Sell. We felt like Peter, that "it was good to be there," and sorry that Bro. Snowberger could not remain with us any longer. This was his first meeting with the Brethren of this place, and we felt sad, at the close of the evening services to have him extend to us the parting hand. Hope it may not be his last visit to the Duncansville brethren, and may the words spoken by him and Bro. Sell, sink deeply into the hearts of those who sat beneath the sound of their voices, and may the good seed sown, sink deeply into well-cultivated soil, spring upward and bear fruit a hundred-fold.

Ministering brethren, in your travels forget not the brethren at this place, for Satan holds out his allurement here as well as elsewhere. But dear brethren and sisters be faithful to the end, and you shall obtain a crown of life and a seat at God's right hand.

Your Sister in Gospel Faith,

E. R. STUBBS.

From Oregon.

Dear Brethren:—

WE ate well, and health is good in this part of country. The climate of our country is pleasant, have good water and beautiful springs. The water is soft and clear as crystal. We have beautiful timber and an abundance of it. Our hills abound in game, such as deer and bears. The ground is very productive, will grow everything but corn, and that will grow in some places.

We have had an abundance of rain this Winter, Spring is not as forward this season as it was last. We have not had any snow here to amount to anything.

Brethren David Brower and Isaac Huffman were here to see us, in November I think it was. Oh, we were so glad to see them, it done us so much good to see some of the Brethren. It made us think of old times at home. We could not have any meetings, the roads being so bad. I have not been to meeting since we came here, but are going to have meeting as soon as we can get a convenient place to hold them in. May the good Lord help us, is my prayer.

M. L. WORKMAN.

Isabel, Oregon.

From A. W. Austin.

Dear Brethren:—

ALLOW me to make a little explanation through your paper. You published a short piece from me a short time ago, that caused so many to write, and so many inquiries that I can't answer all, but will say that there is room enough for all the Brethren that want to come West, —

Homesteads can be had for from two to five hundred dollars. Chances are good for cheap homes. There are thirty members of the Brethren church here. We have meeting every Sabbath in the month, except one; but to accommodate all, the place of meeting is not always reachable. We want more ministering brethren in the West to strengthen us by the Word and to call sinners to repentance, and build up the church generally. I think this is a field that should have more laborers, because pride and vanity of the older and richer States, have not reached this Western country yet. I think the time has come that the Gospel should be preached in the West, as the people seem to be anxious to hear the Word of the Lord. And, Oh may God grant that they may hear it in its primitive purity first.

Ionis, Kan.

From Valton, Wisconsin.

Dear Brethren:—

THERE are six members living at this place and no preacher nor deacon living close here. Bro. Fogle was here sometime ago; we had a social meeting appointed and met yesterday at sister Bron's house, five miles from here. Good attendance from other denominations. The members appointed Bro. Z. Small and myself to take charge of the meeting. We opened the meeting by singing and prayer, then read the fourth chapter of the Lord's Gospel as recorded by St. John. We gave an explanation of the chapter as best we could. We tried to explain the duty of man in order to enter in at the strait gate, and walk on that narrow way that leads to life, first repentance, then baptism, then the holy kiss, then feet-washing, then the Lord's Supper and Communion. — Good attention was given to the words spoken, after which an old man, nearly seventy years old, belonging to the denomination of Friends or Quakers, rose to his feet and said he would like to say a few words. It was granted him, and he said, that this was the first time he had ever heard that part of the Scriptures explained. He said, he was going to attend the next meeting, which will be in two weeks at my house.

We pray the Lord that the Word spoken may take effect on some other poor heart. The meeting was held in a neighborhood where the Brethren never were heard to speak before.

J. E. D. STUBBS.

More About Texas.

Dear Brethren:—

ARRIVED at Denison, Texas, February 6th. Roads were bad, and a cold North wind was blowing. It is generally windy here, and subject to drought and drying up of all water, except never-failing wells and springs. Timber along the sandy banks of the water, and plenty for fencing. Grayson and Cook counties are the best I saw or heard of. Black sand and whitish sand or red clay and also hard pan in many places. Can raise wheat, oats, barley and sweet potatoes. Peaches, a good, fair crop. Not so good for corn and potatoes. Can raise timothy, clover, apples, cherries and all kinds of small fruit. Cotton five to eight cents per pound. They are paying fifty cents per bushel for Kansas corn, and twenty-five cents for Kansas butter.

Herds are leaving for Western Texas, for the grass is cut out, and cattle cannot live in the above counties. Some cattle and hogs are perishing for want of food, as hay and grain are very scarce.

Land sells from $2.50 up to $25.00 per acre. — About four months free school in a year. The towns are built up mostly by emigration. The merchants carry a heavy stock of goods, mostly on credit, and some are failing to pay.

Texas has been misrepresented in many things. Some are rich, others are poor. About one half that go to Texas, stay. All that have good homes had better find a better one before selling and moving here. I was in Dallas, Fort Worth, Sherman and Denison counties. Was also at Bro. LaRue's. Found four members, held five meetings. Had good attendance, good attention was paid to the Word preached. We then went North to Bro. P. R. Wertz's. Found two members and held four meetings in the Crow school-house. Had good attendance. We believe there could be much good done in Texas. We learned that a Methodist preacher did not like to baptize in the water. He said, he wished to hold the next time their conference met, they would do away with baptizing.

I am now in Fort Scott at Bro. J. Emmert's. Found eight members in town. We held a series of meetings here. Small congregation on account of rainy weather and bad roads. We believe that many were sincere, hope they will become true followers of Jesus, the meek and lowly Lamb of God.

To my knowledge I found the best country for farming between Fort Scott and Kansas City. — Also in Missouri along the Kansas line. My best thanks to the Brethren for their kindness. Arrived at home March 5th. Found all well. This is the best place I have found yet.

L. S. SNYDER.

Mo. Valley, Ia.

Educational Notice.

AS announced in No. 10 of your paper, the Trustees of the Ashland College met March 7th. All but two were present or represented by letter. The Board was organized by electing the following officers: President, Vice President, Secretary, Treasurer, Auditor and Register of scholarships. A few By-Laws were adopted after which three committees were appointed: An Executive Committee, a Financial Committee and a Building Committee.

These committees are instructed to consider such questions as come in their line of duty, and be ready to report when called upon by the Trustees. A united sentiment prevailed among those present on all questions of vital importance, and a general view expressed that the time is not far distant when the work of building should be commenced.

The friends of the project from various quarters are urging the trustees to move onward in building and we are glad that the interest is thus unawakening; but we would say, brethren do not grow too impatient, for enthusiasm in the wrong direction or unguarded by prudence will terminate in bad results. We desire to gratify the wishes of our brethren, but deem it prudent to exercise great care in this important enterprise.

The next meeting of Trustees will be held in Ashland, March 25th at 1 P. M. More anon.

By Order of Trustees,

J. D. PARKER.

GLEANINGS.

From Thomas McCutley. — Jesus said: "I know you not. You denied me on earth; I deny you now; depart from me." How beautifully our Savior warns us! We are to watch, so that when He cometh, we may be ready. Will we refuse His kind invitation to be ever ready to meet Him when He comes. Let us keep our lamps filled with oil, so that we may be prepared to meet Him, and go with Him into the mansion of eternal bliss.

Orangeville, Ill.

From Daniel Whitmer. — Health in this section of country is good, has been so all Winter. The weather also is very mild, for which, like for all other blessings, we have cause to thank God. Our church, for a few years has not increased in number as we desired it should, yet notwithstanding the ardent though which we have passed, a few have come out upon the Lord's side, we shall trust in the Lord for His goodness and mercy.

South Bend, Ind., March 9.

From Clara E. Bair. — There are only four members of the Brethren here, one brother and two sisters beside myself. We do not get to hear the Brethren preach very often. I am always glad to hear the Truth preached. May the dear Lord bless the good works of the Brethren everywhere, that many precious souls may be saved; and let us pray to God that He will bring the dear brethren and sisters who went to Denmark, safely across the deep waters to their home in this State.

Floral, Ill.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

NOTICES of Love-feasts, District Meetings, etc., should be brief, and written on paper separate from other business.

LOVE-PEASTS.

At Beaver Dam congregation, Kosciusko Co. Ind., June 9th, 1878.

DISTRICT MEETINGS.

Northern District of Indiana in English Prairie church, May 9th.

Southern District of Iowa, Monroe Co., Friday, April 12, 1878, at 4 o'clock, P. M.

Northern District of Illinois at Shannon, May 21, at 8 o'clock, A. M.

W. U. R. R. Time Table.

Day passenger train going east leaves Lamark at 12:25 P. M., and arrives in Bucine at 6:13 P. M.

Day passenger train going west leaves Lamark at 2:14 P. M., and arrives at Rock Island at 5:50 P. M.

Night passenger trains, going east and west, meet and leave Lamark at 2:18 A. M., arriving in Bucine at 9:00 A. M., and at Rock Island at 6:00 A. M.

Freight and Accommodation Trains will run west at 12:10 A. M., 10:50 A. M., and east at 12:10 A. M., and 4:45 P. M.

Tickets are sold for above trains only. Passenger trains make close connection at Western Union Junction.

G. A. SMITH, Agent.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK.

"Behold I Bring You Good Tidings of Great Joy, which Shall be unto All People." — LUKE 2: 10.

Vol. III.

Lanark, Ill., March 28, 1878.

No. 13.

The Brethren at Work.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY

—BY—

J. H. MOORE & M. M. ESHELMAN.

—TO—

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

- R. H. MILLER, - - - - - LADOGA, IND.
- J. W. STEIN, - - - - - NEWTONIA, MO.
- D. VANIMAN, - - - - - YIRDEN, ILL.
- D. B. WENTZER, - - - - - WAYNESBORO, PA.
- MATTIE A. LEAR, - - - - - URBANA, ILL.

VAIN GLORY.

BY GEORGE D. ZOLLERS.

SOME persons covet wealth,
Some scale the hill of fame,
And all their vital powers exert,
To circulate their name;
They boast of their attainments,
And tell what they have done,
How many were converted,
By this or that great one.

They say their church was formal,
And very dull and slow
Ere they assumed their stations,
Their trumpets for to blow;
But now great power is won
And thousands are converted;
Since they have gained the sway
The world is much diverted.

They try to keep a record
Of all the new born throng;
"So many are that man's,
But the most to me belong."
They keep their list more accurate
Than dear old brother Paul;
For he was undecided,
And could not name them all.

So now they sit in judgment,
And their cases they decide;
May be their eyes are darkened,
And they only see one side;
But at the Lord's tribunal bar,
We'll gather by and by,
When all our work must pass beneath
God's scrutinizing eye.

Then He will tell us who is great,
And who has done the most
And we will plainly understand
That we have no room to boast;
Perhaps some poor in spirit,
Called formal and unwise,
Will then stand in the forward ranks,
And win the highest prize.

We have many precious brethren
Who are doing much for God;
Who do not tell what'er they do,
To blaze their fame abroad;
And God knows all their labors,
And will keep a just account,
They may not all their converts know;
He has the full account.

A monarch who was world-renowned —
An egotist of yore,
Who claimed a famous city,
Was built by his own power
His pride had reached its climax,
An angel spoke his doom,
"Descend O lofty monarch,
From thy exalted throne."

Not he who doth himself commend
Will always stand approved,
But he whom Jesus names His friend
Will of the Lord be loved;
Then if we cherish heaven's smile,
And heaven's great reward,
We'll cherish no vain glory
We'll glory in the Lord.

DUTIES.

BY P. A. BOYD.

WE will endeavor to give you weekly a few limited remarks, pertaining to the duties we owe to ourselves, to our fellow-men and to

God. The subject we have chosen to write upon, is one of great importance, for it not only implies self, but our neighbor and our God.

The duties we owe to ourselves are these: we should live and act, so that others will respect and honor us. We do not wish to infer that we should pride ourselves upon the fact (even if never true) that we are better than our fellow-beings, for that would not only be contrary to nature, but also to the laws of our Creator. We should have a fixed principle within, that will ever mark and guide our pathway through life, one that will teach us to respect self and keep us from evil associates. We should have respect enough to keep well dressed, well read, not only in literature and science, but also in the Word of Him who hath created and taught us to respect self. These are but a part of the many duties we owe to ourselves.

The duties we owe to our neighbor, are vast. We should in all our actions, endeavor to promote their interests. We should love and respect them as ourselves, and especially reverence the aged; for what is more degrading than to see them ridiculed and dishonored by the young. We should strive to make them happy, and their short pilgrimage on earth as pleasant as possible. If we do this, in one word the law will be fulfilled, which is, "Love thy neighbor as thyself."

God being our Creator and Redeemer, we owe all we have to Him. The first duty we owe to Him, is to give Him our hearts, and devote our lives to His service. We should in all places and company, strive to build up His kingdom, and work for the cause of Christ. We have more encouragement to work for God, than either for our neighbor or ourselves; for we know that if we live and work for Him, that He will love and honor us. It is our duty, as well as our privilege, to love, honor, and obey Him, for He has commanded us to do so, for He says, "If ye love me keep my commandments."
Mt. Sermon, Pa.

THE DOUBLE BROTHERHOOD OF THE CROSS, TO MAN AS MAN, AND TO MAN IN CHRIST.

BY C. H. BALSBUUGH.

To Brother David Ethel, minister in the Bay Street Church, Danpha, Pa. Penn.:

WHAT am I in the world for? Is it not that you and others may have an opportunity to glorify God in fulfilling Mark 14: 7? All the bread and milk and eggs and potatoes which you send to Chemtli, will be counted unto Mat. 25: 10. "To be God's man is no mean office. Whatever brotherly bounty you send after me into the wilderness, you sell at a great price; not ten dollars on the hundred, but ten thousand talents on the penny. To lend to the Lord is to become the Lord's heir. Truly it is more blessed to give than to receive," because it establishes a community with Christ which puts us in joint-heirship with Him. Paul understood very well how wide are the obligations which the Cross creates. He says, "I am a debtor both to the Greeks, and to the Barbarians; both to the wise and to the unwise" (Rom. 1: 14). This is the very reason why he says in the 16th verse that he is "not ashamed of the gospel of Christ." If Christ was not ashamed to die for the Greek and Barbarian and unwise, neither would Paul be ashamed to preach these glad tidings to the Roman; as well as Hebrews. Bear this in mind. It would have been a great scandal to have renounced his high position in the Jewish Church, and proclaim the crucifixion of a Nazarene Carpenter, unless he could furnish the credentials that there was that in the Person which rendered His death co-extensive with human sin and misery. The 14th verse tells us how the Cross makes us debtors to all mankind; and at the same time elucidates the 16th verse. I am a debtor to you and you to me, and both are debtors to every sinner we can reach by our influence, whether it be a crowned monarch, or a poor, weary, ragged, loathsome wanderer on the highway. We are as truly and responsibly debtors to the Barbarians as was Paul, and yet how we twist and plead and prevaricate to mitigate the missionary character of the church. "Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." The angels fly as readily to escort the ulcerous dog-beked, Lazarus to glory, as to burst out of the sky over Bethlehem to chant the incarnation of Deity.

When a leafer comes to stay all night, we are to see in him a soul for whom Christ shed His blood. We should consider well how we may best preach unto him Jesus. If he is filthy and disagreeable, or infested with vermin, our first sermon must be on water and soap, brush and comb. A good text in such a case is, "Wash and be clean." When he leaves your door, invite him to come again, so that you may see whether the Gospel of Sileam has taken effect. This is one of the obligations to Barbarians which the Gospel imposes. To recover cannibals and dirt-wallowers from their bestiality, is a good beginning in the illumination that takes in the loftier meanings of life both in its mundane and eternal aspects. We are apt to forget what we owe, for Christ's sake, to beggars and tramps, harlots and social pests. Christ's relation to them in the assumption of their nature, and crucifixion for their sins, demands both our sympathy and endeavors for their participation in the great salvation. Let us show everywhere and on all occasions that we are not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ. There is only one way of proving our fidelity, and that is by outliving the little book as John did, and then going forth to "prophecy before many people, and nations, and tongues, and Kings" (Rev. 10: 9, 10, 11).

Our life must be the Gospel. "In Him was life, and the life was the light of men." Here is Christ's own philosophy of redemption. Christ is the heart of God, and our life must be the heart of Christ, or the Gospel will be to us the power of God to deeper damnation. How manifold and yet how single and central is the Christian life. How inwardly personal, and yet how imperatively relational. "None of us liveth unto himself, and no man dieth to himself" (Rom. 14: 7). "We live and die to the Lord," and He lived and died for the race.

This brings us round again to the Cross, which binds us to every soul on earth in the presentation of the Gospel, even as it bound Christ to the same extent in effecting the Atonement. The manner and object of His Death make us debtors to Greeks and Barbarians in all latitudes and longitudes. It is for Jews. This makes it easy to visit the sick, to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, carry the Cross over oceans and continents, make sacrifices for enemies, glory in reproaches and necessities, and suffer the loss of all things, and count them but dung, "for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus our Lord." Is our Amen ready to these essentials of a God-accepted life? "LOVE, WHO HAVE BELIEVED OUR FELLOWSHIP AND TO WHOM HAVE THE ARMS OF THE LORD BEEN REVEALED?" O ye blessed few, "be not weary in well doing," "be steadfast, unmovable, always abiding in the work of THE LORD, ye shall receive as ye know that your LABOR IS NOT IN VAIN IN THE LORD."

PENCIL MUSINGS.

BY S. C. BASHOR.

NUMBER VI.

THE battle with self, if overcome, is one of the greatest victories ever achieved by man. The sooner self is brought to an unconditional surrender, the sooner we become new creatures, or regenerated. This is reform. This is a matter with self. The axe is laid at the root of the tree, and the sword of justice, in the hands of mercy must strike the blow—fatal to self, sin, world-loving, and mortal-binding.

"Born again," "Transplanted from the kingdom of darkness," new subjects, new creatures—all attained to by self. "Purging our conscience from dead works, which were against the soul." To be new creatures, old things must pass away, a new life begun, it is not an old book reprinted with the same illustrations bearing the same old authors name. O, no! a new book throughout, with the authors name, Jesus Christ, printed by the Holy Ghost, and bound by the grace of God. Every chapter is full of love. The first engraving is a cross, the last a crown. The index points heavenward, where there will be a new edition, upon whose pages will be written "eternal life." Jesus paid it all. New and blessed Book. Thy pages are my life. Thy engravings are they in my heart? May the index of our lives be written on the pages of eternal life.

A new Book written, should be our life—Erase from its pages, all hatred and strife, Engravings should be humility and love, When done writing, may the index point above, Lanopunt, Cuba.

THE VALUE OF WORDS.

BY CHARLOTTE T. BOND.

None can tell the worth of a word fitly spoken. One strong decisive word spoken at the right time, may change the course of a whole lifetime, and arouse new energies that were thought to be entirely dormant. Many a poor desponding one, just on the verge of despair, has been roused by a few kind generous words of encouragement.

The human heart is so sensitive, that one word may crush all hopes, and another may fill it with new life and noble purposes, which if carried out will bring blessings upon many, and send an offering of sweet incense on high. What talent is more to be desired than to be able to send forth words of truth and love to every one that we meet on our journey through life, words that will carry peace to every troubled heart, words that can stay and quiet the conflicts of human passion? Such words can be spoken on very common occasions, and by very humble lips. We need not suppose because we do not belong to that class of persons that are distinguished for their knowledge of the various sciences of the world, that our words are of no value, for truth is mighty and will prevail.

We may form some idea of the words spoken, at the condition of the heart, from whence they came; as we read, "From the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." If the words are always candid, truthful and pure, we may rest assured they proceed from a truthful, honest heart; but if they are light-speaking falsehoods, indulging in all sorts of foolish jesting, we fully decide the fountain is impure. Our own words will either justify or condemn us. We may send blessings upon others by our words, and bring happiness upon ourselves. Kind words will bring their reward as they are always appreciated. The most savage dispositions have been tamed and humbled by words of kindness. Feeling and knowing the value of words fitly spoken, dear reader, let us always in our intercourse with our fellow-men, endeavor to use the right words in the right place. Let no harsh words near the good we might do here. It is better not to speak at all, than to use words that will wound the feelings and destroy our influence for good.
Acostum, Ohio.

A person is not worth anything that he has had trouble. You cannot subdue selfishness without a struggle.

THE SHINING ONES.

Far away in the land of the pure and bright,
Is the city of God with its golden light,
Oh there is our home and we ever shall stand
Mid the cheering ones of that better land

CHORUS:

Oh beautiful home! Oh beautiful home
Where beautiful saints surround the white throne.

How I long to be there and forever to stand
Mid the shining ones of that better land.

That beautiful home, we are nearing now,
Where a crown of bright glory encircles each brow,

Where the tree of life grows on that beautiful shore,

Where flowers shall freshen to fade no more.

With palms and bright crowns and robes of light
We shall roam the fair fields with eternal delight,
We shall join in the songs of the purified band,
Mid the shining ones of that better land.

Then come brother pilgrim, let love freely flow,
As on to that beautiful home we shall go,
For Jesus has said we must go hand in hand,
If ever we enter that beautiful land

Oh my soul is now weary of toiling below,
To the home of the purified saints would I go,
And there with my Saviour forever to stand,
Mid the shining ones of that better land.

LET THEM SLIP.

BY J. C. SMITH.

SUMMARY.

“THEREFORE we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip.” (Heb. 2: 1). The language of our text as it stands, dislocated or disjointed from the Scriptures to which it sustains its relationship, implies an imperative command in the affirmative, which is the position frequently occupied by the votaries of popular Christianity, particularly in this age of scientists and manifestations of wisdom. Notwithstanding this position is antagonistic to the Word of inspiration, as declared by Paul, and sustains the same relationship to the truth that darkness does to light; yet it is cherished and practically adhered to as tenaciously as though it were one of the fundamental principles of the plan of salvation.

But Paul to the Hebrews says, “Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip.” Giving a word of caution to the Hebrew brethren, that there is danger of sustaining losses, if the slip is suffered to be made. But we wish to make a few practical remarks on the subject as it stands in the heading of this article.

The sense or meaning of words or phrases (as every school boy knows) depends upon and is grounded by the words and phrases to which they sustain their relationship. Hence the displacement of words and phrases in sentences destroys the true sense of the composition, in the same relation that the animate body would be rendered unfit for service with its limbs dislocated. In this article I shall endeavor to show, that to reject a part of the Scriptures, will wrest from the Word its power of salvation, and it will prove unto you “a savor of death unto death.” Jesus said, “Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word of God” (Luke 4: 4). When we look around us over the world, we see that man in relation to his duties which he owes to his Creator and to his fellow-man, is practically prone to “let them slip.” It has become the pass-word of men in every station or condition in life; every department of business or industrial pursuit, equally suffers from its withering and blasting effects, which like the echo returns and has its final rest upon the instigator who invariably is the loser, mechanically, physically, morally, or religiously. All of Adam's race in all ages of the world have been branded more or less with it; but the present state of Christendom seems to manifest the slipping spirit more predominant than possible (in view of the introduction of every considerable means and arrangement to facilitate duty and make it easy) than the anti-deluvians.

God has held forth every inducement to man that His Divine attribute of justice could allow, that man being without excuse could promptly act in the discharge of his duties. But it is a heart-rending fact, which observation long since has taught us, that to “let them slip,” is one of the principal constituents of popular religion; and figures largely in the presbytery as well as the laity. O! the awful ponderous soul-destroying meaning of the phrase, “let them slip,” it is the real of the bottomless pit; the key to hell; the inlet to the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone! Nevertheless, it is cherished and proclaimed from the pulpit, and practiced by the laity. Yes we hear the minister, with outstretched arms and uplifted hands, and eyes directed heavenward, in tones like peals of thunder crying, we have no need of baptism for the remission of sins, the people are all holy “let them slip, let them slip.” The laity responds, Amen. Again, he cries, we won't wash one another's feet, if Jesus did say we should, we don't believe He meant us high Christians, He meant primitive Christians, we will “let them slip.” Again you hear a sweet and solemn Amen. And again you hear him raise his voice to a somewhat higher key, and say, we will dispense with this Supper, it is the Jewish Passover, “This is not to eat the Lord's Supper, for in eating every one taketh before another his own supper; and one is hungry, and another is drunken.” We will therefore “let it slip,” and to-morrow about noon we will eat a morsel of bread and drink a sup of wine, or you may eat the wafer and I will drink the wine, and the Lord will bless it, and we will make a supper out of it. O yes, by all means we will “let it slip,” for the apostle disannulled the Supper, Amen, say the congregation.

He elevates his brow, and lowers his glasses (which by the way he inherited from his grandfather), and reads to the congregation, “Be ye followers of me, even as I am of Christ.” Now I praise you brethren that ye remember me in all things and keep the ordinances as I delivered them to you.” His eyes all the while bent upon the sacred pages; and if perchance he “lets them slip” and fall upon 1st Cor. 11th chapter 5th verse, he suddenly “lets them slip” to the last clause of the 15th verse, and remarks with emphasis, “for her hair is given to her for a covering.” In Paul's days when the women came to worship God without any hair on their heads they would shear or shave them; but in these days of light and wisdom, the sisters wear hats and chignons, hence we will “let them slip.” Amen, is the answer. And if by accident he should read to the congregation the fifth chapter of Paul's first letter to the Thessalonians and the sixth verse, He will almost invariably spiritualize the inspired language or charge the apostles with being the propagandist of nonsense, and say I will not enjoin the holy kiss upon you, Know ye not that Judas rendered it unlawful by betraying the blessed Master with a kiss; only give me the thirty pieces of silver, or more if you possibly can, the more the better; the Lord loveth a cheerful giver, (and Judas has sanctified the silver), give to your pastor, give freely and it will be all right with you; and as for the holy kiss or kiss of charity we'll “let them slip.” The congregation with smiling faces, and hearts filled to overflowing with admiration and applause bursts forth with Amens, and God bless the pastor, for making the ways of the Lord so congenial to our feelings.

We need not give the more earnest heed to these little things, they are all non-essentials, now-a-days; we need not care for the poor, the county may do that; that belongs to the world, we will “let them slip,” and we will shout and pray, and pray and shout and praise God for His loving-kindness, and thus show our love to Him. The pastor joins with the congregation in declaring that they will be peaceable in time of peace, and in time of war they will enlist in the service of their country, and under that banner they will gird on their whole armor of the world, and fight the good fight of destruction, lay hold on eternal death; the weapons of our warfare are carnal, they are mighty through the world, to the pulling down of houses, and even cities, and governments, making desolate the habitation of widows and orphans, and the raising up of imaginations and every low thing that humbly itself before God. If my enemy hunger I will let him starve, if he thirst, I will let him famish, and so heap coals of fire on his head, and bring him to terms. If any man sue me at the law and take away my coat, I will shoot his ox also, or if he smite me on the one cheek, I will turn to him my fist also. I believe God gave me these hands to defend myself with. And as for healing the sick, we will send for the doctor, that's his business; he will dose him with colic and salivate him, and if his constitution is strong enough to endure the effects of the medicine and wear out the disease, perhaps or probably he will raise him up. And if there be any other thing, such as visiting the sick, the fatherless and the widows in their affliction; feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, &c., we will just “let them slip.” I have no time to attend to such trifles; and besides all this, it causes such queer feelings to come over me, and such a heavy distressing pressure on my heart to go to the house of mourning, I don't like it one bit. I will just let neighbor Newman attend to these things, he is such a singular man anyhow. He thinks he must “give unto them that asketh him,” no matter how hard he has worked for what he has, and then he believes in non-conformity to the world, pulling the beam out of his own eye, in charity, in going forward when he goes to work, and all such little things; and even believes in all Jesus taught and did. He believes that Jesus meant what He said; but I can't see it in that light; but neighbor Newman if you think you ought to observe all these things, “according to your faith be it unto you.” But I prefer the theatre, the opera, the circus, the festivals, the celebrations, the picnics, the Christmas tree, the ball room. I love them all.

I love the fascinating dramas. Then there are their duets, so charming so bewitching. I love to bask my soul in those Elysian fields of bliss, and drink in those enchanting pleasures to my heart's content. O! how I love the ball room with its enticing allurements; how delightful to dance to the sound of the fiddle until one is worn out by the ostentatious exercises; and then to lie down to repose ones throbbing, aching head in the lap of Delilah and think musingly over the ordeal of pleasures which you have happily participated in. Poor, weak, blind, deluded soul, would to God, that you could hear the warning voice of the Lord saying unto you, “awake thou that sleepest and arise from the dead, and Christ will give thee light.” You are yet dead in sins and in trespasses; your heart is far from the Lord, You have been letting the commandments of the Lord slip, until they have slipped beyond the power of your vision. Or perhaps if you would take the advice of Paul to the Corinthians, “But let a man examine himself,” very likely you would find that it was you that was slipping all this time, and that too down the broad road until you have got the world between you and the Son of Righteousness, and you have lost sight of the true light.

If you would have come to the light and walked in the light, as children of the light, then you could see. Did you ever see a man that could see in the dark as well as in the light? It is true it is said that “men love darkness rather than light.” Tell us why? “Because their deeds are evil.” Jesus says, “The light of the body is the eye; therefore if thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light; but if thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness; therefore if the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness?” Now we have come to the end. The whole secret is revealed. Standing arraigned as a criminal before the bar, thy countenance is fallen, thy face sheweth guilt, thy knees knock together; thy heart quaketh with fear, and thy voice quivereth, as thy mouth speaketh the truth in broken accents, declaring the awful, solemn fact that “If the blind lead the blind they shall both fall into the ditch.” Yes, you have been blinded with the untempered mortar, by those who are trying to get to themselves a great name, or to empty your purse and fill their pockets, who cry out, “Non-essentials! Non-essentials! Virtually saying, that God is the author and Christ the institutor of nonsense.”

Oh! what hypocrisy! what foolishness! to let the commandments of God slip, until you be begin to slip into perdition; and in hell lift up your eyes being in torment. It is now too late. You have let them also slip and you have slipped into an endless eternity.

May God help us all to think of these things.

Ripon, Cal.

SAVE ME OR I PERISH.

BY KATE KRISLER.

WHEN Peter stepped over the side of the ship to go to Jesus upon the water, he walked well enough while he kept his eyes on the Divine Master, but when he looked at the wild waves, and thought of the danger surrounding him he began to sink; and if he had not had faith enough left to cry “Lord save me,” he would have sunk to rise no more.

Many in this our day try to walk on the treacherous waves of a worldly life, at the bidding of the prince of the power of the air; they step forth cautiously at first, not meaning to go far into danger; but they give themselves gradually to mirth and pleasure, to pride and the accumulation of wealth, to care and ambition, or appetite and selfishness; they go further and further from the old safeguard of prayer and watchfulness, the Bible and the sanctuary. Christian company and Christian influences, and are all the while sinking deeper and deeper in the treacherous waves of a sea that they are trying to walk upon; they are becoming more worldly, more absorbed in the things that can never satisfy the soul. By and by they become alarmed, fear comes upon them, they find that they are sinking, they cry for help for they see they have exposed themselves to a storm that no mortal can face; they are in danger of being overtaken by a night that is the blackness of darkness; yet even then if they only will cry as Peter did, "Lord save me or I perish," they will find the hand of Jesus near and strong; He will lift them out of the stormy sea and set their feet on the solid shore.

But alas! too many will not look to Jesus in the hour of great peril and sorrow, but look to the world for pleasure, and grow more unhappy; they look to the world for light, and become deeper involved in darkness; they look to the world for hope and are answered by groans of despair.

Oh I have often thought how many of us have great need to offer the prayer once offered by the sinking disciple, "Lord save me from sinking." Save me from sinking in this sea of worldliness; save me from disowning Christ and denying the Rock of my salvation; save me from giving up my heart, my life, my soul, to the unsatisfying, and perishable things of earth; save me from living a stranger to peace and pardon, and from sinking at last in the deep waters of death and destruction, with a hope that is an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast.

Cuba, Iowa.

THE LORD'S SUPPER.

BY JOHN FORNEY.

NUMBER I.

IN the supper or passover Christ ate with His disciples the passover of the Law? And if so, did Christ and the Apostles eat it at the day and hour appointed by the Law (Ex. 12; Num. 9: 1-5)? I say no; this cannot be the case according to the record of the four evangelists.

We see that the Jews themselves agree, that they would not take Him on the feast day, lest there be an uproar among the people (Matt. 26: 4; Mark 14: 2). Again, the four books of the Gospel, showing plainly that it was on the preparation day, when Jesus sent one of His disciples to prepare, that they might eat the passover (Matt. 26: 17; Mark 14: 12).

Then came the day of unleavened bread when the passover must be killed, and He sent Peter and John saying, go and prepare us the passover that we may eat (Luke 22: 7, 8). Now before the feast of the passover, when Jesus knew that His hour was come that He should depart out of this world unto the Father (John 13: 1). He riseth from supper. Here John tells us in plain words, that Jesus ate His supper before the feast of the passover. Now no man at the table knew for what intent He spake this unto him, for some of them thought because Judas had the bag that Jesus said unto him, Buy those things that we have need of against the feast (verses 28, 29). Here it is again plain and beyond all dispute, that the disciples did not think at the time they had ate it, when Judas went out to gather the band of men and officers to take Jesus. But they well knew it was only the beginning of the preparation day, which was always the fourteenth day of the first month; and the day began in the evening, as soon as the twelve hours of the thirteenth day were full. And that was the time the disciples came to Jesus and said, "Where wilt thou that we shall prepare for thee to eat the passover?" This was at least twenty hours before the time to kill the Lamb as appointed by the Law. Jesus ate His passover (or supper) as near as we can learn from the Scriptures, twenty hours before the time appointed by the Law. For the preparation day in which the lamb was to be killed, was never called the feast of the passover, but the (sacrificing) killing of the lamb at the going down of the sun, (or between two evenings) which was the ninth hour, or what we would call the middle of the afternoon; the very hour Christ died upon the cross. And it was to be eaten that night, which was the beginning of the fifteenth day, called the day of holy convocation unto the Lord.

And in this passover feast was no proviso made in the Law to eat it one day earlier, or one day later, but for those that were unclean or on a journey from home, they were to wait until the fourteenth day of the second month, and then they were to prepare it according to the Law, and were to eat it that night after the manner of the Law. And every soul that would not keep that feast according to Law, was to be cut off from among His people (Num. 9: 14). And no man was to go out of his house until the morning (Ex. 12: 22). But Christ did not only send one man out, but they all went out when they had sung a hymn into the Mount of Olives (Mark 14: 26). The Jews also were in an uproar, and came to Jesus in the garden and took Him up into the high priest's palace; and there they mocked Him the remainder of the night; but early in the morning they gave him over to Pilate. Now the Jews did not so much as go into the judgment hall, lest they should be defiled, but that they might eat the passover (John 18: 28).

Here we have another witness that they had not yet eaten the passover; but Christ ate His in the evening, and now it was morning. They had Jesus before Pilate to have Him condemned, to put Him to death (Matt. 27: 1-3). Now when Pilate was set down in the judgment seat in a place that is called the pavement; and it was the preparation of the passover, and about the sixth hour, (John 19: 13, 14). When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, He said it is finished; and He bowed His head and gave up the ghost. It was still the preparation, as we see in verse thirty and thirty-one, and in verse forty-two we see it still was the Jew's preparation day, when Joseph had hid Jesus in the sepulchre. To this all the evangelists bear witness, that Jesus was taken from the cross on the preparation day, that is the day before the Sabbath (Matt. 27: 62; Mark 15: 42; Luke 23: 54). And John tells us, that the Jews, because it was the preparation day, that the bodies should not remain upon the cross on the Sabbath day (for that Sabbath day was an high day), besought Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken away.

Hence we have a clear case here that Jesus ate a passover (supper) of which He could say to His disciples, "With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer; For I say unto you I will not any more eat thereof until it be fulfilled in the Kingdom of God." In my next I will give the design of Christ's passover.

FREEDOM.

BY J. W. SOUTHWOOD.

"IF the Son therefore make you free then are ye free indeed" (John 8: 36).

After the death of Joseph and his contemporary king, the Egyptians began to treat the Israelites very cruelly, binding heavy burdens upon them; requiring them to labor in various ways, some making brick of mortar and straw. So great was their bondage that their cries reached high heaven, and God sent Moses to free them. When Moses began to show favor to the Israelites, the Egyptians then began the more rigorous, requiring them to make the same tale of brick and find their own straw; so they had to gather stubbles from the fields, and labor very hard, that, too, under very rigorous task masters.

At last the time arrived for Moses to begin his work; and it was only after he, through the mighty power of God, had performed many miracles and brought many sore and grievous plagues upon Pharaoh and all Egypt, that he succeeded in setting them free. But when they were free, it was only freedom from Egyptian bondage. They were not free indeed. Why? because the Son had not made them free. If the Son had made them free, then would they have been free indeed.

When sin entered the world it fell upon all; so all were under the bondage of sin. Then as much more sore and grievous was our bondage, as Satan's power exceeds that of Pharaoh. It is indeed the worst bondage in which mortal man can be bound. This, like Egyptian bondage, caused God to send a deliverer. But He did not send Moses and Aaron. No. There was no need of a different freedom. There was need of an eternal freedom; a freedom not of the body only, but of the soul; a freedom from every variety of sin and woe. Who is able to free this people? Who does God send to make us free? We read that "God sent His only begotten Son." Why did He send His Son? Because He wanted us free indeed. "If the Son therefore make you free, then are you free indeed."

Jesus in now come to deliver us from the bondage of sin, and He is willing and able to lead us safely through the wilderness of this world to that heavenly Canaan, and there give us an eternal freedom.

Brother, do we not want the Son to make us free? Do we not want to be free indeed? Do we not want to gain that blissful home, and rest eternally on that glory-lit strand, and sing praises to God forever and ever? If we do, let us follow Jesus; for He says, "I am the way." Then let us follow Him in all His precepts, not trying to reason away any of His commandments, but take Him at His word; whatever He tells us to do, let us do it without murmuring as Israel did; but let us press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

Then when our pilgrimage on earth is brought to a close, we shall with our deliverer dwell eternally in those bright mansions He has gone to prepare for us.

Sister, do you not want to be made free indeed? Do you not want to be delivered from the sins and woes of this world? Do you not want to enter the sun-bright elms of eternal glory, and bask in the pardoning love of a crucified Redeemer? Then let me point you to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world. If you will humble yourself under His mighty hand, by obeying all His commands without doubt or murmuring, and cast all your care on Him, He will exalt you in due time, and save you with His everlasting salvation.

Lincolnton, Wabash, Co. Ind.

A PLACE FOR YOU.

BY A. BEARSS.

"I GO to prepare a place for you" (John 14: 2). Our Father in heaven has a place for all His children; then of course we must become His children. And it has been decreed by His Son Jesus that none shall inherit that place without being born again. For that reason Jesus left the shining courts of heaven and came down to this lower world, to speak words of eternal life unto the people, and as never man spake, the glad tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. The good tidings was the fulfilling of the promise Moses gave to the children of Israel; that a prophet the Lord your God would raise up from among your brethren like unto me, him shall you hear. So the first news concerning the new kingdom was, "Repent ye and believe the Gospel," that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet Esaias, "The people which sat in darkness, saw great light; and to them which sat in the region and shadow of death, light is sprung up" (Matt. 4: 16).

So after impressing upon their minds the necessity of regeneration and admittance into the sheep-fold; He said it was expedient for Him to go to the Father, for the express purpose of preparing a place for them; and to comfort His disciples He said to them, "Let not your heart be troubled, ye believe in God, believe also in me, in my Father's house are many mansions, if it were not so I would have told you, I go to prepare a place for you." Before He could go to prepare a place for us, He had to fall into the hands of sinners, and spill His precious blood. "For without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins," thus fulfilling His own prophecy, "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone." So He had to fall into the hands of sinners and die, or He would be alone with the Father, but by submitting to the will of the Father to make a full atonement He was lifted up from the earth, not to be alone, but to "draw all men unto Him, that where I am ye may be also; for in my Father's house (church) are many mansions." Yes; many have felt the drawing, and hearkened at the door of their hearts (Rev. 3: 20), and have opened and let Him in. Then He has an indwelling place in each one, "many mansions" until this earthly house be dissolved. If we have opened the door and let Him in, dear reader, He has a mansion in you, He has a mansion in me, for said He, "I will dwell in them and walk in them, and I will be their God, and they shall be by people" (2 Cor. 6: 16). How good it is to know that Jesus has an indwelling place in our hearts, this earthly tabernacle, and that we are adopted children of Him, and as David says, "will dwell in the house of the Lord forever" (Ps. 23: 6); that is as long as life lasts, and if faithful in this time, till all shall be dissolved, we shall be admitted into that place (not many places) or building of God made without hands eternally in the heavens, and shall go out no more forever.

Shelton, Ont.

A promise should be given with caution and kept with care. A promise should be made with the heart, and remembered with the head. A promise is the offering of the intention and should be confirmed by resolution. A promise and its performance should be like a true balance; they present a mutual adjustment. A promise deferred is justice deferred. A promise neglected is a truth told.

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE,
M. M. ESHELMAN, } EDITORS.

BRO. S. H. BASHOR is duly authorized, by us as our traveling correspondent and agent for the Brethren at Work, and will receive subscriptions for the same at our regular rates. All business transacted by him for our office, will be the same as if done by ourselves.

THE BRETHERN AT WORK will be sent post-paid, to any address in the United States or Canada, for $1.50 per annum. Those sending ten names and $15.00, will receive an extra copy free of charge. For all over this number the agent will be allowed 10 cents for each additional name, which amount can be deducted from the money, before sending it to us. Money orders, drafts, and Registered Letters may be sent at our risk. They should be made payable to Moore & Esheleman.

Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE & ESHELMAN,
LANARK, CARROLL CO., MD.

LANARK, MD., MARCH 28, 1878.

REPORT OF THE DEBATE.

WE have on hand a sufficient amount, taken down while at the discussion, to make out a pretty fair report of the arguments presented during the debate. But as there are prospects of a written discussion through our paper, we conclude to wait a few weeks. If Mr. Ray will stand to the challenge he made while at the Newtonia debate, and agree to discuss, in an itemized form, the difference between the Baptists and the Brethren, our readers can expect to have the pleasure of reading the arguments in full. We will know inside of a few weeks, whether the written debate will come off.

VALEDICTORY.

AS announced in another column of this issue, a change takes place in the control and management of the editorial of this paper, giving the entire business of the office into the hands of brethren Moore and Esheleman. Our reasons for disposing of our interest in the publication of the paper, are:

First, That our mind might be entirely free of business cares, and thus be more fully qualified for the labors of the ministry, feeling that business cares, and especially the vexations of a business like this, unfit any minister for evangelistic work. When a minister is away laboring to draw souls to Christ, and the difficulties of conducting a paper come up, he is rattled in mind and incapable of preaching a sermon with a mind only on Jesus.

Second, I desire to devote my entire life to the work of an evangelist and wish to be free from every other care so that when worn out I can be at liberty to rest and study, without any of the vexations of business and when rested will be at liberty to go it will.

Third, I wish to escape the slings and abuses heaped upon editors, which renders their lives unpleasant and labors disagreeable; and if it would not be thought out of place, let me ask all who read this, not to be abusive in their notes to publishers. Encourage them if you can, and fill your letters with kind words. This will please them and show you to be a gentleman or a lady, and more than that, possessed of a Christian heart. Thus I wish to escape, that my life will not be harassed with these troubles, and thus I feel that I can labor more to the glory of God.

Fourth, I feel that under the management of brethren Moore and Esheleman the paper will meet the wants of our fraternity and be as ably edited as it is with my assistance.

Now I have given some of the reasons I have for a change in my public life. Hope they will be satisfactory to all. I have promised to still write for the paper, giving the result of my labors in the cause from time to time as circumstances will require and admit. I leave the office with kindly feelings for all connected with it. My associations, socially with the members of the firm have been pleasant, and in future years I shall recall the past as pleasant to me. I wish the paper success and trust the blessings of our heavenly Father will attend it in time to come. I am worn down in body and mind, but hope that the rest I propose to take from now till A. M. will renew my strength so that I will be able to fill my present engagements.

I want to here remark that I shall labor only for the union of the church and the success of the cause of Christ. More union is what we want and we feel it will be sought for by the Brethren at work this broad land over.

May God bless all and in heaven give to each a reward that will last while the eternal ages roll. To Him who loved us, died and redeemed us, be glory now and forevermore.

S. H. BASHOR.

THAT WRITTEN DISCUSSION.

FROM the Baptist Battle Flag, of March 20th, we clip the following:

"As Mr. Stein spoke of a newspaper discussion, we presented the following:

NEWTONIA, Mo., March 13th 1878.
To the Brethren at Work:—We respectfully invite you to the discussion of our respective church propositions, as debated at Newtonia, Mo., in your columns and our FLAG, respectfully,

D. B. RAY.

The impression has already gone out that the Dunkards will never again risk the discussion of their church claims. We will see."

To those who were at the Newtonia discussion, and heard all the speeches, the above will seem a curious evasion of the facts in the case. It should be remembered that it was written by Mr. Ray himself, and how he ever got the idea that Bro. Stein proposed a newspaper discussion is a little mysterious. The otherwise uninformed reader would infer from the Battle Flag that Bro. Stein was the first of the disputants to speak of a newspaper discussion, when in fact Mr. Ray himself knows that it was just the other way. Mr. Ray was the first man to say one word about the matter. We will now narrate the thing as it occurred.

Mr. Ray in his last forenoon speech, on the fifth day of the discussion threw out a challenge for a written debate, saying that the columns of his paper would be open to a full discussion of the claims of both churches. The next morning Bro. Stein read the following, and then handed it to the Moderator for safe keeping:

NEWTONIA, Mo., March 12th 1878.

Mr. Moderator:—

I have for years desired an opportunity to discuss the doctrinal differences between the Baptists and Brethren before the Baptist readers of America, but so far have been refused space in the Baptist papers; but as my friend D. B. Ray, in his last forenoon speech yesterday, threw himself open for a written discussion through the papers of our respective churches, I hereby accept the offer for a written discussion with any man of the Baptist persuasion the Baptist church will endorse, on condition, however, that the discussion be published in a Baptist paper having a circulation equal to the paper to be furnished by the Brethren. At the close of the present discussion, I will be prepared to enter into arrangements regarding the said written discussion.

J. W. STEIN.

Mr. Ray made no move toward accepting the proposal, but tried to turn it off by saying that he meant me, and not Bro. Stein. Then the next day he read his proposal to our paper, regarding a newspaper discussion. Now this is the way the whole matter came up, Mr. Ray being the first one to mention the idea of having a written debate and Bro. Stein took him up.

At the close of the discussion we informed the audience that we were not in any way involved in the discussion, and did not think it according to the rules of debate for Mr. Ray to challenge us, especially so since Bro. Stein had taken him up at his own offer, and that we, therefore, would not accept the challenge, as it would enable him to avoid a written debate with Bro. Stein.

This is just the way the matter stands, and we therefore give it to the public. Mr. Ray made a proposal for a written debate and Bro. Stein took him up, and he must now either debate or else back down from his own proposal. Let it be borne in mind that Mr. Ray was the first one to say one word about a written discussion, and we will now see if he will stand up to his proposal.

Our people were well pleased with the result of the Newtonia discussion, and feel much confirmed in the strength of their position, but since an opportunity for getting the matter fully discussed before the Baptist readers of America has been offered, they are anxious that the opportunity be at once embraced, and therefore it now hangs on what the Flag has to say. If Mr. Ray will stand up to his proposal for a written debate the public will see whether we are afraid to defend our position before the reading people of America.

That the discussion may be fair on both sides, it is necessary that the points of differences between the two churches be discussed separately, allowing each disputant the same number of articles of equal length on each proposition, and the discussion be published in the BRETHERN AT WORK and Baptist Battle Flag. If Mr. Ray is ready for this he will please say so. Bro. Stein is prepared to arrange the propositions with him.

J. H. M.

THE NEWTONIA DEBATE.

OUR last communication regarding the discussion closed on Monday evening, March 11th, at which time the debate was getting quite lively and the interest becoming very intense. Many of the hearers were in earnest, seeking for the truth that they might embrace it. There were several present from a distance and had a great anxiety to learn of the old paths and walk therein.

What rendered the debate of great interest was that quite a number of families in attendance had left the Baptist, and united with the Brethren, and it remained to be seen how the arguments would affect them. We are glad to say that they were much confirmed in their faith and practice, and now feel confident that they occupy the old apostolic platform. We had the pleasure of being with them much during the discussion and found them well posted on the doctrine of the Bible. Hope others will follow their example before it is too late.

Mr. Ray did his best to make the Brethren's doctrine look ridiculous, and find contradictions in their writings. When Bro. Stein was presenting his arguments in defense of the three-fold immersion, Ray did not follow him very closely, but spent much of his time trying to find fault with feet-washing, the Lord's Supper, the kiss and our manner of dressing. It seems he could not wait till they were brought up, but must bring them up himself, and hence did not take the time to answer the arguments presented in favor of trine immersion as was desired that he should.

Bro. Stein made a nice point against the Baptists in favor of the forward motion in baptism, by showing that the Baptist church believed in the forward action so strongly that they actually sang it in their hymns, and then read quite a number of extracts from the Baptist Hymn Book speaking of bowing in baptism, and the Savior bowing under the hand of John the Baptist. They will have to either change their manner of baptizing or else revise their Hymn Book. People ought not to sing a thing they do not practice.

The discussion closed on Wednesday evening, having lasted seven days in all. Things generally passed off very quietly, and all the members felt good over Bro. Stein's effort, not one of them regretting that the discussion was held. Taken altogether it was an instructive interview, and afforded many opportunities of learning, and we are confident has added much to the credit of the Brethren in and around Newtonia, as well as greatly confirmed them in their faith. The two disputants parted on good friendly terms, in short a good feeling seemed to pervade the minds of nearly all. Of course the future must develop the result, and time alone will tell the effect of truth, when once planted in the hearts of those seeking after it.

Bro. Samuel S. Mohler of Johnson Co., Mo. was the Brethren's Moderator, and Mr. D. N. Horn, of Waco, Mo. the Baptist's, and Judge M. H. Ritchey was the presiding Moderator. He discharged his duty with impartial ability, and showed himself fully qualified to preside in public bodies. He is a man of excellent standing in that part of the country, and seems to be highly respected by all. Owing to the busy season of the year the attendance was not so large as was expected, but the interest was excellent and the order good. The Brethren kept up their night meetings and at the last one had quite a large congregation of attentive hearers.

The Brethren at this place are erecting a commodious meeting-house, which they expect to have completed at an early day. It is located near the edge of the town, and will be quite a convenient place for meeting. I must confess that I tell somewhat in love with the country around Newtonia and believe it to be an excellent place to live. It certainly must be healthy, and affords fruit and good water in abundance. Members desiring a suitable location in the West, should visit that part of Mo. Those desiring information should address Eld. C. Harader, Newtonia, Newton Co., Mo. We made our home in his family during our stay, and found it a pleasant lodging place. Many thanks for their kindness. Bro. J. T. Mason will represent our paper at Newtonia, acting as our regular agent in that part of the country.

HOMEWARD BOUND.

On Thursday morning, in company with Bro. S. S. Mohler, we started by private conveyance to Carthage where we arrived in the afternoon in time for the evening train. I much desired to pass out into the country one mile and visit Bro. Wampler, but had not time to do so. In order to reach Kansas City without delay I was compelled to go as far West as Oswego, having separated from Bro. Mohler at Columbus, Reached Kansas City the next day, and from there made my way to Russellville, Ray Co., Mo., to visit my parents whom I had not seen for seven years. Our meeting was a pleasant one, though unexpected to them.

They are getting well along in years and becoming much worn down. They came to the far West in an early day and have spent much of their time in the frontier life, having endured many hardships and deprivations. May the Lord bless and reward them for their labors on earth. While here we held three meetings; one in the Brethren's meeting-house and the other two in Russellville. On Sunday night we had the most crowded house I have preached to in a long time. Bro. Addison Harper is the Elder of the congregation here. He is a man of good ability, and known as an interesting speaker. The Brethren here have as good farming country as I saw while in the State. The saints ought to go up and possess the land.

I left on the 19th and reached home on the morning of the 21st, found all well and matters about the office running all right. Many thanks to the members for our kind treatment while traveling among them. J. H. M.

SHALL WE HAVE REFORM?

THIS is the time of the year, when much of the "council work" of the Brethren is being done. In addition to the work preparatory to Love-feasts, is that of the District Conference. It is about the preparatory work for the latter that I desire to note here more particularly. Will we labor to bring as little matter before our District Meetings as possible? If a church is in love, peace, prosperity, it is hardly necessary to appoint a committee to "think up" some queries for the District Meeting, simply to have a query or two. The elder who called a special meeting in order to get up a few queries for D. M., had an eye to work, whether profitable or unprofitable. Now, this is not the way to come to "unity of action," oneness of mind. When I find delegates stating that their church "sends no query, but is in love and peace," it makes me think of good, old times when query-making was yet unborn—when the Brethren lived so happily together, studied the Word so carefully and diligently that questions of policy and action were never raised, or if raised, at once settled by the Oracles of God. The question, the standing question with us then, should be, How little can we bring to D. M.?

When queries are presented to the church, would it not be well to get down the New Testament, the "perfect law of liberty," and search it diligently for an answer? Better do this, if it takes two or three days, than send them to the D. M.

God is good and wise. He gave us a book containing all the rules of action necessary.—"Ah!" says one, "how about those who are heady (stubborn) high-minded and walk not worthy of the vocation wherunto they have been called?" How about such? Does not Paul say, "warn them that are unruly, disorderly?" And then again, if they will not hear, will continue to be stubborn, continue to be high-minded, does not the apostle command to withdraw from such? Does this not settle that question? Thus question after question may be disposed of by the Word of God, saving much time, labor and feelings at District Meetings. Study the Word of God more, and the world less, and the right answers will always meet the right queries. If every church would thus act, give no room to those who are puffed up and seek vain-glory, the praise of men more than the praise of God, there would be no occasion for long debates over queries at A. M.—And if there are those who are hurt when queries on the doctrine of non-conformity, on general department, on the avocations of life are brought up, will strictly confine themselves to the simplicity of the Gospel, the queries will not "go up."

But there is occasion for queries at times.—Men of perverse minds arise and draw after them a multitude. By smooth words (flatteries) and fair speeches, they "deceive the simple" (Rom. 16: 18). To save the "simple," the sincere, the true, the lowly in heart are moved to combine their labors in defense of the Gospel order and integrity at D. M. and A. M. And such queries multiply in proportion to the mischievous acts and tendencies of the unruly. — Let those who cry, "Only the perfect law of liberty," give no occasion for queries, and there will be no just ones. And then let there be no effort to find occasion where there is none, and another source of evil will be closed. Some give occasion, while others seek occasion, merely for selfish purposes. Not until those avenues are closed by a strict compliance to God's order, will there be a diminution of queries. — But just so long as men of perverse minds, and men who love to find fault, are permitted to lead away souls from "the simplicity that is in Christ" (2 Cor. 11: 3), just that long there will be occasion for "godly jealousy" (2 Cor. 11: 2), on the part of those to whom have been committed the oracles of God. "Content earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints" (Jude 3), does not mean to sit down and silently listen to such as are murmurers, complainers, walking after their own lusts; speaking great, swelling words, having men's persons in admiration, because of advantage (Jude 16). The contending does not mean submission to such, and if there be such in any church, that church has well-nigh lost its first love (Rev. 2: 4).

Therefore seeing all these things, what can we all do to shorten counsel work? Can we not each walk in Gospel simplicity to begin with? Then can we not bear a little with each other in our follies; and whenever we err, manifest a readiness to heed good advice, looking to the Lord in prayer? Will we study the Bible more, and lean upon the counsels of the Lord? O my brethren why should any root of bitterness, and corrupting influences come up among a people possessing such liberties in Christ, and such liberties in a free country? Shall Satan get an advantage of us? No, not if we live at the foot of the Cross, not if our morning and evening incense goes up to God. — But we sometimes let it go down to Satan. — Our voices go out, but our hearts are downward, hence the incense is lost and we not benefited. I have no apologies to make for these sentiments. It is time to write and talk so that old and young, simple and haughty can understand. Milk and water is not Christian food, but milk and meat are recommended by an eminent Apostle. God bless all of us to live, act, think and talk as men and women in Christ Jesus. M. M. E.

Hereafter all communications intended for this office should be sent to Moore & Ebelman, and to them all money orders and drafts should be made payable.

We learn that No. 9 of the BROTHERS AT WORK did not reach a number of offices in the East. For this we are sorry, as we very much desire every subscriber to receive his paper regularly, and labor to have them leave the office in good condition. We have sent No. 9 again to all who have notified us, but are now out of this number.

From a letter received from brother R. H. Miller, we learn that he returned the 14th inst from New Paris, Ind., whither he had gone to preach a number of doctrinal sermons. While there was taken sick, and had to remain until well enough to complete his labors. On account of continued impaired health, he is unable to attend to engagements at present, but hopes to meet them as soon as possible. We expect to give our readers something from his pen soon.

In this issue brother S. H. Bashor takes his leave of the BROTHERS AT WORK as one of its editors and proprietors. Our association in business and as brethren in one common cause has been pleasant. Looking back over our past labors together, we feel grateful that God gave us grace to walk and talk together; and now as our work in an editorial capacity has been dissolved by mutual consent and brotherly kindness, may our feelings of sadness be swallowed up in the anticipated glory of the coming of the Lord, when we shall meet to part no more. Bro. Bashor will continue to work for the interests of the BROTHERS AT WORK, and contribute to its columns as he may find opportunity in the midst of his evangelistic labors. May his work in life be fruitful to the honor and glory of God, and may his and our end be complete in Him who has redeemed us.

SATURDAY NIGHT.

An Evening With Clement.

CLEMENT of Alexandria, as he is generally called, flourished near the close of the second century. In early life he was a heathen philosopher of no small attainments. He was born about the middle of the second century and died A. D. 220, having spent his entire life in search of, and teaching what he conceived to be the truth. He was a man of learning when converted to Christianity, but being anxious to acquire a thorough knowledge of it, eagerly sought instructions of the most eminent teachers he could find, and for that purpose traveled extensively in Greece, Italy, Egypt, Palestine, and other parts of the East. In this way he acquired a thorough knowledge of the teachings that prevailed in the second century.

It may be well to observe, in this connection, that the divided state of Christianity was not then as it is now. The church as a great body was united, and stood firm to the doctrine of the primitive churches. A few factions had split off and set up for themselves, but the general church of all countries stood firm. Clement's travels among the churches, and conversing with their eminent teachers were of great advantage, thus affording opportunities of becoming better acquainted with them and their doctrine, and at the same time assimilating himself to them and their customs.

He came into the church, not to teach and govern it, but to be taught and governed by the church. His first step was to attend the school of Christ, and become familiar with the both and produce of the great Christian body, and acquire a thorough knowledge of its religion as handed down from the earliest times. After becoming familiar with its teachings and principles he began to teach and publicly defend it, and wrote some valuable works setting forth some of the leading features of the Christianity of that age.

From tradition it would seem that Mark, the evangelist, traveled down into Egypt, and there in the city of Alexandria established a Christian school, which afterwards became noted as the leading seat of learning in that country. Clement finally became professor of this school, and added much to its reputation as a Christian institution. Though devoting much of his attention to teaching and preaching, yet he found time to write and publish some valuable works, a few of which have come down to our time. His writings display both learning and care, and in many instances show commendable features that characterized the churches of early centuries. It would seem strange, however, that the professor of the leading school of the kind would condescend, as some call it, to teaching some things that we find in his books, but the church at that age had not become corrupted to the extent that it did in latter years, and therefore as we approach the fountain-head from whence issued the pure waters of the Christian faith, we may expect to find a generality of more piety than in these modern days of corruption.

When speaking "against embellishing the body," Clement says, "The god of the Egyptians appears almost rolling on a purple couch. So those women who wear gold, occupy themselves in curling at their locks, and engage in anointing their cheeks, painting their eyes, and dyeing their hair, and practicing other pernicious arts of luxury, decking the covering of the flesh—in truth, imitate the Egyptians, in order to attract their infatuated lovers. For love of display is not to a lady, but a confession. Such women care little for keeping at home with their husbands; but losing their husbands' purses, they spend its supplies on their lusts, that they may have many witnesses of their seemingly fair appearance; and, devoting the whole day to their toilet, they spend their time with their bought slaves."

When speaking of those who are attracted to places of amusement the same writer says, "For those that glory in their looks, not in heart, dress to please others. For as the brand shows the slave, so do gaudy colors the adulteress. For though they clothe thyself in scarlet and deck thyself with ornaments of gold, and anoint thine eyes with stibium, in vain is thy beauty, says the word of Jeremiah. Is it not monstrous, that while horses, birds, and the rest of animals, spring and bound from the grass and meadows, rejoicing in ornament that is their own, in man, and natural color, and varied plumage; woman, as if inferior to the brute creation, should think herself so unworthy as to need foreign, and bought, and painted beauty."

"Let the woman wear a plain and becoming dress, but sabbier than what is suitable for a man, yet not quite unadorned or entirely gone in luxury. And let the garments be suited to age, person, figure, nature, pursuits. For the divine apostle most beautifully counsels us 'to put on Jesus Christ, and make no provisions for the lust of the flesh.'"

Regarding ear-rings, our learned teacher says, "The Word prohibits us from doing violence to nature by boring the lobes of the ears. For why not the nose too?—so that, what was spoken, may be fulfilled: 'As an ear-ring in a swine's nose, so is beauty to a woman without discretion.' For, in a word, if one thinks himself made beautiful by gold, he is inferior to gold; and he that is inferior to gold is not lord of it."

Thus writes the noted professor of the celebrated high school at Alexandria, from whom some of our modern teachers, as well as popular Christians can learn valuable lessons.—J. H. Moore.

"SPRINKLING,

THE TRUE MODE OF BAPTISM."

SUMMER III.

WE are now ready for another lesson, and will hear the Doctor first quote on John the Baptist.

3. "Did John the Baptist immerse those whom he baptized?"

Just as if a man could be dipped without being dipped. The question by the Doctor falls to pieces of its own accord, for there is no baptism in water, nor with water without immersion, without dipping. But hear him further:

"No doubt there was constantly, for weeks and months, a large encampment of men, women and children, at the place he had sojournd. How could all these people and their animals have been kept alive in a dry and barren region, at a place where there was little or no water? For the purpose of subsisting these immense multitudes of men and animals, and not for the purpose of dipping, it was necessary that John should preach and baptize on the Jordan, at Enon, and at other places where there was much water."

This learned man, this Doctor of Divinity can see "a large encampment of men, women and children for weeks,"—yes, not only for "weeks," but for "months," and all the "animals" in Judea and Jerusalem up and down the Jordan, but no immersion. He can see what is not in the Book of God, and don't see what is in. Where is there one word of evidence, positive or circumstantial, that will prove that men, women, children and animals encamped in the wilderness for weeks and months? And even if the whole world had been there for a year, does that prove that dipping is sprinkling? Not by any means!

And then he continues to insist that John "baptized on the Jordan." Look at that little word, "on." "On Jordan." Does God say that John, Jesus and the apostles baptized on Jordan? Never. Do they tell about baptizing people on Jordan? Not a word about baptizing men, women and children on Jordan. The fact, the old Bible fact, still remains that John baptized the people of Judea and Jerusalem and all the regions round about, in Jordan, in the river, in the water. The man that says on Jordan, on water is wresting the Scriptures to his own—let Peter say the rest (2 Peter 3: 16).

4. "Was Cornelius and his family immersed?" There is nothing said whatever that they were, and no allusion in the account that would favor such a supposition. Now, what is the idea conveyed, immediately, to the mind of the reader when reading the words: "Can any one forbid water that these should not be baptized?" Did he not plainly mean, "Can any one forbid water to be now brought into the room, in order to baptize them without delay?"

You say there is no allusion in the account of Cornelius' baptism that "would favor" the "supposition," that he was immersed. The Bible doctrine of water baptism is not a matter of supposition,—is not so indefinite, not so vague that it needs supposition. It is a matter of fact, a matter of divine appointment, a well established ordinance. There is no use of supposition in the matter. The suppositions are all on the side of "baptism by sprinkling." This new idea of "sprinkling by sprinkling" is in need of all the suppositions in the universe, and then it will not stand up; nor can it be propped up. It takes divine inspiration, divine authority.

Again you think it "plainly means, Can any one forbid water to be brought into the room, in order to baptize them without delay?" It neither means, nor plainly means that water should be brought into the room. Why do you not say that water was brought in to sprinkle them? Why say baptize? Why not say sprinkle? Does infallible inspiration say, "Can any man forbid water that these should not be sprinkled?" No, not at all; and Dr. Greenwald is afraid to put the word sprinkle in place of the word baptize. He knows that a translation with the word sprinkle instead of the word baptize would not be accepted by any man who has respect for his learning. And yet if baptizo means to sprinkle, it would have been so rendered long ago, for the army of sprinklers is indeed large; but no Greek scholar, no number of Greek scholars, will dare to translate baptizo, "sprinkle." There is a reason for this. It does not mean to sprinkle, never did, and no twist of human language can ever make it mean sprinkle. The Greek word for sprinkle is rhantizo, and rhantizo is never rendered baptize, dipping.

The Doctor's next questions are: "Was Paul immersed?" "Were the jailer and his family immersed?" Under these two heads he simply rehearses his arguments "with water," "with the Holy Ghost," which we have already shown to be "in water," "in the Holy Ghost," and then falls into the error of supposing that Paul, Silas and the jailer did not go out of the prison to hunt a river. But we go to the record. "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house. And they spoke to him the word of the Lord, and all those in his house. And taking them in that hour of the night, he washed them from their stripes, and was immersed (dipped) he and all his. And having led them up into his house, he set a table and rejoiced with all his house, believing in God" (Acts 16: 31-34). Then the Doctor insists that if the jailer had gone out of the prison all the other prisoners would have escaped, but admits that the jailer went with Paul and Silas into another part of the prison. Did all the prisoners flee then? If all the doors were broken open and the "walls rent," how could the jailer keep them in by going to "his own private apartments?" He could keep them in by going and sitting down in another room, doors all open, walls rent, etc., but then if he had gone out to a river to be baptized, they would all have fled. That is your reasoning is it not? Ah! you forget that Paul said, "Do thyself no harm, for we are all here." God worked there that night, and the Power that "broke down the doors," and "rent the walls," could also restrain guilty prisoners from fleeing at all.

I wish to note one more point in this lesson. Doctor Greenwald, on page 12 of his pamphlet says:

"And thou shalt anoint Aaron and his sons, and consecrate them, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office. Jesus, too, as our High Priest, must be fully consecrated. . . . The idea of a person being consecrated to the office of a priest, or minister, by being dipped into or the water, or the Holy Ghost, by which he is consecrated, is absurd."

Here the Doctor would have us believe that Jesus was a Priest after the order of Aaron; but the apostle, by the Holy Ghost, says: "It is evident that our Lord sprang out of the tribe of Juda; of which tribe Moses spoke nothing concerning the priesthood" (Heb. 7: 14), and Jesus was "made a high priest forever after the order of Melchisedec" (Heb. 6: 21). Observe that Jesus sprang out of the tribe of Judah, not of Levi. That Christ was a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec, and not after the order of Aaron. The Doctor cannot teach us that Christ came of the tribe of Levi, and was made a priest after the order of Aaron. God does not so instruct; but teaches that Jesus came of the tribe of Juda and was baptized of John in Jordan. This ought to satisfy any truth-loving, heaven-born soul. And it will. Only such as see what the Lord never commanded, and don't want to see what He did command, will talk, write and act differently. We write plain. We want to be understood. This is no time to run when the smoke of error arises. The time has arrived for bold and fearless words—the whole truth of Jesus, all He spoke by the mouth of holy men. M. M. E.

BROTHER Bashor's retiring from the office makes it necessary that we balance our accounts as soon as possible, and therefore suggest to those who are owing us the propriety of remitting us last as they can. We have considerable standing out and are anxious that it be paid in as soon as convenient. Hope all who are indebted to us will make a note of this.

BROTHER Bashor and wife called with us last week. They are on their way to Waterloo, Iowa, where they expect to remain some months until Bro. Bashor's health improves sufficiently to take the field again. He expects to devote his time wholly to traveling and preaching. His correspondents will address him at Waterloo.

The Home Circle.

READ AND OBEY.

"Husbands, love your wives." "Wives, obey your husbands." "Fathers, provoke not your children to wrath." "Children, obey your parents in all things."

Edited by M. M. Eshelman.

SUNDAY MORNING.

Jesus is Risen.

THE terrible gloom and sorrow that covered the hearts of all the dear brethren and sisters on Friday and Saturday, because Jesus had been crucified! They knew not where to go; poor souls, they were as a flock without a shepherd. But on Sunday morning when it was yet dark, Mary Magdalene and the other Mary went to the tomb of Jesus to anoint his body. Poor, dear sisters; they were much perplexed and scarcely knew what to do. Who should roll away the stone for them? Soon they reached the tomb and behold their joy on seeing the stone rolled away. Mary wept, and stooping down looked into the sepulchre. She wanted to see Jesus. How anxious was her heart. It is her Sunday morning, and now about daylight. Oh how they loved Jesus! Nothing could keep them from going early to the Master's tomb. It seems to me I can hear Mary say to Mary Magdalene, on Saturday evening: "O dear sister, our Master, our Jesus is dead; let us go early to-morrow and anoint his body. We must be off early." Then with sad hearts on Sunday morning they hastened to the sepulchre. Mary wept! and as she wept, and looked into the tomb she saw two angels in white, one sitting at the head and the other at the feet where Jesus' body had lain. They saw her weeping, and said, "Woman, why weepest thou?" "O because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him," she answered. Poor woman! she still loved Jesus. She loved the dead Jesus just as she loved Him when He was alive. O what love! This is divine love, the love that comes down from heaven.

As she stood weeping, she turned around and saw some one standing near. This was Jesus, but she knew Him not. He said, "Woman, why weepest thou?" Her heart is full and she says, "Tell me where thou hast laid him." She knew not Jesus; her heart was yet sad and sorrowful. Presently Jesus said, "Mary." Then she knew Him and exclaimed, "Master!" Yes, Master! Her Master was alive again. Poor woman! She was ready to embrace Him, but He forbade her saying, "Touch me not; I am not yet ascended to my Father; go tell my brethren that I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God." O what a sermon! Obeying Jesus she ran to tell her brethren. Her heart was now full of joy. What a blessed Sunday morning now. A little while ago all was sorrow, now all is joy. The sun is now shining in its splendor, nature is all joy and life, and Mary hastens to tell the good news. Soon she finds some of her brethren. Peter doubts; all doubt, and her words are as "idle tales" to them. However Peter wants to be sure about the matter so he and "that other disciple" ran to the tomb to see for themselves. Seeing they believed, and stood wondering. Peter is amazed! Poor Peter, he had been told that Jesus would arise again, but he could hardly realize its truth. He went and told the other disciples, and all were ready to believe except Thomas. Poor, doubting Thomas; he must thrust in his fingers, before he can believe. O what a happy Sunday morning this to the brethren and sisters! Never before was there such a day of rest. Death and the grave had been overcome, and mankind wholly redeemed. Joy, joy, beamed on every countenance. It was enough to make them sing and rejoice, for Jesus had risen. Happy, "first day of the week." The wicked Jews had put Jesus to death, but God brought Him out of that. Glory to God in the highest! Hence, and good-will to all men forever if they believe. The sisters glorify God in all meekness and lowliness of mind. The brethren joy and rejoice also. O what a blessed Sunday morning to the Brethren in Palestine! Who would not enjoy such a Sunday morning? The same Jesus still lives. He is willing to arise in every heart this Sunday morning. Shall He? May He? Sumner, do you love Jesus this Sunday morning? Are you ready to let Him come in and dwell with you? Soon He will come, some bright Sunday morning, to gather His elect from the four corners of the earth, to rest with Him here one thousand years. Come, go and meet Jesus this beautiful Sunday morning, and live forever. M. W. E.

THE LITTLE CHILDREN.

GOD bless the little children, We meet them everywhere; We hear their voices round the hearth. Their footsteps on the stair; Their kindly hearts are swelling o'er With mirthfulness and glee; God bless the little children, Wherever they may be.

We meet them 'neath each gipsy tent, With visage swarthy and dun, And eyes that sparkle as they glance, With roguery and fun; We find them fishing in a brook For minnows with a pin, Or creeping through the hazel-brush The linnet's nest to win.

We meet them in the lordly hall, Their stately father's pride; We meet them in the poor man's cot— He has no wealth beside; Along the city's crowded street They hurl the hoop or ball; We find them 'neath the pauper's roof— The saddest sight of all.

For there they win no father's love, No mother's tender care, Their only friend the God above, Who hears the orphan's prayer; But dressed in silk or draped in rags, In childish glee or grief, God bless the little children, Wherever they may be.

—Selected.

THE APOSTLES.

Dear Children:—

AS I am much interested in the "Home Circle" I will also add a few thoughts for the little folks.

Did you ever read about the four disciples, Andrew, Simon, James and John, whom Jesus called from their fishing-boats to follow him? Do you think these men ever felt sorry that they left all and followed Him? I am sure they never did; no, not even when they had to suffer and die for his sake. Would you like to know what became of them? Simon, who was afterwards called Peter, perhaps the most useful of all, was crucified as Jesus was, by wicked people who hated him. But he felt it was too great an honor for him to die as his dear Lord did and so we are told he begged to be crucified with his head downward. Andrew, it is supposed, died on the cross too. James was killed with the sword. John lived longer than all the rest. He was sent by the king to live alone on a rocky island. While there he wrote the last book of the New Testament. He lived to be almost a hundred years old. When he became so old that he could not go to the meetings of the Christians he was carried by some of his friends; and when he could no longer preach sermons he used to make the little speech: "My dear little children, love one another." Some of them at last got tired of hearing him say this. But he would say, "This is what the Lord commanded, and if you do this it is sufficient." He knew they could not love one another unless the love of God was shed abroad in their hearts. But these apostles are all now in heaven praising Jesus. Let us all try and live as Christians, so we may also reach that happy place. MARTIN ROWLANDS, Shannon, Ill.

THE LOST SON.

WHEN his father wept for him" (Gen. 37: 35). Joseph was one of the twelve sons of Jacob. He was a kind, obedient and dutiful son to his father, so that his father abundantly loved him. Although Joseph was a kind and loving boy, his brethren still hated him. Joseph loved and obeyed God and his brethren did not, consequently they did not love Joseph. One day his father sent him in search of his brethren where they were feeding their flocks. But when his brethren saw him a great distance off they planned how they might kill him. Was this not very wicked for them to want to kill their brother? But one of his brethren (whose name was Reuben) being kinder than the rest, suggested that they would not kill him, but cast him into a pit or into the wilderness, for he (Reuben) desired in his heart that Joseph might return to their father, for this reason he desired that he should not be killed. Now Joseph had a "coat of many colors" of which they stripped him when he came to them, and then they cast him into this large empty pit. They sat down to eat some bread when they beheld a company of men coming toward them to whom they sold Joseph. Those men took him far off into Egypt. Just think of those brethren selling their brother for a slave. They took his coat of many colors and dipped it in blood and brought it to their father, that he might judge if it were his son Joseph's coat. Jacob recognized the coat that it was Joseph's and he exclaimed, "It is my son's coat; an evil beast hath devoured him: Joseph is without doubt rent in pieces" (Gen. 37: 34). Just think for a moment how Jacob's poor heart would ache at the thought of his dear son being killed and devoured by some wild beast. He would not possibly be comforted at the loss of his son, and then he wept in deep agonizing grief for his dearly beloved child. Just imagine his heartaches at that moment, and then think of the wickedness of those brethren for deceiving their almost heart-broken father. Oh! how he wept, how he sighed, how he moaned over his great loss.

But, dear children, if God were to lose one of you, his dear little lambs, He would sustain a greater loss than Jacob by the loss of Joseph. If you are not good, obedient and loving children you cannot go where God is, and then He would lose your souls, which he says of one that it is of more value than the whole world. Just think that millions of dollars would not buy the world, and yet one soul is of greater value in the eyes of God than the whole of it. And then just think that God suffered His only, dearly beloved Son to be nailed to the cross to redeem and save our precious souls from death. How it would grieve the heart of our dear, loving Savior to know that one of those precious souls, for which He sacrificed His life, should be lost. Then, dear children, give your hearts to God while you are young, so that in death you may obtain a crown of life that fadeeth not away. God has prepared a beautiful home up in the sky for all good children when they die. It was to this beautiful home that Joseph went when he had finished his labors on earth. If his brethren did hate him, he had both an earthly and a heavenly Father that loved him. E. R. STIFELER.

HEAR YE HIM.

WHILE he yet spoke, behold, a bright cloud overshadowed them; and behold a voice out of the cloud, which said, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him" (Matt. 17: 5).

And Jesus has said, "Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock" (Matt. 7: 24). And on the other hand, "And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand" (Matt. 7: 26). Just listen at the plain language spoken by our blessed Savior; and yet so many do not heed it. But beware of false teachers. Jesus says, "Whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, not every one's sayings, for in the same chapter, 21st verse, He says, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." So dear brethren and sisters, young and old, let us be very careful; and you too, dear young friends, who are still out of the ark of safety, and know good from evil. It has been said, "Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin" (James 4: 17). So dear young friends, come to Jesus. I am young in years, but have come out from among the world, and can say with the poet,

"For worldly honor I'd not waste, Of life my little span, Far better is the love of God, Than highest praise of man."

JEMIMA KOB.

Franklin, Iowa.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED. John L. Fritsch's queries in No. 3.

1. Who was the first blacksmith? Tubal-cain. (Gen. 4: 22).

2. Who caused iron to be smelted? Elisha (2 Kings 6: 20).

3. What king reigned only one month? Shallum. (2 Kings 15: 13).

4. Who wrote with a pen of iron and a point of a diamond? The language is figurative. (Jer. 17: 1).

5. How many miracles did Jesus perform? Thirty-three.

Answers to friend's queries in No. 2.

1. How many knives did the children of Israel take out of Egypt? I do not find a record where they took any. The first time they used knives, Joshua was commanded to make sheep knives. (See Joshua 5: 5). When Cyrus, king of Media and Persia, gave the captive Jews liberty to return to Palestine, and restored to them the vessels of the sanctuary among them were nine and twenty knives. (Ezra 1: 9).

Answers to Clara E. Lutz's queries in No. 9.

1. How many years after the departure of the children of Israel out of Egypt did Solomon lay the foundation of the temple? Four hundred and eighty years. (1 Kings 6: 1).

2. Whom did the Lord appoint to succeed Moses? Joshua. (Joshua 1: 1, 2, 3).

Answers to Michael F. Snaveley's queries.

1. How old was Noah when the flood came upon the earth? Six hundred years. (Gen. 7: 11).

2. Who was the first man that died a natural death, and how old was he? Adam, and he was nine hundred and thirty years old. (Gen. 5: 5). ESTELLA J. ALLEN.

Ticketsburg, Mich.

CHILDREN AT WORK.

Sometime:—I do not belong to the church, but hope I will sometime. I read my Bible, go to school, and to meeting every two weeks. I, J. Rosenberger and J. P. Ebersole are our ministers. My oldest brother has been a member for two years.—Ira Bourers, Gilliam, Ohio.

[Dear child, put your trust in Jesus. Read His Word; be good, obey Him and you shall have a crown of glory.—Ed.]

Death of Jesus:—I was reading this evening of the suffering and death of our Savior. I think it was a terrible thing to kill Him. We should all obey Him. To Louie C. Hickey I would say the shortest chapter in the Bible is the 117th Psalm. My uncle John Wise was here this winter. O I love my dear uncle! Jesus is our best friend.—Clara E. Wise, Tiffin, Ohio.

What Mother Does:—My dear mother teaches me to say my little prayers before I go to bed.—Nannie M. Towland, Shannon, Ill.

Be Good Children:—I love to go to meeting and Sunday-school; went last Summer and only missed one day. The answer to John R. Glock's question may be found in 2nd Kings 4: 35. Dear little readers, I do not expect to meet you all in this world, but let us all be good children, so that we may meet in the world to come.—Ella Blough, Hudson, Ill.

They That Do:—Brother John Nicholson was here twice; the first time, ten days and eleven added to the church, the second time two weeks, ten received by baptism and two reclaimed. I came to Jesus on New Year's day. "Blessed are they that do his commandments that they may have a right to the tree of life, and enter in through the gates into the city."—M. E. Berchgible, Delta, Ohio.

A Warning:—May God help those who write for your paper, and His ministers who preach the whole Gospel. "Suffer little children to come unto me," says Jesus. "Enter ye in at the strait gate; for wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction." Let this be a warning to all, that when their time comes to leave this world they may die happy.—Lydia E. Taylor, Whitesville, Mo.

Came to Jesus:—Father, mother, sister and I belong to the church. One dear sister has gone to rest in Jesus, and I want to try to meet her. We had meeting here that lasted two weeks; three precious souls came to the church, and we think much good seed was sown.—Ella N. Shaffer, Scuda, Iowa.

A Query:—The text this morning was the thirty-fifth verse of the tenth chapter of Hebrews. Can any of the little readers of your paper tell which chapter in the Bible contains all the letters of the alphabet except one, and which letter that is?—Ella M. Cook, Quincy, Ia.

Who, and What? Kind:—I read all the children's letters with profit, and I want to be a child at work too. What man climbed a tree to see Jesus, and what kind of a tree was it?—Leah H. Chance, White Oak, Ill.

Very Annoying:—Papa and mamma are doing all they can to give me a good education. I go to meeting, sometimes in the city and sometimes in the country. It is very annoying to the minister and hearers to have children running in and out of the house during meeting. They should not do that.—Hannah W. Cong. Ill. Carroll, Ill.

Do Yourself Good:—Someday I had God disposed of the ways of man that even the sight of vice in others is like a warning arrow sent for us to take heed. We should correct our own faults by seeing how unbecomingly they appear in others. Who will not abhor a choleric passion, and a sassy pride in himself, that sees how ridiculous and contemptible they render those who are infected with them.—Selected.

CORRESPONDENCE.

From A. S. Leer.

Dear Brethren:—

A FEW days ago, I was called away from home to anoint a sick sister who lives about twenty-two miles North of us, and while there, obtained three subscribers for your paper, from the beginning of Bro. Stein's debate to the end of the year.

Also preached one sermon while there, and had the privilege of baptizing three persons, two brethren and one sister, one of the former being the husband of the sick sister who was anointed. Also had the privilege of listening to a sermon delivered by a United Brethren minister, about twenty years of age, from the language of the Savior, found in the eighth verse of the fifth chapter of Matthew. His theme was, Purity of Heart and Sanctification. He said, this chapter contains a part of the great sermon on the mountain, delivered by the Savior. That all men are not pure in heart, no one doubts. Man as he came from his Maker is pure, but shortly after his fall it is said of him that the thoughts of his heart are wicked. But that we don't put all the impurity upon the adult, it is said by one of the sacred writers, that wickedness is wraped up in the child's heart. The natural condition of the human heart is impure; but after all there is yet a principle in the human heart, that, if left alone, will bring him around, so that he will finally become a child of God. If by nature man is good, why is it that we have our government laws and institutions for reform?

Why is it, that we find in man a disposition to dislike that which is good? Is it not because the heart of man is impure? How can the impure heart be changed to a pure heart? It is done through the efficacy of the blood of Christ, who is sufficient to cleanse from all sin. A person must first become acquainted with his condition. Before you send for a physician, you want to know that you are sick, and that you are in need of a physician. After finding that you need a physician, and sending for one, you will make use of the remedy prescribed by him.

Leprosy is spoken of in the Scriptures, as a representative of sin. People afflicted with that disease, made use of the means ordained to heal them. Here he spoke of the children of Israel and their afflictions. The brazen serpent being put upon a pole by Moses, he compared it with the language of the apostle: "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up."

In due time the Son came, and with His life you are all acquainted no doubt, and with His sufferings and death also. And now we are not justified by the works of the Law, but the apostle says: "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God," the apostle says, "by faith, not of works, lest any man should boast." The apostle says: "Salvation is to them that worketh not, but believeth." Justification is a work done for us, regeneration in us.

Sometimes we are inclined to call this, religion; but that is not correct, — it is salvation. But we must go higher. This first step is only the beginning of sanctification. We sometimes hear people say, "I am trying to serve the Lord in my weakness." That is a very poor way to serve Him. God demands a holy life of His people. "Be ye holy, for I am holy." "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father, which is in heaven is perfect." Paul thanked God, that he had been freed or delivered from bondage. — The blood of Jesus cleanses from all sin. "He that committeth sin is of the devil." If we cannot sin, we are of the devil, and we exclude Christ from the heart.

Now sanctificationists claim that we do reach a state of purity just before death. Well if we reach that point just one moment before death, cannot God cleanse our hearts and keep them pure one hour before, why not two, etc. We cannot sanctify ourselves, that is the work of the Holy Spirit. Here some one may ask: "Do you expect to attain to the holiness of Adam or of angels?"

In answer to this, the speaker gave his own experience. He said, that while wrestling with God for holiness, or purity of heart for some days, and spending several sleepless nights, but all in vain, he remembered that some one had done him a great injury, and he often thought to get reconciled with that person. He knew this was impossible, because of the great distance. So he finally concluded that he would bring that and lay it upon the altar with all the rest. He did so, and at once received the blessing. The result of all this is, that we shall see God, etc.

After listening to the young man for about an hour and a half, I was made to think, how different this from the preaching of Jesus, who was led by God's Holy Spirit, and spoke as he was moved by the Holy Spirit, and said: "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit, with unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently, being born again not of corruptible seed but of incorruptible by the Word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." Also the language of the Savior, in the prayer for His disciples, when he says: "Sanctify them through thy truth, thy Word is Truth." We may pray, and wrestle with God all our life for holiness, but unless we make use of the means ordained of God to make us holy, it will all be in vain.

Jesus says: "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say." And again, "He that loveth me, keepeth my commandments; he it is that loveth me." Again, "He that saith, he knoweth me, or loveth me, and keepeth not my commandments is a liar and the truth is not in him." Again, "He that saith he abideth in him, ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked." And again, "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus.

Morrisonville, Ill.

From Norway, Oregon.

Dear Brethren:—

WE live on the Western slope of the mountain, about fifteen miles from the coast. Have had a mild Winter, wheat looks well and promises a good yield. The health is generally good; brethren who are afflicted with lung diseases, might find a remedy by settling here. I would especially urge ministering brethren who have almost worn out their lungs in preaching the glad tidings of salvation, to come here, recruit their health, and thus enable themselves to spend a long life of usefulness in the Master's cause. We need ministerial aid here as well as elsewhere; though we have six ministers in this valley, there are many valleys here where they have none. We do not scatter our forces very much, believing that one acre well cultivated is better than two poorly cultivated. We do not increase in numbers very rapidly, had a few additions by baptism last summer, and a few by letter.

We heard that Bro. Bashor contemplates visiting California next Summer. We would be much pleased to have him visit us also; but most of us are poor in this world's goods, and not able to contribute much toward defraying his expenses, and that may prevent his coming, unless he will do as Paul did in 2nd Cor. 11: 8.

I am in favor of missionary labors, but I don't see the necessity of new organizations to effect our purpose. I believe the plan given us by Christ and His holy apostles, is amply sufficient to meet every case. Let us therefore double our diligence and all labor together as one family, built upon the foundation of the apostles, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief Corner Stone, using the means that God has given us, and we will be able to send out many faithful laborers into the Lord's vineyard, who will not shun to declare the whole counsel of God. May the Lord prosper the good cause.

Yours in love,

DAVID BARKLOW.

From Brush Creek Church, Ohio.

Dear Brethren:—

BRO. James A. Rademour came to our place on the 26th of January, 1878, commenced a series of meetings at Strait Valley, and closed on the fourth of February. Eight precious souls made the good confession, and were received into the church of the living God (1 Tim. 3: 10), by Christian baptism, and rose to walk in newness of life.

From here he went to Fairview, Adams Co., held a few meetings, and some four or five made application to join the church. Next to Marble Furnace; held a few meetings. The few members at that place were much encouraged and many good impressions made. Thence to Pleasant Grove; held a few meetings, where four more precious souls made application for baptism. On the 22nd of February those at Fairview who made application, and those of Pleasant Grove were received into the church, nine in all and three restored, two received by letter. Went to Brush Creek, had a few meetings, four made application, and on the first day of March were received by Christian Baptism. One was restored, and received at the edge of the water by salvation with the others, making in all twenty-seven added to the church, during Bro. Rademour's stay with us.

Bro. James closed his series of meetings with us at Brush Creek, the first day of March, and in the evening came to our place, Strait Creek Valley, giving us a warm and affectionate farewell address.

J. H. GARDNER.

Sinking Springs, O.

From Sugar Creek Church, O.

Dear Brethren:—

WHEN I think back a few years ago, and see the pleasures then enjoyed and the pleasure I am now permitted to enjoy with the children of the Heavenly King, what a great change! A few years ago I was in the habit of going to all the worldly amusements, such as shows, dances, picnics, political meetings, and in fact all things that I could get to, and thought that we all enjoyed ourselves very much. Then afterwards I was living in a town and helped sing in a choir in a Presbyterian church, and here I began to take some interest in my soul's salvation. On going from one to the other denominations, and hearing so many different doctrines preached, and all aiming at the same center, was almost persuaded to be an infidel. But thanks be to the God of heaven and earth, that I did not. The Friends (or so-called Quakers) suited me in all things but baptism at that time. But on reading the New Testament, I found that there was something more to be done than baptism alone.

On April first of last year, I came to this county and labored in Lima for some time, when I got a chance to go to the country to help paint our present meeting-house. I got somewhat acquainted with Bro. Jacob Weaver, and conversed some with him upon the subject, and was invited to attend a Love-feast which was to be soon.

Upon that occasion I witnessed something that was never seen by me before, and which met my approbation to the letter. Although I was out in the world, I could not help but think that my heart was filled, (as it were) with a Gospel feast. There was Foot-washing, the Lord's Supper, the Communion, the Holy Kiss, and the way the Scriptures were explained, fully convinced me, that such was according to the law of our heavenly Father.

Since then, in July last, I came out from the world, and enlisted in the army of the Lord. I have since been permitted to partake in a Love-feast, and then, and not till then did I fully realize the above lines of the poet.

Perhaps some would like to know why I parted with the Brethren, and not with some popular church. My reason is thus: first I never believed in such doctrine; second, the Brethren baptize according to my mind; third, they observe the ordinances preached by the Savior when on earth; fourth and last, they have no other mode or creed of confession than the New Testament alone, and practice what is commanded therein.

Perhaps I am becoming somewhat tedious. I will bring my letter to a close by asking you and all the brotherhood to remember me in your prayers, that I may not go back into the world as I was once, but go onward and upward in the work which I have undertaken, in serving the Lord as best I can.

In conclusion would say that our congregation is in good spirits and general brotherly love continues among us. I will endeavor to write in an better hereafter.

Your humble brother in the Lord,

WM. BROWN.

From Longmont, Colorado.

Dear Brethren:—

ON the evening of Feb. 18, we were made glad by a visit from Bro. M. M. Bashor of Palaska, Colo. He remained with the Brethren until the 20th. Preached in all four sermons to the edification of both saint and sinner. His visit, we hope, will be for much good. By visiting our part of Colorado, Bro. B. has more favorable impressions as regards the country, people, etc. There is, I think, some probability of his moving to Boulder Co.

Bro. Bashor lives in a wild country; sometimes men with musket in hand, forbid him to preach, but with a firm trust in God, and a proper use of the sword of the Spirit, has made friends of such. He has had a hard time of it since in Colorado; has had a great deal of sickness; has buried two children, has had a sick companion which needed his care and attention, and besides all this, the grass-hopper plague and other misfortunes have deprived one brother of much usefulness in the ministry. May he be remembered in the prayers of God's children.

Our infant church, though small in number, is yielding a powerful influence, which we hope will not only be felt to the conversion of sinners here, but elsewhere. We hope that the Brethren will heed the many calls of "Come over and help us," for there is a great field open here. Our short stay in Colorado, thanks to God, has not been altogether in vain. May the seed we have tried to sow, when the harvest is come, be gathered, precious fruit to be stored in heaven.

Fraternally,

S. C. BASHOR.

From the Maple Grove Church, Iowa.

Dear Brethren:—

THE work of the Lord still moves slowly and steadily on. Bro. J. H. Fillmore of Shelby Co., Iowa, came to us on Jan. 26th, commenced meeting same night, continued for two weeks. Then he went to Eureka, Adams Co., same congregation and preached one week. — Then he went to Faragut, Fremont Co., preached nearly two weeks. Then back to Coliver's Grove school-house in Adams Co., and preached one week. This ended his labors in the Maple Grove church. Result of his labors were thirteen blood-bought souls, initiated by baptism into the family of God.

These meetings were all well attended, and the very best of order prevailed. Bro. Fillmore labors apparently with much zeal.

Yours Fraternally,

N. C. WORKMAN.

Siuba, Iowa.

GLEANINGS.

From A. Taylor.—Our church here contains about thirty-five members, all in love and union as far as I know. But we are scattered over a large territory and have only two ministers. Have four regular appointments, which give us here only one meeting every four weeks. Our ministerial force is too small, and it is rather hard for Bro. John Kenberry to come fifty miles, and in my weakness I cannot go so far. We wish some ministers to come and help us. The field is large and prospects good. God grant us more laborers.

Tekamah, Neb.

From E. F. Burrow.—Your valuable paper has been coming to me regularly since January 1st, 1878, and I feel very thankful for it. I have had my mind made up since last October to join the Brethren. I think they are the nearest right of my church I know of, but as there are no members here, I don't know how I could get a chance to join them. I would be glad to hear from you or some of the brethren on the subject. I am trying to live a Christian life without baptism, and I think a person ought to be baptized. I wish some of the brethren could come here and preach to us. I shall never give up joining them as long as I can see any prospect of doing so. Clifton Hill is on the St. Louis, Kansas City & Northern R. R.

Clifton Hill, Mo.

From H. Hamilton.—At this time our health is tolerably good, and we have many reasons to be thankful. We hope that you, too, are enjoying health and prosperity. Your paper is still a welcome messenger. When Bro. Ely gets home, please tell him to give us all the news.

Evira, Ind.

From D. A. Workman.—I think if all the churches in the brotherhood would consider the question: "How shall the poor be supplied with good and Gospel reading?" and then advise all to help raise a little amount, there would be a great many more reading and learning the way of the Lord, as many a poor soul is not permitted to hear the Word preached, and in sending out the paper they can learn the plan of salvation.

I received those tracts all right; they are worth twice the price. I think I can sell some as the Brethren who have seen them, like them very much. My opinion is, that if the Brethren would spend a little more money for such books and not so much for unnecessary things, there could be a vast amount of good done, and preachers would not have to talk so much.

Clubbun City, Ind.

From C. H. Balsbaugh.—O what dignity and glory and blessedness in being children and heirs of God. In the Christian life there is nothing superficial, or selfish, or belittling. To find Christ, or be found of Him, is to rise to an altitude, and swell into magnitude, in Deific proportions. There are so many stunted, dwarfed Christian professors, that it is even difficult to make out whether is anything really Christian in them! Where the great heart of Christ beats, and the Holy Ghost electrifies every fibre of our being, the glory of the Cross will be revealed in the splendors of seven suns. Christ and missions can no more be severed than Christ and salvation. The Cross means universal beneficence. Selfishness alone thrusts its bloated form between Christ and the extension of His Kingdom. He, whose glory is holiness, will not suck his pipe or grind his quid at the expense of Christ's blood and immortal souls. Jesus was an incessant worker for the Kingdom of Heaven. — From childhood his motto was: "I must be about my Father's business." May the great Truth sink into our inmost souls, direct all our energies, and make us living photographs of Emmanuel. — God has an advertisement, spanning Heaven and earth, in letters of blood and fire, love and wrath. — CHRISTIANS WANTED. But when He appeals to the Bride for the promulgation of the power of the Cross, thousands have no response but a stare of indifference, or a frown of indignation and contempt, or a pestilential whiff of tobacco smoke, or a mouthful of black, fetid spittle, or renewed zeal in the accumulation of wealth for personal ends. So did not Christ. Self-sacrifice was the law of His life. The losses of the Cross are the riches of Eternity. To save is to lose, and to lose is to save. O the madness and blindness of the carnal mind! O the exultation and rapture and royalty of the re-born. Let each one enter into the depths of his personality, and propound this solemn question: how am I feeding Jesus Christ?

From N. B. Murray. — I think all should heed the admonitions you give on repeating travels and church news. And since you have given the children a chance, we think much good can be done to them. However it would be well for parents to write, whatever they have to say, in their own name. We expect a discussion to commence this evening in our neighborhood between a Substantian and a minister of the Disciple church. — We appreciate Bro. Miller's article on the Sabbath. Quarry, Ia., March 11, 1878.

From E. R. Stoffer. — On Sunday night, Feb. 3rd, at about 2 o'clock A. M., the house of Bro. Samuel Brobakker of the Duennsville congregation, was totally destroyed by fire with nearly all its contents. The family, consisting of father, mother and eight children, were all at church on that evening at the Brethren's meeting-house, two miles distant. There is no clue as to how the fire originated. The oldest, the only daughter, was sleeping upstairs. She was aroused by the noise of the fire which seemed to have originated where the main building and a shed kitchen came in contact. The kitchen was attached to the end, not to the back part of the building. The family made a desperate effort to save the home, but finding it of no avail, they rescued a few of its contents, such as bed clothes, cooking stove, table, dough-trough, some meat and some of their own clothing. They had six beds, and some provisions in the cellar, which were saved. Bro. B. saved some of his clothing which contained some church money, but the rest of the family were left nearly destitute of clothing. The daughter was married shortly before, so she and her husband had all they had. Thus this poor father and family were driven from their comfortable beds at a dead hour of the night, almost destitute of clothing, the night being the coldest we endured this winter, and the ground covered with snow.

Bro. B. and wife have been members of the Brethren church here for some time, and for several years he has been a worthy deacon. They were trying to pay for a home, and were in financial circumstances. He was unfortunate enough to lose his valuable papers. They certainly deserve the sympathy of all in sustaining such a severe loss. Bro. B. is a man of industry, and has a large family to support. We hope that he may not be left to sustain the whole loss, but that those who can, will help him bear it.

Hollidaybury, Pa., Feb. 19, 1878.

From Samuel Murray. — On the 5th of Feb. I visited Eld. Shucky's wife, who was very sick. — Same evening had meeting in Fairview meeting-house and meetings were continued; but had roads so much interlined with people's attendance, that we closed after holding ten meetings. — During these assemblings we were called to Edna Mills to mount sister Bliken tall. These were added to the church by baptism and faith. — On Saturday, the 17th, preached funeral sermon on the death of sister Bliken-tall. Same day commenced meeting in Clinton Co., at their upper meeting-house. Held six meetings; good attendance and prospect for some additions. — Brethren and sisters, awake, do not allow any one to find you sleeping. — On the 24th meeting in the M. E. church in Ross-ville. Next had a little meeting again in the evening. — From here went home, and on the 2nd inst. had council, where all passed off pleasantly, thank the Lord.

Barnett's Creek, Ind.

DIED.

Obituaries should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and separate from all other business.

STOFER.—In the Sandy church, Columbiana Co., Ohio, sister Mary L. Stofer, aged 34 years, 7 months and 17 days. Died February 26, 1878. L. GLASS.

KELTNER.—In the Yellow Creek church, Stephenson Co., Ill., March 6th, 1878, Malinda Keltner, aged 3 years, 7 months and 3 days.

KELTNER.—In the same congregation March 9th, 1878, Ella May Keltner, aged 5 years, 7 months and 10 days. M. H. FOWLER.

STOUFFER.—Near Waynesboro on the 20th of February, Susan, infant daughter of John P. and Ella Stouffer, aged 4 years and 26 days. E. STOFFER.

COTNER.—In Eagle Creek church, Hancock Co., Ohio, March 14th, 1878, Mary L. daughter of Bro. J. A. and sister Mary Cotner, aged 2 years, 1 month and 27 days. Funeral services by the writer from Job 1: 21. S. T. BOSSERMAN.

LESH.—Near Georgetown, Dark Co., Ohio, Jan. 19th, 1878, Joel Lesh, aged 61 years, 10 months and 4 days. L. A. C.

BEAL.—In the Meyersdale congregation, Somerset Co., Pa., March 11th, 1878, Milton Allen Beal, son of Bro. Andrew O., and sister Barbara Beal, aged one year, eleven months and seventeen days. J. W. BEEM.

ALBAUGH.—In the Bachelor's Run church, Carroll Co., Ind., March 8th, 1878, sister Rebecca Albaugh, aged 76 years, 6 months and 17 days.

FLORA.—In the same church, March 9th, 1878, Susannah Flora, aged 26 years, 7 months and 7 days. H. LANDIS.

BAUER.—Sister Mary, wife of Bro. Stephen G. Bauer and sister to Elder John G. Glock of Anghwick Mills, Huntingdon Co., Pa., was born Dec. 30th, 1810 in Hoheneck, kingdom of Wurtemberg, Germany; was married Feb. 2, 1838, and came to America in August 1838. — She and her husband were baptized by brother Yeat in 1839 at the time of the A. M. in Anghwick, Pa., the writer being an eye-witness; lived in Pennsylvania until April 1849, moved to Stephenson Co., Ill. She was confined to her bed 11 weeks, died March 5th, 1878, aged 67 years, 2 months and 5 days. She had six children; four preceded her to the grave, leaving a sorrowful husband and two sons — all brethren and grandchildren and many friends to mourn her departure. Funeral occasion improved from Job 7: 1-6, (the sister's selection) by the writer, A. H. Lutz, W. K. Moore and D. Ely to a large audience. ALLEN BOYER.

(P. C., please copy.)

LAMMEDEE.—In South Bend, Indiana, Dec. 30th, 1877, Charles L. Lammedee, aged 6 years, 8 months and 13 days. D. WHITMER.

INTERESTING ITEMS.

When writing an article for the press, Whether prose or verse, just try To utter your thoughts in the fewest words, And let them be crisp and spry. And when it is finished, and you suppose It is done exactly how, Just look it over again, and then— Boil it down.

Mrs. Lucy Sherek, a recently-converted Jewess, was received into membership of the Baptist Church in Brooklyn last week, and baptized under the name of Ruth. The Rev. J. Schwab, Jewish rabbi referring to the case, says, he knew that another daughter had left home and married a Catholic a few years ago, but he had never seen any of Mr. Sherek's family, because they do not attend the synagogue. So he said to him frankly, "I am afraid, my friend, you are the fault of this. If your child had been properly trained she would not leave you. But since neither you nor your wife ever attend our meetings you have no right to blame the child for growing up with false ideas of our religion."

A STRANGE CASE.—An interesting case has just closed in the Court of Common Pleas of this county, at Bryant, Ohio. The case involved the question of the authority of church or State. Joseph Lachay brought suit against John Holde-man and others in $10,000 damages for entering his wife to abstain from marital relations to him. It appears from the evidence that all the parties were members of the denomination called "church of God," a branch of the Mennonites. In May, 1875, the church of which John Lichty and his wife were members, for divers reasons not shown in court, excommunicated him and placed him under the ban termed "avoidance." This means that remaining members shall shun and avoid the erring or excommunicated brother until he repent, and is again received into the church. It makes it the duty of the wife, she being a member, to not eat at the same table with her husband; nor talk with him, under penalty of being expelled from the church and being forever lost for disobedience. She could, however, keep house for him and family, which consisted of four children. — This she did for a year, he, in the meantime, patiently and kindly trying to induce her to act her wifely part with him. But on different occasions, when he had nearly succeeded in winning her back to him, these priests or teachers would step in and warn her that she could not take such a step without the consent of the church, and if she did, her soul would be forever lost. He then rented his farm and moved away, to be from under this influence, thinking his wife would go with him, but this influence was brought to bear upon her, and she would not leave the society.

Thus did these men on the one hand seize upon the strongest chord of the human heart, religious zeal and faith, to keep this wife from her husband, that they might, on the other hand grasp the cords of human affection and love to make a man bow to the church in which he did not worship. — They were willing to break up a family which had been maintained in peace and love for sixteen years, to compel this man to do their bidding. — They made their own defence in court, not believing in lawyers. The Bible was their law book, from which they read in parts from Numbers and Revelations. Simon Menno of Holland, who lived in the sixteenth century, was their commentator. By the Bible they sought to justify their course, and, under the plea of religious tolerance, guaranteed by the constitution, claimed a verdict in their favor.

It is perhaps safe to say that such a people and such a defence were never before seen or heard of in the courts of this country. It was the sixteenth and nineteenth century face to face. The testimony being all in, and the arguments having been made, the case went to the jury, who soon brought in a verdict, giving $2,000 damages to the plaintiff. The case has excited much interest.

DISCOURAGING TO SMOKERS. — Dr. Lawson, late Surgeon General of the United States, says he often observed that when the wolves and buzzards came upon the battle fields to devour the slain, they would not disturb the bodies of those who had chewed or smoked tobacco, until they had consumed all the others among them. And yet there are thousands of presumptuous, young chews and smokers, who expect that refined young ladies will be willing to love and cherish all their lives what even buzzards will reject as nauseating and unwholesome. — Selected by W. K. Moore.

LAVIABLE EFFORT. — Cigar stumps are now utilized in Berlin, Prussia. There is a society there that collects all the pieces of cigars and sells them. The proceeds are devoted to the clothing of poor children. Last Christmas thirty children were clothed by this society, each child being provided with a shirt, a pair of good leather boots, a warm dress, a pair of stockings and a pocket handkerchief. Although more than two hundred children have been clothed by this society. It is now proposed to build an orphan house from proceeds received from the sale of cigar stumps. This however does not prove the right of boys to learn to smoke, but simply shows the good sense of turning the effects of an evil into a useful channel. There is a lesson in this worthy of study.

MOTHER SHIPTON. — We clip the following from the Weekly Labor Opinion for the benefit of those who have taken considerable stock in "Mother Shipton." The deceivers are not all dead yet:

The so-called prophecy of Mother Shipton is one of the cleverly-hand-perpetrated few years ago. In 1862 Charles Hindley, of Brighton, England, published what he said was a reprint of an old edition of Mother Shipton's pieces, but has since acknowledged that the wonderful prophecy and some other pieces in the book were written by him at that time. This prophecy, which originally was claimed to have been written in 1488, and republished in 1641, was first wrought out of the brain of Mr. Hindley in 1862. Who Mother Shipton really was, is not known. It is probable that such a woman lived about 1488, but nothing save tradition is known of her. The prophecy is not worth reprinting, as it runs the circuit of the press every year or two.

JERUSALEM.—The Herald says rain has fallen in such quantities in the Holy Land, that the oldest inhabitants can hardly remember its parallel. The streets were flooded in several places, and some loss of life resulted from the overflow. roads are in a very bad condition, and communication is frequently stopped between the villages and the city. Notwithstanding the rainfall, the price of provisions is steadily increasing.

MUCH READING.—During the past year, 545,000 pages have been printed at the Baptist Mission Press in Japan, including Luke, Galatians, Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, Thessalonians, part of Genesis, catechism, etc.

WENT DOWN.—The pew rents of Mr. Beecher's church are this year $10,492 less than those of the last year. Whether this is attributable to the decline of this singular man's influence, or to the prevailing financial panic, we cannot determine, but are inclined to think it should be charged to the former.

PRIZE ESSAY.—The International Confederation, for the observance of the Christian Sabbath, has offered a prize of 2,000 francs for the best essay on "The Evils of Sunday Railroad Traffic." The work may be in English, French, German or Italian, and may be sent to the Secretary of the Confederation at Geneva, Switzerland, by the 10th of December, 1878.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Notices of Love-feasts, District Meetings, etc., should be brief, and written on paper separate from other business.

LOVE-FEASTS.
At Beaver Dam congregation, Kosciusko Co., Ind., June 6th, 1878.

There will be a Communion meeting at the meeting-house in South Waterloo, four miles South of Waterloo City, on Wednesday, June 5, 1878, commencing at 10 A. M. An invitation is extended to all the members in surrounding congregations.

By Order, J. WISE.

DISTRICT MEETINGS.

Northern District of Indiana in English Prairie church, May 9th.

Southwestern District of Iowa, Monroe Co., Friday, April 12, 1878, at 10 o'clock, A. M.

Northern District of Illinois at Shannon, May 21, at 8 o'clock, A. M.

The Annual Conference of the North-eastern District of Ohio, will be held in the Mahoning church, Mahoning Co., Ohio, May 29th, 1878, commencing at 9 o'clock A. M. The meeting will be held two miles North of the town of Columbiana. Delegates coming on the P. Ft. W. & C. R. R. will address Samuel Mellinger, Columbiana, O., or A. W. Longenecker, East Lewistown, Mahoning Co., O., and they will be met the day before the meeting at Columbiana Station. Those coming on the A. & G. W. R. R. will address J. W. Kurtz, Poland, O., and they will be met the day before the meeting at Strather's Station, if due notice is given.

NOAH LONGANECKER, Clerk.

REPORT OF FUNDS.

The following sums were received for building the Brethren's meeting-house in Montgomery County, Iowa:

| | |
|--|---------|
| C. Workman and family, | $1.00 |
| Hickory Grove Church, Illinois, by Jesse Y. Heckler, | 1.00 |
| Macoupin Church, Ill., by D. Vaniman, | 1.31 |
| Licks in Hall, Pa., collected by S. Benedict, | 2.06 |
| Libertyville, Ia., by E. E. Garber, | .25 |
| Montgomeryville, Ill., by J. J. Curt, | .35 |
| Father Creek Church, Ill., by J. B. Tawzer, | 1.15 |
| Wm. Kenberry, Waterloo, | 2.00 |
| Green Mountain, Va., by B. Miller, | 3.00 |
| Total: | $12.12 |

STAS MORRIS,
N. C. WORKMAN.

Selected Iowa, March 13, 1878.
(P. C., please copy.)

W. U. R. R. Time Table.

Day passenger train going east leaves Lanark at 12:25 P. M., and arrives in Racine at 6:45 P. M.
Day passenger train going west leaves Lanark at 2:14 P. M., and arrives in Rock Island at 5:50 P. M.
Night passenger trains, going east and west, meet and leave Lanark at 2:18 A. M., arriving in Racine at 9:00 A. M., and at Rock Island at 6:00 A. M.
Night and Accommodation Trains will run west at 12:10 A. M., 10:50 A. M., and east at 12:10 A. M. and 4:45 P. M.
Tickets are sold for above trains only. Passenger baggage check connection at Western Union Junction.

G. A. SMITH, Agent.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK.

"Behold I Bring You Good Tidings of Great Joy, which Shall be unto All People." — LUKE 2: 10.

Vol. III.

Lanark, Ill., April 4, 1878.

No. 14.

The Brethren at Work.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY

—BY—

J. H. MOORE & M. M. ESHELMAN.

—:O:—

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

| | |
|-----------------|-----------------|
| R. B. MILLER, | LABOGA, IND. |
| J. W. STEIN, | NEWTONIA, MO. |
| D. FANJMAN, | VIOGON, ILL. |
| D. B. MENTZER, | WAYNESBORO, PA. |
| MATTIE A. LEAK, | URBANA, ILL. |

WE SHALL BE LIKE HIM.

WE shall be like Him! O beautiful thought, We shall be like Him, and like Him we'll talk After the sorrow, the weep and the tears, We shall be like Him when Jesus appears.

After the conflict in peace to sit down,
After the cross to be wreathed with the crown,
After the dust and the soil by the way
With him and like him forever to stay.

Never again shall the throbbing head ache,
Never again shall the beating heart break,
Never the task drop from wearying hands,
Nor the feet ever fail in the brightest of lands.

Never shall sin with the trail of its shame,
Shadow love's sunlight, nor chill its clear flame;
Savior, oft grieved in the house of thy friends,
Ne'er will we wound thee if earth's frail life ends.

Death! this dear thought does away with thy sting,
Makes us triumphant to meet thee and sing,
"Glory to God," when the Jordan is passed
We shall go home and be like him at last.

Master, alas, thee we've often denied!
When the world scorned, we have shrunk from Thy side,

Yet blessed Jesus, Thou knowest Thy love,
Pardon and help us with grace from above.

When Thou appearest, O, rapturous thought!
Well may our souls into rapture be wrought,
We shall be like Him when this life is o'er,
Wound Thee, offend Thee, deny Thee no more!

Selected by IDA KINGERY.

CHURCH ORDER.

Brother Bishop:—

MANY of the brethren who have heard you present the rules of the church to those being received into the church, have a desire that you publish the formula in the columns of the BRETHREN AT WORK. Will you do so, as we think it might be of benefit to others?

Fraternally,

D. L. MILLER.

The above was presented to our notice some time ago, but as time and other duties forbade, the subject has been neglected until now. And even now the matter is rather lengthy to place before our readers; but as it is of general interest, we feel that it will at least command the attention of many. We have no regular formula, though use the same each time, and to all. After inviting those who are to be immersed forward on the front seat, before the entire congregation, we lay before them the rules of the Gospel as follows:

You are here to-day desiring admission into the body of Christ, and as there are requisitions in the Gospel with which you will be expected to comply, we deem it prudent to fully acquaint you of them now, that in the event of your unwillingness to bow in submission to the full Law of grace, you can withdraw until such time as you can accept the Lord in all things; humbly and meekly bowing to His Divine will. Then, as servants of the Lord you are to give and take counsel, under all circumstances according to the Gospel.

We learn from the Gospel that we are not to swear, neither by heaven for it is God's throne, nor by the earth for it is His footstool; nor by our heads for we can neither make one hair white or black, but we are to let our conversation be yea and nay, for more than this is evil. What others do is nothing to us, only to follow our great Teacher in all things, under all circumstances. Shunning all oaths before courts of justice or in private. When as it sometimes occurs we are called before the tribunal to testify, instead of swearing we simply affirm, which God hath placed in the hands of our rulers to allow. If we cannot speak the truth without swearing, we should not talk at all. You will find the law recorded in Matt. 5: 34, 35; James 5: 12.

Again we hear the Master say, concerning the character of His followers, "My kingdom is not of this world, if it were, then would my servants fight." And "If a man smite you on one cheek, turn the other also." And again, "Pray for your enemies, do good to those who persecute you and say all manner of evil against you." And if we do this we certainly cannot go to war or engage in minister or warfare. I have often thought if two contending armies, came together to battle, all claiming to be Christians, and each knelt down, pray to God for victory; then prepare for action, and at the moment of presenting arms, the voice of Jehovah would sound as of old in every ear, saying, "Brethren love one another." What would be done? Would they go on and slay one another, or drop their guns and clasp hands, pleading for forgiveness? Don't you think the latter would be the nearest right? This we try to do, serve God and kill our enemies with love instead of the sword.

Again, we hear the Master say, "In secret have I said nothing, and what ye hear in secret, that declare from the housetop," and we are to be unspotted from the world.

In doing this, we, as a people, do not belong to, nor encourage secret societies of any kind, from the fact that all the good found in any secret order is contained in the church. And we hold it as wrong, and inconsistent to go out of the church for good that we have there. Suppose a number of professing Christians come together in the lodge-room and initiate a member into the secrets of Masonry, he a Christian too. Then ringing through the hall would come the command anew, as of old, "SWEAR NOT AT ALL. WHAT YE HEAR IN SECRET, THAT DECLARE FROM THE HOUSETOPS." What would the result be? Masonry would be exposed or Christ disobeyed. This then is God's Law, and whatever man may say and think, it still stands unchanged, and will till time is no more.

And again, we learn from Romans 12, that we are not to be conformed to this world, but transformed by the renewing of our minds. To do this, our entire life must be changed. We will not talk as the world does, or swear, or blaspheme, or steal, or lie, or backbite, or engage in following the fashions as the world does. Following the apostle, and instead of ornamenting the body with gold and costly array, we ornament the character with holiness and good works. The characteristics of the church are plainness and non-conformity in all things. Christians cannot dress like the world in fashionable attire and please God, neither can they appear filthy and command His praises; but dress modest, comfortable, and neat, that our appearance will be a light and encouragement to the world to love and serve God.

Again, we read in first Corinthians, chapter eleventh, the head of the man is Christ, and the head of Christ is God. Every man praying with his head covered dishonors his head, that is dishonors God; but every woman who prays or prophesies with her head uncovered dishonors her head, or man, and indirectly dishonors God. The act that man does in honor to God in worship, is to uncover his head. The act that woman does is to cover her head. When man uncovers his head to pray the woman is to do the reverse, either cover the head or leave the covering on. But remarks some one, the hair is the covering. Then every time man prays he is to have his hair shaved off, and the woman is to let hers grow; but Paul says, "If she be not covered, let her also be shaven, that is, if she will not cover her head let her finish her disedification and shame by being shorn, for the idea is that it is just as much shame in God's sight for a woman to pray to God uncovered, as it is in the sight of men to be shorn or shaven. But he adds that nature teaches the hair to be a covering, doubtless admitting arguments of some in his day, who took advantage of the liberties the Gospel gave to women in that day, and appeared before men unveiled, and as an argument justifying their act said, "That nature teaches that the hair is given for a covering." Paul admits that nature teaches the hair to be a covering, but adds if any man is contentious (about what nature teaches), the church of God has no such practice.

The practice of the church of God is, that the hair is not the covering that is enjoined on women to wear in time of worship, especially as a people of Christ, we practice the same. Then sisters when you come before God in prayer, let it be at noon-time, morning or evening, in the public assembly, or around the family altar, follow the instructions of the man of God, by covering the head in honor to God and Him alone, the brethren the opposite; and this is why we sometimes speak against professing Christians coming into God's house with their hats on. The house was dedicated to the service of the Lord, and, as such should be treated with reverence. Then when you enter the house of the Lord, respectfully uncover your head at the door, and keep it so till you leave the place; this looks more manly if not Christian-like.

One more thought, and then we submit all to your consideration. We do not go to law with one another before the courts of the unjust, as some did in the early church, but according to the instruction of the apostle, when difficulties exist, we arrange them in the church, knowing it to be a shame for brethren to go to law one with another. Now then the teachings are before you, what have you to say, are you willing when you become members of the body of Christ, to follow them out as far as you are able and find them consistent with the Word of God? (Each reply in the affirmative). You each no doubt feel to-day that life is bright before you, that you are strong in the faith of the Gospel, and a holy life will be easy to live. But I want to tell you that feel as you may, there are great difficulties ahead; storms and trials that will be hard to overcome, troubles await you in future life that you do not dream of now. A life of righteousness is not all flowers or peace; here it takes continued watching and praying; but beyond all these trials, are great joys,—everlasting life and eternal rest. May the blessing of the Father rest upon you, the grace of the Son attend you, and the comforting presence of the Spirit be with you now and in all life to come. To-day we meet in the congregation of God's people on earth forming this covenant, and it is my humble prayer that it may be followed faithfully till death, and then when all our crosses are over here, we will meet in the union of dear ones above.

Now to the church we turn and say, take thine, I give them to you to-day, not as my converts, but the Lord's, for they are His. Treat them kindly and gently, and at last fathers, when you are gone, they will remember you with tender drawings and labor on till the welcome will come to them: Servant, it is enough, come up higher.

May God bless all, and administer to us an entrance into the silent land in peace, and at the resurrection wear a home in the mansions of love, among the redeemed and sanctified when all toil and care will end, and vanities cease, free from a world of sin and sorrow, we come Father Son and Holy Spirit forever and ever. Amen.

S. H. BASOR.

EFFECTS OF EDUCATION.

BY S. Z. SHARP.

EDUCATION does not enable the true minister of God to preach a new faith or doctrine, it only enables him to present that doctrine in a clearer light or in a more forcible manner. If the Word of God is the "sword of the spirit," then education gives skill to the hand that wields it, and makes the strokes more effective. This fact is recognized by our church, for scarcely is a young man of considerable literary ability received into the church, and the members satisfied that he is sound in the faith, when he is almost invariably called to the ministry, and yet the cry is everywhere, "Send us ministers," "Send us able ministers."

When our faith is assailed by our enemies, we always send for our best educated ministers to defend us in public debate, even if we have to send several hundred miles.

When some one assails us through the press, then his productions are sent to our ablest writers to be reviewed; thus showing that we must have educated men among us. Our cause suffers without them.

Education does not create new powers, but it makes those we have more available, no matter whether we guide the plow, wield the saw, cure the sick or preach the Gospel. It takes the man that makes the most out of him.

COMMENDATORY.

BY E. J. BLOUGH.

I AM glad that there are still some who dare to raise an alarm and have courage enough to meet that treacherous foe on the open field in a formidable manner. Oh! how very true it is that the church and the world look and act so much alike, that from all the evidence men can gather, it is simply impossible to distinguish to which a good many belong, of both sexes. In some localities it even looks as if the church and the world had elected a compromise, saying to each other if you will let me alone I will let you have your way, while the Scriptures say, "Come out from among them and be ye separate." Some so-called church members are so completely swallowed up by the foolish and ever changing fashions of the world, that if kindly told about these inconsistencies, they will say, if I would exchange my clothes for those of humbler style, would that make me any better at heart? would I not be just as I now am? In answer to such we say, let them lay off inconsistencies and wear only becoming apparel and study their Bible diligently, and above all else pray like David did, "Lord create in me a clean heart, and renew a right spirit within me," and they will soon experience such a change of heart as will bring about a disgust for the vanities and superfluities of the world.

How very true that remark made by a brother a few years ago in the State of Colorado, it remaineth forever true, that the outward is significant of that which is within. Brethren on the walls of Zion stand firm.

You cannot easily restrain pride without a conflict. You cannot expect to go through life without bearing burdens. But you are going to have help under the circumstances that will redeem you from these things. You are going to experience more victories than defeats. Your suffering will only be here and there—little spots in a whole field of peace and joy.

Words are little things, but they strike hard. We utter them so easily, that we are apt to forget their hidden power. Fitly spoken, they act like the sunshine, the dew and the fertilizing rain, but when unfitly, like the frost, the hail, and devastating tempests.

BOOKS OF THE BIBLE.

OLD TESTAMENT.

In Genesis the world was made by God's creative hand;
 In Exodus the Hebrews marched to gain the promised land.
Leviticus contains the law, holy and just and good;
Numbers records the tribes enrolled, all sons of Abraham's blood.
 Moses in Deuteronomy proclaims God's mighty deeds;
 Brave Joshua into Canaan's land the host of Israel leads
 In Judges their rebellion oft provoke: the Lord to smite;
 But Ruth records the faith of one well pleasing in his sight.
 In First and Second Samuel of Jesse's son we read;
 Ten tribes in First and Second Kings revolted from his seed,
 In First and Second Chronicles see Judah captive made,
 But Ezra leads a remnant back through princely Cyrus' aid.
 The city walls of Zion, Nehemiah builds again;
 While Esther saves her people from plots of wicked men.
 In Job we read how faith will live, beneath affliction's rod,
 And David's Psalms are precious songs for every child of God.
 The Proverbs like a goodly string of choicest pearls appear;
Ecclesiastes teaches man how vain are all things here.
 The mystic Song of Solomon exalts sweet Simon's Rose;
 And Christ, the Savior and the King, the rapt Isaiah shows.
 The warring Jeremiah apostate Israel scorns,
 His plaintive Lamentations their awful downfall mourns.
Ezekiel tells in wondrous words of dazzling mysteries;
 And kings and empires yet to come Daniel in vision sees,
 Of judgment and of mercy Hosea loves to tell;
Jacob describes the blessed days when God with man shall dwell
 Among Tobit's herdsmen Luca received his call;
 And Obadiah prophesied of Edom's final fall.
Jonah crushes in a wondrous type of Christ our risen Lord;
Micah pronounces Judah lost, in Christ to be restored;
Nahum declares on Nineveh just judgment shall be poured,
 A view of Chabloc's coming down Habakkuk's vision give;
 And Zephaniah warns the Jews to turn, repent and live
Haggai wrote to those who saw the temple built again;
 And Zachariah prophesied of Christ's triumphant reign.
Malachi was the last who touched the high prophetic chord,
 Its final notes suddenly show the coming of the Lord.

NEW TESTAMENT.

Matthew and Mark and Luke and John the holy Gospels wrote
 Describing how the Savior died, His life and all He taught.
Acts show how God the Apostles owned with signs in every place;
 St. Paul in Romans teaches us how man is saved by grace.
 The Apostle in Corinthians instructs, exhorts, reproves,
Galatians shows that faith in Christ alone the Father loves,
Ephesians and Philippians tell what Christians ought to be;
Colossians bids us to live to God, and for eternity.
 In Thessalonians we are taught the Lord will come from heaven;
 In Timothy and Titus a bishop's rule is given,
Philemon marks a Christian's love, which only a Christian knows;
Hebrews reveals the Gospel, prefigured by the law.
James teaches without holiness, faith is but vain and dead;
 And Peter points the narrow way in which the saints are led.
John in his three Epistles on love delights to dwell;
 And Joh gives awful warning of judgment, wrath and hell.
 The Revelations prophesies of that tremendous day,
 When Christ, and Christ alone, shall be the trembling sinner's stay.

—Selected.

THE CHRISTIAN HOME.

BY J. S. MOHLER.

"IN my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you" (John 14: 2).

The above words of our Savior are full of comfort and consolation. Christ had been with His disciples about three years, teaching them the way of life and salvation; but the time of His departure drew near. He told His disciples that it was expedient for them that He should go away; this filled their hearts with sorrow. They wanted to go with Christ right away; could not endure the thought of being separated from Him whom they dearly loved. Christ, in order to comfort them, uses the cheering words of our text. While the above words were cheering to the disciples, they are also cheering to us.

Our condition in life is such, that we have no real home. We have places we call our homes, but we cannot enjoy them long. Our homes on earth may be adorned with everything that is pleasing to the eye, and our tables may be crowned with the choicest blessings of earth, and like the rich man, we may be "clothed in fine linen and purple, and fare sumptuously every day." But we must leave all these comforts of earth and pass away. In the above words Christ promises us a home that is

EVERLASTING,

A home that we can enjoy forever. "A kingdom which cannot be moved" (Heb. 12: 28). "To an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away" (1 Peter 1: 4). "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things have passed away" (Rev. 21: 4).

To obtain a mansion in this life is more than most people are able to do. A great many persons are too poor to obtain even an ordinary home. But not so with this heavenly mansion. The poorest man or woman on God's footstool can have one of these mansions as well as the rich. In fact the riches of the wealthy will do no good in obtaining this heavenly mansion, but are rather in the way. "How hardly shall they that have riches, enter the kingdom of heaven," says Christ, from the fact that their hearts and affections are upon things that are earthly, to the almost utter neglect of the true riches. In this life the poor are generally neglected by a proud, fashionable world, as well as a popular Christianity, as unworthy their notice or association. It matters not how virtuous the character of the poor may be; the simple fact of being poor is enough to disgrace them in the eyes of an unregenerated people. In consequence of this, they are often deprived of the conveniences of life; and sometimes of its actual necessities. But while the poor are often neglected, if they are obedient to the precepts of Jesus, they stand higher in favor with God, and one day will be vastly richer than the proudest monarch that ever reigned on earth. "They shall shine like the sun in the kingdom of their Father." "All things shall be their's, and they Christ's, and Christ God's." When the poor beggar was in Abraham's bosom he was ten thousand times richer than the rich man, at whose gate he lay, ever was in this life. "We shall be heirs of God and joint heirs with the Lord Jesus Christ."

Naturally when persons intend purchasing a home, especially a mansion they are very particular to examine

THE TITLE

to see whether there might not be some incumbrance on it, and if so, to have it removed. This applies well spiritually. We should carefully examine our title to this heavenly mansion. For it is only by complying with certain important conditions given by Christ that we obtain a good title. "Blessed are they that do His commandments that they may have a right to the tree of life and may enter in through the gates into the city" (Rev. 21: 14). Again, "teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you" (Matt. 28: 20). Again, "And hereby we do know that we know Him if we keep His commandments" (1 John 2: 3). "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter the kingdom of heaven; but he that doth the will of my Father which is in heaven" (Matt. 7: 21). A wilful neglect, or disobedience to any of the precepts of Jesus, seriously affects our title. Peter tried this once in a precept that thousands of professors of to-day are too proud to observe, and he came near losing his title (John 13: 8). As soon as Peter saw what he would lose he was obedient at once. Would to God that all professors when they find themselves delinquent, would manifest the ready obedience of Peter; we would have less schism and division than we now have. It is only when we render a ready obedience to the commandments of Christ that "We can read our title clear,

 To a mansion in the skies,
 And bid farewell to every tear,
 And wipe our weeping eyes."

Naturally when persons cannot pay in full for their homes they sometimes give

A DEED OF TRUST,

as security for future payment. This may do naturally, but it will not do spiritually. When a professor of religion frequents the saloon or gambling table, he is giving the devil a deed of trust on his heavenly mansion. Or if he swears or uses filthy language, because no members of the church are present, he is giving the devil a deed of trust. Or if he neglects prayer, or his attendance at church, or indulges in unholy thoughts, he is simply giving the devil a deed of trust, and unless he redeems his character soon, the devil will for he is a cruel, unmerciful tyrant, and will not give one hour's grace,—like a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour. Judas sold Christ secretly, but the devil sold Judas out. And Ananias and his wife sinned secretly, but the devil sold them out; as well as many thousands of others since that time. It has been said, "Give the devil his dues," but be careful, there ain't much duhina. It is only by constant vigilance that we can keep our title free from the devil's claim. "Resist the devil and he will flee from you" (James 4: 7). "What I say unto you, I say unto all watch" (Mark 13: 37). "Above all, taking the shield of faith whereby we may be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked" (Eph. 6: 16). "Bringing into captivity every thought unto the obedience of Christ" (2 Cor. 10: 5). By a constant use of the weapons of our holy warfare, we may become more than conquerors through Him that loved us and gave Himself for us.

SELL HIM OUT

Again it is customary for all the members of a family to meet occasionally at the old homestead, to have a FAMILY REUNION,

a good social time, when the best, fresh, new dainties of earth crown the board, and all present enjoy themselves much in each other's society. We are sometimes in fancy carried back to the days of our childhood, and imagine we see the

OLD HOMESTEAD

with all its surroundings—the orchard, the meadow, the spring; the rippling stream, the family mansion, its doors, its windows, its rooms—the family circle, as they gather around the family altar, our kind parents reading from the sacred pages of inspiration; the rich treasure of God's Word.

How painfully pleasing the fond recollection of youthful connection and innocent joy. When blessed with parental advice and affection surrounded with mercy, with peace from on high I still view the chairs of my father and mother, and those of their offspring ranged on each hand and that richest of books which excels every other.

The family Bible that lay on the stand,

But alas! these happy scenes of childhood have passed away, never to return. The family circle is broken. Some of its members have passed over Jordan's stormy river; others are in a far distant land. One by one its members are passing away. How appropriate the following lines:

You scenes of tranquility, long since have we parted,

My hopes almost gone, and my parents no more,
 In sorrow, and sadness, I live broken-hearted,
 And wander alone, on a far distant shore.

In sorrow we turn away from our earthly home. We think of the cheering words of Christ, "In my Father's house are many mansions." We think of that when all the members of God's family will be reunited. In fancy we also picture in our minds our future home—our heavenly mansion, the holy city, the new Jerusalem, with its beautiful foundations and walls adorned with all manner of precious stones, its pearly gates, its golden streets, its beautiful river, that maketh glad the city of God. Its stately tree of life that stands in the midst of the paradise of God, its beautiful scenery adorned with Sharon's lovely rose, that never fades.

HEAVENLY REUNION

Before the morning stars were born,
 It bloomed on heavenly ground.

Its fair climes where

"The drapping cloud is chased away," where no flashes of vivid lightning are seen, where no fearful thunders roll, where the dark and threatening clouds do not lower, where no fearful storms and tornadoes come, where no wintry winds sweep over the land, where darkness is forever banished, where they need not the light of the sun, stars or of the moon, nor of a candle; but the the Lord God and the Lamb are the light thereof, where the noon-tide of glory eternally reigns. We think of the hearth of that home; where there is no sickness, no sorrow, no crying, no pain, nor death, where grave-yards are not needed, where we can say, "Oh death where is thy sting, oh grave where is thy victory?" Where we shall bloom in the vigor of immortal youth, where the family circle will never be broken, where we see our dear Redeemer, "The chiefest among ten thousand, and the one altogether lovely, whose head is as the most fine gold. His cheeks are as a bed of spices, as sweet flowers, His lips like lilies, dropping sweet-smelling myrrh," who will gird Himself and welcome us all home to enjoy the marriage-feast of the Lamb. When we thus (though feebly) contemplate our future home,— desire to be there. Like the apostle, who desired to be absent from the body and present with the Lord, which was far better. Patient Job after experiencing many of the troubles and disappointments incident to this life, says, "I would not live always." "Oh that I had the wings of a dove I would fly away and my soul would be at rest." Again, "Looking for, and hastening unto the day of God, even so come Lord Jesus quickly." "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands eternal in the heavens" (2 Cor. 5: 1). In our sorrows and troubles here, we become tired of earth, and often feel to say with the poet:

THE RIGHTEOUS

O land of rest, for thee I sigh,
When will the moment come?
When I shall lay my weary,
And dwell with Christ at home.

THE WICKED

also desire a home in heaven, but are constantly going farther from home. The only way to get home is to get on the way that leads home. We may desire a home in heaven; we may talk about it, we may sing about it; but unless we practically get on the way that leads home, we will never get there. The most unfortunate persons in this life, are those who have no home. There are many of this class called tramps, wandering from place to place, begging their way through the world, and doubtless are often hungry and cold, having no home of comfort to go to. While this is a sad condition in this life; yet the wicked i. e. the homeless in the world to come, will fare infinitely worse, than in this life. It is not only a want of comfort they will experience, but in addition to this, intense suffering in that awful world of gloom and despair. "Where there is weeping and gnashing of teeth, where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched, where the smoke of their torment ascends forever unceasing," where no sanctuary privileges are enjoyed, where the Bible is not read, where the songs of Zion are not heard, where no kind hands are offered to minister to their wants and relieve their sufferings, and not one ray of light shines from Zion's holy hill, but

"On slippery rocks, I see them stand,
While fiery billows roll beneath."

There with the damned in the pit of hell to suffer eternally with all the filth and stink of the human family—the drunkard, the liar, the thief, the murderer, the swearer, the miser, the proud, the whoremonger, and the adulterers,—not one righteous person among them. Who would want to go there? Not one. Yet thousands are on their way, and unless they return, that will surely be their destination. Awful to think, since there is such a good home provided for all, and on such easy terms that all can get one, that men and women will throw themselves away in the service of the devil, for the sake of a little earthly pleasure, and thus forfeit all right, title, and claim to that glorious mansion, they might so easily have obtained. Our object in penning this article, is to stir us up to greater diligence in securing our title unimpaired to that heavenly mansion we need so much when we depart this life. May God help us all to do so, is my prayer.

THE TRULY SAVED.

BY D. P. SAYLOR.

"THOU shalt call His name JESUS, for He shall save His people from their sins" (Matt. 1: 21). The angel of the Lord appeared to Joseph in a dream, tells him that the child, Mary his wife should bring forth, was of the Holy Ghost, and that he should call his name JESUS, because he should save his people from their sins. Saving from sins, and the remission of sins, are two different things (Acts 2: 47). It is said, "And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved." Those who are saved, is the reading of the revised translation. And according to Clark this is the true rendering. He says, "Though many approved of the life and manner of the primitive Christians, yet they did not become members of this holy church; God permitted none to be added, but those who were saved from their sins and prejudices. The church of Christ was made up of saints; sinners were not permitted to incorporate themselves with it." Is not this the true design of the church? How can she be the body of Christ, if made up of sinners? But was it not Christ's mission to save sinners? Yes, to save them from their sins, and when so saved, adding them to the church is an easy matter; it is a consequence which follows being saved from sins. A reformation in repentance saves from continuing in willful sins. Ceasing to do evil, and learning to do well; forsaking evil ways, and unrighteous thoughts, is saving from sins. They who are saved from pride, find no more pleasure in the society of the proud; they who are saved from vanity, have no pleasure in the society of the vain. If saved from unbelief, they feel it unequal to be yoked with unbelievers; and so through all the ramifications of sins.

The saved from sin are no more of the world, the world knows them not; they seek the church, the soul's asylum, and are added by baptism in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of the sins committed before they were saved from sins or sinning. Their sins are a dead body on the soul, and must be, and in baptism are remitted. The church made up of such, is holy, and is the salt of the earth, and the light of the world, all will speak the same thing, and there will be no divisions among them, but are perfectly joined together in the same mind, and in the same judgment. And we are justified in saying that all the saved from sins are to be added to her.

The great effort of the age, is to add numbers to the church, while the effort to save from sins is very feeble. The Savior said, of some that they compassed sea and land to make one proselyte, and when they had made him, they made him two-fold worse than the child of hell than themselves. Brethren, Tremble when I see, and hear how things are going with us. Numbers! Sinners! seems to be the raging mania of the age in which we live.

To save His people from their sins; the Lord employs helps. Among these is, preaching the Gospel. It is the power of God unto salvation to all them that believe. But the Gospel must be preached to edification, and to comfort. The understanding must be instructed and the mind enlightened. The people must be taught that God is holy, and to be with Him, they must be holy; they must be taught that God is pure, and that the pure in heart only will see God. They must know that they must follow peace with all men and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord. To preach the Gospel, is to proclaim that every transgression and disobedience is sin, and that no sinner can enter into the Kingdom of God.

Another help is, the godly parental instructions. Parents can bring up their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, so as to be saved from many sins, by never having fallen into them. In olden times parents brought up their children for the Lord, and when they grew up they were readily added to His church. But now many of the children of Christian parents are leaders in pride, fashion and extravagance; and if added to the church at all, the parents plead for them to be received as they are in their sins; and hence the degeneracy in holiness and the grievous departures from the land-marks of the holy fathers in the church.

PAPER READING.

BY JOHN H. B. K.

IT is strange indeed that in this enlightened nineteenth century that any should oppose the publication and circulation of a religious newspaper; especially when said paper is devoted to the dissemination of the precious truths of the Gospel, as they themselves profess to believe them. But I am sorry to note such is the case, and that among the brethren, yet more, among those who are commended to be examples to the flock.

Whenever I hear those who profess to be the followers of Jesus, expressing themselves in antagonistic terms upon any measure that has a tendency to spread the story of the cross far and wide, I am almost constrained to believe that they are afraid heaven will get too full, that no room will be left for them.

Not long ago I heard a preacher's wife say, "We don't take the Burman's vi Work, nor the Primitive Christian, don't believe in reading the uninspired literature of the day; think folks had better be reading the Bible, or going to meeting, instead of reading the papers so much." Now I have not a word to say against reading the Bible, for I am confident there is too little of it done among the Christ-professing people, to say nothing about others; but I have serious doubts that those who do not read the religious periodicals, read the Bible any more than those who do; and I am satisfied that many will read the paper who never read the Bible, and thus are, as it were, unconsciously led to a knowledge and love of the truth, and obedience to Christ; a most happy result that might have never been accomplished without the papers. But, say the paper opposers, "Let them go to meeting, and there hear the Scriptures explained." Yes let them! I am willing to let them, but they won't do it. Unfortunately, some of our pulpits are occupied by very deficient preachers; their sermons, (if sermons they might be called), being neither edifying nor entertaining.

I don't wish to be understood as speaking reproachfully of those who are called upon to preach, and are not able to do so; but I look upon them as the result of the minority system of electing ministers; a system that I deprecate in the strongest possible language, —and as long as fifteen or twenty, may chance to elect a preacher, in a district of one hundred or more members, this state of affairs, must inevitably continue; and the unfortunate ones, who are thus forced to undertake what they are altogether unqualified to do, having neither the education nor inclination, necessary to become successful ministers, should enlist our most ardent sympathies in their behalf, instead of calling forth our contempt and abuse.

But just as long as our pulpits are so inadequately supplied, so long our papers, which are edited by those who are generally able to discern between the chaff and the wheat, and give to the public only such matter as is in consonance with the Gospel, and intended to enlighten the honest searcher after truth, must and will rank higher, in the important work of expounding and promulgating the Word of God.

Again, if all our preaching were unexceptionally good, it would not essentially lessen the necessity for a good religious journal in every family. There have been no better means introduced for the instruction, and moral elevation of our children, than to place before them an interesting paper every week, filled with new and wholesome matter, printed in a simple and attractive style, with beautiful large type as is found in the Burman's vi Work. The children find much in the papers every week to interest them, and draw their minds into holy channels; and the impressions thus made, often form the foundation rock of a future life of usefulness and piety. And what are the articles in the papers other than sermons, written sermons; and if it is good to listen to oral sermons, why should not the reading of written sermons be equally as beneficial? But I am aware that those who oppose the publication of religious papers, belong to a class that would like to adhere to the old catholic dogma, that the interpretation of the Scriptures belongs only to the priesthood; but the papers are open to all who feel like contributing to their pages; and the articles selected for their columns, are selected upon their merits, regardless of who wrote them; thus giving us of the laity a chance to express our sentiments on different subjects.

Now to all who oppose the papers upon this, or any other hypothesis, I will say, let us lay aside all prejudice, and jealousy, and work together for the advancement of the Master's cause, and the enlargement of Zion's borders in any way that we can accomplish the most good, and God will certainly bless us.

A TASK FOR A SKEPTIC.

A SKEPTICAL student once informed Dr. Wayland that he had been unable to discover any internal evidence that the Old Testament was inspired. "For instance," said he, "take the book of Proverbs; certainly it needed no inspiration to write that portion of the Bible; a man not inspired could have done it as well; indeed, I have often thought that I could write as good proverbs myself."

"Very well, my son," was the quiet rejoinder of the professor; "perhaps you can. Suppose you make the experiment; prepare a few proverbs, and bring them to the class to-morrow."

It is unnecessary to add that the young man felt he needed a little inspiration to accomplish the task thus challenged and imposed. Such gentle reproof proved far more powerful than a learned argument on the evidences.—Bible Banner.

Nothing is more plain than that the happiness and prosperity of God's people lie in whole-hearted obedience and devotion to Him; yet nothing is so difficult for them to learn.

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE, M. M. ESHELMAN, EDITORS.

Bro. S. H. Basson is duly authorized, by us as our traveling correspondent and agent for the Brethren at Work and will receive subscriptions for the same at our regular rates. All business transacted by him for our office, will be the same as if done by ourselves.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent post-paid, to any address in the United States or Canada, for $1.50 per annum. Those sending ten names and $15.00, will receive an extra copy free of charge. For all over this number the agent will be allowed 10 cents for each additional name, which amount can be deducted from the money, before sending it to us. Money Orders, Drafts, and Registered Letters may be sent at our risk. They should be made payable to Moore & Esheleman.

Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed:

MOORE & ESHELMAN, Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., APRIL 4, 1876.

Those of our readers who have called for the address of H. Holloway will, this week, find it among "Gleanings."

It is said, that 1,500 clergy of the Established Church of England have signed a protest against war with Russia.

For the want of time the Querer's Department has been neglected. We will now give it more attention, and hope to soon get through with the pile of queries now on hand.

INGENIOUS once remarked to a lady, that he did not know any good that Christianity had ever done. She aptly replied, "It kept you from being governor of the State of Illinois."

In compliance with the request of many, Bro. Bashor has written out his method of laying the order before the applicants. Our readers will find the article on first page of this issue.

"WHILE in this ever-changing scene below, Where thorns and roses both together grow, How sweet to look upon the precious flower, And thus forget the thorn with all its power."

The price of the BRETHREN AT WORK from now till the end of the year is $1.10. Names are still steadily coming in, and we hope to add considerably to our list yet. See your neighbors—may be they would like a religious paper.

It would be a good idea for the clerk of each district to send in the names and addresses of the missionaries set apart for missionary work, that those isolated from the churches may know whom to address when writing for ministerial assistance.

In answer to Bro. Owsly in No. 12 whether there are any brethren in Cowley Co., Kansas, we are informed that L. E. Frickeft, T. Hoover and James Boyd, all get their mail at Winfield, Kan., and there is a church ten miles South-east of the same place.

SCHEMPLER COLFAX, formerly Vice President, is said to be not only opposed to war, but a temperance man, and one who never used tobacco. If all the leading men of our nation would set that good an example it would certainly be of lasting benefit to the rising generation.

AS immense amount of rain has lately fallen in Jerusalem, thus flooding the streets with water. The land seems to be returning to its former beauty and fertility, for it was once "a land of brooks of water, of fountains and depths that spring out of the valleys and hills" (Deut. S: 7).

ONE hardly knows what will turn up in China yet, for it has been shown that they understood the art of painting long before it was dreamed of in Europe, built suspension bridges centuries ago, and now it turns out that they bored artesian wells long before they were thought of in this country.

A FAITHFUL servant who has endured much for Christ's sake writes us follows: "We have no good news to write you this time. There is not that love and union among us that there should be. We have our troubles here and many difficulties to overcome. I don't nound the sculls and scorns of the world, for this we may all expect, but we are sometimes made to weep by the unkind words and actions of those who profess to love and serve the Lord Jesus Christ." Christ says, "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another," but it is evident that where there is much trouble and great difficulties that but little genuine love exists; it certainly does not abound as it should. In the absence of love—true Christian love—there is no true religion, no salvation, no promise of life everlasting. We need not fear the scoffs and ridicules of the world—the unfaithfulness and hypocrisy of professing Christians are the mighty weapons of the enemy. It is not that which is from without that does the harm, but that which is from within.

DAVID NEGLEY of Farmington, Ill. says, "I just returned home from a visit of over one week in our own church district. Myself and Bro. Wm. H. Carrier held thirteen meetings at different places, with good order and attentive hearers. One applicant for baptism and a desire for more preaching."

The political condition of things in Europe, up to time of going to press, is alarming. England has called out her reserve forces and Russia is seemingly getting ready for a bloody conflict. Should war break out it may be expected to be a long and bloody one, and may, before ended, involve nearly all Europe. Russia and Turkey seem to be on good terms, but England is not satisfied.

The late Pope, Pius IX left property to the amount of $20,000,000. Thousand, tens of thousands of persons, with hunger and nakedness staring them in the face, send him money while he lived in ease and splendor. Such is the work of poor, deluded mortals—work that is lost, no person made better for the life to come.

A PREACHER by the name of Ellis was preaching in the Friend's church at Andoy, Ind., on a recent Sunday, and lost the thread of his discourse in the middle of it. He at once informed the congregation of his dilemma, and asked if any brother or sister could tell him what he was talking about. Some one in the house came to his aid and put him on the track again. This must have been a case of too little thought.

The Electric Lights, now being used in certain parts of Paris, are causing great excitement in that city. The light is said to be many times greater than the common gas-light and much cheaper, and will therefore do away with the gas lights altogether. Paris has decided to adopt its use. The inventor is an exile from Russia, and has spent many years perfecting his method.

For the benefit of those in Southern Illinois, who live isolated from the church, and want preaching, we give below the names of the four traveling missionaries in that district: Joseph Hendricks, Cerro Gordo, Pratt Co., Ill.; Jas. R. Gish, Bonmoke, Woodford Co., Ill.; David Wolfe, Liberty, Adams Co., Ill.; Daniel Vannman, Virden, Macoupin Co., Ill. They are all ordained elders.

From all accounts it would seem that very few, if any, of No. 9 reached our subscribers in Pennsylvania. We are unable to account for this mistake, as the papers left the office in good condition. It is more than likely that the sack containing the Pa. mail was lost somewhere on the road and did not reach that State. We are now out of that No., therefore cannot fill any further calls.

ALREADY the good results of the Stein-Ray debate are beginning to be manifested, thus showing that the catena doctrine of Christ, when properly set forth, must end in good to the saving of souls. God grant that while we have time and place to labor, we may do so to the honor and glory of God. Follow the "old paths" that lead on and on to eternal rest, and the benefit shall be ours and the praise and honor our Father's.

WE purpose giving more special attention to the productions of our contributors, and allow them more room in the paper than formerly. They have favored us with a number of good articles which shall be published just as fast as we can find room for them. They come in good play during the Summer season, when our contributors do not have time to prepare many articles. Those whose articles have not yet appeared will have patience; we will commence on the pile at once.

"The churches at Rome are—the Waldensian, the Free Church, the Methodist, the Episcopal Methodist, the Baptist, the American Southern Baptist and 'The Brethren' in all seven."

We clip the above from the Christian Index of March 14th. It will be observed that there is a church in Rome entitled, "The Brethren." We have written to several parties in Rome, to learn more about those people and the Waldens-

es. "Hope to be able to lay something before our readers in the future, concerning "The Brethren" at Rome. There were many Brethren there during the first century, but persecution soon drove them to the mountain fastnesses. We would rejoice to hear that the primitive practice and simplicity have found their way into Rome during the last few years of religious liberty.

AN exchange aptly says: "All things are possible to those who live and work by faith. 'One shall chase a thousand, and two shall put ten thousand to flight.' No church ought to despair of success because of the smallness of their number. If they are one in spirit, united in love and labor, and forsake not the assembling of themselves together for worship and the study of God's Word, the Lord is with them and for them, and sometime they will be built up. There can be no mistake about this, for the 'promise of God remains sure.' His word cannot fail. 'Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom.'"

BROTHERS and sisters, read the touching appeal of Bro. Hansen; and may the Lord grant you all grace and sympathy to extend some practical aid. Truly our Danish brethren and sisters have many severe trials. Perhaps their afflictions are means to try our love and devotion for God knows how to try us when we prosper. It will do us no harm to take this view of their trials, and give our brethren and sisters some of that which the Lord has given us. "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof." Shall His needy children have a little of the "fullness" with which all of us are blessed? Or will we withhold and lose in the world to come? These are serious matters, and not one of us can afford to jeopardize our chances for eternal glory. But let us give as giving unto the Lord, and not unto men. Then our Father will reward.

WORK AND PREACH.

THE hard times seem to be affecting the minister's salary materially in certain localities, and some of them go unsupported. Of course this is hard on that class of people, but then why can they not learn to work a little. Preachers were made to work as well as other people, and thus not only help to earn their own living, but set a good example for others. It evidently is not right that preachers should bear all the burden and the laity go free, but all can help and work together. The man who won't preach simply because he is not paid for it has very little of the old apostolic religion left in his heart. In order to pure Christianity we want the church composed of working men and women, and preachers who are neither afraid nor ashamed to work. Of course we do not refer to those who are devoting all their time to the ministry, but to those who preach but two or three times a week. The idea, that it takes a well educated man six days to get up matter enough for two half hour sermons is rather a bad comment on the ministerial talent.

IN SECRET.

WHY do men desire to do things in secret,—things that concern mankind in general? The answer to the desire will no doubt be the correct answer to their doing it. Do you know that sia makes a man selfish? makes him continually seek his own welfare in preference to others? It does.

Do those who believe or practice Free-masonry get more in this life than a real Christian? Does not a Christian receive food, raiment, blessings of civil government and the benefits of trade and commerce? Does a Free Mason receive more? True he may receive more wealth at times, but does he receive more happiness? Not at all! for his getting may not be of the farest kind, then the enjoyment is more or less marred.

You, my friend, who belong to a secret order that practices things that should not even be named in public, are you doing your family justice? Why should you leave your dear wife, your loving companion at home alone, deprived of your company, while you revel in the secretaries of the lodge? Is not your cherished companion entitled to your evenings, and especially those which are devoted to lodge work? Have you no sympathy for her in her trying moments? and do you know that one of her severest trials is the fact that you belong to a society which has sworn you not even to reveal its work to your own flesh? Ah! sir, you make her heart bleed; you cause the shadow of sadness to come over her; you do to her what you would hardly be willing to tolerate in her. Should she go each week into a closed room, and stoutly maintain secrecy, your feelings would be aroused; you would feel that due respect was not shown you; ah! you will feel the bitterness of her acts and the sadness of death would more than once steal over you. Turn those feelings over to your loved companion and then know that they are in her breast just as they were in yours.

You say there are "benefits" that will accrue to your wife in the event she outlives you. Present benefits, of a temporal character, are much better than the prospective ones. The money you expend in the lodge, if put at compound interest, would go far towards a "benefit" in future years; and besides this your wife would have the pleasure of your company at least once a week, and be saved the pangs of sorrow and remorse.

Will you, then, husband, enroll yourself on the side of freedom, and dare to do right, though all men would enslave you? And you young man, keep your feet out of the trap. Be a man; fear God, obey Him, follow Him, and you will be sure of an immortal crown, eternal life, God bless the women whose husbands have been caught in the meshes of secretism.

M. M. E.

THOSE NINE PROPOSITIONS.

THE following nine propositions, or assertions, are clipped from the Baptist Battle Flag. They are kept as standing matter, and though they do to fill up with, yet contain very little solid truth. They were written by Mr. Ray. The matter in fine print is his, and the answers in coarse print are ours:

As we expect to commence our series of letters on Baptism next week, we will only repeat the following facts, which Mr. Stein did not deny, for our Tanquer friends to consider:

1. It is a fact, that no example in classic Greek can be produced where the Greek verb baptizo means more than one submersion.
2. It is a fact, that no example in sacred Greek can be produced where the word baptizo means more than one submersion.
- Why did Mr. Ray not tell his readers that Bro. Stein produced no less than seven Greek lexicographers and grammarians, who affirmed that baptizo was a frequentative verb, and meant to dip repeatedly, and that he, during the entire discussion could not produce one saying that it was not a frequentative verb? It was simply seven against nothing. Why did he not tell his readers that?
3. It is a fact, that there is no mention of "trine immersion" in the Bible.

Why did he not tell his readers that Bro. Stein proved that the commission, in Matt. 28: 19, taught trine immersion so clearly that it took 500 years before a man could be found saying that it taught a single dip, and that man was from the dark regions of popery? Why does he not tell his readers that when the commission was analyzed according to the laws of language, in both the Greek and English, and shown to teach trine immersion, that he (Ray) would not touch the argument during the entire discussion? Of course he does not want his readers to know that.

4. It is a fact, that not one of the four apostolic fathers mentions "trine immersion."

Why does he not tell his readers that it was shown conclusively that single immersion is not mentioned by any writer till after the middle of the fourth century, and that every historian of antiquity, without one single known exception, who describe the first and primitive method, state that it was the three-fold immersion?

5. It is a fact, that there is no mention of trine immersion in the literature of the world, whether sacred or profane, till about the commencement of the third century.

Why did he not tell his readers, that Mr. Ray in his book on Baptist Succession said, that trine immersion originated with the Catholics in the third century, and that in the discussion he had to admit that it was practiced as early as the close of the second century, thus proving that the groundless assertion made in his book is untrue? Why did he not tell his readers, that during the entire seven days' discussion, he failed to find one case of single immersion within one thousand miles of Jerusation, before one thousand years after the death of Christ, while Bro. Stein proved that during the three first centuries of the Christian era, trine immersion was the only known method of baptizing in existence? Why does he not tell his readers, that neither he nor any other man in America can find one case of single immersion before the middle of the fourth century, when it was invented by Eunomius, a heretic?

5. It is a fact, that when "trine immersion" first made its appearance in church history, it was associated with infant baptism, infant communion and a swarm of other traditions.

Mr. Ray says that Tertullian was the first writer to mention trine immersion, hence where it first made its appearance in church history. Will he please name the page where Tertullian associates "infant baptism and infant communion" with trine immersion? Why don't he tell his readers that when single immersion first made its appearance in the fourth century it was administered into the name of the Lord Jesus only, and not "into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," as commanded by Jesus Christ? Why does he not tell his readers that his backward single immersion is not yet 400 years old, and that the best Baptist historians in the world admit it to be a human invention? Why don't he tell the people that his method of baptizing with one dip in the three names, was invented by a pope, and was never practiced by the martyrs of Jesus in the early centuries?

7. It is a fact, that "trine immersion" was regarded by early church writers as only an apostolic tradition.

Instead of telling his readers that trine immersion rests alone on apostolic tradition, why does he not tell them that, during the discussion at Newtoma, Bro. Stein produced not less than five ancient Greek writers who say that the Greek commission teaches trine immersion, and offered to give them all up, if Mr. Ray would produce just one ancient Greek writer who said the Greek commission taught single immersion? Then why does he not come out like a man and say that he did not, and could not, produce one single author of antiquity saying that the commission sustains his single dip? Why does he not tell his readers, that, at the point of authority there were five saying that the Greek commission teaches trine immersion and not one against it?

8. It is a fact, that "trine immersion" can be traced only through the Romish and Greek Catholic churches, up to about the beginning of the third century.

Instead of publishing to the world that "trine immersion can be traced only through the Romish and Greek Catholic churches," why does he not tell his readers that during the debate Bro. Stein proved by the best authority in the world, that all the old so-called Baptist churches prior to the twelfth century, practiced the three-fold immersion? Why don't he tell the people that he refused to name one Baptist church, prior to the twelfth century, that practiced single immersion, though requested to do so? Why does he not tell his readers that neither he nor any other man in America can name a Baptist church, beyond the twelfth century, that practiced backward single immersion? And why does he not publish to the world that neither he nor anybody else can trace the Baptist church with its backward single immersion, beyond the twelfth century?

9. It is a fact, that no Tunker church ever existed till the year 1708, when Mr. Mack and seven other Pedobaptists got lots for an administrator, and having received three ships, they organized themselves into the first Tunker church known to the world.

Why does he not tell his readers that these ancient churches whom he and other historians of like faith, call Baptist, practiced trine immersion, feet-washing, the Lord's Supper and the Holy Kiss? Why don't he tell them that they would not go to war, and would not take oaths, but were in their faith and practice as much like the Brethren as they could be? Why don't he tell his readers that Bro. Stein proved, giving book and page in every instance, that these ancient martyrs, whom Baptist historians call Baptist, resembled the Brethren throughout?

When he publishes these things to the world along side of his propositions, then he will give the people a chance of seeing how little solid truth there is in his assertions.

J. H. M.

We had quite a snow here last Saturday; something unusual after such fine weather.

QUERIST'S DEPARTMENT.

Questions touching the meaning of Scripture, relating to History and practical subjects of religious interest will come in place. The querist's name must accompany all communications. We shall labor to avoid giving any just occasion for strife and contention over unimportant questions.

WILL you, or some other brother explain, through your paper, 1 Tim. 3: 2? It reads as follows: "A bishop then must be blameless, the husband of one wife." Do we understand by the term "husband of one wife" that a bishop should not get a second wife? or does it mean that he should not have two women living at the same time? I know some who claim that a man who has his second wife cannot be an Elder. If it does not mean the second wife, then does it not follow that some had more than one wife when Paul wrote this letter to Timothy? A BROTHER.

Many different interpretations have been given of this passage, but the most reasonable seems to be the following: Among the Greeks and Romans divorces were allowed for very trifling causes, and hence multiplied to such an extent that it was a very common thing to find several women who had successively been the wives of one man. Men, for trifling causes, obtained divorces from their wives and married others. No doubt some of these characters came to the church, having repented of their sins, yet were not qualified to fill the position of an Elder. It was careful in the selection of Elders that great caution be taken, hence Paul lays down to Timothy what the qualifications of these persons must be, and among them is "the husband of one wife." 1. He should be a married man—a man of experience in the family. 2. Should not be one of those persons having divorced wives, for the changing from one living wife to another is proof that the man has not sufficient depth of character and stability to take care of the church.

The passage evidently does not prohibit an Elder from marrying a second time, provided his wife be "grave, sober, and faithful in all things," but on the contrary, we regard it as being rather commendable and calculated to cut off occasion of reproach. As we have in course of preparation a series of articles on the election and qualifications of church officials, we make no further comment at present.

Is it right for a minister to settle up his accounts on the Lord's day? Give us your opinion on the subject. J. H. R.

We object to ministers settling up their accounts on the Lord's day for the following reasons: 1. It does not show that respect for the Lord's day that a true minister ought to have. 2. He who does so is not "blameless" as all ministers should be. 3. It is setting deeds of darkness rather than light before the world. 4. It indicates that man is not satisfied with what secular business he can do in six days, but must use part of the seventh. 5. It is calculated to lessen, and finally destroy the religious solemnity that should pervade each heart during that day. 6. Its tendency is to render those who do so still more and more worldly-minded. 7. If the custom should once become prevalent it will cause the saints to neglect the assembling of themselves together, and 8. For ministers to do so, is setting a bad example before the people. We understand that they should be examples to the flock, but if the flock follows their example, and settle accounts on the Lord's day, instead of it becoming a day of worship it will finally degenerate into a day of secular business. I have known worldly men to think too much of the Lord's day to transact business on that day, and my impression is, that except our righteousness exceed the righteousness of those outside of the church we stand a very poor chance for either heaven or life everlasting. Brethren, especially ministers, should not settle up accounts on the resurrection day. Set a good example.

Brethren, Please let me know whether there is any record in history, by which we may prove that Christ was buried upon His face, as a criminal, by his friends as a death-penalty? Please answer through the BRETHERN AT WORK.

ESQUIRE.

I know of no such record in any work. If any of our readers do they will greatly oblige us by furnishing us with the evidence.

The question is intended to have some bearing on the mode of baptism by supposing that baptism is to be performed in the likeness of Christ's burial instead of His death. "Know ye not, that so many of us were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death" &c. (Rom. 6: 3, 5). Christ's death took place upon the cross, where He bowed His head and gave up the Ghost. The English Baptists supposed that baptism should be performed in the likeness of Christ's burial, hence thought of their own way of burying on the back, therefore commenced practicing the backward immersion and from them it found its way to the Baptist churches of America, but from the beginning it was not so.

In Acts 16: 6 we read, "And the young men arose, wound him, and carried him out, and buried him." Also verse 10, "Who were these young men spoken of in these two verses?" A PITHUR.

It is not distinctly stated just who they were, but I am of the impression that the Jews had among them a class of men whose business it was to bury those having no one to look after them. These young men being present when Ananias dropped dead, took immediate charge of him and attended to his burial. On returning to the same place they found another ready to be carried out and buried. From the narrative we would infer that they were well acquainted with the business and knew just what steps to take in case of sudden deaths. In climates like that of Palestine it is necessary that persons be buried as soon after death as possible, and hence the necessity of men to attend to such cares.

Please give your views on Gen. 4: 15: "And the Lord set a mark upon Cain, lest any finding him should kill him." Was that mark visible? A PITHUR.

Cain was the first murderer on earth, and the Lord determined that he should live, and be a living, walking monument of His disapproval of such a high crime, and hence "set a mark upon Cain, lest any finding him should kill him." This "mark" to Cain was a sign that no one should kill him, and was to others a token of God's abhorrence of murder. It is fruitless to endeavor to ascertain what the mark was, but doubtless it was a visible, indelible brand of infamy, which would make him known to all whom he chanced to meet. He was a walking, living and visible advertisement of God's wrath.

Brother James Quinter, in his defense of trine immersion, in reply to Elder Adamsen, page 31, admits that single immersion was practiced in the latter part of the second century, but in his "Origin of Single Immersion" shows that it originated in the latter part of the fourth century. Will you please harmonize? SAMUEL SYLA.

It has been supposed by some that single immersion was practiced by Praxeas, a heretic who lived near the close of the second century, but the conclusion need not necessarily be inferred from the facts in the case. Those who contend so strongly for single immersion do not like to claim Praxeas as their brother, and hence never refer to him as proof of the antiquity of their practice. Bishop Beveridge shows that Praxeas and his followers, in the close of the second century, baptized into one only, viz. Christ who died for us" (Clergyman's Vade-Mecum, Vol. 2, p. 25). His baptizing into but one name is what has caused some to infer that he practiced single immersion, but it is not regarded as a fact, but simply an inference. Had we time to give the evidence in the case it could be shown that Praxeas and his followers did not use single immersion unless they were, by the force of argument driven to it to sustain their theory of but one person in the Trinity. This might have been done, though there is no record of it.

Regarding the origin of single immersion, all ancient historians who have written on the subject, state that it was invented by Eunomius near the middle of the fourth century. This is the fact in the case and is not to be upset by an inference to be drawn from a theory held by the heretics of the second century. An admission that Praxeas and his followers did practice the one dip method is not to be regarded as evidence in the case, but is simply an inference that not even the lovers of the one dip will defend. Taking the facts into consideration there is no contradiction in the two statements.

J. H. M.

A MAN who was taking two papers, one a religious paper, and the other political, concluded that times were too hard for two papers, so he stopped the political and kept on with the religious. That man knows what is good for himself and family.

SATURDAY NIGHT.

Hard Times.

A MINISTER, who during his extensive travels, heard much of the hard times, especially when he asked people to subscribe for a religious journal, relates his experience about as follows:

"Some two years ago I visited and held a series of meetings for a well-to-do congregation. They had all of this world's goods that hearts could wish for and enjoyed life well. While among them I heard not one word about hard times—they all had plenty to eat and wear, and with their good possessions and commodious homes seemed well satisfied.

Last Winter, by request, I called on them again and spent pleasant seasons of worship. But things were somewhat different, they were not so well contented, but talked a great deal about hard times. I asked them to subscribe for a religious journal, but they plead hard times, and the same when asked to aid in the missionary work. I concluded to look around and see where the hard times were. I saw their farms were in as good condition as two years ago, and in fact some of them much better. Their houses were just as good, and if any difference a little better. I saw no hard times there.

I then went to the meeting-house and watched the teams as they drove up. The horses were just as good as two years ago. Some of them that used to have plain harness, now had silver-mounted ones. Their carriages were much better than two years ago, many of them much more fashionable. I could see no hard times there.

Then I went into the meeting-house and found that the members dressed just as good as they did two years ago, and in fact some of them dressed a good deal finer. I saw just as many ruffles, feathers and ornaments as I did two years ago. I could see no hard times in the meeting-house. The members were not one bit plainer than they were two years ago, if any difference they were a little finer.

I concluded that the hard times must be at their homes, so I went there. I noticed that the old carpet they had two years ago was removed and new costly carpet in its place. The old furniture was not there any more. Its place was filled by that much more costly and beautiful, and even the pictures on the walls were changed. Think I surely there are no hard times here.

Then I went into the dining rooms. The tables were furnished just as well as two years ago, and in fact with more expensive diet. There were fine cakes, fine pies, sweetmeats, and in short, enough to kill any dyspeptic. I concluded that there were no hard times in the dining rooms.

I walked into the sitting rooms to search for hard times. On the table I found "Harper's Weekly," "Harper's Bazaar," "New York Weekly," "The Ledger" and the county papers, but not one religious paper. Here was the hard times; it had struck the religious papers, had effected the Master's cause. They had no money for religious reading, but plenty of it for secular papers. No money for the spreading of the Gospel, but plenty of it for new furniture, costly pictures and silver-mounted harness. Yes, I found the hard times at last. It had struck religion; Christ's cause must suffer and sinners go to destruction because of hard times."

Thousands will read the above on Saturday night. We ask you to take the lesson with you to the meeting-house, to your homes, your dining rooms &c., and see whether there is not more truth than poetry in it.—J. H. MOORE.

THE Roman Catholic Church has purchased a tract of 7,000 acres of land within nine miles of Chase City (Virginia), and propose to colonize and educate the freedmen on the industrial farm plan. While other denominations are wrangling over their differences the Catholics are quietly working to get the control and influence of the four million blacks in the South, and thus gain a stronger footing in America. Unless Protestantism makes greater exertion in the future than it has in the past, it will be called on to face stern realities when it is too late. From a secular stand-point the Catholic project is a good one for the blacks, but calculated to add numerical strength to the Catholic church.

In some of the New England States Mr. Moody is called "John the Baptist." It is evident that he has very little use for the Jordan. It is said that John the Baptist baptized in Enon because there was much water," but modern critics say he went there that the people might be supplied with water for their horses and to drink. Well, the crowd that Mr. Moody draws needs water for animals and to drink; why does he not go where there is much water?

The Home Circle.

READ AND OBEY.

"Husbands, love your wives."
"Wives, obey your husbands."
"Children, obey your parents in all things."

SUNDAY MORNING.

Looking Into the Bible.

WHAT a grand subject we have this morning! Here is the Bible—the Holy Bible, the Book that has come down to us through many centuries—the Book that has been kept safe and preserved through dark and benighted ages.

The first we learn is about this wondrous earth upon which we live, the stars, sun, moon and the creation of this vast globe. We look again, and find that we are sinners. Then once more we see God calling a faithful old man and telling him to build a mighty ship.

We look again and see, in the course of time, a numerous people. They conclude to build their way up to heaven, hence make brick and take slime for mortar, and go to building a tower.

Next we see good old Abraham called, then Isaac and Jacob and finally reach the point where poor Joseph was sold. O what cruel brothers, yet the Lord knew how to turn their evil in good channels for His people.

Next we see good old Abraham called, then Isaac and Jacob and finally reach the point where poor Joseph was sold. O what cruel brothers, yet the Lord knew how to turn their evil in good channels for His people.

THE LOST BOY.

ABOUT eighteen hundred years ago a child was born. His name was Jesus. We find by reading the Testament, that as this child grew up he had much wisdom, was very smart.

ed and lit upon him. When you little boys and girls become old enough to know right from wrong, do like Jesus did, go into the water and be baptized and you will receive the Spirit.

JOHN L. BROWN.

JOSHUA.

I FIND in the book of Joshua so much good matter for a subject, and so many good examples for us in this age of the world, that I hardly know where to begin.

Joshua was one of the two who found grace and favor with God, through obedience, to cross over the Jordan into the land of Canaan. Is it not sad to think that out of six hundred thousand, only two were obedient, and when they could have made the journey in forty days, it took them so many years?

As I have become a member of the church since my former letter to the children's columns, I hope that I may, as well as all my young sisters who came in the church with me, be found faithful, like good old Joshua, to the end.

ELLY B. BURKEYVILLE.

Tolado, Ohio.

IN PRISON.

DEAR little readers: This Sabbath day I opened the Testament, and began to read of a man that had been shut up in prison, and how he had been bound with chains, lying between two soldiers.

I think the short piece selected by Jennie Myers is very good. Children, read it again; you will find it in present volume, No. 5. Have to read the children's letters, therefore write this to you.

MARY EVERSOLE.

McComb, Ohio.

TRY AND CAN'T DO IT.

CAN'T do it sticks in the mud, but Try soon drags the wagon out of the rut. The fox said Try, and he got away from the hounds when they almost snapped at him.

MY BIBLE.

WHAT is it that can bring delight To my sick heart in sorrow's night, Making the darkness all shine bright? My Bible.

What is it that can yield me peace, When trials, toils and cares increase, And from them all my soul release? My Bible.

What is it teaches me to live, A life of love and to forgive, That I forgiveness may receive? My Bible.

What is it that directs my way To heav'n's high joys and holy day, Driving the fear of death away? My Bible.

It is my treasure, wisdom, light, O may I in it learn to fight The light of faith nor ever slight My Bible. Selected by M. J. EISENHART.

THINK ON YOUR WAY.

TIME, the most fleet of all travelers, is rapidly bearing us away from earth to our home on the other shore. Have any of us forgotten the resolutions we formed when the present year came to us in its snowy whiteness?

Dear young Christians, let us watch and pray earnestly that our deeds be not evil, but that we may do some good in the Master's cause.

There is a cross in every lot, And an earnest need of prayer; But the lowly heart that leans on God, Is happy everywhere.

Ann Windsor, Md.

THE WAY OF THE WORLD.

IT'S a poor, hard-working man trying to pay his honest debt and support his family by honest toil, but "go for him," because he cannot pay you a few dollars he owes.

Help him! He's a rich man, who robb'd a bank or made an assignment, lives in a fine mansion and walks leisurely, enjoying life, while his wife and children are deprived of none of the luxuries of wealth or the enjoyment of society.

Go for him! He's poor, she is trying to pay out for rent with interest, and his hands are hardened by toil—his wife and children feel the pangs of poverty and the tightness of the shoes—he lives in a small house and eats scantily, but it is as good as he deserves—he has no business to be poor nor honest.

THE KIND OF RELIGION WE WANT.

WE want a religion that softens the step, and tunes the voice to melody and fills the eye with sunshine, and checks the impatient exclamation and harsh rebuke; a religion that is polite, deferential to superiors, courteous to inferiors and considerate to friends; a religion that goes into the family, and keeps the husband from being cross when dinner is late, and keeps the wife from fretting when the husband tracks the newly washed floor with his muddy boots, and makes the husband mindful of the scraper and the door-mat; keeps the mother patient when the baby is cross and amuses the children as well as instructs them; cares for the servants besides paying them promptly, projects the honey-moon into the harvest-moon, and makes the happy home like the Eastern fig-tree, bearing in its bosom at once the beauty of the tender blossom and the glory of the ripened fruit.

CHILDREN AT WORK.

Studying the Bible:—I think if I live a little longer and study the Holy Bible more, and commit more verses to memory, I shall be able to write better letters.

Remember the Poor:—One very cold day as mamma looked from the window, she saw quite an old woman, poorly clad, wandering down the street picking up bits of paper, sticks, etc. Thinking she must be very cold and hungry, mother sent Maggie to call her in, and while some food and hot tea were being prepared for her, she told us the following story: "I am a poor old woman. I live in a small room in the third story of an old house, in Penn Village.

Ever since that day she has been coming to our back door for scraps and we never turn her away without being warmed and fed. Now I want all who read this to do something for poor, old Mrs. Lewis. I don't exactly mean that you shall send her clothes and money, but send me a real prayer to our Father, and ask Him to send her a blessing, and I am sure the next time I write I can tell you something of Her.

A Good Suggestion:—I will encourage the other boys and girls to read this paper. There is so much in it about Jesus. I think we children ought to study the Bible so that we can talk together about the Lord.

Yes, There is a God:—I want to be good. My parents say that good girls and boys make good women and men. I go to school. Some of the children say bad words. I tell them, God don't like that; then some of them say they don't know that there is a God.

Let us Love Jesus:—This beautiful Saturday as I am free from school, I thought I would talk a little to the other children about Jesus and His love. Do you ever think of the love He had for children when He was on earth?

Watch and Pray:—I have come out from among the world, and given my heart to Jesus. We have social meeting Thursday and Sunday nights. I love to join in singing and prayer. The brethren speak, both old and young. I love all the brethren and sisters and want you all to pray for me, that I may hold out faithful.

Almost saved is altogether lost.

CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM ENOCH EBY.

OUR VOYAGE.

AFTER spending ten days in London and different other places in England quite satisfactorily to ourselves and seemingly to others, we resorted to Tidal Basin, Victoria Docks, London, on Tuesday evening, the 26th of Feb., where we found all hands busy loading and cleaning the large steamer Elysia, ready to set sail next morning at 7 o'clock. We were however delayed until ten o'clock, when the huge vessel with its 2,000 tons of cargo and only twenty-two passengers, emigration being very slack all through the months of February and March, began to move slowly.

After sailing about two hours down the river slowly, they stopped to repair the compass, which detained them till next morning. Then we set sail again, at six o'clock. The morning was beautiful, but by noon the heavens were black and rain began to fall. The South-west wind began to blow furiously, and by two o'clock P. M. the fog was upon us so dense, that they were again obliged to stop and cast anchor for two hours, when they set sail again, being at this time near Dover Straits, seventy-five miles East of London, and as sailing was extremely dangerous, and the vessel heavily laden, they moved very slowly for two days, till they got out on open sea, and through the entire voyage we were strongly opposed by Euro-dyclon and high sea so that, instead of making the trip in ten or twelve days, we were

SEVENTEEN DAYS ON THE WATER.

Had good accommodations however, paid for second, but were favored with first-class passage. Arrived at New York the evening of the 14th inst., having endured individually about the same amount of sea-sickness as going over.

There were nine first-class passengers, and thirteen fore-cabin passengers, until the thirteenth day, when one was added to the latter-named class, which was christened Elysia, (which means delightful or happiness) by a Catholic priest on board. Had a quiet, moral crew, which added much to our satisfaction, as we are compelled to mingle in society as one family. We had two SEASONS OF WORSHIP.

the second Sunday, (the first Sunday we were too sick and weak) at 10 A. M., and eight P. M., in which all on board of the different classes, officers and hands were invited to participate. Nearly all responded to the invitation and seemed to enjoy the services. After arriving and having our baggage slightly examined, on Saturday morning, the 16th, we, for the first time in five months separated. Bro. D. Fry and wife went to Philadelphia, myself and wife to Mechanicsburg, Cumberland Co., via Reading and Harrisburg, not likely to meet again before the Annual Meeting, if the Lord will.

AT NEW YORK.

We remained with the brethren at Mechanicsburg till Wednesday, met with them three times in worship; on Sunday morning at Mohler's meeting-house; and Sunday and Monday evenings in Mechanicsburg. It is needless to say anything about our enjoyment at those meetings and among our dear brethren and sisters at this place, after the fatigues of so tedious and perilous a voyage; that can more easily be imagined than expressed.

MECHANICSBURG.

with its rich country and beautiful scenery, is densely populated by sociable people, and also many loving brethren and sisters in and around it, give it attractions to our view, and taste rarely found in any other country, and more especially because we formed associations at this place thirty years ago, in the choice of my first companion in life, which will never die as long as that generation remains. But, alas! what a change; many of them are already gathered home to their fathers, and their children in their places. Soon these loved associations on earth will cease, but a happy thought presents itself to our mind at this period, that the church is alive, and the Lord is adding almost daily such as should be saved. Hence the people have a good opportunity of preparing for the associations of the blessed reign of Jesus in the future kingdom.

On Wednesday we came to this place,

MILLERSTOWN.

When we expect to remain for ten days or two weeks, and visit among our friends in the Lost Creek congregation; then go to the upper end of Perry Co., where our aged Bro. Peter Long resides. From thence to Path Valley, to the place of my boyhood. From thence to Tuscarora Valley, back again to this place. Hence our address till the middle of April will be Millerstown, Perry Co., Pa., afterwards we think of stopping at Lewistown, McVeytown and Aughwick, two or three days at each place as may suit best; also one night with the brethren at Huntington, and one night at Altoona with my nephew Jacob Eby. From there to Liberty, Ohio, ten miles West of Dayton, so as to arrive there about the thirtieth or fourth of May. Thence to Lima to the District Meeting of Northern Indiana, and if convenient to the District Meeting in Michigan, so as to be in Northern Illinois by the 18th, ready to meet our loved ones in D. M. on the 21st. This will we do if the Lord will.

ABOUT ENGLAND.

We arrived at London from Hamburg, on Sunday morning. On Tuesday Bro. Fry and myself went to Bath, (leaving the sisters at the hotel) to see Bro. Brinkworth, who then was stopping with his brother near Bath. Remained there two days. Had some conversation together, relative to the Mission in England, its prospects; but as he had had only a few meetings in different places and none in that vicinity, and no place convenient to hold meetings, we returned again to London, without we or the people being profited as much as we would have desired, but in our short interview with Bro. Brinkworth we learned that according to his judgment there are several places where good could be done; and that, if he stayed in England during the Summer, he hoped to be able to give more satisfaction, as he thought of making still further efforts. May the Lord keep him in the hour of temptation.

Having been previously recommended by Bro. Charles Asquith of South Waterloo church, Iowa, to go to Bradford, about eighty miles North-East of Liverpool, I accordingly set out for that place (Bro. Fry choosing to remain at London) on Friday morning. Arrived at Liverpool and next day went to Bradford. Found the friends according to directions, who received me with inexpressible kindness, and as a natural consequence the unexpected approach of an entire stranger, so peculiar in appearance, being recommended by one who had left that country about twenty years ago, and who is held in good repute among them, at once introduced our mission and its probable results among them, if we were permitted to spend time; but it will be remembered that our arrangements were made by this time to set sail on the following Tuesday; hence had only Sunday to spend with them. Thus we did; going with them some distance in the forenoon to a Wesleyan meeting. In the afternoon at one o'clock went to a large Sabbath-school. By request talked to the children. At two o'clock crossed the street to place of worship, a good congregation in addition to the school being assembled. The Superintendent of the school (friend Butler) being also an Elder in the Primitive church, introduced me to the minister with a request, if agreeable to allow me the privilege to speak, which he seemingly granted with all his heart, and seldom do I feel the liberty I enjoyed there, and meeting being appointed in the evening, he wished me to be present, to which I readily consented, with the understanding he should speak, but when I was through, and he closed with prayer, he arose and announced that I would speak that evening, and that they should turn out and bring their friends with them; consequently had a full house and extraordinary attention. I never had a closer attachment formed in the same time between strangers and myself.

My convictions from my short experience in England are, that good could be accomplished, in course of time; but it would not be the work of a few days or a few months, but of years, and that, by brethren living among them, and placing the light on a candle stick.

There are many in the world, when they hear the Brethren preach, must say, like the Captain on board the vessel: "I never heard the Scriptures explained in that way." Hence all such must have a little time to think, before they can get the consent of their mind to leave their old house and move into another, even if it is better.

Millerstown, Pa., March 22nd, 1877.

From Bethel Church, Kansas.

Dear Brethren:—THE Bethel church has just enjoyed a season of refreshing. Bro. Hiram Fidelity from Burr Oak, Kansas, had meeting on Sunday, 3d of February. Bro. Amos Reed from Republic Co., arrived on Wednesday following, had meetings Thursday and Friday evenings, but the weather being very disagreeable, we had no more meetings until Sunday. Eld. Henry Brubaker and Bro. Price from Beatrice arrived on Saturday evening, traveling all day through a severe snow storm. Sunday evening the house was crowded, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather. As the meetings continued, the interest increased. Had meeting mornings and evenings till Monday evening, the 18th inst.

The brethren spoke the Word with power, and many were made to see the error of their way. Ten gladly received the Word and were baptized. We were made to rejoice to see our neighbors taking the yoke upon them, and we were not alone in our joy, but we believe that the angels rejoiced more over these ten, than over nine hundred and ninety just persons who needed no repentance. May they live near the cross, and finally receive the crown.

We believe that there were those, who are counting the cost, but are too firmly united to the pleasures and vanities of this world to yield obedience to the lowly Nazarene. Oh remember, that there is a time coming when every knee shall bow and every tongue confess. Better do it now.

We believe that the members are all much revived. While the brethren were rightly dividing the Word of Truth, many eyes were made to sparkle and many hearts beat faster in the anticipation of the crown of righteousness that awaits the faithful. We were sorry to part with the dear ministering brethren. May the Lord strengthen them that they may continue to tell the story of the cross.

Our membership is now upwards of fifty. We have four ministers, three in second degree, and one in the first. We also have four deacons.

May the Lord bless your efforts to spread the Gospel and may the pages of the BRETHREN AT WORK be kept pure!

J. B. BRVANT.

From Christian Hansen.

Dear Brethren:—

GRACE, mercy and peace from God our Father, and His beloved Son, our Redeemer, be multiplied to you all.

I shall try to write you a few lines the second time. The first letter sent you by me, was, when I was in prison, where my enemies thought to punish me, but One was with me, whom they did not see. There I received many rich blessings from my heavenly Father. My food for the body was black bread and water; two pounds of bread each day, and a cruck of water. Sometimes I got a salt herring. For twenty days I was glad to receive that kind of food, and the time did not seem long, because our God and our Savior were with me always. My thoughts were continually on Christ's coming when all His children shall be free in glory and all enemies trampled under His feet; for it is just that the Lord alibeth those who alibeth His. O my beloved brethren and sisters, in all of our trials and afflictions here, let us look upon the Rock on whom we build! We shall then soon reach the end of our faith and glory shall be ours.

We are many miles from you, but we cannot forbear to let you look into our severe trials at this time. We are, on account of hard times in this country, without work and without money, and no house in which to find shelter. Soon we will be without food, and we can no longer buy on credit, for the Lord requires us to owe no man anything, but to love him; and this we want to obey, hence cannot put ourselves in a strait so that our holy calling and salvation will be endangered.

O, Brethren, what shall we do? Is there any probability of a helping hand? God can help. But will He perform miracles when His people are full? None of our dear brethren and sisters here, can lend a helping hand as all are poor, and can barely support themselves. My dear companion is sick and suffers much, and it is needful that she have medicine; yet, no money to buy. On the first of May we must leave this house, and where shall we go? Rent must be paid in advance, and we have nothing to pay with, and no work to be had at all.

Here in Broudersley we can get a room, if we had the money to pay rent. The house is tolerably dry and tight, and also near the road, which would suit my business if I can get work—tailoring. The room is small. A bed, stove, table and two chairs in it, will leave one and a half square yards of space. You see we are in hard times.

We sigh in prayer and tears and look to Jesus, that He may put it into the hearts of His children, to lend us a helping hand! O, Brethren, I wish you could for one moment see our condition in this country! There are many poor, yet there is no help from the government. O how glad we would be to get work, that we might help ourselves as you do! We have many thoughts about our deliverance. I also think of the time I was in America, and how hard it was for many poor there, yet they were rich compared to our present condition. We sometimes think it would be better for us to go to America, but we think it is needful to remain and help build up the church, hoping that better times will ere long bless this land. We much prefer to remain here in order to strengthen the cause, for if we leave, those who are now with us, will have a hard time to battle for the cause alone. The prospects for getting more are good, and we feel for all who want to be saved. In this condition, what shall we do?

The houses in this country are built too near the ground, hence there is much sickness. It is almost impossible in these villages to get a dry house. Rooms are damp so much that clothes will mold and decay. And then too the flues or chimneys are so poorly built that in calm weather the smoke will not go through them. All these things we have to contend with.

I have not had any work since New Year. — Our food since that time has been mainly bread and water. I have these things with you. Perhaps your kind hearts will pity us a little. The Word of God and all His promises are with us; otherwise we could not endure. Our days will soon be over, and then we go in peace to Jesus and be at home where want and hunger and suffering will no more trouble us. Jesus himself will wipe away all our tears. Our united love to you all in Christ Jesus!

Your Brother,

C. HANSEN.

Broudersley, Denmark.

REMARKS.—God bless you dear brother and sister. And that you may not suffer, a mite goes out by next mail. O may each brother and sister, who reads your letter forthwith send you and the dear ones in that country some of their abundance. And when they do this, may they all go down on their knees and ask God to give it a safe and speedy journey so that your trials and sufferings may be in a measure alleviated. True some may think if each of us should give a mite, you would get too much. I am not afraid of that. Cautionness among us in a money sense, has become the eleventh commandment. How afraid we are some one will be spoiled! Then we let the suffering suffer on, and at last we fall into covetousness and with this mill-stone, down into destruction we go!

God help us to have pity! O righteous Father touch our hearts, and make them tender for works of love! Some one may ask, "Where or how shall I send?" If a small amount, put in a letter, seal well and address: C. Hope, Hjørring, Wensyssel, Denmark, Europe, or if a large amount, get exchange at any banking-house in Copenhagen. Do not send it to me, but send it to them direct, whether silver, gold or paper money. "It is more blessed to give than to receive." This is the voice of heaven.

M. M. E.

From Wawaka, Ind.

Dear Brethren:—

THE Ark of the Lord is still moving on in our, the Pleasant Mound District. Twenty-one have been received by baptism since last Christmas. My aged father, D. B. Sturgis, held up the cross and told its story with ability in two series of meetings, in which he labored for us and the conversion of sinners.

The result of these meetings were fourteen additions by baptism. Since that time he passed through, and tarrying for a short time, baptized two more. We held two meetings in an isolated point of our district, and as a result our elder led three into the stream and baptized them. Last Saturday and Sunday Brethren James Barton and George Roofner were with us, and two more were made willing to put on the armor of Christ.

Health is good; roads are muddy; members are in love and union. May the Lord be praised for all his mercies.

DR. J. STURGIS.

From Queen Peak, Texas.

Dear Brethren:—

BY permission of the Editors, I will try to answer some of the many questions that are asked me, relative to Texas. In this county (Montague) there are some very nice prairies though they are smaller than in Cook, Grayson, Dallas and other counties East. Through this county there are some very nice streams of water, yet in the hot and dry part of the season, they measurably or entirely go dry. —

There are some good Springs, but as the country is quite new, there are not many wells dug yet.—Of the wells out of which I used water, a majority had good water. There are more living streams in Cook and Grayson counties, but not so much timber. Those counties are longer settled, and some advantages may be found in them that are not here, such as school and church privileges. But land there, is higher than here. In any of these counties land is very low, ranging in price from one to ten dollars per acre, according to location and improvements.

Lumber ranges in price from about $18 to $28 per thousand. As to the prices of horses, cows, hogs, etc., there is but little difference in prices here and the more Northern and Eastern States, that is, for the same grade and quality of animals. But as a general thing, hogs and horses here are of an inferior grade to those North and East, hence lower in price.

As to the idea that land here is hard to cultivate, it is in the main a mistake. The land here scours in plowing just as nicely as in any other country, unless you get the regular black, waxy land, that does not work quite so well, yet the land is as good and productive as any land in the country.

The Northern part of Texas is certainly a wheat-growing country. Wheat looks very well here at this time, and when this land is brought under the same system of agriculture that your lands are, the harvest will be immense. Fruit seems to do well here, especially peaches. Vegetables of almost all kinds do well. It is said however that cabbage and Irish potatoes do not keep as well as in more Northern climes. Yet I think it likely that time and experience will remove that impression.

As to positions as clerks and carriage-making and trimming, many such positions cannot be expected in a country as new as this, yet in some of the larger towns, such as Denison, Sherman, Dallas or Fort Worth, such tradesmen may get plenty of work.

Now, dear brethren, if you want to come to the front and settle down among the pioneers of the Lord's cause in Texas, there are broad acres here, only awaiting the hand of industry to make this one of the finest countries in the Union. But do not come here, expecting to see log, white houses like you have in your native land, but come and buy you a nice piece of the fertile land, and then put up good buildings if you are able. Go to work, and God will bless you, and you will find yourself in a country, where you need not lay by, waiting for a day that is fit to work out, for there are more nice days here than in any country I have ever been.

And when you come, throw out your tobacco on the North side of Red River, before you enter Denison, the Gate City into this great State, and thereby show that you are willing to help bring about that great reform that is so much needed in this country. I do hope and pray that if our sisters come in this smoky clime, they will never suffer themselves to be defiled with that loathsome and disgusting habit of using snuff.—The females in Texas have given way to, or indulged in that abominable practice till they hardly show the color of the Anglo-Saxon anymore. Hence I repeat, do not give way to any such filthy habit, for St. James says plainly: "Lay up all filthiness."

Now I have answered a few of the inquiries about the country, and will yet say, you cannot help but be pleased with the climate here. The people I have found very kind and sensible.—Meet all the people here are new-comers, just like you will be when you come. What I have written is in behalf of Bro. Chambers, as he is very busy like all new settlers. February and March is their busy season for sowing and planting.

A. HUTCHINSON.

From Lime Springs, Iowa.

Dear Brethren:—

I HEREBY wish to say to my numerous friends, that I am well, thank the Lord. I and my wife went to Liscomb, Marshall Co., Ia., on the 26th of Feb., and remained until the evening of the 4th of March. Preached thirteen sermons and had the pleasure of seeing five return to the fold of Christ. Returned home on the 5th. Attended a council meeting in South Waterloo on the 6th; also another council in the Hall in Waterloo City on the 7th.

The 8th, in company with Bro. E. K. Buechly, boarded the train for Benton Co., Iowa. Met the church at their meeting-house in the Big Grove congregation at 10 A. M. of same day. Continued in council all day. Next day met again at 9:30 A. M., and continued until 5 P. M. Then took the train for home. Arrived in Waterloo the morning of the tenth, and attended meeting in the Hall morning and evening.

On the morning of the 13th took the train for the District Meeting, in company with Bro. E. K. Buechly, and arrived at this place in the afternoon. We are now at the home of Bro. John Saddler, one of the ministers of the Root River congregation in Howard Co., Ia. The District Council will commence to-morrow the 15th. I will tell you about the council in my next.

Fraternally Yours,
J. WISE.

Annual Meeting and Church Extension Union.

Dear Brethren:—

WE want the following instructions respected. There will be no provision made for entertaining any at the place, nor in the congregation where the A. M. is to be held, until on Monday, the tenth of June, except by individuals who may invite their friends at their own expense.—We do not want a collection of people here until the time. We are making arrangements with the companies of the two railroads crossing here, for excursion rates and special trains, of which notice will be given in due time.

And as to the meeting of the friends of the Church Extension Union, the following explanation is thought to be necessary. The friends of this meeting will be at all the necessary expense, and none of the money, appropriated for A. M. purposes will be used.

We don't want an outpouring of people from all quarters to this meeting which will be held on Saturday before A. M. with the Ogan's Creek congregation, six miles South-east of North Manchester. Using the language of Bro. Howard Miller, this meeting is more for private consultation, than public demonstration. So we will regard it until other arrangements are made. A prominent ministering brother told me that he would see that money sufficient was raised to defray all expenses, with the understanding that other missionary workers were to be there besides the officers and directors of the Union. Until other arrangements are made, it will be held as above stated.

I suggest that all the workers of this meeting address me with a Postal Card, signifying a desire to be here. This would give us some idea of the necessary arrangements that would have to be made. The Brethren will be met at the trains on Friday, and taken to their lodgings. Then next morning to the meeting, then in the evening to appointments for preaching throughout the country, where they will remain over Sunday, and on Monday morning start to place of A. M.

A. LEIDY,
Corresponding Secretary.

The Bear Creek Church's Bereavement.

BRO. Nicholas Brubaker, died March 3rd, 1878, aged 46 years, 6 months and 11 days. His remains were interred in the Bear Creek Cemetery, attended by a large concourse of people. He was an able minister of the Gospel, was widely known, and his labors highly appreciated. The occasion was improved from 2 Timothy, 4: 6.—He labored in the church as a minister upwards of twenty-one years.

While the services were in progress, a message came to one of the ministering brethren, that another brother had died. This ministering brother afterwards addressed the congregation and made it very impressive. The brother that died, was Isaac Hyer, of Montgomery Co., Ohio, aged 69 years, 5 months and 3 days. Disease, lung fever. The church feels its bereavement very deeply. He was a faithful laborer in the vineyard of the Lord upwards of twenty-four years. He was elected to the ministry in Peter Neud's church.

These brethren will be very much missed. They have not shunned to declare the whole Gospel, and have left behind them many good impressions. To those who have been under their ministry, I would say, remember their counsel and put it into practice.

The latter funeral occasion was improved by Bro. George Holler, Abraham Flory and John Smith from John 14: 13. Since the death of these two brethren, we had the pleasure of seeing five precious, young souls unite with the church. Of the number, two were sons of Bro. Brubaker. May we all so live that we can meet again, and enjoy the rest prepared for the people of God, is my prayer!

J. R. DENLINGER.

GLEANINGS.

From C. Hope.—The church here is in peace and union so far as I know. I saw several of the members last Sunday in meeting, and have heard from others. All that troubles them is hard times, and the worst seems not at hand. I expect to see the most of the members next Sunday in town here. We have had meetings one week here, and shall continue a part of this week.—Many dear souls are still getting nearer the kingdom. My time is divided as follows: One week South of Hjorring (pronounced Yorring). One week in and around town, ten or twelve days North, and two or three days at home, setting things in order. Travel on foot about ninety miles North and South and considerably in other directions. The other officials cannot go along to help, but help here at home. Denmark is a fruitful country for the mission, and all that is necessary is to aid us some for awhile yet, and then it can go on with its own help, and carry the glad tidings into other parts of Europe. But all this will depend entirely upon the action of the Brethren in America. It is in their power to push it forward if they will; if they will not hold the ground, the fault is not ours. God be with you all, and help each of us to continually seek for immortality and eternal life.

Hjorring, Wensyssel, Denmark, March 6.

From A. Holloway.—My address is Sumner, Sumner Co., Kansas. We will just say to all who think of coming to Kansas, you need have no fears of starving, as bread and meat are cheap, and a little money, judiciously handled goes a great ways. The prospects for wheat were never better than at present. We wish you success, dear brethren, who publish the BRETHREN AT WORK.

Sumner, Kan., March 21.

From Naperville, Ill.—Our church is small, compared with some others; but we know that it cannot be judged from our number, whether we are in the faith or not. We have had no accessions by baptism this Winter. Bro. Samuel Labman of Lee Co., was with us last month, intending to hold a series of meetings, but owing to the inclemency of the weather and extremely muddy roads, he made his stay very short, preaching four very interesting sermons. We know that there are some among us who have been made to feel the need of a Savior. O may they not procrastinate. Two of our deacons have left us. By C. H. C. Martin left last October, and located in Neb. Aaron Julius left the 12th of this month and located in Dallas Co., Iowa. By the ties of nature we were loth to have them leave us. May we all be abundantly blessed by our Father in heaven.

March 16.

From the Ogan's Creek Congregation.—We too have had a season of rejoicing and encouragement. Bro. G. W. Cripe met with us on the evening of the 18th of February, preached thirteen sermons. As the immediate result, fourteen of our Sunday-school scholars were baptized according to the Word. They are all young in years, but realize that:

"Youth is the time to serve the Lord."

We hope and trust that this will encourage others to do likewise.

G. LESLIE,
North Manchester, Ind.

From J. S. Flory.—Are having most delightful weather. Grass is coming out finely, the maple and elm are in bloom; in places wild flowers have made their appearance. The Spring birds have come, and all nature seems to rejoice.—Farmers have been unusually busy, putting in their crops for the last month, but there is much yet to be put in. The eighth and ninth of this month, a very severe storm of wind and snow passed over Colorado and further North. In this locality there was but very little snow, but the wind the most severe I ever experienced. Railroads were all blocked up, so that we had no Eastern mail for nearly a week. Many head of cattle and sheep perished, and in some cases human beings. In one case two herders got lost on the plains, and when found were sitting on their horses, froze to death, the horses being in the same condition. They had taken shelter at the base of a perpendicular bluff, the snow piled over on them, almost covering them from sight.—Two days after the storm the weather was spring-like again and has so continued.

March 19.

From Fairview, Ind.—I will send more good news for the paper. I have just closed another series of meetings at Sugar Creek, Tippecanoe Co., Ind., which resulted in the conversion of six more precious souls, making in all eighteen during the two meetings. Others are almost persuaded to come. May the good Lord bless us all.

SAMUEL ULERY.

Pyrmont, Ind., March 19.

DIED.

Obituaries should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and separate from all other business.

LAYMAN.—On March 6th, 1878, sister Polly Layman, consort of Bro. George Layman, in the church in Botetourt Co., Va. Funeral text from Revelations 14: 13.

B. F. MOONAW.

WHITMORE.—In the Welsh Run arm of the church, Pa., February 23, 1878, Bro. David Whitmore, aged 80 years, 10 months and 29 days.

WHITMORE.—In the same congregation, March 11th, 1878, sister Mary Whitmore, aged 37 years, 10 months and 1 day.

WHITMORE.—In the same congregation, March 20, 1878, sister Polly Whitmore, aged 65 years, 9 months and 23 days.

The above were all out of one family, the father, mother and the sister,—all were taken away in less than one month's time. Truly, when we are in the midst of life, we are in death!

G. W. BRICKER.

INTERESTING ITEMS.

—The Chinese seek every opportunity to emigrate to this country, notwithstanding strong and organized efforts are being made to dissuade them.

—The Gazette de St. Petersburg, considers immediate war with England, preferable to concessions, and calls for the occupation of the Dardanelles by Russia.

—The drought is causing alarm in the Hawaiian Islands. The entire crop is partially destroyed on the Island of Maui, and stock is dying for want of feed.

—The Cholera is sweeping off the pilgrims to Mecca by the hundreds. It is feared that on their return to Constantinople it will break out in that city, and be productive of much misery.

—Fully one-fourth of the Roman Catholics of the world are, it is said, in America,—North, Central and South.

—The old Charter Oak at Hartford was declared to be at least 950 years old at the time of its destruction.

—A woman has just died in Switzerland, at the age of 114. She leaves two orphan children, daughters, aged respectively 86 and 82.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

NOTICES of Love-feasts, District Meetings, etc., should be brief, and written on paper separate from other business.

LOVE-FEASTS.

At Beaver Dam congregation, Kosciusko Co., Ind., June 6th, 1878.

Four miles South of Waterloo, Iowa, Wednesday, June 5th, 1878, at 10 A. M.

We, the members of the Union church, Marshall Co., Ind., have appointed our Communion meeting on the 4th of June, 1878, commencing at 5 o'clock in the evening. Brethren coming on the cars, should stop at Plymouth, Ind., where they will be met on the same day at 12 o'clock and conveyed to place of meeting, five and a half miles from Plymouth.

J. KESLEY.

The Brethren of Winona Co., Minn., intend to hold a Love-feast at their meeting-house, two miles South-east of Lewistown, on the Winona & St. Peter R. R., where all those that are coming by R. R., will stop off. Meeting will be held on the first Saturday and Sunday of June next.

DISTRICT MEETINGS.

Northern District of Indiana in English Prairie church, May 9th.

Southern District of Iowa, Macon Co., Friday, April 12, 1878, at 10 o'clock, A. M.

Northern District of Illinois at Shannou, May 21, at 8 o'clock, A. M.

North-eastern district of Ohio, in Mulhoning church, Mulhoning Co., Ohio, May 29th, commencing at 9 o'clock, A. M.

W. U. R. R. Time Table.

Day passenger train going east leaves Lanark at 12:25 P. M., and arrives in Racine at 6:43 P. M.

Day passenger train going west leaves Lanark at 2:14 P. M., and arrives at Rock Island at 6:50 P. M.

Night passenger trains, going east and west, meet and leave Lanark at 2:18 A. M., arriving in Racine at 9:00 A. M., and at Rock Island at 6:00 A. M.

Freight and Accommodation Trains will run west at 12:10 A. M., 10:50 A. M., and east at 12:10 A. M. and 4:45 P. M.

Tickets are sold for above trains only. Passenger trains make close connection at Western Union Junction.

G. A. SMITH, Agent.

"IT DOTHT NOT YET APPEAR."

It doth not yet appear what we shall be,
When we have laid life's last sad burden down,
But in our visions we may almost see
Our fair estate, the brightness of our crown.

Amid the holy quietude of prayer
Life's great fruition seemeth very near;
We rise above the lower world of care,
And dwell in purer, nobler atmosphere.

Almost we catch the echoes from afar
Of that refrain, whose measure fills the sky;
And thro' the gates of day that stand ajar
We view the many mansions built on high.

And like the exile lone, in Palmos Isle,
Celestial glories greet our wildered eyes;
And in the intervening "little while,"
We almost seize the everlasting prize.

O sweet and mystic consciousness divine!
Indwelling fount of all our joy and peace!
The power hath made our earthly way to shine,
Till evening shadows fall and life doth cease.

O pilgrim, toiling in the wilderness,
Sink not beneath thy burden in the way;
Let comfort minister in thy distress,
And point to realm of glad, eternal day.

Ye fainting ones, grown weary in the strife,
Receive the blessing of the vaulted skies;
Rejoice! for Christ, the author of your life,
Hath given you a kingly place in Paradise.

It doth not yet appear what we shall be
When we with transitory things have done,
But when from sin's dread blighting we are free,
We shall appear in brightness as the sun.

And we shall be like Christ, our Saviour King,
In His all-majestic character complete;
And we His praises evermore shall sing,
And kneel in adoration at His feet.

A fullness of eternal recompense
Reserved for us in the eternal years!
We wait to grasp thy meed in sweetest sense,
And rejoice in heaven what we have sown in tears.

—Selected.

THE CHURCH THE BRIDE OF CHRIST.

BY MATTIE A. LEAG.

"I AM black, but comely, O ye daughters of Jerusalem; as the tents of Kedar, as the tents of Solomon. Look not upon me because I am black, because the sun hath looked upon me; my mother's children were angry with me; they made me the keeper of the vineyards; but mine own vineyard have I not kept" (Song of Solomon 1:5, 6).

The song of Solomon is an epithalamium, of Christ and His church, perhaps no portion of Sacred Writ is more generally misunderstood, than this truly eloquent production. Because of the difficulty of properly understanding this spiritual, nuptial poem, the Jews, it is said, would not permit any one to read it under thirty years of age.

It was written by Solomon, probably on the occasion of his marriage to Pharaoh's daughter. The persons introduced as speakers, are the bridegroom and bride, and their attendants. In that portion which stands at the head of this essay, the bride is introduced as the speaker. She confesses her outward deformity, but is not insensible to her inward beauty. In her outward appearance she compares herself to the rough, coarse, black tents made of felt, used by the Arabs. If we take a retrospective view of the church, if we follow her down the stream of time, and note the reproaches, persecutions, dangers, afflictions, and conflicts which she has passed, when we see the great fight of afflictions which she has had to sustain, the dreadful opposition which she has had to resist, how she has been compelled to set her face as blind against the dominant, and prevailing customs of the world in all ages, how persecution, ridicule, flattery, persuasion, all have been successively employed to draw her from her allegiance, and seduce her into sin, we wonder not that she has been compelled to envelop herself in a strong and rigid panoply.

And how the world has ever misjudged her! Her firmness and fidelity to the truth, have been construed into obstinacy, or stubbornness. Her devotion and zeal for the truth were called a bad and extravagant superstition, thus have the faithful witnesses of Jesus been traduced. By following the church through her checkered history, we can understand the language of our Savior, "If ye were of the world, the world would love its own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." And how often with powerful emphasis comes to our mind our Lord's words, "My Kingdom is not of this world." Paul says, "We are made as the filth of the earth, and are the off-scouring of all things unto this day."

By referring to the early history of the church, we find that the heathen regarded her in just this light. Tacitus, the famous Roman historian, thus speaks of those Christians whom Nero persecuted. "The crime of setting fire to Rome was by him ascribed to those people who were hated for their wicked practices, and called by the vulgar Christian; these he punished exquisitely;" then after describing the horrid tortures to which they were subjected, he says, "Whence a commiseration arose, though the punishments were leveled at guilty persons, and such as reserved to be made the flagrant examples, as if these people were destroyed, not for the public advantage, but to satisfy the barbarous humor of one man."

The early Christians generally suffered under the notion of the worst of malefactors and traitors, and on pretence that by their wicked and execrable charms they hindered the prosperity of the empire. Even those emperors, who were most famed for their singular justice and moderation, treated their Christian subjects as outlaws. All other persons had rights that must be respected, and were entitled to the protection of the law, but those had no rights, no protection of the law.

There entered then, upon the contest, another class of men, who have never since ceased to persecute Christianity. These are those who hold up Christianity to ridicule, and derision. These are persons who look upon this holy system with cold indifference, and the profane, every-day feelings of worldly prudence. From this standpoint, and not knowing anything of the inner workings of the system, they see, or imagine they see, much which serves for the object of their sarcastic raillery. The sacrifices which the true Christian is ever willing to make, his zeal, his brotherly love, his non-conformity to the world, his strict adherence to all the commands and ordinances of the Gospel, are regarded by this class of persons as the very climax of folly and fanaticism. But does not the scoldier draw upon himself the very derision he aims at others, by venturing to pass sentence on the phenomena of a world of which he has not the slightest conception, and which to his eyes, barred, as they are, in the films of the earth, is entirely closed? Though blackened by the smoke of many a battle, though scarred and marred by the long and fierce contests through which she has passed, though outwardly black and homely as the tents of Kedar, yet inwardly the bride is as comely as the curtains of Solomon. Beneath the rough armor, with which she must needs be equipped to prepare her for her arduous struggles with the world, is concealed a beauty, a dignity, a grace, a loveliness that surpasses the brightest conception. David says, "The king's daughter is all glorious within." How does this royal bride differ in this respect from the daughters of the world? It is not so much inward, as outward elegance that the latter seeks after.

But what does this inward loveliness consist of? Christ Jesus is presented to us as the perfect model which we are to imitate, or as Paul has it, grow up into Christ which is the head in all things.

1. He is our pattern in obedience. His own language is, "Lo, I come in the volume of the Book it is written of me, to do thy will, O God." And how often during His ministry on earth, do we hear Him say, "I come not to do my own will, but the will of Him that sent me." In the time of His greatest agony, we hear Him say, "Nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt." He obeyed and carried out the precepts of the law of God in every particular. His command to the church is, "follow me."

2. He is our example in meekness. To His followers He says, "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart." "When He was reviled, He reviled not again; when He suffered, He threatened not; but committed Himself to Him that judgeth righteously. He was oppressed, and He was afflicted; yet He opened not His mouth; He was brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before his shearers is dumb, so He opened not His mouth." Meekness is a trait of character which is very much commended by the sacred writers. Peter recommends this as the true adorning, that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price."

3. He is our example in patience. John tells the Christians of Asia that he is their brother and companion in tribulation, and in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ. Patience is that grace which enables us to bear afflictions and calamities, with constancy and calmness of mind, and with a ready submission to the will of God. All who are conversant with the history of Christ, know how eminently He possessed this grace. The sacred writers very much recommend the acquisition of this holy principle. Paul says, "Follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness," and Peter presents us with another necklace of the richest gems. "Add," says he, "to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity." Truly such ornaments are priceless, and they who are adorned with them are all glorious within. These, and not the outward tinsel of the world, should be the ornaments of Christ's glorious bride.

"Look not upon me, because I am black, because the sun hath looked upon me." The bride begs that she may not be scrutinized too closely, her features scanned too narrowly, she knows her imperfections, she is conscious of her deformities. But why is she black? Because the sun hath looked upon her, because of the dreadful sufferings, persecutions, and afflictions through which she has passed. Job when he describes his awful afflictions, says: "My skin is black upon me, and my bones are burnt with heat." And the weeping prophet, when lamenting the desolation of his country, says: "For the hurt of the daughter of my people, am I hurt; I am black."

"My mother's children were angry with me." How forcibly the last quotation portrays the attitude of the world toward the church. From the earliest history of our race, we learn that the righteous and faithful, have ever been objects of hatred to the ungodly. A persecuting spirit was very soon developed. The first death was that of a martyr. And the same antagonistic spirit has prevailed from that time to this, and has manifested itself at different times in different ways.

The history of the righteous is a confirmation of the apostle's declaration, "All that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." "They made me the keeper of the vineyards." Another declaration which shows the unfairness, the injustice, the unkindness, which the world bears toward the church. The world can mark out the path of duty, of rectitude, of holiness which the Christian should tread with wonderful accuracy.

We often hear them descant eloquently on the shortcomings and imperfections of the Christian. But could not the language of Paul be aptly applied here? "Therefore thou art inexcusable, O man, whosoever thou art that judgest; for wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thyself; for thou that judgest, doest the same things. And thinkest thou this, O man that judgest them which do such things, and doest the same, that thou shalt escape the judgment of God?" (Rom. 2:1-3.) Surely those who know so well how others ought to do, should know how they ought to do themselves. Such persons are their own accusers. Let such know that God is no respecter of persons. He exacts no duties of one class which He does not exact of all, all are equally responsible.

But how common it is for persons to "load heavy burdens and grievous to be borne, and lay them on men's shoulders; but they themselves will not move them with one of their fingers." The complaint of the spouse, "They made me the keeper of the vineyards," might still be the complaint of the church, for how prone is the world to shirk their own responsibilities, by pointing out and magnifying the failures or seeming failures of the professor.

"But mine own vineyard have I not kept." One of the most striking points of contrast between the world and the church, is, that it is almost, if not quite the sole object of the former to maintain a fair exterior, while it is the chief concern of the latter to cultivate truth and wisdom in the inward parts, to have created a clean heart and a right spirit within. Being so busied with this, the spouse has but little time to court the commendation, applause, or flatteries of a fickle world, and because she does not change with the ever-varying standards of an inconstant world, she is denounced as illiberal, bigoted, and narrow-minded; but it matters little what epithets the world may bestow upon her. These accusations can do her no harm, but the following rebuke is applicable to her enemies: "Who art thou that judgest another man's servant? to his own master he standeth or falleth" (Rom. 14:4).

But the indications are that this mortal conflict between truth and error will soon terminate in a complete and perfect triumph of the truth. Soon, it may be very soon, the great Bridegroom will come to claim His bride. Surely it will not be long. The prophecies are all meeting and converging. Soon the great cry will be heard echoing and re-echoing through the caverns of the earth. "Behold the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him." Surely then the church shall lay aside her sable robes, she shall then have beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness (Isaiah 61:3). "Then shall she be clothed in royal robes, she shall be brought into the king in raiment of needle-work, and presented unto her glorious Lord as a chaste virgin, a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing; but holy and without blemish."

THE TRIALS AND TRIUMPHS OF FAITH.

BY B. NEWBY.

FOR ye see your calling brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called" (1 Cor. 1:26). In the history of King David, his trials and persecutions, we have the above text and subject illustrated. I will first notice his obscure birth-place, Bethlehem, as being little among the thousands of Judea, being too insignificant to be mentioned among the other cities of Judea (John 15). It was here that King David was born, and is still more sacred as the birth-place of the King of kings, the blessed Saviour of whom he, David, was an eminent type. Such was the wonder-working providence of God at that eventful period in the history of the Israelites; the career of King Saul was soon to end, his disobedience to the divine commands, has caused the forfeiture of his crown. "I have rejected him from reigning over Israel," was the declaration of God to the prophet Samuel, "Fill thy horn with oil, and go. I will send thee to Jesse the Bethlehemite; for I have provided me a king among his sons." David being the youngest son of Jesse, and the last and best in the estimation of his father, and the prophet, to be made king, when Samuel saw Eliab, he said, "Surely the Lord's anointed is before him." But the Lord said, look not on his countenance, or the heights of his stature, because I have refused him, for the Lord seeth not as man seeth, for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart." Again, Jesse made seven of his sons to pass before Samuel, and he said the Lord hath not chosen these; are here all thy children? and he said, there yet remaineth the youngest, send and bring him, and when he came, the Lord said, arise, anoint him; for this is he. And the Spirit of the Lord came upon David from that day forward (1 Samuel 16: 1-14). From this time on, we may safely infer from the sacred narrative, that David and his kingdom began to increase and gather strength, and Saul and his kingdom to decrease and get weaker, so also did his trials and afflictions increase, as the opposition and persecution increased and raged through Saul.

Soon after Saul was engaged in war with the Philistines. The champion Goliath, said, "I defy the armies of Israel this day, give me a man that we may fight together. When Saul and all Israel heard these words of the Philistine, they were dismayed and greatly afraid." On David's arrival at the camp, he learned the circumstances respecting Goliath, and expressed a wish to engage with him in contest. "And David said to Saul, let no man's heart fail because of him, thy servant slew both the lion and the bear; the Lord that delivered me out of the jaws of the lion and the bear, will deliver me out of the hand of this Philistine." "And David said to the Philistine, thou comest to me with a sword, and with spear and shield; but I come to thee in the name of the Lord of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, whom thou defiest; for the battle is the Lord's." A noble example of trust and faith in God, and a beautiful type of the efficacy and triumph of faith over all spiritual enemies. Hence, Paul exhorts the Ephesians, to put on the whole armor of God; "For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strong-holds." Again he says, "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities and powers; against the rulers of the darkness of this world and spiritual wickedness in high places" (2 Cor. 10: 4; Eph. 6: 12). So David through faith in God triumphed most gloriously over his enemies the Philistines; he is called by Saul to give an account of his family, and that day he was introduced into the favor and friendship of Saul, and entered upon all the dangers and perils of public life, that day he gained much fame, much honor. He also got one of heaven's best blessings—a true friend, Saul's son Jonathan, "whose soul was knit with the soul of David, and Jonathan loved him as his own soul." It was a heart-felt sympathy and ardent love that never wavered, but grew in strength day by day, till death separated them from each other on earth, and now it is perpetuated in richer perfection in heaven.

What a blessing to earth true friendship is. It is a relic of Paradise, come down to us from amid the ruins of the fall. It is a treasure possessed when it is not employed; a reserve of strength, ready to be called into action when most needed. Here is nothing more touching in poetry or eloquence, than David's lament when his friend died (2 Samuel 1).

DAVID, THE ROYAL PROPHET AND TYPICAL KING.

In this two-fold relation in the life and history of King David, I will try and illustrate somewhat from the Scriptures and brief extracts from eminent authors. From the Scriptures we have it clearly revealed, that David and his kingdom betterly, to which he was called and chosen by the Lord, and the consequent trials and persecutions that followed, is typical of Jesus and the Spiritual Kingdom He came to establish in the hearts of His followers, and the consequent trials and persecution that generally follow (Luke 1: 32-33; 2 Samuel 7: 12, 13). We come now to consider David as in adversity (a state generally more secure and safe, than one of ease and prosperity, as will appear from the sequel), and passing through the deep waters of affliction. After the achievement of the overthrow of the champion of the Philistines, he is taken into Saul's household, one of his chief captains. This strange man prophesied great friendship for him, but it proved very deceptive. The triumph attended the armies of David, and the still stronger hold which it gave him on the affections of the people, awakened and rekindled afresh the jealousy and malignant passion of Saul; and David has to flee from his presence, and can find no rest from his inveterate enemy anywhere. Well may it be said, "jealousy is as cruel as the grave." Alas! how uncertain are earthly honors. The great deliverer of Israel, has now to flee from the habitation of men and hide himself in caves of the earth. How does he stand these trials? For the most part of his time his trust is firm in God, and he triumphs over his trials; at other times he appears weaker in the faith, and has doubts and fears, saying, "I shall one day perish by the hand of my enemy." But thus it is with us all; there is a constant struggle going on, the flesh pulling one way and the spirit of truth the other; now faith prevailing and then unbelief till we seem like two different persons at different times.

According to the influence prevailing, we will next notice David in his typical and prophetic relation in the different books of the Bible, and the Psalms in particular, what is historical, as it relates to David and the Jewish church, is often typical, and so prophetic as it relates to Jesus Christ and to His church, either militant or triumphant, while David is describing his own enemies' sufferings and triumph. The Spirit enlarges his sentiments and swells out his expression to a proportion adapted to the character of the Messiah, of whom David was so eminent a type, that our Saviour is often especially described in the Scripture by His name (Is. 55: 3; Jer. 30: 9; Ezek. 34: 23; Hos. 3: 5).

During his exile, a circumstance occurs that shows the forgiving spirit of David. Saul is chasing him among the mountains, has gone into a cave and fallen asleep. In that state David found him and had it in his power to take his life. To this, he was tempted by many strong inducements; but he nobly resisted them all, and only cut off a portion of his enemy's garment that he might know that he had been in his power which happened twice (1 Samuel 24, 26). Thus of the power and triumph of faith, we have many illustrations of this, afforded by his history. Saul had finally driven him from his friends and country, and the Philistines from their camp; the Amalekites had plundered his city; his own people spake of stoning him; but he yet encouraged himself in the Lord his God (1 Samuel 30: 6). But soon after his wanderings for the present are over, and the bright sun of prosperity, coming from under the cloud, shines upon his head, like one said, that always before being called to perform any high and honorable work for God, he is made to pass through severe trials and afflictions of some kind.

David now comes forth from the hiding place, to the throne and the crown. He soon began to make preparations for bringing the ark of God to Jerusalem. It was a solemn procession and had a most important meaning. It was God taking up His abode among them, and as the ark moved on through the assembled throng, amidst shouts of joy, we are reminded of what happened ages after, when God manifested in the flesh, walked in those same streets amid the waving of palm branches, and cries of "hosanna to the Son of David;" about this time David began to cherish in his heart a strong desire to build a temple to the Lord. His faith seems to have grown stronger by the trials through which he had passed, just as the oak grows stronger by the storm that beats upon it. It was not God's design that he should build his house, that honor being reserved for his son; but he was told that in as far as it was in his heart to do it, the Lord accepted the will for the deed. "Thou didst well that it was in thine heart" (2 Chron. 6: 8).

Farmington, Ill.

ON TEMPERANCE.

BY A. L. MARTIN.

TO be temperate in all things, seems a moral, as well as a religious duty. I should say, strictly a Christian duty, for, can Christianity exist in the heart, where sobriety does not exist? No. Hence we say that temperance is one great primary step toward Christianity. If temperance is a primary element of Christianity, (and no one doubts the fact), does it not demand the approval of all Christians? Now, the antagonist of temperance is intemperance, and he exists in our land as large, as high Olympus.

This hourly-headed monster, intemperance, does not assail the poor only; but men of all stages of society are swept down before him. Who then should Christians endeavor to lead aside from this monster's embrace? The youths of our land. Who, ere long, will be called to perform the various duties of this life, which are now managed by older hands? The youths of America. If the young men of our land are soon to occupy all places of honor, trust, and usefulness, does it not become all men and women of influence to prevail on the youth to abstain from the use of all intoxicating liquors? It certainly does. What is a State? Does broad pastures, rich coal beds, fertile valleys, vast forests and large cities, constitute a State? No. These are only facilities, but the people make up the State. What a vast number emigrate within the boundaries of a State?

The rising generation will soon have control of the State, and should not parents strive to have their children grow up in sobriety and usefulness, rather than drunkenness and debauchery? You have seen the youth reeling in the streets. Mothers have wept bitter tears; some have breathed silent, some audible prayers for reform. Reform has come and shaken the whisky traffic almost to tottering, and now Christians lay hold of the monster, and prostrate him while he is tottering. Don't discourage the movement, but embrace it.

Peabody, Ill.

SOUL-SLEEPING.

IS death an unconscious state? No. Else all who die would be unconscious; but Christ died, remained three days in the state of the dead, and was conscious while in that state. Proof: "I have power to lay down my life, and I have power to take it again" (John 10: 18).

Where there is no unconsciousness, there is no voluntary exercise of power. Christ did exert power in taking His life which He laid down; and this He did while dead. Therefore He was conscious while dead; and if Christ was conscious while in the state of the dead, then death is not an unconscious state; hence those who enter that state do not become unconscious.

This one argument I consider decisive; and until it is set aside by logic or Scripture testimony, it is not necessary to multiply words upon the subject.—Christian Standard.

GOOD FOR MAINE.

NEAL Dow, in a letter just published, shows that the assertion that liquor is freely sold in Maine are utterly false. Both parties now support the Maine law. There never was a time when the prohibition to the liquor traffic was more firmly established in the public opinion of Maine than it now is. The original Maine law was passed through the legislature of 1851 by a vote of 86 to 49 in the house, and 18 to 10 in the senate. At the last session of the legislature January, 1877, after an experience of twenty-six years of the result of prohibition, an act additional, with greatly increased penalties, passed through both houses, without a dissenting vote. In Maine there is not one barkeeper known to the authorities. In New Jersey there are five thousand. In Maine there is not a restaurant known to sell liquor. In New Jersey there are 1,380. In Maine there is not a dealer in liquor, unless it be secretly and in violation of law. In New Jersey there are 665. In Maine there is not one brewer. In New Jersey there are 573. In Maine there is not one distiller. In New Jersey there are 43.—Independent.

The Brethren at Work.
PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE, } EDITORS.
M. M. ESHELMAN, }

BRO. S. H. HENOX is duly authorized, by us as our traveling correspondent and agent for the BRETHREN AT WORK and will receive subscriptions for the same at our regular rates. All business transacted by him for our office, will be the same as if done by ourselves.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent post-paid, to any address in the United States or Canada, for $1.50 per annum. Those sending ten names and $15.00, will receive an extra copy free of charge. For all over this number the agent will be allowed 10 cents for each additional name, which amount can be deducted from the money, before sending it to us. Money orders, drafts, and Registered Letters may be sent at our risk. They should be made payable to Moore & Eshelman.

Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., APRIL 11, 1878.

A BROTHER by the name of Workman at Nora Springs, Iowa, wishes us to send him the paper, which we will gladly do whenever he sends us his given name.

We have just received an interesting letter from Bro. Hope. He reports the prospects for building up the church in Denmark greatly increasing. The letter will appear next week.

It is announced that the venerable Cyril, Patriarch of Jerusalem is dead. He was born on the Island of Samos, and became Patriarch of Jerusalem in 1845, being at the time of his death in his eighty-seventh year.

A BROTHER who is very earnest concerning others coming to the knowledge of the truth, writes: "If I were able, I would supply many persons with the BRETHREN AT WORK. As it is I get a little enthusiastic occasionally, and become determined that the old Gospel Ship must move as much as possible with my aid."

Mr. Moody told his Springfield audience recently a story about a poor woman, who hearing a rap, thought the landlord had come to demand the rent. She refused to answer, and thus turned away a friend who wished to give her money. The audience laughed at this, but Moody stopped them abruptly by crying: "You laugh at that woman, but it was you yourself, sinner."

We present the following from Bro. J. W. Stein for the consideration of the Brethren: "Allow me to say to the Brethren in Indiana and elsewhere, who have been asking a visit by me, that I intend, if the Lord will, to spend several weeks from home about the time of the Annual Meeting, so as to include its attendance. I therefore hope the Brethren will write and inform me of their arrangements in good time."

ABRAHAM WOLFE of Washington, Iowa says: "Again the waters have been troubled, angels rejoiced, the church made glad and encouraged. Last Tuesday there were five souls buried with Christ in baptism, and rose we trust to walk in newness of life. Three of them were from the Baptist church, two were quite young persons; one not quite eighteen, the other in his fifteenth year. Others we hope are counting the cost. There are now seventeen members residing here."

THOUSANDS of men and women in cities, villages and even in the country, who are without either work or home, will do well to study the principles of industry, economy and contentment. There is work and brain labor for all. The great difficulty however, is knowing how to find it. The learning of these things is generally put off too late in life. They should be learned early and put to immediate practice. The real secret of getting work is the good habit of constantly sticking at it when you do get it.

THOSE who purpose attending the coming Annual Meeting, should bear in mind that the congregation in which the meeting is to be held, is making no preparations whatever to entertain any until on Monday, the tenth of June. To hold an A. M. is very burdensome on the congregation in which it is held, and therefore every effort possible should be made use of to lighten the burden and diminish the labors. This precaution has been too frequently neglected.

Much of our readers have doubtless heard of Deacon Giles and his rom work, and also of the famous illustrated article concerning him. The article was published over 40 years ago and at that time created great excitement in different parts of the country, and has, in its time, done much towards creating a temperance sentiment in various localities. It was written by a minister, who for the act was confined in jail a few days. He refused to make any apologies and was released. The article though rudely illustrated, contains volumes of truth against the liquor traffic.

Of Henry Ward Beecher it is said, that he "has about completed the handiwork of his country residence at Peekskill on the Hudson. It has the model billiard-room and card room of the State, frescoed in a sort of a religious lavender to cushion the ragged edge." These startling facts show where the popular preacher with his "no-hell" theory is drifting to. This man can go to church and hold an audience spell-bound for two hours, while treating some deeply interesting, religious subject, and then return home and play billiards or cards to give the mind rest. No wonder that such men want to dismiss the idea of a hell from their minds.

IN reply to a brother who wishes to know why we do not publish the "Memorian" of a certain sister, we remark, that it would be very imprudent for us to publish even one tenth of that kind of articles sent here. Our paper would soon be entirely filled up with them. We think it generally sufficient to publish an obituary notice and use the paper as much as possible for suitable articles on other subjects. We know the friends of the deceased would like to have us give a column for expressing their solemn reflections on such occasions, but they should bear in mind that there are scores of others making similar requests, and were we to give way to them they would soon fill the entire paper with that kind of matter.

THE POOR SAINTS.

Dear Brethren:— I PROPOSE that you act as treasurer to receive and forward contributions for the poor saints in Denmark, or if not convenient for you, then name some other brother whose address is also Lanark. It is not convenient for all to send direct to Denmark.

JESSE Y. HECKLER.

While we were away from home a few days last week, our hands had put up in the office a neat little box, having on it a card, containing the following: "Danish Mission Contribution Box. Drop in Your Mite." Of course the members drop in their mites pretty freely; we therefore conclude that if the brethren and sisters wish to, they can send their contributions to us and we will forward them direct to Denmark, as we will have to forward the money paid in here, and it can all be attended to at one time.

It will be observed that we take charge of the money sent to the poor saints in Denmark, and not the regular missionary fund, of which C. P. Rowland is treasurer. This we will do until the coming District Meeting, sending the money off to Denmark as received each week.

PHILIP AT SAMARIA.

IN the eighth chapter of Acts, commencing at the fifth verse, we have an account of the first protracted meeting that Philip ever engaged in. With the disciples and brethren he had spent many pleasant seasons in and around Jerusalem and enjoyed the association of those possessing the same faith. The miraculous manifestation that occurred on the memorable day of Pentecost confirmed their belief in the divinity of their arisen and ascended Master. Persecution, however, soon arose and caused the dispersion of the disciples to different parts of the country.

Philip goes down to the city of Samaria and there commences a series of meetings. The question arises, why did he go into a city to make his first efforts? The city contained a great many inhabitants and among them were men of learning and influence. In fact, Samaria was the largest and most magnificent city in that part of the country. Philip did not shun the place as some people do now. He did not pause to lament over his want of education—did not fear his incapacity, but trusting in God, he walks into the proud city and preached Christ unto them, showing how it was that according to the prophets and what was foretold of Him, that He must suffer at the hands of enemies. He showed that He was put to death, was securely buried, and around His sepulchre was placed an armed body of men to keep it secure, but on the morning of the third day, He arose in sight of the armed guard, and afterward showed Himself to His disciples and conversed with them from time to time, till He took His ascent into heaven and is now seated at the right hand of God.

He showed them how, by signs and wonders, Christ proved Himself the Son of God, and that His enemies had done the deed of crucifying Him. His reasoning was so logical and appeals so forcible that the city with one accord gave heed unto the things which Philip spake. But as a confirmation of the truth of his preaching he also performed miracles in their presence. Then we read that when they believed the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women.

There is a peculiar feature about the apostles' manner of carrying on missionary work that is worthy of our attention. Even the careless reader of the New Testament will have observed that they did the most of their preaching in the cities, devoting but little time to meetings in the country. There is a deeper reason for this particular feature of their work than is by many supposed. It is a known fact that the custom and manners of country life are more or less moulded and affected by the prevailing habits of cities. If the enemy wishes to introduce an evil in the land, he first makes an effort to obtain for it a strong-hold in the cities, thus paving the way for its introduction into the rural districts. We obtain all our foolish and health-degrading fashions from the cities. In short, the direful evils that spread over our land first find a foothold in cities and towns. The apostles in introducing the noblest system of morals the world has ever heard of, worked on this well-known principle. They made vigorous efforts to plant the standard of truth in the large and influential cities of the land, and that paved their way for the introduction of Christianity into the villages, towns and smaller cities. The mother church of the whole world was planted in Jerusalem, a large city composed of several hundred thousand inhabitants. Philip planted a church at Samaria, and in a few years another was planted at Antioch, which grew from year to year until it finally consisted of more than one hundred thousand members. At Corinth, Philippi and Ephesus and even at Rome we have account of the planting of flourishing congregations which, in after years, wielded an untold amount of influence in the spreading of Christianity. This method, adopted and practiced by the apostles, proved itself eminently successful, for at the end of the first century, no less than one million converts are said to have been the fruits of the apostolic order of conducting missionary work. They did not go into a city, preach just a few sermons, and then leave because the people did not at first give heed to their preaching, but labored from day to day, and month to month, defending the evidences of Christianity. Protracted meetings continued with them the order of the day. Their object was to convert the people—to convince them that Jesus Christ was the Son of God, that in His name and that alone was there the promise of salvation. Knowing the terror of the Lord they persuaded men to repent—did all in their power to cause them to cease to do evil and learn to do well.

From these apostolic precedents you and I can learn lessons of great value. We need not fear to introduce our humble order of religion into large and influential cities; for the apostles, the old primitive preachers, did that way in the golden age of the Christian church and met in their labor with more success than has been known since that period. Another reason why they preached in cities is, because that was the place to which the people resorted in those days to worship. Their object being to preach the Gospel to the people, prompted them to go where the people were. They did not travel proportionally as much as we do, but did by far more preaching for the same amount of traveling.

When they went into a city or village they stayed there long enough to accomplish some good—did not do like we—get up a good interest and then go off and leave their little good, already done, to perish for the want of care. Then brethren, from these old apostolic precedents let us learn valuable lessons. Of course customs and habits have changed since that day and the rural districts now afford the most profitable places for evangelizing and building up churches, yet this is no reason why holding meetings in cities should be avoided, for in some of them much good may be accomplished, especially if the members are exemplary Christians as they ought to be. J. H. M.

WHY NOT?

WE have just finished reading a piece in No. 7, of the BRETHREN AT WORK on temperance, and the question arises, Why do not Christians sign the temperance pledge? It is one of the laws of the Bible. Christ commands us to be temperate, and we ask the question why members of the church do not set the example before the world, and lend their influence in the cause. We know families who profess to follow Christ, and try to raise their children right, yet they keep their wines and brandy (for their health, they say) all the time before their children. It seems to us, if church members would do away with the habit it would be better for them and their children.

TEMPERANCE.

We are inclined to believe that "Temperance" is not acquainted with the Brethren's teaching on that important subject. As a people we fail to find divine warrant for any of us to become yoked with the world in any organization (John 15: 19; 2 Cor. 6: 14-17). The church of Jesus Christ has not within itself any other organization. The church is itself one of the best temperance organizations in existence, hence no need for any of its members to become identified with any other. The church that does not enforce Bible temperance has lost apostolic ground, and when this is gone, they resort to something else.

Members of the church should set good examples before their children. This we try to teach. Nor can any one let his light shine more brightly by joining a worldly temperance organization. A Christian's light shines the same everywhere. It does not shine brightly at one place and dim at another; it is the same at all places. Our influence on the street, at home, in business, at meeting, everywhere should be in favor of temperance. The good and true disciple thus acts and feels, hence needs no other fellowship.

We have not one word to say against worldly temperance organizations, that is, organizations composed of non-professors of religion who are desirous to see the traffic in rum stopped. They no doubt do much good, and have a perfect right to labor for the suppression of intoxicating drinks, but when it comes to pressing the necessity and propriety of the disciples of Jesus joining such a society, the question is one by itself. The right and propriety of worldly persons forming themselves into a temperance society is one thing, and the right and propriety of the disciples of Jesus joining that society is quite another thing.

It may be said that unity of action is desirable, hence professors of religion should join the worldly society. If that be a fact, let the world be converted and come over to the disciples, and not the disciples go over to the world. We think the world can form themselves into and manage a temperance society without Christians, hence Christians need not concern themselves on that score. Looking at this matter from a Bible stand-point we can join nothing save Jesus. This ought to be enough for us, since it was enough for the apostles and all primitive Christians. Let Christians conduct themselves according to the apostolic pattern; let the world do their best in their way to think, live and act temperately and our land will be blessed as no other land is. We have now briefly given some of the reasons why we do not join the worldly temperance societies. M. M. E.

FAITH.

THE apostles were required to go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature. It was enjoined that they teach or disciple all nations, that is, make learners or believers of them. They were to preach "repentance and the remission of sins," baptizing such as believed, "into the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost," and then was the promise, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." On the other hand, "He that believeth not, shall be damned." But why preach to the people? That they might believe. "How can they believe in him of whom they have not heard?" And "faith cometh by hearing." Why should people have faith? Because "without faith it is impossible to please God," and "he that believeth not shall be damned." Faith prompts people to "cease to do evil and learn to do well." This is repentance, a turning from evil to good. "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish," says inspiration.

But what shall the people believe in order to salvation? Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.—This embodies the Christian's faith. Believing in the Lord Jesus Christ embraced an unwavering confidence in all that He has said and done, as well as the divinely authorized circumstances connected with His life. Assuming as we do that His teachings are not only holy, but just, the conclusion is inevitable that "he that believeth not, shall be damned," "because he believeth not in the only begotten Son of God," for "without faith it is impossible to please God."

We do not believe that God will condemn any one for not believing, provided believing with him is a matter of impossibility. There are some living in remote lands who never had an opportunity to believe, never heard of Jesus and therefore know nothing about Him.—Though such may be for some cause condemned, yet not for disbelieving in Christ. "For how can they believe in him of whom they have not heard." "Faith cometh by hearing," and it is evident that they cannot hear without a preacher. If they are lost, it cannot be in consequence of unbelief, for unbelief is not a sin only in cases where belief is not possible. This we think is so reasonable that no logical reasoner will squarely dissent from it.

Nations that are without a knowledge of God and His laws, will be judged according to the light they have, and not according to that which they have not, for "these, having not the law are a law unto themselves." The knowledge they have of good and evil is to be their law, by this are they to be judged, and if condemned it will be because they have not done that which they knew to be right.

Faith being a creature of education is materially affected by surrounding circumstances. The training received in early age has much to do with the bent of the mind in after life. Those who are born and raised in heathen lands where Christ is neither preached or known, have no faith in Him, though they may firmly believe in other objects. Under these circumstances faith in Christ, with them is an impossibility. They never heard of Him, therefore can have no Gospel faith. They become a law unto themselves. Those born and educated in Christian lands are different: they have better opportunities, therefore faith is not an impossibility. Unto them it is said, "He that believeth not shall be damned." They not only have ample opportunities of reading the Gospel, but can hear it preached, hear it proclaimed, then if they believe not it is their own fault, and on them the condemnation is pronounced, the decree has gone forth that they shall be condemned. Not one reader of these lines can, in the great day of judgment, escape condemnation in unbelief. "He that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him it is a sin." And "he that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them not, is like unto a foolish man." Furthermore, "every soul that will not hear that prophet shall be destroyed from among the people." J. H. M.

ordinance of Baptism regularly administered in a quiet room. Even streams of water were of very uncommon occurrence. But as he journeyed with Philip at his side, behold, they came to a certain water, and, wishing to embrace an opportunity which might never occur to him again, he said, "See, here is water, what doth hinder me to be baptized?" Philip said to him: "If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. And he commanded the chariot to stand still; and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him." How did he baptize him? By dipping him into the water? Where is that said? There is nothing of the kind said. There was no house near, no conveniences of any kind at hand, and both going down to the rivulet, could not Philip easily have stooped down, as the great man lent his head over the clear rill that murmured before him, and raising up in his hand some of the water, poured or sprinkled it on his head, and thus baptized him with water in the same way as John baptized Jesus, and as the Holy Ghost baptized the disciples on the day of Pentecost?

Here we have it, not from Jesus, not from an apostle, but from the Doctor that the eunuch was "in the midst of the desert, with no house, or town, or hamlet near where he could stop to have the ordinance of Baptism regularly administered." Now he has the eunuch in the midst of a desert, and yet there was a "rivulet" there. How afraid the Doctor is of "much water!" "Dry places" suit him much better. Something is said about the "unclean spirit" walking through "dry places" seeking in vain for rest. No rest in dry places, Doctor. Come follow Jesus. Poor eunuch! There was "no house, or town, or hamlet near" for him. No gorgeously decked house with a bowl of water for Philip to sprinkle him, but "down into the water both Philip and the eunuch" had to go, and Philip "baptized him." Why did not the translators say "sprinkled him," Doctor? If sprinkling was the thing done, why not say so? But you see Philip baptized the eunuch; he did not stoop down "as the great man bent his head over the rill," and "sprinkle" water on his head. The eunuch's head down is not the thing to be acted upon, but the eunuch—the man.

Whenever the Lord, the apostles and primitive Christians speak about baptism, they do not say the heads of the people were sprinkled, but the people were baptized. Jesus' head was not sprinkled with a little water, but He was baptized in Jordan—the river, not a rivulet. In every Bible instance of water baptism the whole person, not simply a part, was baptized, dipped in water.

And the learned Doctor wants to know "where it is said" that Philip dipped the eunuch in water. Turn to Acts 8: 38 and read: "And they both went down into the water;" and in order that no man might deceive the "very elect," the Holy Spirit repeats, "both Philip and the eunuch, and he baptized him." Of course if the Holy Ghost had not caused Luke to write "both Philip and the eunuch," some modern "divine" would have discovered that "both the chariot and the eunuch went down into the rivulet, and Philip reaching down took up a few drops of water and shed them on the head of the eunuch." Is not this the way it was done, Doctor? Certainly it can be proven from the same verse and chapter that the chariot went down into the rivulet, that you prove that the eunuch was sprinkled. Now look over the chapter of Supposition, Doctor, and see whether you cannot find a verse to prove that the chariot wheels were sprinkled too. I might here give the reader what Clark, Wetstein and Schoetgen say relative to the term desert, but for the want of space omit their testimony.

The Doctor's next efforts are to show that in immersion we are not buried with Christ, that Noah in the ark is no figure of baptism, and that in the passage of the Israelites through the Red Sea they were sprinkled unto Moses. He thinks they passed over on "dry ground," did not get into "deep mire" or water, but were sprinkled by a shower of rain. You see the ground over which they passed was "dry," though it rained on them all the time. Doctor, how much "dry ground" is there on the surface during a shower? You would better locate your showers at some other point. In all these assertions the error crops out so plainly that no one will believe them, hence pass on to his voice on Isaiah.

"The prophet Isaiah has a prophetic allusion to the mode of baptism: Does he foretell immersion?"

In Isaiah 52: 15, we find the following remarkable expression concerning the future Messiah: "So shall he sprinkle many nations." This passage is found in connection with many other prophecies, all of which refer directly to Christ. Indeed, so plain are the concluding verses of the 52nd chapter, and the whole of the 53rd chapter, in their reference to Christ's character and work, that they, mainly, have led biblical writers to call Isaiah "the evangelical prophet." When, therefore, it is said: "He shall sprinkle many nations," the reference is unquestionably to Christ, and it intends to say, "Christ shall sprinkle many nations." As it is through baptism that, by Christ's express command to his ministers to go and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, the people of all nations come into the church or kingdom of Christ which he has set up in the world, and into possession of the rich gifts of grace and salvation procured for them by the blood of sprinkling which he shed for them on the cross, there is obvious allusion to Christian Baptism in this passage.

A Jew or Gentile baptized, is no longer a Jew or Gentile, but a Christian. Every individual of all the nations that become Christians, is baptized. No one anywhere enters the Christian Church except by being baptized. Such is the case now, and such has always been the case. Since the commencement of the Christian Church, untold millions of men, in almost all nations of the world, have been baptized in the name of Christ. Christ has, therefore, by His ministers and in His name, baptized many nations, as this text predicts. And He has baptized them, too, not by immersion, but by sprinkling. Not a single nation has ever been immersed, either in whole or by a majority, but very numerous nations have been sprinkled. Baptism by sprinkling, or pouring, has ever been, and is now, the prevailing mode of administering Baptism in the Christian Church. Taking the whole Protestant Church together, throughout Europe and America, only a very small proportion, compared with the whole, practice immersion. The great mass of the Protestant Churches and nations practice sprinkling. And so, too, does the Roman Church.

Turn to Isaiah 52: 15, hunt up the connections, dear reader, and notice how plainly the prophet had no allusion to sprinkling a little water on any person. Neither Jesus nor any of His followers ever sprinkled water on nations and called it baptism. Observe the assertion that "not a single nation has ever been immersed, either in whole or by a majority, but very numerous nations have been sprinkled." Will the Doctor bring just one nation, which from the first to the thirteenth century, were sprinkled with water? At the conclusion of this article I shall give him some evidences all along the line in favor of immersion. Will he bring proof that the Greeks, as a nation, have not, from the days of the apostles, practiced immersion?

"Baptism by sprinkling," runs through the whole of Dr. Greenwald's work; and he insists that it is now the "prevailing mode of administering Baptism in the Christian Church." This is a broad assertion, and savors not of the apostolic order. Will he point where the Greek church practiced sprinkling for Christian baptism? The Christians who came forth from the apostolic model, were all baptized, not sprinkled. The teachers sent out by Jesus were told to baptize all nations, not sprinkle them. Everywhere men and women repented, believed and were baptized, doing precisely as the Lord directed them in His Word.

I now close this review of "Sprinkling, the True Mode of Baptism," with some evidences on this subject, which the Doctor may put on his side of the scales if he can find profit therein. The numbers opposite the names show about what time they wrote.

BARNAHAS, A. D. 50. "Blessed are they, who, putting their trust in the cross, descend into the water; for they shall have their reward in due time."

HERMAS, A. D. 90. This person's writings were very popular during the first and second centuries. Hear him on baptism: "Before a man receives the name of the Son of God, he is ordained unto death; but when he receives that seal, he is freed from death, and assigned unto life. Now that seal is the water of baptism, into which men go down under the obligation unto death, but come up appointed unto life."

JUSTIN MARTYR, A. D. 140. "They are then washed in that water in the name of God, the Father and Lord of the universe, and of our Savior Jesus Christ, and the Holy Spirit."

TERTULIAN, A. D. 200. "Therefore all who believed, after these words were uttered, were immersed. Then also, when Paul believed he was immersed."

ORIGEN, A. D. 240. "As the serpent was hid in the Egyptian river, so doth God in this (the Jordan); for the Father is in the Son."

AMBROSE, A. D. 350. "Thou wast asked, Dost thou believe in God the Father Almighty? Thou said, I do believe, and wast dipped, that is, buried."

ST. AUGUSTINE, A. D. 420. "The Savior would be baptized, not that He might Himself be cleansed, but to cleanse the water for us. From the time that Himself was dipped in the water, from that time he has washed away all our sins in water."

RABANUS, A. D. 850. "As by the immersion of His body He dedicated the laver of baptism."

LUTHER, A. D. 1540. "First, the noun baptism is Greek; in Latin, it can be rendered immersion, when we immerse anything in water, that it may be all covered with water; and although that custom has grown out of use with most persons (for they do not wholly submerge the children, but only pour on a little water), yet they ought to be entirely immersed, and immediately drawn out. For this the etymology of the noun seems to demand."

CALVIN, A. D. 1560. "The word baptize, itself, signifies immerse, and it is certain that the rite of immersing was observed by the ancient church."

DR. BARROWS, A. D. 1670. "The action is baptizing or immersing in water."

DR. WHITBY, A. D. 1725. "We are buried with Christ in baptism, by being buried under water * * dying to sin, being taken hence, and this immersion being religiously observed by all Christians for thirteen centuries."

MACKNIGHT, A. D. 1775. "He (Christ) submitted to be baptized; that is, to be buried under the water by John, and to be out of it again, as an emblem of his future death and resurrection."

ALEXANDER CAMPBELL, A. D. 1850. "The facts then are, the whole world immersed, with these few exceptions, for thirteen centuries. The east half of Christendom still continues the practice. The Greek portion of the church never to this day has given up the primitive practice."

DR. LIGHTFOOT, A. D. 1857. "That the baptism of John was by plunging the body seems to appear from these things which are related of him; namely, that he baptized in Jordan; that he baptized in Enon, because there was much water there; and that Christ being baptized came up out of the water; to which that seems to be parallel, Acts 8: 38. Philip and the eunuch went down into the water."

BISHOP JEREMY TAYLOR. "The custom of the ancient churches was not sprinkling, but immersion, in pursuance of the sense of the word in the commandment, and the example of our blessed Savior."

Here is testimony from a number of the most learned men in the world, some of them strong advocates of sprinkling, and they all testify that immersion was the primitive practice. The number of witnesses to this fact might be greatly multiplied, but I deem this sufficient. Now Doctor, if sprinkling is the true mode, and "numerous nations" have all along the line been sprinkled with a little water, why do all these men, with a host of others, speak in such strong terms in favor of immersion? Is this not itself evidence that immersion was the prevailing practice for more than thirteen hundred years? Do not the facts before us show, that baptizo is never rendered sprinkle, that the primitive Christians resorted to where there was "much water" when they wished to baptize, and that coming up "out of the water" does not imply sprinkling? God grant that our constant aim may be to follow Jesus in all things.

M. M. E.

DANISH MISSION FUND.

Table with 2 columns: Name and Amount. White Oak Church, Pa. $10.00; B. H. Kepner, 3.50; S. A. Walker, Ohio, 5.00; Previously reported, 1528.39.

Total: $1546.59

C. P. ROWLAND, Treasurer.

Leomark, Ill., March 20th, 1878.

HUMANITY.

HUMANITY has its two sides:—one side in the strength and intellect of manhood, the other in the tenderness, and faith, and submissiveness of womanhood; Man and Woman, not man alone, make up human nature. In Christ, not one alone, but both were glorified. Strength and Grace, Wisdom and Love, Courage and Purity,—Divine Manliness, Divine Womanliness. In all noble characters you find the two blended; in Him—the noblest—blended into one perfect and entire Humanity.—Selected.

"SPRINKLING, THE TRUE MODE OF BAPTISM."

NUMBER IV.

WE now come to the fourth and last lesson on this subject with Doctor Greenwald. His first question at this time is:

"Was the eunuch immersed?"

"The eunuch confessed that what he read was not clear to him, and he invited Philip to take a seat beside him in the chariot. He did so; and as they rode along he explained to him that that prophecy pointed out Christ as the Messiah, that Christ had come in fulfillment of it, and that Jesus of Nazareth was the Christ. The eunuch was so thoroughly convinced of the Messiahship of Jesus, that he was ready at once to become a Christian. But what should he do? He was going away from Jerusalem, beyond Egypt, quite into Ethiopia, and might never have another opportunity of hearing of Jesus, or of embracing the Gospel, by receiving Baptism, and making a profession of his faith. He was here in the midst of the desert, with no house, or town, or hamlet near where he could stop to have the

The Home Circle.

READ AND OBEY.

"Husbands, love your wives,"
"Wives, obey your husbands."
"Children, obey your parents in all things."

SUNDAY MORNING.

The Afflicted.

YES, many are sick this morning. Their bodies are full of pain; their strength is almost gone, their endurance severely tried.

You look over "the valley of the shadow of death," and see the same crown for you as when you could walk and talk with your brethren and sisters.

Sister, you too are suffering this morning. Last night was a dark and stormy one to you, and this morning the body is still weak and worn.

Our loving Jesus whispers to you as softly as ever. His voice, His comforter is just as sweet and consoling as in times past.

Will the little ones who read this, remember if they disobey their mother, if they are cross and naughty, they say, every single time they do so, to a tender mother's heart, by their actions, if not in the words of Henry, the very same thing, "I don't love you now, mother."

Our loving Jesus whispers to you as softly as ever. His voice, His comforter is just as sweet and consoling as in times past. Ah how well Jesus loves you still! Trust Him; be encouraged.

I DON'T LOVE YOU NOW, MOTHER!

A GREAT many years ago I knew a lady who had been sick for two years, all the while slowly dying with consumption.

tears to see her suffer so. By and by the terrible cough ceased. Henry came and put his arms around his mother's neck, nestled his head in her bosom and said:

"Mother, I do love you, I wish you wasn't sick."

An hour later, the same loving, blue-eyed boy came in all aglow, stamping the snow off his feet.

"Oh mother, may I go skating? it is so nice—Ed and Charlie are going."

"Henry," feebly said the mother, "the ice is not hard enough yet."

"But, mother," very pettishly said the boy, "you are sick all the time—how do you know?"

"My child, you must obey me," gently said the mother.

"It is too bad," angrily sobbed the boy, who, an hour ago had so loved his mother.

"I would like to have my little boy go, said his mother, looking sadly at the little boy's face, all covered with frowns; "you said you loved me—be good."

"No I don't love you now, mother," said the boy, going out and slamming the door.

Again the dreadful coughing came upon her, and we thought no more of the boy; after the coughing had commenced I noticed tears falling thick upon her pillow, but she sank from exhaustion into a light sleep. In a little while muffled steps of men's feet were heard coming into the house, as though carrying something; and they were—carrying the almost lifeless body of Henry.

But she never seemed to hear the answer I gave, telling her, "No." She commenced coughing—he died in agony—strangled to death. The poor mother! the boy's disobedience killed her.

"Oh I wish I had not told mother I did not love her. To-morrow I will tell her I do," said the boy sobbing painfully. My heart ached; to-morrow I knew we must tell him she was dead. We did not till the child came fully into the room, crying, "Mother, I do love you."

That boy's whole life was changed; sober and sad he was ever after. He is now a gray-haired old man, with one sorrow over this one act of disobedience, one wrong word, embittering all his life, with those words ever ringing in his ears, "I don't love you now, mother."

That boy's whole life was changed; sober and sad he was ever after. He is now a gray-haired old man, with one sorrow over this one act of disobedience, one wrong word, embittering all his life, with those words ever ringing in his ears, "I don't love you now, mother."

Selected by AUNT KATE.

GOD WANTS OUR LOVE.

GOD is perfectly happy. His resources of enjoyment are infinite. Can we, His poor creatures, add anything to his happiness? Yet, no doubt He is pleased with our affections, else He would not command and invite, and even entreat us to love Him.

—Selected.

ACROSTIC.

Go ye into all the world,
On a teaching mission tour;
Ho as Christ has plainly taught,
Bearing Gospel that is pure.

Lincolnton, Ind.

CONGRATULATORY.

Bethrua:—The following letter was written by one of my former school teachers. Please give it space in the "Home Circle."

A. E. KEAGY:—

Your Friend:—

I was glad to hear that you have made a start for heaven. It was the best thing you could do. I hope you will grow much in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord our Savior and be a shining light in the church.

We are commanded to seek first the kingdom of heaven and all things shall be added unto us. I wish you well in your Christian life.

AMOS HARRISON.

REMARKS.—The above needs to be compared with the apostolic order, the Lord's one plan of salvation. That word "denominations" was unknown in apostolic times as applied to the church of Jesus Christ.

True "the Lord instituted the church for the good of His people; that they might assemble together in unity and love;" but then He did not "institute" that one should practice a part, or a little of His teachings, and another all of them, but commands that they be of one mind, of the same judgment, abide in the same vine, keep the same commandments.

he regarded as "unjust," "unfair," and "narrow-minded" men; but all that kind of accusing would not make them wrong, would not change the Truth of God, nor the practice of His people.

DEFACING BOOKS.

TAKE up almost any Sunday-school song book in your neighborhood or in mine, turn the pages carelessly or carefully as you like, and tell me what you see,—names and comments without number written before and after the titles of hymns.

Easton, W. Va.

CHILDREN AT WORK.

Rejoicing in Jesus:—There are many brethren and sisters in this part of the country, and quite a number of ministers have been here this Winter.

The First Lesson:—I go to Sunday-school in the Summer, but have quite a distance to go. On the first ticket I got, were these words: "Then spake Jesus unto them again, I am the light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life" (John 8: 12).—C. E. Barkdoll, Farmer, Ill.

Might Work More:—I think we ought to work ten, and if we obey the just commands of our parents we will be working for Jesus. And we children might work still more in Sunday-school if the old people would help us.

Sweeps Them Out:—I have now been in the church one year. My father takes care of the meeting-house and he has to sweep out piles of tobacco quids every Sunday morning.

The New Bible:—I have been to meeting to-day at our new meeting-house. Grandpa (Daniel Neher) preached. He is old and quite gray. My father bought me a new Bible. In it I found two questions that I wish Nellie O'Neil of Pottstown, Pa., to answer.

I Love Jesus:—In my other letter I said I liked Jesus. I never saw Him, but I love Him because He first loved me. When He was on earth He wanted children to come to Him, and He wants them yet.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A Sad Accident.

Dear Brethren:—

ON Friday evening the 8th of March, between six and seven o'clock, as Yety Holt, a young lady, sixteen years old, with her little brother, ten years old, were on their way to singing, riding on horseback, their road leading through the timber, about a mile from home a tree fell across the road at the same moment they were passing, and the young lady was struck on the head and killed instantly.

The accident happened only a little ways from some houses, and the boy, who had a very narrow escape, gave the alarm, and several persons were soon on the spot. And now, who will take the sad news to her parents? What sad news it was to carry to that mother, who was so much attached to her daughter! The man who brought the sad intelligence, first told the parents to brace up, and prepare to hear sad news. "What is it?" exclaims the mother. — The answer was: "Your Yety is dead; a tree fell on her and killed her." Such a heart-rending shock can be better imagined than expressed. We ought to all sympathize with them in their bereavement, which can only be realized by experience. That she was much loved and respected was plainly manifested at the funeral. Never have I seen tears flow more freely than they did on that occasion, by her school-mates and associates and by many sympathizing friends. One reason that she gained the love and respects of so many was, because she was so good and obedient to her parents.

What a warning to all! "Therefore be ye also ready," for in such an hour as ye think not, the messenger of death cometh.

Salem, Ill.

J. F. NEIDER.

Call For Preaching.

Dear Brethren:—

AS I am living where there is none of our brethren but myself, I thought I would make a call for some of our missionaries to come here and preach at this little town, situated on the Mississippi river, ten miles above Alton.

Our doctrine has never been preached in this part of the country. We have no church here but the Methodists; they will let us occupy their place of worship. There are many very anxious to have the Brethren visit us. May the Lord send some one this way.

J. BUCKLEY.

Eliah, Ill.

[Hope some of the brethren in Southern Illinois will give the above their attention, as the place is not very far from where some of them live.—Ers.]

From Lick Creek Church.

Dear Brethren:—

BRO. John H. Miller, from Indiana came to us, the 15th of February and stayed one week. Also Bro. Forney from Illinois, stopped with us a while. The result of the meeting was, one added to the church. May the blessings of God be with those brethren.

On the 25th Bro. John Nicholson from Knox Co., O., came to us. Had meetings one week, but no additions. From thence he came to my place, but getting sick, he was not able to fill his first appointment here, and I, in my weakness had to fill it as best I could. So on the next evening he preached, though hardly able to do so. But he was filled with so many good things to tell, that he gave us four sermons; not feeling able to give two discourses in one day, just preached in the evening.

Bro. Isaac Stockman, from adjoining district, came to our assistance, and preached once in the day-time, and was with us two evening meetings. Bro. Nicholson not being very well, and the roads being so extremely bad, did not have any additions, but many good impressions seemed to have been made. I am inclined to think, if the meetings had been kept up longer, and the roads in a better condition, that there would have been good prospects. He is now in the adjoining (Silver Creek) district. May God bless him in his labors!

S. LONG.

Bryan, O.

From Longmont, Colorado.

Dear Brethren:—

WE will say, that we are now located in Weld County, in the community of the body of members here, and will now hold more frequent and regular meetings. The members are all in love and union, and seemingly desirous of continuing faithfully in every good work. Bro. M. M. Bashor from the Southern part of the State, was up not long since and preached several excellent discourses. In reply to numerous letters, making inquiry about Colorado, how to get here, etc., we would say: If health is the principal consideration in view, by all means try this remarkably healthy climate. Many confirmed invalids come here yearly, and soon get to be hale and hearty. The Spring is the best time to come.

To persons of small means, seeking homes in a new country, we will say, you might do well by coming here, but we would not over-persuade such to risk it.

To come here, take the last and cheapest route to Omaha. There get a through ticket to Denver over the M. P. & Colorado Central R. R. This route will bring you to or through Longmont. Sleepers run from Omaha to Denver without change.

J. S. FLOYD.

From the Stanislaus Church, Cal.

Dear Brethren:—

THE Brethren of Northern Illinois, and to whomsoever this may concern, send greeting. Having assembled together in a quarterly council on Saturday, Feb. 23rd, 1878, among the business which came before the meeting for consideration, the Danish mission question was again presented. The members unanimously and heartily asserted their willingness to co-operate with the general brotherhood in the mission cause. Whereupon we have adopted the following resolutions:

1. Resolved, that we, the members of the Stanislaus church consider the missionary cause (as conducted by the brethren) of divine appointment and should be encouraged and sustained by the church.

2. That we hereby express our willingness to continue our pecuniary contributions to the support of the mission as soon as circumstances will permit. Having just passed through a year of drouth at present, we can only offer aid by way of good will and prayers to the all-wise and ever-merciful God, petitioning a throne of grace in behalf of the cause and particularly for those brethren who have quit themselves like men, in embarking in a cause so noble, and a work so holy and so divine.

3. That the brethren may know our feelings on the missionary cause and the love which we entertain for the brotherhood, it is resolved, that an expression of the same be sent to the offices of the BRETHREN AT WORK and Primitive Christian for publication, committing it into the hands of our kind and merciful Father in heaven, to whom be all the praise, power, dominion and glory, forever, Amen.

In Behalf of the Church,

JOHN FURK.

Hipon, Cal.

(P. C., please copy.)

Epistolary.

IT is my desire to write a few lines to the many sisters I saw last Winter, which I never expect to see any more on earth; but if I never meet you in this world again, I hope to meet you all in heaven.

Well, sisters, I have not forgotten you. No, I often think how kind you were to me and my children when we had no home. I often felt sad, when the sisters were so kind to me. — They did all they could to make me happy. I promised to write for the paper, and let them hear how we get along.

A great many may read this letter who never saw my face. To such I will say, I love you all. Many thanks to those who were so kind to me. I have not words to express my thankfulness to you. We have been spared to reach our new home. We have a nice home. We have all we could wish for to make us happy, for which we feel thankful to our heavenly Father. We feel to praise His holy name for his mercy in sparing us as He did through all our long journey.

Now a few words yet to my dear sisters in the East. Dear sisters, I am far from you this night. I am all alone now, John is at prayer-meeting. I think of you until I go to sleep at night, and when I awake in the morning, I think of you again. I think that I shall never see you again in this world, but pray that we may meet in heaven. I think we will never meet in this world again. What a thought, that we can never see nor meet those we love so much. Oh, sisters, I want you to think of me often. Pray for me, that I may hold out to the end. Let us all be faithful until death, and then we can all meet in heaven, never to part any more. There we will not get lonesome. — There will be no sorrow there, no weeping nor parting. — There we can always be with Jesus.

O, Lord, help us all so to live, that we may all meet in our Father's house. Dear sisters, you don't know how much we long to see those we love so much. But if we love Jesus as we should, we can all meet again where we shall never part any more. Oh, sisters, we must love Jesus if we would reign with Him. O, God, fill my heart with love to all my dear friends! A kind farewell to all, and many thanks to the dear ones who have done so much for us.

Your Sister,
NANCY WISE.

Waterloo, Iowa.

From Falls City, Nebraska.

Dear Brethren:—

THE health in this part of country is good, and the weather the same way. March so far has been more like May. We saw not a flake of snow to my knowledge since some time in February. Peaches are in full bloom. Trees are leafing out, some look quite green now.

I will now give you something that is of more importance to me than the good weather; that is, the Christians (called Campbellites) were told by their preacher the other night that baptism by true immersion was not right. And how do you think he proved it? He did it by quoting from the 6th chapter of Romans, that we are to be baptized in the likeness of Christ's burial and resurrection. A few nights before, he showed that we must be baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus only, and that Peter had the keys of the kingdom, and he opened it for the Jews at the day of Pentecost. "Now remember," said he, "that Peter alone spoke to them at that time, and there is no indication in all that second chapter of the Acts, that any of the other apostles spoke."

Now how a man can put on boldness enough to speak such a perversion, I cannot see, when the testimony is so clear that they all spoke, as we see from Acts 2: 6-11. I will also say, we are called upon by the Brethren of Holt Co., Mo., to meet a man of the same denomination in controversy on baptism and other differences between us and them. C. Forney and I, will go on the 30th inst., and will stay one week, if necessary to do so. But we want to go like a David, in the name and strength of the Lord, and for His glory only.

JOHN FORNEY, SR.

From Peabody, Kansas.

Dear Brethren:—

YOUR paper, still makes its weekly visits at our homes and gives much food to hungry souls. It affords us much joy to read the wholesome instructions by our dear brethren, and our hearts are made to feel glad when we read of the progress of the Master's cause. We hope that all will work and try to be faithful in the Master's vineyard.

Our church at this place is small yet, but is increasing slowly. Several have been added by baptism through the Winter, and brethren from different parts are continually locating here. There is still room for many more, if any of the brethren contemplate coming to Kansas. I would advise them to come soon, as land is on the rise. We have a very good country here; farmers are mostly done sowing oats and spring wheat. The prospect for a good crop of Fall wheat is very promising, but it is to the Lord that we must look for the harvest.

This makes me think of the great harvest as spoken of in Matthew 13, and Rev. 14: 15, when the souls will be gathered together, and the wicked shall be separated from the good and righteous. Dear brethren let us try to stand justified on that day, before the Lord, our Maker, that we might not be counted as tares, and be burnt with everlasting fire.

Brethren, let us not grow weary in well-doing, but let us, like Paul, "thank God and take courage."

Your Brother in Christ,

H. SHOWER.

From Nora Springs, Iowa.

Dear Brethren:—

WE like to read your paper, because there is so much good news in it. We love to read the children's letters. That is right, children, go on in your work; send in your letters and we will read them. The time will soon come, when you will more fully realize what you are doing now. Soon father and mother will be gone. Then you will have to do all the writing, and all the praying and preaching. — We trust the good Lord will bless all efforts put forth for the advancement of His cause.

We have not had any additions to the church during the Winter, and are not in as prosperous a condition as we might wish for; yet there are some who are trying to do all they can for the cause of Jesus. And I think we ought to all try to crucify our flesh, and be diligent in our Christian duties. Then we will be ready to go to that better land when the hour of death comes upon us.

Brethren, pray for us that we might be truly found building upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the Chief Corner-stone, in whom all the building, fitly framed together, groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord, in whom ye also are builded together for a habitation of God through the Spirit.

O, Brethren, what a building we can have! Yes, and we all can have a place in this building. All have something to do. Let us then love our brethren; when we see them cast down let us lift them up. In short, let us all work for Jesus. If we are for Jesus, we will have something to do when there is meeting. If there be any sick, we will be there, visiting them. If any in distress, we will be found ready to help them all we can. Truly, brethren, we could have a heaven on earth, if all would do their part.

G. M. NOAR.

GLEANINGS.

From L. J. Williams. — We have a nice country, and it is building up rapidly. Dug-outs and sod-houses are fast going out of date, and neat frame and stone houses are built in their stead. We have had a fine Winter, no cold weather scarcely and but little snow, more rain than usual. The farmers are all as busy as bees, sowing their grain. The health of the country is pretty good at this time. Your paper is a welcome visitor to our home. I am thankful that I can hear the true Gospel proclaimed through the silent medium of the press, if we are deprived of hearing it preached in person by the Brethren. I hope and long for the time when there will be a church here of the Brethren, and every place where there is none now. There is a strong emigration to Kansas this year. Hope some of our brethren will come and look at our country. May the good Lord bless all his people and save them in His kingdom, is my prayer.

Scandinavia, Kansas.

From Rufus E. Hillevy. — You who are looking for homes should give this country a visit. We would like to see brethren and sisters move here. Good land can be bought on long or short time or for cash, quite cheap. — Coal and wood are cheap, health generally good. Any further information may be had by addressing me at Garvie, Webster Co., Ia.

From Ohio. — This, the Grove church, appears to be in a healthy and prosperous condition. Seventeen precious souls have been made to feel the need of a Savior, and made willing to take the yoke of Jesus upon them, and were baptized according to the command of the Savior.

Yesterday brethren George Holler and Geo. Garver came to us, and preached for us in the evening and also to-day at our regular meeting to a large congregation. To-day they spoke from the fourteenth chapter of Luke, preaching the Gospel with power and in its primitive purity. We think many good impressions were made on our young and rising generation. We hope that the labors of love will be as broad cast upon the waters, to be gathered not many days hence.

H. H. ARNOLD.

Dayton, Ohio.

From Springfield, Ind. — The members are still alive in the Master's cause and battling against the sinful elements of this world. — Though few in number, with here and there a traveler to join our little band, we had a time of refreshing of a few days' duration through the instrumentality of Bro. Jesse Calvert, resulting in one addition to the church.

JOHN BALDWIN.

From John P. Young. — Five years ago Bro. David Bowman, who lives eighteen miles East of this place, came here, held a few meetings and baptized J. F. Goodman and wife the same Summer. My wife and children attended the meetings. I had fallen into the dirty and degrading hole of infidelity, though I had been brought up under the catechism in Prussia, and had been a member of the Baptist church in in this country, but I went down, down into unbelief, all because I went after the doctrine and commandments of men. In 1877, Bro. Bowman and his little band came again, preached the Word of the Lord, and at the close of his first series of meeting baptized six; and in September my wife and I were received and still later one of my daughters. There are now eleven members here, and all in peace and union, though the enemy has tried to overcome some of us.

Florence, Mo., March 29.

DIED.

Obituaries should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and separate from all other business.

SIDERS.—Near Astoria, Fulton Co., Ill., Cyrus Siders, aged 43 years and 15 days.
 J. C. DEMY.

CARNEY.—In the Hickory Grove church, Carroll Co., Ill., Bro. Jacob Carney, aged 65 years and 4 months.
 JESSE Y. HECKLER.

PARTOLI.—In the Falls City church, Nebraska, March 3rd, 1878, Bro. R. D. Partoli, aged 15 years, 8 months and 2 days.

PECK.—In the same place, March 7th, 1878, Charlie Cassius Peck, infant son of George Peck and wife, aged 2 months and 1 day.
 JOHN FORSEY, SEN.

STUTSMAN.—In the Elkhart District, Elkhart Co., Ind., March 2nd, 1878, sister Elizabeth Stutsmann, aged 88 years and 14 days.
 D. H. JONES.

GIBBERT.—In the Lower Twin district, Preble Co., Ohio, sister Ann L. Gibbert, on March 21st, aged 21 years, 4 months and 1 day.
 A. YOUNG.

DOMER.—In the Sugar Creek church, Tuscarawas Co., Ohio, Jan. 22, 1878, Lydia Ellen, only child of Bro. W. M. and Sarah Domer, aged 1 year, 2 months and six days.
 M. H. SMITH.

INTERESTING ITEMS.

—An exploring expedition from Sweden will start for the North Pole next May. It seems that man cannot be satisfied until every spot on the globe is explored.

—It is a curious fact that, notwithstanding the sure destruction, sooner or later of houses built near the base of Mount Vesuvius, the Italians do not cease to build there. The town of Torre del Greco, containing nearly 10,000 inhabitants, is constructed on the lava streams of 1631.

—It may not be generally known that the Shakers not only avoid all stimulating drinks, including tea and coffee, as well as alcoholic drinks, but have for thirty years abstained from the use of pork, which may account, in part, for the fact that they are remarkably free from fevers and consumption.

—It is stated on authority which cannot be questioned, that seventy millions of people in Northern China are starving. A terrible fire has also recently destroyed a large number of lives in that country.

—A San Francisco party claim to have invented a new battery by which they can supply the city with a beautiful electric light, much superior to the present gaslight, at about one third the cost of gaslight.

—Capt. Ends has been entirely successful at last with his jetties, by means of which he has made the Mississippi River deepen its channel from eight to twenty-two feet, so that it is now open to ocean steamers.

—An inventor has incurred the eternal displeasure of the gas monopolists, by devising means of making illuminating gas at the nominal expense of thirty cents a ton.

—The Bible production of our time is equal to five every minute of working time. At this rate the press is producing a Bible or New Testament every twelve seconds.

—It has been proposed to redeem the great desert of Western Kansas and Nebraska by irrigation, the water to be obtained by damming up the Arkansas and Platte rivers.

—The soldiers of the Mexican army have been set to work by the government in draining the Mexican Valley, and in improving the roads; which is better than making raids or fighting.

—Stanley's African expedition cost the New York Herald and London Telegraph nearly $100,000.

—An iron mine formerly worked by the ancient Phoenicians, has been discovered in Syria.

—Strong efforts are being made to complete the Chicago and Pacific railroad to this place.

There are about thirty miles to be built, after which we shall have direct communication with Chicago, being distant only 118 miles. The value of the road to this city and community will perhaps be much greater than many of us are willing to admit just now.

—A gentleman in Texas has gone into the camel business and proposes supplying that State with what camels may be needed. They are said to be useful as travellers, and can be relied upon for one hundred miles per day. The climate is said to be well adapted to them. They feed on cactus and brush, refusing all grasses that horses and cattle eat.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Notices of Love-feasts, District Meetings, etc., should be brief, and written on paper separate from other business.

LOVE-FEASTS.

At Beaver Dam congregation, Kosciusko Co., Ind., June 6th, 1878.

Four miles South of Waterloo, Iowa, Wednesday, June 5th, 1878, at 10 A. M.

Union church, Marshall Co., Ind., June 4, 1878, commencing at 5 o'clock, P. M.

Four miles South of Lewistown, Winona Co., Minn., first Saturday and Sunday of June next.

The Lord willing we intend to organize a church, hold a Communion and series of meetings in Nodaway Co., Mo., at the house of Bro. Michael Mowry, four miles East of Graham and eight miles North-west of Bernard, commencing on the evening of the 10th of May.
 S. A. HONBERGER.

The brethren and sisters in this arm of the church, Montgomery Co., Iowa, twelve miles North of Villisca, on the B. & M. R. R., will have a Communion, the Lord willing, May 18, 1878. We give a general invitation to all. All those coming on the B. & M. R. R. will stop off at Villisca, and send notice to N. C. or G. W. Workman, Sciola, Iowa.

The brethren and sisters of the Panther Creek church, Dallas Co., Iowa, intend to hold their Love-feast, the Lord willing, on the 16th and 17th of May, commencing on the 16th at 1 o'clock.
 By order of the Church,
 T. J. BEAVER.

The Lord willing, we, the brethren of the Maquette church will hold our Communion meeting, May 25th, commencing at 1 o'clock, in our church, one half mile East of Lost Nation. All persons coming to our meeting from the West, must come to Marion and there take the train in the morning about seven o'clock, arriving at Lost Nation at ten o'clock, A. M.
 By order of the church,
 ISAAC BARTO.

There will be a Communion meeting two miles North of Hudson, McLean Co., Ill., May 11th, 1878, commencing at 10 o'clock, A. M.
 By Order,
 JOHN Y. SEAVELY.

A Communion meeting is to be in the Stone church, Marshall Co., Iowa, June 15th, in commencing at 10 o'clock, A. M., and continue till Sunday noon.
 J. MURRAY.

DISTRICT MEETINGS.

Northern District of Indiana in English Prairie church, May 9th.

Southern District of Iowa, Monroe Co., Friday, April 12, 1878, at 10 o'clock, A. M.

Northern District of Illinois at Shannon, May 21 at 8 o'clock, A. M.

North-eastern district of Ohio, in Mahoning church, Mahoning Co., Ohio, May 20th, commencing at 9 o'clock, A. M.

The District meeting for the Middle District of Iowa, will meet Monday, May 27th, at the church one and a half mile East of Lost Nation.
 ISAAC BARTO.

The District meeting for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania will be held in the Indian Creek church, Montgomery Co., May 23rd. Brethren will be met with conveyance at Salford Station on the Perkiomen R. R., and at Souderton on the North Penna. R. R., the day before the meeting.
 By Order of the Church,
 JAS. Y. HECKLER.

The District Meeting of the Eastern District of West Virginia will be held, the Lord willing, on the 19th and 20th of April, in the Fairmont congregation, East of Romney.

The District Meeting for the Northern District of Kansas and Southern Nebraska, will be held, the Lord willing with the brethren of the Beatrice church, eight miles South-east of Beatrice, commencing Monday morning, May 13th, at 8 o'clock, A. M. Brethren coming by R. R., should address the writer, M. L. Spire, Beatrice, Gage Co., Neb.

Educational Items.

WE take pleasure in contributing a few lines relative to the progress we are making in an educational direction at Ashland. We attended the meeting of the trustees April 1st, and found everything moving along smoothly but very cautiously.

The idea seems to pervade in the minds of the leading spirits that prudence should be exercised, and that nothing should be done contrary to the view of the brotherhood. Some time has been spent in adjusting the subscription, pledged by the town of Ashland, which at present is entirely satisfactory, and the locating committee has been instructed to receive propositions from parties relative to a location. Several very beautiful views both of the town and surrounding country are proposed.

It is desired that twenty acres be obtained that may be of easy access and satisfactory to the many warm friends of the college in the town; and April twelfth is the day appointed when the decision is to be made, as to where the building shall be erected. The building committee was also instructed to draw up a design for the building, and also present an estimate of the cost of the same at the next meeting.

The available means at the disposal of the trustees is near twenty-five thousand dollars, which it is hoped, will soon be increased to thirty-five or forty thousand. Everybody in Ashland seems to be more or less interested in the enterprise, but are a little disappointed that the work is not already commenced. We hope that they will exercise a good degree of patience, and ere long there will be erected in their midst an institution of which they may well be proud, and which, we hope, may be a lasting monument to the memory of its projectors.

We would add a few thoughts relative to the country. It is beautifully undulating around the town and from the most elevated points presents magnificent views. The water is excellent; the public facilities good, and considering we think everything, it would be difficult to find a more desirable locality for founding an institution for the education of our children, morally, socially or intellectually, than Ashland, O.

By Order of the Trustees of ASHLAND COLLEGE.

BOOKS, PAMPHLETS, ETC.

FOR SALE
 AT THIS OFFICE.

Pengilly's Guide to Christian Baptism. — Price 50 cents.

Quinter and Snyder's Debate on Immersion. — Price, 75 cents.

Cruden's Concordance to the Bible. — Best edition. Imp. paper, cloth, $2.75; Library sheep, $3.50.

History of Palestine, or The Holy Land. By M. Russell. 11 P. Engravings. 48 mo. Cloth, 75 cents.

Christian Baptism. — With its Antecedents and Consequences. By Alexander Campbell. Cloth, 25 cents.

Pasover and Lord's Supper. — By J. W. Beecher. An able work of great merit, and should be in the hands of every person, who wishes to thoroughly understand this subject. Bound in good cloth, 278 pages. Price, 75 cents.

Buck's Theological Dictionary. — Containing definitions of all religious terms, a comprehensive view of every topic in the general Divinity, account of all the principal denominations, and an accurate statement of the most remarkable transactions and events recorded in ecclesiastical history. 8vo. Sheep, $2.00.

A Sermon on Baptism. — Delivered by Bro. S. H. Bashor in the Elk Lake Congregation, Somerset county, Pa. A neatly printed pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 20 cents.

Ancient and Modern Egypt. — View of Ancient and Modern Egypt. By M. Russell, LL. D. Engravings. 18 mo. Cloth, 75 cents.

Need's Theological Works, or a Vindication of Primitive Christianity. By Peter Need. Bound in cloth; 472 pages, price, $1.25.

Christianity Utterly Incompatible with War. — Being one of Twenty Reasons, for a change in my church relations. By J. W. Stein. Price, 25 cents; 25 copies, $5.00.

Family Rules and Regulations. — By J. W. Stein. Beautifully printed in three colors on good card board. Intended for framing, and should be in every family. Price 20 cents.

Voice of the Seven Thunders; Or, Lectures on the Book of Revelations. By J. L. Martin. Among modern books this is really a curiosity. You can't help but understand it. 21.50.

The Pillar of Fire; or, Israel on Bondage. — Being an account of the Wonderful Scenes in the Life of the Son of Pharaoh's Daughter, Moses. — Together with Picturesque Sketches of the Hebrews under their Masters. By Rev. J. H. Ingraham, LL. D., author of "Prince of the House of David." Large 12mo. Cloth, $2.00.

Trine Immersion Traced to the Apostles. — Being a collection of historical quotations from modern and ancient authors, proving that a threefold immersion was the only method of baptizing ever practiced by the apostles and their immediate successors. By J. H. Moore. 64 pages, price, 25 cents; five copies, $1.10; ten copies, $2.00.

The Last Supper. — A beautiful, colored picture, showing Jesus and his disciples at the table, with the supper spread before them; He has just announced that one of them should betray him. Each of the twelve present is pointed out by name in the margin of the picture. Price, one copy, 15 cents; 2 copies, 25 cents; 10 copies, $1.00.

The "One Faith," Vindicated. — By M. M. Eschelman. 40 pages, price, 15 cents; 8 copies, $1.00. Advocates and earnestly contends for the faith once delivered to the saints.

The Holy Land. — This is the name of a beautiful lithographic map, giving a complete Bird's Eye view of the Holy Land, and enables the observer, at a glance to behold all the cities, towns, rivers, brooks, lakes, valleys and mountains. In short, it is a perfect picture of the whole country from Damascus to the desert of Gaza. It is the most complete thing of the kind we ever saw. By a few hours careful study, the different places mentioned in the Bible about Palestine, may be firmly fixed in the mind, making the reader as familiar with the location of these different places, as the county in which he lives; thus aiding him in understanding the Bible. Those who think there was not water enough in Palestine to immerse people should carefully study this map. It is printed in beautiful colors, suspended on rollers ready for hanging; is 23 by 35 inches in size, and will be sent by express for $1.50.

Eusebius' Ecclesiastical History. — This author lived in the fourth century, had a thorough knowledge of the History of the church, and his writings are therefore of considerable value to the student of Ancient History. 8vo. Cloth, 2.50.

Campbell and Owen Debate. — Containing an examination of the Social System, and all the systems of Skepticism, ancient and modern. Complete in one volume. This will always remain a leading work on the evidences of Christianity. $1.75.

Brethren's Envelopes. — Prepared especially for the use of our people. They contain, neatly printed on the back, a complete summary of our position as a religious body. Price 15 cents per package—25 in a package—or 50 cents per hundred.

Brethren's Hymn Books. — 1 copy Turkey Morocco, post-paid, $1.00; per dozen, post-paid, $11.00. 1 copy Arabic or Sheep, post-paid, 75 cents; per dozen, post-paid, $8.25; per dozen, by express, $7.25. When ordering hymn books sent by express, it is expected that the purchaser will pay the express charges at the office where the books are received.

Biblical Antiquities. — By Dr. John Nevin. We know no work, intended to enlighten the reader on Bible customs, etc., that we can recommend to all Bible readers more cheerfully than this volume. It should be in every library. 12mo. Cloth, 1.50.

Union Bible Dictionary. — A Bible Dictionary giving an accurate account and description of every place, as well as a history of all persons and places mentioned in the Bible. It will be found particularly useful in all Bible studies. 100 pages, with maps and numerous illustrations. Cloth, $1.50.

Historical Chart of Baptism. — This Chart exhibits the years of the birth and death of the Ancient Fathers who have written on the action in baptism—the length of their lives, who of them lived at the same period, and shows how early it was for them to transmit to each succeeding generation, a correct understanding of the Apostolic method of baptizing. By J. H. Moore. Price, 25 cents.

The Origin of Single Immersion. — Showing that single immersion was invented by Eusebius and as a practice, cannot be traced beyond the middle of the fourth century. By Elder James Quinter. It is a tract of sixteen pages and the brethren should take an active part in giving it an extensive circulation. Price, 2 copies, 10 cents; 5 copies, 25 cents; 30 copies $1.00.

Truth Triumphant. — In six numbers of four pages each. Baptism, Grace and Truth, Feet-washing, Brotherly Kindness, Non-resistance, Non-omniphilism, Measured, and Found too Short. Price 1 cent each, or 50 cents per hundred.

The Throne of David. — From the consecration of the Shepherds of Bethlehem to the rebellion of prince Absalom. — By the Rev. J. H. Ingraham, LL. D., author of "The Prince of the House of David," and the "Father of lies." With five splendid illustrations. Large 12mo. Cloth, $2.00.

Campbellism Weighed in the Balance, and Found Wanting. — A written sermon in reply to Elder C. — By J. H. Moore. It is a well printed tract of sixteen pages. Should be circulated by the household in almost every locality. Price, 2 copies, 10 cents; 6 copies, 25 cents; 25 copies $1.00; 100 copies, $3.00.

Sabbatarian. — By M. M. Eschelman. 16 pages, price 10 cents; 15 copies $1.00. Treats the Sabbath question, fully showing that the observance of the seventh-day Sabbath passed away with all other Jewish days, and that the "first day of the week," is the preferred day for Christians to assemble in worship.

Reason and Revelation. — By R. Milligan. This work should not only be read, but carefully studied by every minister in the brotherhood. $2.50.

Student's New Testament History. — With an Introduction, connecting the History of the old and New Testament. Edited by Wm. Smith, LL. D. With maps and wood-cuts. Large 12mo. Cloth, $2.00.

Philosophy of the Plan of Salvation. — 12mo. By J. D. Walker. This is a work of uncommon merit, clear, instructive, and should be in the hands of all Bible students. Cloth, $1.50.

Why I left the Baptist Church. — By J. W. Stein. A tract of 16 pages, and intended for an extensive circulation among the Baptist people. Price, 2 copies, 10 cents; 6 copies, 25 cents; 100 copies $3.00.

— 25% Any of the above works sent post-paid on receipt of the enclosed price. Address:

MOORE & ESHELMAN,
 LANARK, Carroll Co., Ill.

W. U. R. R. Time Table.

Day passenger train going east leaves Lanark at 12:25 P. M., and arrives in Racine at 6:13 P. M.

Day passenger train going west leaves Lanark at 2:14 P. M., and arrives at Rock Island at 5:50 P. M.

Night passenger trains, going east and west, meet and leave Lanark at 2:18 A. M., arriving in Racine at 10:00 A. M., and at Rock Island at 6:00 A. M.

Freight and Accommodation Trains will run west at 12:10 A. M., 10:50 A. M., and east at 12:10 A. M. and 4:20 P. M.

Tickets are sold for above trains only. Passenger trains make close connection at Western Union Junction.

G. A. SMITH, Agent.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK.

"Behold I Bring You Good Tidings of Great Joy, which Shall be unto All People."—LUKE 2: 10.

Vol. III.

Lanark, Ill., April 18, 1878.

No. 16.

The Brethren at Work.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY

—BY—

J. H. MOORE & M. M. ESHELMAN.

—:O:—

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

R. H. MILLER, - - - - - LADOGA, IND.
J. W. STEIN, - - - - - NEWTONIA, MO.
D. VANIMAN, - - - - - VIRDEN, ILL.
D. D. MENTZER, - - - - - WAYNESBORO, PA.
MATTIE A. LEAR, - - - - - URBANA, ILL.

HOME, SWEET HOME.

BY J. W. SOUTHWOOD.

WHERE is no place like home;
No place on this earth so sweet;
For it is a place of contentment here,
When we all round the altar meet.
Home, sweet home; home, sweet home;
No place on this earth so sweet;
Home, sweet home; home, sweet home;
When we all round the altar meet.

Oh, there is no place like home;
No place on this earth so dear,
For the love that dwelleth within this home
Casteth out all earthly fear;
Home, sweet home; home, sweet home;
No place on this earth so dear;
Home, sweet home; home, sweet home;
Casteth out all earthly fear.

But there's a home above,
Where Christ sits upon His throne.
That is far more sweet—filled perfect love.
Oh, that is the sweetest home
Where Christ sits upon His throne;
Home, sweet home; home, sweet home;
Oh, that is the sweetest home.

THE TITLE OF HONOR.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

To Sister L. H. Miller, of West Virginia:—

AMBITION and emulation are gifts of God. It is their perversion that the Scriptures condemn. Ambitionless means fatuity. Self-esteem, as implanted by God in our pristine constitution, is one of the most dazzling gems in our crown of glory. To think highly of ourselves, as God means we shall, and as He does of Himself, is salvation. In sin we are self-idolaters, we are puffed up as fools, as though alienation from God were Heaven. When the prodigal "came to himself" he found his manhood, and in it he found God. We cannot get Duty out of our make, even if we have identified ourselves with the devil in character. To sit immorally out of the soul, is to cut off the possibility of both Heaven and Hell. The being who cannot live forever in sin, cannot sin at all, neither can he be holy. To sin is to have a moral constitution identical with that of God. The power to do evil is the same with that which sustains God eternally in holy character. He is not holy because He must, but because He will. Man was no more under necessity to sin than God. This equality with God is synonymous with immortality. Sin separates from God as soul and body are divorced in death. To sin is to die, though we live. To live as God lives is Eternal Life. Death is the perversion of life. Eternal perversion is Eternal Death. Sinners are as truly dead and damned on this side the grave as hereafter—not as deeply and hopelessly.

To be lost does not mean going to hell, but living in sin. Christ came to seek and save the lost, not in the lake of fire, but on earth. His "high-calling" is to sanctify. This is the glorious title of the God-born—SAINTS. In this all our constitutional elements are included. Nothing is defecated but sin. Self-esteem, self-will, anger, what grand, Heaven-lifting, bliss-infusing powers are these when once they are possessed and exalted and swayed by the indwelling of God. Then it is even Divinely-graund to be "wroth" on the death-bed (2 Kings 13: 14-20). "The wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God (James 1: 20). But to be "righteous as God is righteous," and to share His indignation against sin, against ourselves, is to attain to the highest glory of sanctity. Such a being is LOVE. To be offended only for righteousness' sake, is the dearest, sweetest, most lovable character conceivable.

How few know how to be angry, or ambitious, or self-appreciating as saints. "Love beareth all things." "Not easily provoked," runneth after enemies with tears of entreaty, and is so glad to win a mocker and persecutor to holiness, that it forgets the slime and venom that have been spit into its face. These beautiful, God-configured souls are few. They have found the strait gate, they walk in the narrow way, they are saints. With great power they give witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus (Acts 4: 33). They are "risen with Christ, and seek those things which are above." They are dead and they live, they are risen and yet on earth, their treasure is in heaven, and their hearts are knit with the heart of Jesus, they are the joy of the angels, the salt of a corrupt generation, and the light of the world.

If we had as many saints as round coats and borderless caps, we would be "beautiful as Tirzah, comely as Jerusalem, looking forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners" (Cant. 6: 4-10). Many suppose that they can be saints and fashion-worshippers at the same time. They go outside the sacred circle and dally with the harlots of the world, and in their unhallowed embrace carry the Midianitish Cosbi into the tent of holiness (Num. 25: 6-15). Some day the javelin of God's Phenehas will rend their bellies, and fill them with the fire and worms of Hinnom. Others have become so infatuated with the regimentals of God's host, that they undertake to count the saints by the number of round coats and broad rims. Would to God we all had round coats. But ten thousand times more do I wish we were all saints. That we have many unconverted dandies in the church is sadly and shamefully true. And that we have many with whom the round coat is but a screen of corruption, is equally, and no less sadly and shamefully patent. "Be ye holy, for I AM HOLY." This is saintship. Here unholy pride and fashion and foppishness are given to the flames.

Just as little as a holy heart can bring forth the paraphernalia of lust and self-idolatry, can a plain, church-sanctioned garb cover a greedy, selfish, world-loving, mammon-worshipping heart. I feel mutterably sorrowful to write thus. But I wish to awaken in you and others, or to deepen and confirm if already awakened, the solemn, fearfully solemn conviction, that nothing can substitute holiness in the Day of Judgment. Those who can here maintain their standing by minute conformity to the order of the church in spite of tempers and dispositions and greed and carnality which might make devils blush, must in the final verdict take their place with the openly profane and godless, and will perhaps sink deeper into damnation than if they had been as gay in appearance as they were selfish and worldly in spirit. My heart is far more burdened that what is good and proper in its place in so many instances usurps the place of Christ, as that fleshly, unrenewed hearts should express themselves in appropriate ornament. I wish all the unholy were arrayed in true, life-expressing habiliments, so that the round coat and plain cap might be greater power for good in the world. But as it is, they have become widely distrusted. O the beautiful, God-seeded, Heaven reflecting, bliss-inheriting saints. They are known everywhere. The signature of God is on their foreheads. They are the favorites of angels. The devil knows them, hated them, fears them. The world knows them and trusts them. And they know God. Temples of the Holy Ghost. Representatives of Jesus. These have a right to the round coat, and make it the index of the Cross and Heaven. O God, multiply the saints.

COME BEHOLD THE WORKS OF THE LORD.

BY C. HOPE.

HE maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth, he breaketh the bow and enteth the spear in sunder; he burneth the chariot in the fire (Ps. 46: 9). In Salem (Jerusalem) also is his tabernacle; there brake he the arrows of the bow, the shield and the sword and the battle (Ps. 76: 23). I will break the bow and the sword and the battle out of the earth (Hosea 2: 18). And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into ploughshares and their spears into pruninghooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. Come ye and let us walk in the light of the Lord (Is. 4: 5). In the last days it shall come to pass that the mountains of the house of the Lord shall be established in the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills; and people shall flow unto it. And many nations shall come, and say, Come and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths; for the law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.

And he shall judge among many people, and rebuke strong nations afar off, and they shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruninghooks; nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more (Micah 4: 1-3).

When did that law go out from Zion, and the word here spoken of from Jerusalem?

Did not the perfect Law of Liberty and the Gospel of Jesus Christ begin at Jerusalem?

Most assuredly it did.

Can we expect any other Law or any other word to go out from there, concerning this matter?

Surely not, for the Lord has in those last days spoken to us by His Son.

Very well, then the Gospel most emphatically forbids war; for the prophet claims as a result of the teaching of the Lord's ways, when they walk in His paths, that the above shall be fulfilled. When it is a plain fact that all who go to war or teach war, teach the doctrine of the devil and walk in the paths of the wicked, and will receive the promise of everlasting destruction, when He will appear to take vengeance on all those who know not God, and have not obeyed the Gospel of Jesus Christ (Thes. 1: 8).

But look at the happiness it will be to live where peace will reign; thank God He has said, it will come to pass; but the question naturally arises: When will it be? I will gather all nations and will bring them down into the valley of Jehoshaphat, where I will sit and judge all the nations round about, and speedily will I return your recompense upon your own head" (Joel 3: 2, 12, 14). "And I saw heaven opened, and behold a white horse, and he that sat upon him was called Faithful and True, and in righteousness he doth judge and make war. And I saw the beast, and the kings of the earth, and the armies gathered together to make war against him that sat on the horse, and against his army. And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him, with which he deceived that had received the mark of the beast, and them that worshiped his image. These both were cast alive into a lake of fire burning with brimstone" (Rev. 19: 11, 19, 20, 21).

Amen, ye Lord let it soon be done, it is just kings and commandets, and powerful men who cause war and carnage everywhere; they have been a blessing to none, and only a curse to themselves. Hasten the work that soon we may see our poor blacksmiths earn their bread by fulfilling thy work.

Times are hard, no money, no bread, no work; everything is invested in implements of war. If you want better times, repent and believe the Gospel, become children of peace, and the Lord will not only save you in the coming fearful combat, but add to you daily bread. Sinner turn now.

MORE PREACHERS WANTED.

BY LONDON WEST.

NOTICE one common feature in letters, especially those from brethren of the West. It is, that they in their part do not have enough ministers, and for relief they look Eastward to have one sent to fill the void so general in the West. We have no doubt as to the lack, for that is common both East and West, North and South, but that the supply should always come from the East is a mistake. There are no more ministers in the older States than are needed here, and our wish is that there were only more that would work. I am well aware that in some places there are more than are at work, in preaching the Word, but no workers that we can spare. Those who will be idle here, will be idle there. Change of location will hardly change the disposition, even of a preacher. Those preachers that we could spare and would be willing to see go, you would not want, for when you ask for harvesters, you want no drones, but workers. It is the same everywhere. We not only want those who can work, but those who will work.

The man who will freely work for a cause, must love it, and those who will not work for so good a cause, as that of Christ, cannot love it very much. Therefore you do not want such. Our advice to those who lack preachers, is, to come together and choose one or more as you have need, and that too of your own flock. These can learn to preach better and sooner, if they will, where speakers are few than if they are plenty; and as well in the West as in the East, for they must learn it somewhere. Beside, you will find that home-bred material is better than imported. A dozen members without a preacher is a sad mistake.

The primitive church at its dawn, and with the prince of Preachers with them were all ministers. Then brethren do not sigh for a preacher, but choose one, and then do not let him do it all, but go with him and work too, and you will soon be surprised to see what you and he can do. Do not think you have no timber, as some say, to make them out of, for you only want one who can tell what he has learned, so that you can understand it. The Bible is the Fund of Truth; with it all who can talk, can preach. Let the motto be: "Take care of the Truth and God will take care of the church."

THE LORD'S POCKET BOOK.

WHOSE pocket book is that which you "carry?" said a friend to a business man, as he drew a well-filled wallet from his pocket.
"Why, my own of course; whose else could it be?" was the prompt reply.
"To whom the pocket book belongs depends on another question. If you belong to the Lord, I guess the purse is His also."
"Well," said the man thoughtfully, "I hope I do belong to the Lord, but your remark throws a new light on this subject. It never impressed me before as it does just now, that I am to carry and use it as pocket book my 'pocket book,' as my Lord directs. I must think this matter out, for I confess honestly I never have looked at it in the light in which you place it."
—The Christian Given.

NO HELL.

BY JAS. T. BECKER.

No hell; so says the pulpit orator
Of Brooklyn; so say also millions more
Who seem to fear no hell; they live in sin.
In sin persistently life's journey run,
Though wide the gates of hell still open stand,
Amid the willing sinner to receive;
And thousands go that way in plume and pride
Unchanged and unreformed, to enter there,
No hell. What daring contradiction thus,
Of God's unchanging Word, His puny man
In his revolt against eternal truth,
Audacity enough to contradict
His Maker? Who is he that dares deny
What God asserts? How wicked is that man!
There was a hell, a place of torment, once,
And one of olden time was banished there
To spend eternal night, in woe and pain
Tormented, where the worm that never dies
Must dwell in the bottomless abyss
Of fire unquenchable, forevermore.
The children of this sinful world belong
To Satan's kingdom, and they all are out
Upon the great highway of sin and death,
Intoxicated with the pride of life,
With fleshly lusts that war against the soul,
And also with idolatry of self.
In pleasure and in sin glide on their bark
Upon the great Niagara of time,
Till over the eternal vortices
They go to endless ruin down—to hell.
No hell; shall all this populous Babylon
In wickedness and profanation vile,
Be turned to heaven to make hell in heaven?
God forbid. How cannot reverse the law
Immutable ordained of God. There is
A hell, a fiery deep, a reservoir
Of wickedness, a place of woe and pain,
Eternal torment for unyielding souls
Who disbelieve, and will not be reclaimed.

THE ORIGINAL GROUND AGAIN.

BY D. C. MOULAW.

I CANNOT withhold an expression of commendation which I conceived to be the "sound doctrine" taught in brother Moore's article on "The original ground" in No. 7 current volume of the BROTHERS AT WORK. It is so brimful of truth and righteousness that it should constitute the key note for all the legislation of the church, and should more fully elaborated be republished in tract form and sent to the home of every brother and sister in the church.

It has been painfully evident to every reflecting brother that the opinions of our old brethren (blessed be their memory) were being held as sacred and inviolable as the doctrine of the Bible, and even paramount to known apostolical usages. Indeed instances are not wanting in my observation and bitter experience where the example of our Savior Himself was openly ignored in defense to what is affirmed to be the example of the brethren. And it is equally apparent that our legislation, both national and local, is determined with sole and direct reference and devotion to the opinions of the brethren who lived one hundred (or less) years ago.

It cannot be denied that we are following in the boisterous wake of the denominations surrounding us, in thus choosing them for our pattern. For instance, Lutherans believe, and practice substantially what Luther taught, Methodists endorse so much of the Bible as set forth by Wesley, Episcopalianism is just what the ancient man-made creeds make it, Campbellites are orthodox in proportion to their devotion to the opinions of the great Alexander, and so on to the end of the list; and it is a sad commentary on the weakness of human nature, that the brethren have defiled themselves with the same adhesive slime, and, to-day, determine a member's title to the privileges of religion and the blessing of heaven, not by the uprightness of their lives, neither by their un-deviating fidelity to the doctrine of the Bible, but by their devotions to the opinions of our old brethren. My brethren do not cry out in astonishment at the expression of such sentiments. Instances can be multiplied ad infinitum at testing the truth of the foregoing declaration. As brother Moore says with great and solemn truth, we thus substantially "make gods of these old brethren." When we adopt any person's views or opinions without inquiring whether they are right or wrong, we blindly assume that they are infallible, and thus practically make them equal with God.

It is apparent from an expression of our dear brother Kurtz (he being dead yet speaketh), on page three of the BROTHERS AT WORK "Encyclopedia" that they thought and acted for themselves, and felt free to pursue any course when it seemed in consonance with the Word of God." I may be allowed to criticize our dear brethren editors for their sensitiveness in dealing with such momentous questions. Occupying a position that enables them to see their course of events, it cannot be presumed that they are not cognizant of the fatal tendencies to which brother Moore adverts, and yet this is the first direct trumpet sound from that quarter. Their attention has been directed repeatedly to the great wrongs that brethren have suffered who would not fall down and pay idolatrous homage to our ancestors, and the chains of a moral servitude, worse than papal are being riveted on the minds of the brethren (see brother Mentzer's astounding proposition to abolish the empire of the mind and to make the "old order" synonymous with the doctrines of the Bible, published in a leading journal, the Visitor No. 2).

A book is being slowly manufactured by our annual convention, a chapter added thereto each year, that bids fair before the lapse of one hundred years to be as voluminous as the Bible, and already its teachings are to us what the hateful creeds and disciplines of other denominations are to them, a supplement to the Bible, and yet not a word of warning comes from the sanctum of our beloved editors. If the creation of that wonderful book continues in proportion to the growth of the church, the coming generations will have an heirloom that will plant their pillows with thorns. Brother Zuck should anticipate their necessities and organize a department in his school with especial reference to the interpretation of its heterogeneous precepts.

It seems now to have occurred to the brethren who are molding the history of the church, that God has never smiled, but always frowned on the productions of annual or ecumenical councils. Where are the minutes of Annual Meetings of the seventeenth century? (don't tell me that was before the church was organized). Where are the minutes of anti-Nicene councils as supplemental guides to the church? Where are the apostolical canons as authority in church government? God has destroyed them, and I say here what I said in a district council three years ago under the protest of beloved brethren, that God would destroy our council minutes if they ever encroached on the supremacy of the Bible, and a very indifferent observer of events can see that in all matters where the two conflict, the former has the precedence, and where the Bible is silent, it raised its supplemental trumpet voice with all assurance and authority of Divinity and infallibility.

It behooves brother Moore now, in view of the fact that he has initiated the important move to retrace to the old apostolic order, a proposition I endorse with all my heart, to give the church a clear exposition of that order. He proclaimed in the last volume of the BROTHERS AT WORK, "that it is as clear as the noon we have not got the apostolic order," and I have been solicitous to have him complete his important work. Do not be intimidated, dear brother, by fears of opposition from brethren of diverse views. We, as a church, owe our celebrity to the apostolical character of our habits and our worship, and if we have failed in our efforts to reproduce the purity of primitive Christianity, it is incumbent on those who are capable of doing it, to lead us into the old path from which we have swerved. And if there are men in our association who will oppose such a work, (which may be unfortunately the case) it will only manifest more clearly the truth of the inspired declaration, "There must be heresies amongst us."

My reference in the foregoing to the Annual Meeting and its work is not dictated by any captious hostility to our old or to our young brethren who have participated in its deliberations. I have several honest objections to it, based on what I conceive to be Gospel grounds.

1. The church did not get into the practice of assembling in annual ecumenical council for several hundred years after the apostolic age. The Acts of the apostles and their epistolary effusions which we revere as inspiration afford, astonishing to say, not a single instance of such a council, and they cover a period of about sixty years. The council referred to in Acts 15, was purely local.

2. We are embodying a code of laws that are destined to be revered as equivalent to the Bible itself, before another generation passes away. Indeed already its rulings and orders are held in almost idolatrous veneration, and a hundred years hence, if God does not mete out to it the same fate that has befallen all other human productions that arose in rivalry to the Bible, its decisions will be venerated as inspiration, and men and women will be judged by it as they now are by the Bible.

3. Men now in high places besiege it yearly, and with marvelous insidiousness, for decisions to enable them to obtain some personal advantage or to ruin some hated rival, and in too many instances they accomplish their work, and their helpless victims have no other resource but to suffer out their painful existence under the calumny and reproach of legalized injustice.

4. It encumbers and clogs the work of an honest minister of the Gospel who thinks he should preach the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. When we tell the people that the terms of membership and communion in our association are solely in submission to the doctrine of the Bible, it is very annoying to have a book containing more rules and regulations than the New Testament, to intrude its voluminous presence before our face as a spectre to tell us that our declaration is not true, and that we know it. It thus places our ministers in very embarrassing positions sometimes which will greatly impede our triumphant passage through the thrilling scenes of the final judgment.

There are other causes upon which my objections are based, but the foregoing shall suffice for the present. I have now to say that I am in favor of council meetings for the purpose of adjusting difficulties and of maintaining a unanimity of sentiment and practice on the cardinal doctrines of the Bible, and not on trivial questions that relate to our private and personal tastes and habits. In such matters, the tastes of one brother are as dear to him as those of another brother are to him, and it is ridiculous and tyrannical of any combination of men to arrogate to themselves the power to force their brethren to accept their tastes and habits.

But in the adjustment of difficulties there could be no possible combination of circumstances that would render it necessary to call an assembly of the whole church. Not one case in a score would ever cross the threshold of the district council, if brethren would make a proper use of the Bible, and were moved by the Holy Spirit that permeates its teachings. And a maintenance of unanimity of sentiment and practice on the cardinal doctrines of the Bible, does not by any means require an annual council. But few cases of disagreement have occurred in the last century and it has not appeared in the evidence that they were prevented by the intervention of our A. M. Possibly a sole reliance on the divine aid through the medium of prayer and faith, would have been more available than the assistance of the A. M.

We hope that brother Moore will respond at his earliest convenience to the wishes of a large number of his brethren.

(See another page for editorial remarks.)

THE LORD'S SUPPER.

BY JOHN FORNEY.

NUMBER II.

WE hear Christ say to His disciples, I say unto you I will not any more eat thereof until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God (Luke 22: 16). And He took bread and gave thanks, and brake it and gave unto them, saying, this is my body which is given for you; this do in remembrance of me. Likewise also the cup after supper, saying, This cup is the New Testament in my blood, which is shed for you.

There is no record in the Bible of any supper or passover ever commanded or eaten before this one eaten by Jesus and His disciples, that was preceded by Feet-washing and followed by the Communion of the body and blood of Christ (John 13: 4-28; Luke 22: 15-20). And we also know that the Law was very strict in the observance of the passover to the very day, or death was the result. Modern, great and wise men tell us, the Jews had lost the proper day, and ate it on the sixteenth day of Nisan, while Christ ate His (passover) supper on the proper day. They must also prove that God also had forgotten the proper day, or else the Law had lost its power to cut off (see Ex. 12: 15; 9: 13).

THE LORD'S SUPPER CONTRASTED WITH THE PASSOVER OF THE LAW.

The one in Moses' Law, had no Feet-washing, no bread and cup of Communion connected with it (Ex. 12). While Christ's (passover) supper had it all (John 13; Luke 22). In the Law to Moses, the command was to roast it with fire, eat it with bitter herbs, with unleavened bread. And thus shall ye eat it with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet and your staff in your hand (Ex. 12: 8-11). And none of you shall go out at the door of his house until the morning (verse 22). But in Christ's passover we read nothing of the kind. Modern critics tell us Christ and the apostles had no shoes, and therefore He washed their feet because of filth. But Christ said, ye are clean every whit (John 13: 10). At this supper they were all seated at a table, and one leaning on Jesus bosom (verse 23-28; 21: 20). And they all went out before morning (Matt. 26: 30; Mark 14: 26). And we read not that they burned anything with fire in the morning as commanded by the Law (Ex. 12: 10).

The Law called for an holy convocation, and an offering made by fire unto the Lord (Lev. 23: 7, 8). At the time Moses and Aaron and his sons made such offerings by fire; they were to wash their hands and feet lest, they die. They washed their own feet (Ex. 30: 17-20; 40: 30, 31). But Christ washed His disciples feet and wiped them. The first was eaten by Moses and his people the last night they were in the bondage of Egypt. The Lord ate His supper with the disciples the last night they were in bondage of sin.

OF THE BLOOD OF THE LAMB.

Israel spilt the blood of the lamb and sprinkled it on the door post of the houses (Ex. 12: 7), before the eating of the passover to save them from the destroyer. The Lord Jesus Christ ate His passover (supper) with His disciples before He spilt His blood, and He stroke it not on the door posts of houses; but He spilt (sprinkled) it upon all nations to save them, not from a physical death, but from the death of sin under which all men were plunged by the fall of Adam's transgression (Rom. 5). And this Christ done all after supper, and took the power of Him who had the power of death, that is the devil (Heb. 2: 14), and delivered them, who through fear of death were all their life-time subjects to bondage (verse 15). In the first passover, the first-born was slain in Egypt. But after Christ's supper, the first sin was slain.

Many other differences could be produced; but may this suffice to convince the reader, that Christ ate not a passover to fulfill the Law, but one to be fulfilled in His kingdom; and Christ died to fulfill the Law.

ITS CONTINUANCE.

The Israelites were to continue it throughout their generation; and had its fulfillment in the end of their Law. Christ is the end of that Law (Rom. 10: 4).

The Lord said, I have given you an example, that you should do as I have done to you (John 13: 15). If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them (verse 17). And the Lord said, He will not any more eat thereof until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God (Luke 22: 16). Hence we see that it is to be kept throughout the churches. Paul says, let us keep the feast (1 Cor. 5: 8). Paul taught it, and established it in the church at Corinth, and they kept the ordinance as He delivered it unto them, and he praised them for it. But he reproved them sharply for the disorder that crept in among them, in not tarrying one for another, but one ate before the other his own supper, and one was hungry and another drunken; and in that order of things some had to take the Communion without the supper. Paul tells them he received it of the Lord, and tells them the Lord blessed the bread and cup when He had supped (1 Cor. 11). He took the bread and the cup, after supper, and when He had given thanks He brake it and gave it to them (Luke 22: 19, 20). The church still kept the feast, when Peter and Jude wrote their epistles is evident from 2 Peter 2: 13; Jude 12.

THE TWO VETERANS.

AN aged and well known brother speaks thus of the experience of himself and brother Peter Nead in breaking off from the use of tobacco. It is copied from the April No. of the Vindicator:

"My old brother Peter Nead and myself were slaves to the habit of using tobacco. It may have been before you were acquainted with him. He told me what led him to put it away, but did say how hard it was for him to do it. With me it was a severe trial—I was years in gaining the conquest. For twenty years I used it only in private, and possibly would have done so until this day, only for the reason that I never allowed myself to have a particle of tobacco in my mouth in my private devotion, and only used it when I retired at the call of nature for evacuation. And I remember on one occasion, twenty years ago, that I so retired in a grove in Illinois. I there found a dear old brother smoking his pipe. He blushed (he did not know my habit), and he apologized. He thought it needful for his health and comfort, and he did not wish to offend any one, so he went alone. But it was soon after that event I quit it. The question came to my mind, Do I love Jesus, and is this practice acceptable to him? As I said, I never had tobacco in my mouth when I retired for devotion. My mind was devotionally engaged, and it was under such circumstances I asked myself, "Do I love Jesus?" A solemn thought followed. I threw away the nasty weed, and said audibly, but in the hearing only of God and the holy angels, "Live or die, I will never use that thing any longer." And I kept the vow. And to my surprise the appetite left me, and my health was even better than when I used it. My head is more clear, though I suppose I must always suffer some loss in point of health, for my long indulgence in that and other violations of the laws of nature."

AVOIDANCE.

BY D. P. SAYLOR.

IN No. 13, page 4 BROTHERS AT WORK I see what is called a strange case, which came off in the court of common pleas at Byrant, Ohio, in which Joseph Lichty obtained a verdict for $2000. damages against John Holdeman, a religious zealot.

I presume the said John and party will construe this into an act of persecution for Christ's sake, or to suffer for righteousness' sake. But some will hold to the opinion that the Byrant, Ohio jury served John well. The book, "A history of the church of God," he published, a copy of which I received by mail (I presume he sent it) is a libel against the Christian religion in general, and against the German Baptist church of the Brethren in particular.

In said book, John holds in avoidance all who dare differ with him in matters of religious faith and practice, and all upon whom his ecclesiastical authority he meted out, are committed under his law of avoidance as set forth in the case referred to.

I have on different occasions said to those who hold and practice similar practices, founded on certain ambiguous passages of Scripture, that holding a member of the church in such a state of avoidance as John has done, would be actionable for slander and damage under the laws of Maryland. But as that system is not practiced here, there has never been a case for trial. But it now appears the law of Ohio has done what I presumed the law of Maryland would do.

Any system of religion that will lower, or degrade man in the estimation of his fellow-man as not to be eaten with, or to so demoralize his social relations with husband, wife, or children, is not the religion God sent into the world by His Jesus Christ. Time was when, at the rebuke of Peter, Ananias and Sapphira his wife may fall dead at his feet. And at the rebuke of Paul, Elymas may grope in blindness; but now God commands all men everywhere to repent. He has wisely withdrawn the exercise of this power, as well as the power itself. The system, if practiced in the name and authority of Jesus Christ, is a libel on Christ Himself, as He never taught any such a doctrine, or enjoined any such a practice. Then while John Holdeman and party has been well served, let others who hold similar views take timely warning.

SENSATIONAL PREACHING.

BY W. J. H. DUFMAN.

THERE seems to be considerable objection to what is called sensational preaching. But we fear more from prejudice than proper reflection. To be sensational, is to excite interest, and sinners must become interested before they can be converted. When friends are in danger, we are apt to use every effort in our power to save them. We care but little as to the means employed, so they are saved. Suppose father or mother, that a building was on fire, and a dear child inside of that building, would not your sympathies be aroused? Would you not become excited? If telling a sorrowful story would bring that child out of the flames, would you not tell it with all the tenderness of a parent's heart? Anything that would save that child you would consider lawful.

Have you ever stood by the dying bed of dear ones? If so, were not your sympathies aroused? Were you not emotional? Did not your bosom heave with tenderness? Would you not have considered any remedy lawful that would have saved the loved one? Ask your physician, and he will tell you that remedies must be changed frequently according to the constitution or condition of the patient; and that principle will hold good in persuading sinners to be healed. While some can be better reached by the thunder of Mount Sinai; others need milder influences.

One of the most essential qualities in the ministerial character, is a knowledge of human nature. He ought to be well versed in mental and physical anatomy, in order to apply the proper remedies; and if he finds that a sinner can be best brought to a sense of his duty by an appeal to his sympathies and emotional nature, he ought to (yes he will) act and speak accordingly, if he has the gift to do it. If he has not that gift, he should try to get the patient under the treatment of some other one; to save sinners from their sins ought to be his aim.

Brethren and sisters, hundreds and thousands of our dear friends, yes, of children, our brothers and sisters and bosom companions, our fathers and mothers and our fellow-men in general, are enveloped by the flames of the bottomless abyss of hell. Hell did exist anciently, it exists yet. O let us do all we can to save perishing sinners. It is highly necessary to be excited and aroused at this time. The fires of infidelity are burning all around us. Great men in the pulpit are trying to make people believe the (to the carnal mind) flattering doctrine, that there is no hell. O let us charge upon the batteries of the enemy with all the power we can command. Let us tell sinners the exciting and sorrowful story of the cross. Let us point them to the bleeding and heart-rending scene on Calvary's brow. If they do get excited a little, don't get scared; but continue on and show them the way and urge them to come out of the fire, and rest and cool themselves under the soothing shadow of the Tree of Life.

If we can arouse the bereaved parent with the thought, that by becoming converted to Christ they can after while meet and greet loved ones gone before in the land of immortal bliss, let us do so; only save them if possible. Point sinners to the right track; get them to understand what they must do to be saved. Then urge them with all the might you can summon to do their duty; you can't sacrifice too much, for one soul is worth more than all the world. Much more might be said on the above subject, but we forbear, a word to the wise is sufficient.

BENJ. FRANKLIN'S ADVICE TO TOM PAINE.

AFTER Paine had written a part of his book against the Bible, and before publishing, he sent it to Dr. Franklin, to get his opinion about it. This is the reply he got:

"I have read your manuscript with some attention. By the argument it contains against a particular Providence, you strike at the foundation of all religion. For without the belief of a Providence, that takes cognizance of, guards and guides, and may favor particular persons there is no motive to worship a Deity, to fear his displeasure, or to pray for his protection. I will not enter into any discussion of your principles, though you seem to desire it. I shall give you only my opinion, that though your reasons are subtle, and may prevail with some readers, you will not succeed so as to change the general sentiment of mankind on that subject, and the consequence of printing this piece will be a great deal of odium drawn upon yourself, mischief to you and no benefits to others. He that spits against the winds, spits in his own face.

You might easily display your talents upon a less hazardous subject, and thereby obtain a rank with our authors. For among us it is not necessary, as among Hottentots, that a youth, to be raised into the company of men, should prove his manhood by beating his mother.

I would advise you therefore not to attempt unchaining the tiger, but to burn this piece before it is seen by any other person; whereby you will save yourself a great deal of mortification by the enemies it will raise against you, and perhaps a good deal of regret and repentance.

If men are so wicked with religion, what would they be if without it?"

Paine did not take the advice of Franklin, but published to the world the "Age of Reason," and though the author is dead, yet his evil deeds still follow him.

God has fixed upon earth two gates which lead to heaven. He has placed them at the two extremities of life: one at the beginning, the other at the end. The first is that of innocence, the second that of repentance.

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE, } EDITORS.
M. M. ESHELMAN, }

BRO. S. H. BEYON is duly authorized, by us as our traveling correspondent and agent for the BRETHREN AT WORK and will receive subscriptions for the same at our regular rates. All business transacted by him for our office, will be the same as if done by ourselves.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent post-paid, to any address in the United States or Canada, for $1.50 per annum. Those sending ten names and $15.00, will receive an extra copy free of charge. For all over this number the agent will be allowed 10 cents for each additional name, which amount can be deducted from the money, before sending it to us. Money Orders, Drafts, and Registered Letters may be sent at our risk. They should be made payable to Moore & Esheleman.

Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., APRIL 18, 1878.

BROTHER O. F. YOUNT requests us to say that he has no more pamphlets for sale, against the doctrine of "Universal Restoration."

ONE was baptized in the Hickory Grove church last week. Two others, we learned, have made application for admission into the church.

If any one should chance to speak evil of you, and it be true, endeavor to correct your conduct and be a better person; but if it be untrue, then you may laugh at it.

THE members of this congregation have decided to hold their love-feast on Wednesday, May 15th, commencing at ten o'clock. The usual invitation to others. The meeting will likely last but one day.

BROTHER D. W. GEORGE, Williamsport, W. Va., writes: "Weather delightful, health excellent, church in prosperous condition. Ten additions to the church last year. Praise Him to whom all praise belongs."

SOME one at Forest City, Mo., ordered the paper sent to John H. Miller, Mound City, Mo., and to himself, but failed to give his name. Now we cannot set this thing right until we have the name of the writer.

SOME one who feels much interested in the contents of our paper has gone to the trouble of hunting up and sending to us a number of interesting items to fill up odd places. This is right. We appreciate such efforts very much and hope others will do likewise.

BROTHER R. H. MILLER writes that his health is still poor, but improving some. Hope he will soon be able for regular duty. He has been holding a very successful meeting at Cerro Gordo, Ill. Quite a number of accessions were made to the church at that place.

WE think that our readers will find the Home Circle unusually interesting this week. The way our contributors are helping us fill it with good, wholesome reading matter is commendable indeed. Hope they will make great efforts to render that department of the paper of great worth.

ONE man comes up and says, "I am safe, for here is brother B—, a church member, and I am as good as he." That may all be, but your brother B— may not be so good after all, and unless you repent both of you may be lost. They that compare themselves among themselves are not wise, but foolish, and all know what became of the foolish virgins. Better do right and set a good example for your brother B—.

BROTHER R. W. WATSON, of Four Forks, Stokes Co., N. C. says: "I want you to send me an able minister with a small family. We are needing one very much. I have to travel some twenty-five miles to hear preaching by our Brethren. If one will come I will furnish him with a horse as soon as he arrives. The reason I ask this is that I am surrounded with a class of people who need preaching and good papers to read."

WE do not object to receiving a few postage stamps occasionally where change cannot be made otherwise, but to receive no money, is not at all encouraging. We cannot buy bread, clothing, paper nor pay our hands with postage stamps. They circulate quite well among mail matter, but as a money medium for other business they will not do well. We prefer that you send us P. O. order, if possible; if not, send draft on Chicago.

As the season for holding district meetings in various parts of the brotherhood is at hand, we suggest that some one at each place take the matter into hand and send us a report of such things as may be interesting and profitable to our readers. Do not fail to send for sample copies of the BRETHREN AT WORK to use in soliciting subscribers at those meetings. Some one in the vicinity of the meetings should order sample copies.

QUITE an interest is being manifested over the propriety of taxing church property. It is proposed to exempt church property to the amount of four or five thousand dollars, but all over and above that to be taxed as other property. This is a step in the right direction, and if it does nothing more, may stop the building of such costly churches as are burdening most city congregations. If judgment and prudence cannot keep popular professing Christianity within reasonable bounds, perhaps law will.

BROTHER R. H. MILLER informs us that he is entirely out of the second edition of the "Doctrine of the Brethren Defended." He will publish another edition soon. Those wishing the book will send in their orders, and we will fill them just as soon as we can get the books. It is worthy of remark that brother Miller's book is the best defense of our doctrine yet published, and should be in every family in the brotherhood. It should be in the hands of every preacher, and if the preacher is too poor to buy the book, let some one who is able buy one for him, and thus help him to defend the truth.

I do not think God is angry with us, when we feel how rugged the road is, and even stumble a little over the larger stones that lie in the way of our feet. We are but children, all of us, and our feet are not grown enough for us to march along the stony path with our heads upright and our eyes always lifted up to the sky above us. Even when a child is clasping his father's strong hand, he cannot help but feel that his footsteps are among sharp and loose pebbles, which roll from under him as he treads; and the father is not angry when the small feet slip, and the little fingers close with a tighter grasp about his hand. How much more the heavenly Father. —Bro's Cherty.

A merchant informs us that some of our brethren have been very badly swindled by certain sharpers traveling around over the country. They are induced to sign an order for goods, and then have to pay more than what they bargained for. Farmers want to be very cautious about such things. The better way is not to deal with traveling agents that you are not in some way personally acquainted with. If you want something not kept in stock by your merchants, the better way is to have them order it for you. Deal with men whom you know to be honest, and shun traveling sharpers as you would an adder. If they want to sell you something, let them first bring it around that you may see it. Never expect to get a good thing at half price. When men offer you things for $2.00 that cost $5.00 you may depend upon it that there is something wrong somewhere. Deal with honest people, act uprightly and all will go well.

SANCTIFICATION.

THIS is expressive of a man's condition after God has had His way with him. None of our readers can afford to do without it. It will do you good, help you all through life. But perhaps neither you nor I can be fully persuaded to come up to this point without some evidence. Evidence is everything, especially right evidence, true evidence. We must, therefore, look about for some evidence so that our confidence may be strong. We go along and meet our elder Brother, Jesus; also called our Savior, which He is. Says I:

We hear much about sanctification; how are we sanctified?

"I have asked my Father to sanctify you through the truth; His word is truth."

Are we sanctified through the truth alone?

"Not simply through the truth alone; My servants will tell you the rest."

My faith begins to rest more firmly. I pass on and meet brother Paul, and I ask:

What do you know about sanctification?

"I know something."

What?

"I know that ye are washed, that is, made clean; ye are sanctified, are now holy; ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of God."

Sanctified how?

"In the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of God."

What! you don't mean to tell me that these are the only means of sanctification?

"No, not the only means; the Lord Himself asked His Father to sanctify us through His truth—not a part of it, but through all of it."

Is that all you know about sanctification?

"I know that Jesus came to do the will of God, by which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all. I know that by one offering He hath perfected forever them that are sanctified; that this same Jesus loved the church and gave himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word."

Why do thus, brother Paul?

"That he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish."

And what more?

"Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord. God hath not called us to uncleanness, but to holiness."

I go on a little ways and meet brother Peter. I say: Brother Peter, do you know anything about sanctification?

"Certainly I do. Sanctify the Lord God in your hearts. Christ is made unto us sanctification; not only sanctification, but also wisdom, and righteousness, and redemption."

This is enough. I don't want any more evidence. I am fully persuaded. My faith is firmly anchored on what God says about sanctification. He has proven His position correct, and I believe it. Dear friends, none of us need go tossed about on the waves of doubt. Sanctification does not come of ourselves, nor yet without ourselves. Holiness, which is only another name for sanctification, comes not from great knowledge; Adam had that. Nor does it come from zeal for a part of God's law; John had that. It comes not simply through outward respectability,—for the young man, who from youth up, kept the commandments, had that. It comes not alone through the desire to hear preaching, for the Jews loved that even in Ezekiel's time. It comes not by keeping company with religious people; Job and Demas did that. Nor does it come by great pretensions and loud professions; Judas Iscariot did all that.

But it comes by believing and obeying God; by walking in all the commands and statutes of Jesus, blameless; by keeping unspotted from the world, doing our duty to God, our fellow-men and ourselves. A man, then, is sanctified, made holy, when he gives himself, every hour of his life to God, obeys Him, follows where Jesus leads, doubts not a particle of His Word, believes all the facts, obeys all the commands, hopes for all the promises. He is not sanctified by prayer alone. God never said so. He is not sanctified by works alone. God never said so. He is not sanctified simply by baptism. God never said so. But he is sanctified through the truth, by the Spirit of God, by walking blameless before the Lord, by yielding himself a member of His body. God thus declares, and what God declares is true. Do you believe that you can be sanctified other than by the Lord's way? If so, where does your belief rest? Remember you and I carry about with us "a body of death." This tells us not to rely on ourselves, but on Jesus who has no such body. The "old man" often comes back and wants to thrust out the "new man," and here we want to guard the door carefully.

Now do not conclude that we are against sanctification. We are for practical sanctification, the Lord's sanctification. Jesus Himself was meek and patient. This showed holiness. He was separate from worldly people. This tells that He was pure and would not defile Himself. He was bold and uncompromising in denouncing sin. He was full of love and compassion. He sought to help others all the time. He looked not at the appearance, but at the heart. He thought more of godly, poor people than of proud and haughty kings. He was humble and lowly in heart, full of pity and sympathy for the poor and enslaved. "He that saith that he abideth in Christ ought himself so to walk even as He walked" (1 John 2:6). "Christ suffered for us, leaving an example that we should follow His steps" (1 Pet 2:21). This is the pattern for those who will be sanctified. A holy man tries to remember all these things. Love and eternal peace dwell in him who goes where Jesus goes, follows Him, believes Him, trusts Him. This is sanctification complete.

M. M. E.

FROM J. W. STEIN.

WE remain well for which we thank the Lord. Have been very busy since the discussion. Am preparing to leave home, if the Lord will, about the 1st of May. I see Ray remarks in the Battle Flag that I admitted (if I remember his statement correctly) that there was no instance in classic or sacred Greek where baptism meant more than one immersion. I admitted no such thing, but maintain that there is no instance in sacred Greek where baptizo means one dip or one action.

Fraternally,

J. W. STEIN.

REMARKS:—Yes, and he (Ray) is publishing in his paper that brother Stein admitted that there was no trine immersion in the commission. He certainly knows better than that, for brother Stein produced argument after argument just to the contrary, not one of which was met by Ray. If the gentleman will stand up to his own challenge for a written discussion with brother Stein, his readers will see whether or not trine immersion is taught in the commission. He persists in publishing a series of articles against the Brethren and does not say one word about the discussion that he himself first proposed while at Newtoma. Is it a square back down upon his part? Will he stand up to his own proposition?

We have been waiting for some time to hear from him, but as yet not one word is published about it. Our readers are looking for it, and many of the Baptist readers want to read the discussion. Mr. Ray was the first man to make the proposal. It was two days before the close of the Newtoma discussion that he offered to engage in a written debate with brother Stein. Brother Stein accepted the challenge in writing; it has already gone to the public and it remains to be seen whether he will stand to it.

I know that he tried to evade the written debate with brother Stein by reading a challenge to me on the last day of the discussion. I then and there refused to accept the challenge as it would enable him to evade the debate with brother Stein. He must now either stand to his first challenge, and engage in a written discussion with brother Stein or else back squarely down, then his challenge made to me comes next in order, and we may see what he will do in that case. The gentleman may yet have two chances before he is through.

J. W. S.

ORIGINAL GROUND AGAIN.

ON the second page of this issue will be found an article entitled the "Original Ground," by D. C. Mooney that needs some notice from us. We give it place this week that we may have occasion to offer a few thoughts that at this time seem necessary. We are glad to hear of the brother's appreciation of what we wrote, and hope that as we more fully develop the subject in future articles that he, as well as others, will have a better opinion of our general brotherhood. Since we have commenced business, several letters of a similar character have been received at this office, hence we conclude to give this one a special notice for the benefit of others who have not the cardinal points of the Bible so fully set in their minds. We, before proceeding, however, will state that Bro. Mooney's article has been in the office several weeks, but we did not get time to read it till a few days ago.

We would like it much better if the brother had manifested a little milder and a more submissive spirit while writing on the points of difference in the brotherhood. We should be very careful not to abuse any of the brethren, but always speak of them with kindness and becoming Christian courtesy. It should be remembered that we are brethren, and our cause is a common one. To call Bro. Mooney's article an "astounding proposition" etc., etc. is not speaking as kindly of our brethren as we ought; it looks as though we did not love each other and therefore harbored some ill feeling. We hope that our people will not become like other denominations and get to abusing each other. It is not letting the right kind of light shine before the world. The writing in our periodicals should be so conducted that when strangers get hold of our paper they can appropriate to us the language of Christ: "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples if ye have love one for the other."

Our former article, to which the Bro. alludes, was not written in haste, but has been the subject of much thought for several years. We have preached on the subject a number of times, but do not remember of having written much on it save what is contained in our Perfect Plan of Salvation. The article only contains the outlines of what we may have to say in the future, for it would be impossible to discuss so important a question in one short article. In our judgment it contains the only safe method of retaining apostolic purity known to exist, and if once thoroughly ventilated will be fully endorsed by all our people.

While writing on this subject we do not want to be misunderstood by any one, but desire that what we may offer to the public be handled with proper care and not misconstrued.

We are for progression, but not the kind of progression that many are now working for. The kind of progression that we are contending for, is that which makes us a separate and a distinct people from the world, a progression that is continually making us better instead of worse, a progression that leads us back to the old Apostolic church for our model and example. We are not in for that which is mixing the church up with the world, and assimilating us more and more to the corrupt ways of popular religion. When it comes to this kind of progression you may count us out; you may mark us down as an unflinching opponent. Our pleas the Bible, the old Apostolic order; the old pattern and primitive model that our ancient Brethren labored so hard to imitate. For this we shall contend, believing it to be the only safe course that we can possibly pursue.

With the vain speculations and conflicting theories of modern Christendom we have nothing to do. We propose to stand upon the foundation of the Apostles and prophets, and do all in our power to direct the minds of our readers to the same point, and thus assist in uniting our people still more and more in all things that pertain to godliness. It is worthy of remark in this connection, that there is no class of people more fully united in faith than we. The points of difference among us are in opinion and not faith. We do not differ so much about what is in the Bible, as about what is not in it, and if we, in our deliberations, would adhere a little closer to the Book it will be a good deal better for all of us.

Some of our brethren, when treating this subject, imagine that their local feelings and condition of the church, determine the character of the entire brotherhood. This they should not do. In our work at this office we are looking to the good of the entire body, and for that reason do not allow purely local difficulties to be discussed, and if possible not mentioned. We have a pretty good idea of the standing of our people, and know that, as a body, they are not so far out of the way as Bro. M. thinks. What he says may apply locally, but should not be regarded as general.

Sometimes our impressions of a difficulty depend upon the shape in which the story is presented to us. This has much to do with our impressions of church government also. We, at times, may imagine some very peculiar things, which, if properly examined, would appear quite differently. This I know by experience.

Brothers should also be careful how they write of these things in our periodicals, as they have an extensive circulation in the world, and are much read by those who do not belong to the church. Our enemies seeing these things take advantage of them and use them much to our injury. This is a point they should watch with great care. You know that a prudent herald will be very careful what it tells out of the heraldry. Let us not fail to learn a lesson from this.

To say that the "opinions of old brethren" are "being held as sacred and inviolable as the doctrine of the Bible" may be true of some congregations, but is not true of the brotherhood, nor is it true of any congregation well drilled in church government. True, some congregations in these things, have not acted as wisely as they should, and may have done some very imprudent things, but to conclude that they held the opinions of old brethren equal with the Bible will apply to but a few, and ought not to apply to any, but at any rate should be treated locally. It is a local and not a general matter. That there is too much of this kind of a spirit among our people is evident, but it cannot be removed by abusing the members; it should be treated with the greatest of care.

What Bro. M. says about us patterning after other denominations is only too true, but we may likely speak of this further along, but when he accuses our people of things like the following he is spreading the thing on a little too thick to hold well:

"It is a sad commentary on the weakness of human nature, that the Brethren have defiled themselves with the same adhesive slime, and today, determine a member's title to the privileges of religion and the blessings of heaven, not by the uprightness of their lives, neither by their unswerving fealty to the doctrine of the Bible, but by their devotion to the opinions of our old brethren. My brethren, do not cry out in astonishment at the expression of such sentiments. Instances can be multiplied ad infinitum attesting the truth of the foregoing declaration. As Bro. Moore says with great and solemn truth, we thus substantially 'make gods of those old brethren.'"

We may find a few local instances of the kind, but certainly the brotherhood is not that corrupt, or if it is, I have failed to find it out, and I am as much opposed to that kind of work as any brother in the fraternity. But does Bro. M. think it profitable to publish such assertions? Does he really think it for the good of the cause to do so? If he does, he thinks less of our reputation than what we do. We think brethren ought not to write such things for the world to read. Several of just such things have come to the office, but this is the first one that has yet found its way into the paper, and hope that those who are so opposed to certain things among our people will use a little more prudence about what they want us to put before the world.

I am for reform too, but not the reform that prompts us to abuse each other by making out that we are that corrupt. If we differ from our old brethren let us not speak so unkindly of them. I am misrepresented when Bro. M. intimates that I said we make gods of those old brethren. My language was this: "I do not believe in making gods of those ancient Brethren."

The brother should not attempt to stretch my writings too far on this subject, there is such a thing as over doing a matter. I shall likely write considerably on this question, but shall handle it as mildly as possible, and with an eye to the good of the general brotherhood, and do not think that any one ought to make of it an occasion to come out and write against the whole fraternity, nor should it be so construed as to apply against the general order of the church. We have not progressed that far yet, nor is there any likelihood of us doing so. Our progression goes the other way.

The brother says that our attention has been repeatedly directed to this matter. That is true, but the articles that were sent us were often very abusive and so personal that it would not do to publish them. When it comes to defending the truth we are not so sensitive as he supposes. Our paper is as outspoken as any respectable sheet in America. There are many questions with which we do not think it prudent to grapple for the simple reason that they are of no vital importance. We have no time to meddle with questions about which Christ and the Apostles are as silent as the grave, and then certain ones should not expect us to stand up and defend their peculiar views about certain things. It should be remembered that we belong to the church and not the church to us. I united with the church because I thought it was the church of Jesus Christ. I came in with the full intention of living up to and defending its doctrine. It would not look right for me to turn round and try to upset her entire order. I propose to have respect enough for the church to stand up in her defense and do all I can to promote her interest. Doubtless the church has at times made some sad mistakes, and I presume that we have made some too.

I deem it my duty to do my utmost to keep the church pure, and shall labor to my best ability to get her to return as much as possible to the original ground occupied by our Brethren who were first in this grand reformatory movement, but want it distinctly understood that we shall not accuse our people of priest-craft, corruptions and many other things of like character. The church, as a body, ought to be respected. When we look around and see how other churches have gone into the ways of the world,

I do not know but that we ought to be thankful that it is as well with us as it is, and God grant that we may get better instead of worse.

What Bro. M. says about the book (Minutes) that we are slowly manufacturing, is too true. What ought to be done with our minutes has with me been a matter of much serious thought for several years, and it is also engaging the thoughts of much older and more experienced heads, but whatever is done in the case should be done with the greatest prudence. When we write on that subject we are handling a very critical question, and should not act rashly. But my candid opinion is, that the church of to-day would be better off if there never had been a minute printed. Our old Brethren in the early history of the church had nothing of the kind, and I do not know but that they got along better than we. I am satisfied that they had more of this real heart religion than many of us, and the only rule of faith and practice that they had was the New Testament. That is all the church of the first century had.

Brethren, I am afraid that in some respects we have missed the mark a little, and need to go back about one hundred years and get upon the old Gospel platform that our ancient Brethren used to occupy. They started right—their principle was truly Apostolic, and their motives pure. But some of us have been a little too fast—we have been progressing a little too fast the wrong way, and to-day our A. M. is not characterized by that truly deep-seated piety that ought to pervade such meetings. I would like to see more love and good feeling prevail in our deliberations.

As before remarked, to me it is evident that our ancient Brethren started out right. They laid aside the man-made confessions of faith, repudiated the decrees of un-inspired men of every grade and order, and agreed upon the Bible and that alone as their only infallible rule of faith and practice. For their model of a true Christian and church government they went back to the first century, to the Apostolic age, and there found a pattern made by the Lord Himself. This pattern they endeavored to imitate, and though they may have made some mistakes at first, yet the principle involved in their movement was a noble one, and I would to God that every brother and sister in our fraternity had in their hearts the same feelings and reverence for the Bible that was possessed by those ancient Brethren. I am satisfied that if we were in possession of as much love for each other as they were, that we would have far less difficulties among us. If we were as zealous for the literal observance of the Bible as they, we would have less time to spend over things about which the Gospel is as silent as the grave. It is at times, painful to hear how some would-be reformers abuse the aged veterans that have stood up so nobly in defense of the Master's cause. If they, in their faith and practice, were as good as some of those old veterans our church would be better off.

The great commendable feature about those ancient Brethren was their going to the Apostles for their rule of faith and practice. They took the unadulterated truth as the man of their counsel, and did their utmost to walk in all the commandments and statutes of the Lord blameless. They never thought of imitating either each other or any body else this side the Apostolic age; their whole plea was the Bible, and for its teachings many of them sacrificed their all. And as we walk down the stream of time we find that they retained this distinctive feature for a number of years. All their difficulties were settled by the Bible. True, many of them were not well educated, yet they were honest and threw themselves right into the spirit of the Gospel, and I don't know but that they decided many things much better than we with our boasted superiority of intellectual culture.

As we have not room in this issue to finish our comments and observations, we cut the article off here, asking our readers to suspend judgment regarding the correctness of our position until they hear from us again next week.

SALOONS.

CAN any one tell what benefit drinking saloons are to a town, city or country? "They bring money into the treasury to meet necessary expenses" exclaim a dozen voters at once. Is that all? Is that argument? It sois it the best argument you can bring? Why not say that they bring want, misery, ruin into scores of families? Why not say that out of them come murderers, abusers of women and children, squalor and poverty? Say not that cities and countries are blessed by granting license to men, women and children to pour the burning, cutting fluid down their throats. Blessings never come by that road. You want the poor drunkard, the tippler, the respectable (?) drinker to spend fifty dollars that you may get five to build sidewalks, make good roads, and meet general expenses. No sir, your logic is not good. Money thus received counts nothing in making up the riches of heaven.

You tell me that there is just as much traffic in strong drinks when prohibited as when sold under sanction of the law. To the Christian, that is not the question. "Just as much" or "more" is not the question with the man of God. The question of pecuniary gain, of easing the burden of taxation by legalizing (?) the sale of intoxicating drinks, are not entertained by the followers of Jesus. To him the question is one of divine principle. Temporal gain, the saving of dollars and cents for himself at the expense of rum drinkers and saloon keepers are not the important questions with him. He looks at the ruin wrought by the degrading business, the evils that grow out of strong drink, and is against its traffic in any form whether he loses or gains money. How, then, can any one who loves Jesus, who professes to believe and obey Him, for one moment look upon the effect of rum and endorse it? How can he? Do you suppose Jesus looks upon it with the least degree of allowance? I am glad that the Lord does not require us to decide how we shall get the greatest benefit by its use, but has, from the beginning, declared a war against it. He has laid down certain principles by which we are to be governed, therefore the question as to its legalization is settled. God never authorized it, never sanctioned it, hence we are opposed to it being dealt out to poor, frail humanity in any form for the sole purpose of satisfying a depraved appetite. Principle not money is the temperance issue. Principle is everything in this question. It outweighs every argument that ever came up, or ever can come up, on the side of whiskey, secret or legalized. Point out one good thing that a saloon does and I'll point out forty cases of misery that it produces. It is simply forty against one (or nothing), happiness against misery, heaven against hell. Say not that this article was called out, save by a love of truth—a love of good society, good works, peace of God, and the blessings of heaven. Policy was not here. We are free in Christ.

M. M. E.

WE were informed that two persons were to be baptized at Yellow Creek, Ill., last Sunday. One of them seventy-eight years of age and the other twelve. Quite a contrast, but it is acceptable with the great Master of the vineyard.

THE latest news from the East show that things are in a very unsettled condition—it is neither war nor peace, but may be either. Both England and Russia are making great preparations for war, yet at the same time negotiating for peace. However the prospects for a settlement of the difficulties are better than one week ago, though it is a terribly mixed up affair.

WE are one day behind time with this issue, but hope to be fully up next week.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent from now to the end of the year for one dollar. Send the cash with the name.

PEOPLE who complain so much about hard times, and hence refuse to do anything to advance the cause of religion, should remember that the wages of sin have not yet been cut down.

EVERY body should read Reason and Revelation. It is a grand book. Price, $2.50.

WE are putting out another edition of the Perfect Plan of Salvation, and will soon be ready to fill orders. The work has had an extensive sale in the United States and Canada, and is extensively read in Denmark.

WE would like a few numbers of No. 43, containing Bro. J. S. Mohler's Railroad Sermon. Who can send them to us? If sent we would return them. The sermon is to be published in tract form after awhile.

The Home Circle.

READ AND OBEY.

"Husbands, love your wives."
 "Wives, obey your husbands."
 "Fathers, provoke not your children to wrath."
 "Children, obey your parents in all things."

SUNDAY MORNING.

Trusting.

WE all seem to know very much about trusting,—at least a certain kind of trusting. We trust that the bridge over which we walk will not fall down. We lie down in the evening, trusting that the house will not burn down during the night; and at the approaching storm we trust to the building for shelter and protection. We sit down to the table, trusting that there is no poison in the food we eat, nor in the water we drink. We enter the cars or the steamboat trusting they will convey us safely to our destination. We enter the buggy trusting that the horses will carry us along without harm; in all places which duty or business calls in this life, we are willing to place our trust in somebody or something. You see, perhaps we have more trust than was at first supposed. We believe, then, trust that our faith may grow into strong hope. We believe the cars can carry us to some point, and then trust them to do so. But unless we go on the cars, they will not carry us, though our faith in their ability to do so be like a mountain. Sinners, learn a lesson from this. You may believe with all your heart that Jesus is able to save you, (which is a fact) but unless you put Him on, He will not carry you over into the promised land. You must trust Him practically. You believe the food before you has nourishment in it, but unless you eat it so that it can perform its work, you will starve. You believe, then, trust. So with Jesus you must do. Believe that He is both able and willing to save you, then permit Him to come into your heart, and dwell there, and He will be your Strength and your Salvation. O come to Jesus just now!

In Luke eighteen we are told of some who trusted in themselves. O reader, self is a poor person to trust! Trust Jesus. On another occasion this same Jesus said, "Children, how hard is it for them that trust in riches, to enter into the kingdom of God" (Mark 10: 24). Yes, how hard to get into heaven with a heart set on riches! Riches have wings and fly away, hence it will not do to trust them for salvation. Riches rust; trust them not. Riches puff up, make men intolerant, covetous, unhappy. Trust not in the riches of this world. Trust God who owns all things. Possess us if ye possessed not. This is riches sanctified to God. O trust the Lord in all things! "Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not highminded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy" (1 Tim. 6: 17). Yes, God "giveth us richly all things to enjoy." Now let us enjoy in meekness, in power, in love to one another. God trusts His Word to our use and favor; will we give it to others, rightly divide it, so that they may see and live? Come, brother, sister, let us trust our Father, as He calls us to trust Him. Let no doubts enter between you and your God. Depend not as if your very existence depended on your newly killing yourself at hard labor. Be moderate, trust in Jesus.—M. M. ESTELMAN.

LETTERS FROM THE EAST.

NUMBER III.

My Dear Young Readers:—

ALL through the month of March you no doubt missed my "letters from the East." I could explain, but this were of no use. This bright page was full of good things anyhow. And now, at this writing, I might say, "I'll write no more"—"There are enough others to write." But suppose each one would say that. What then? Why we would soon have no paper at all. I think we can all agree that we can't well do without the paper. We feel sure the paper does us a great deal of good in many ways. So we ought to

WORK FOR THE PAPER.

How? Well, I will say, you can get subscribers. This any one can do who can talk. Even boys and girls can show the paper to neighbors and friends who don't take it yet, and get them to take it a year. But says one, "One dollar and a half is too much" or "I can't spare so much." These excuses may be received when persons are really too poor, but even then they should be able to raise a part of it, and if they say how much they will pay, you can write to the office and offer so much, and likely the paper will be sent. I will yet say what those ought to do who get the paper for a small cost because they are poor—they ought to lend their papers to neighbors and friends and try to get subscriptions. In this way they can work for the paper and return a favor for the favor they receive.

But boys and girls I want to say something more to you about this. If you try to get subscribers, don't get tired for all kinds of excuses will be offered. But as you know the paper is good and your work is a good one, try, and try again. Some will give you their names without much delay,—others need coaxing, because they like a dollar and a half more than they do good reading for them and those around them. But so it is. And when we are at a good work, we ought to keep right on. If you are working,

DO N'T STOP.

If one says $1.50 is too much, tell him $1.00 is too little unless he is too poor to pay more. If he says, he can't spare $1.50, say you will take 75 cents for six months, or 40 cents for three months. Don't stop. There are many ways to help people to good things. I have subscribers who pay me with apples, by working, and other trade. If in this way we can help others to the paper, who cannot well pay money, let us do it. It costs a great amount of money to keep the paper going, so we ought to work for it and not stop.

One word more. Let us still write, and select good pieces and send them. Don't stop writing. Nothing should be so dear to us as Jesus. And every work for Him that agrees with the Holy Scriptures we ought to help along. So shall we be happy.

Your Brother,

D. B. MENTZER.

March 31st, 1878.

TWO FAMILIES.

I WANT to tell all the little children who read the BROTHERS AT WORK, what I have seen this week while away from home on missionary work. I shall have to give you a dark, dark picture of one family I visited. A dear mother who had three bright little boys, wrote me a letter that she wanted to learn more about Jesus, and join the church. She had heard some preaching when she was a girl. When we went to visit this poor mother and her little boys, they all seemed very glad, only the boys were more shy than other little boys. What do you think that mother told us? She said that since she had written me the letter, she had to take several hard whippings, just because she wanted to join the church. Who do you think whipped the little boys' mother? Do you think it was their papa? Some of you that have good papas can hardly think it was him, but it was. She also told us that she has never had a Bible of her own in the house until last Summer; one of her neighbors had three, and let her have one for some nice ripe tomatoes; a few of the leaves were torn out, but she said it was better than no Bible at all, and you will all agree that it was. One day when these little boys' papa came into the house and saw the Bible, he was very mad and began to curse and swear and threw her Bible on the floor. She says when she wishes to read that good Book she has to wait till he goes out of the house. She says she would like to attend meetings, but if she does she will get more whippings. The oldest boy (seven years old) sometimes cries to go to meeting, but can't go.

Dear children, while I was listening to this poor mother's pitiful story, and was looking at the little boys, the tears came into my eyes, and I was thinking of the many dear little children that are writing such good letters for the paper, and who have such good parents that read the Bible for you, and tell you about Jesus, and kneel down in the morning and pray for you, and get you good, warm clothing, and send you to school; and when Sunday morning comes you can put on nice, clean clothes and your papa will take you to meeting to hear the minister preach about the Love of God, and how to be good.

Before we left this family I promised I would visit them soon again; I will try and take all my children and their mother along, and we will try and make them as happy as we know how. They have only seen the dark side of human life and need a little sunshine of the blessings of religion. I have felt sad since I was there, and I want to tell you all that I pray more than ever that the little boys and girls and their parents write for and circulate the BROTHERS AT WORK, and all try to be good while we have such good opportunities.

Will we not all ask that our good Father in heaven may overrule, that this mother may love Jesus and join the church without being whipped. Next week I want to tell you of the other family.

D. E. BRUBAKER.

Iowa Centre, Iowa.

MAKE YOUR MOTHER HAPPY.

CHILDREN, make your mother happy:

Make her sing instead of sigh;
 For the mournful hour of parting.
 May be very, very nigh.

Children, make your mother happy:

Many griefs she has to bear;
 And she wears 'neath her burdens—
 Can you not those burdens share?

Children, make your mother happy:

Prompt obedience cheers the heart;
 While a willful disobedience,
 Pierces like a poisoned dart.

Children, make your mother happy:

On her brow the lines of care,
 Deepen daily—don't you see them?
 While your own are smooth and fair.

Children, make your mother happy:

For beneath the coffin lid,
 All too soon her face so saint-like,
 Shall forevermore be hid.

Bitter tears and self-upbraidings,

Cannot bring her back again;
 And remorseful memories,
 Are a legacy of pain.

Oh begin to-day, dear children,

Listen when your mother speaks;
 Render quick and sweet obedience,
 For your highest good she seeks.

Loves you better than all others—

For your sake herself denies;
 She is patient, prayerful, tender,
 Gentle, thoughtful, true and wise.

Never, while you live, dear children,

Though you search the world around,
 Will you find a friend more faithful
 Than your own, your loving mother.

Selected by MARY HILBERRY.

HINTS TO GIRLS.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Boston Congregationalist has been taking notes which, having direct reference to one of the great reforms of the age, will probably be interesting to the reader. Girls, although his remarks may seem to be a little sharp, they are quite too true; and the timely hints here given, may lead you to take a more sensible course; and your mothers will doubtless be thankful that the valuable suggestions are published for mutual benefit. They are as follows:

1. You are perfect idiots to go on in this way. Your bodies are the most beautiful of God's creation. In the continental galleries I always saw groups of people gathered about the pictures of women. It was not a passion; the gazers were just as likely to be women as men; it was because of the wonderful beauty of a woman's body.

Now, stand with me at my office window and see a lady pass. There goes one! Now isn't that a pretty looking object? A big lump, three big lumps, a wilderness of curls and frills, a hauling up of the dress here and there, an erroneous, hideous mass piled on top of the head, surmounted by bits of lace, birds' tails etc. The shop windows tell you all day long of the padding, whalebones, and steel springs which occupy most of the space of the outside rig. In the name of all the simple, sweet sentiments which cluster about a home, I would ask, how is a man to fall in love with such a compound, double-twisted, touch-me-not artificiality as you see in that wriggling curiosity?

2. With the wasp-waist, squeezing your lungs, stomach, liver, and other vital organs into one-half their natural size, how can any man of sense, who knows that life is made up of use, of sense, of service, of work, take to such a partner? He must be desperate indeed, to unite himself for life, to such a fettered, half-breathing ornament.

3. Your bad dress and lack of exercise lead to bad health, and men wisely fear, that instead of a helpmate, they would get an invalid to take care of. This bad health in you, just as in men, makes the mind as well as the body effeminate. You have no power, and use big adjectives, such as "splendid," "no magnets!" I know you giggle freely, "awful," but then this does not deceive us; we can see through it all. You are superficial, affected, silly; you have none of that womanly strength and warmth which are so assuring and attractive to man. Why, you become so childish and weak-minded that you refuse to wear decent names even, and insist upon baby names. Instead of Helen, Margaret and Elizabeth, you affect Nellie, Maggie and Lizzie. When your brothers were babies you called them Bobbie, Dickey and Johnnie; but when they grow to manhood, no more of that silly trash if you please. But I know a woman of twenty-five years, and she is as big as both of my grandmothers put together, who insists upon being called Kitty, and her real name is Catharine; and although her brain is big enough to conduct affairs of state, she does nothing but giggle, cover her face with her fan, and exclaim once in four minutes, "Don't now! you are real mean."

How can a man propose a life-partnership to such a silly goose? My dear girls, you must, if you get husbands, and decent ones, dress in plain, neat, becoming garments, and talk like earnest, sensible sisters. Remember that fifteen times in twenty, sensible men choose sensible women. I grant you that, in company, they are very likely to chat and toy with these over-dressed and forward creatures, but they don't ask them to go to the altar with them.

Selected by T. D. LYON.

Hudson, Ill.

CHILDREN AT WORK.

Aaron's Rod:—I am not blessed with a mother like many of you are; I have a good home though, with Samuel Eiler. I can tell the little folks whose rod budded, bloomed blossoms and yielded almonds. It was Aaron's; and the account of it may be found in Numbers 17: 8. —Mary E. Kephleg, Hagerstown, Ind.

Peter and Nehemiah:—We went to church last Sunday. H. P. Strickler is our minister. His text was 1 Pet. 4: 17, 18. We have meeting every two weeks, and I love to go and hear the brethren talk about Jesus. I am trying to be a good girl. First letter of Peter and fourth chapter contains all the letters of the alphabet except the letter z. The seventh chapter of Nehemiah contains all the letters except q.—Abba Albright, Steamboat Rock, Iowa.

About Esther:—Ahasuerus made a royal fast on the seventh day. He sent for queen Vashti. She refused to come. The king was angry; so he resolved to take her royal estate and give it to another that was better than she. All the virgins of the land were brought together, and Esther, the adopted daughter of Mordecai, the Jew, found favor in the sight of all who looked upon her; and the king loved Esther more than all the women. When her people were to be destroyed, she plead for them and saved them from death, while Haman, their accuser, and his ten sons were hung. We must do good to others if we wish to prosper.—C. M. Cripe, Cerro Gordo, Ill.

From Cora E. Wales:—I am a reader of the BROTHERS AT WORK and like to read it. I like to go to meeting and hear the true Gospel preached. The tenth chapter of Hebrews contains all of the letters of the alphabet.

The Poor Orphan:—My father died when I was four years old and my mother when I was eight. I missed my mother very much when she died, and remember some about my dear father, but they are both at rest in Jesus, and I want to get there too. Four brothers and a sister are also dead. My dear little friends who have father and mother living, be good and kind to them and your brothers and sisters too, if you have any.—Belle Richard.

Jesus Crucified:—My mother gave me the twenty-seventh chapter of Matthew and told me to see what I could write about it. I am not able to write much, neither will you expect me to, for you remember I am but a little boy. It appears that Pilate did not want Christ crucified, but when he saw that he could not prevent it, he took water and washed his hands. When they had plaited a crown of thorns and put it on His head, they spit on Him and took a reed and smote Him on the head; and when they had come to a place called Golgotha, they gave Him vinegar mingled with gall to drink, and when He had tasted thereof He would drink no more. When He was crucified there were two thieves crucified with Him, one on the right and the other on the left. They that passed by Him, reviled Him, wagging their heads, saying, "Thou that destroyest the temple and buildest it up in three days, save thyself; if thou be the Son of God, come down from the cross."—S. Warbe Baker, Baker's Mills, Va.

Query Answered:—I like your paper very much; my mother takes it. When it comes we all want to read it. I have two brothers and no sister. One little sister is dead and one brother. I saw a question in the paper, What chapter in the Bible contains all the letters of the alphabet but one, and which one is left out? It is the third chapter of Luke; the letter q is left out.—Nellie M. Doggett, Ashton, Ill.

He hath riches sufficient who hath enough to be charitable.

CORRESPONDENCE.

From Marshalltown, Iowa.

Dear Brethren:— This is Saturday afternoon. To-morrow there will be no meeting of the Brethren nearer to us than twenty miles. Think of us, brethren, when you are traveling, and make it suit to stop and preach some for us, and to us. Our place of worship is a school-house, but it is well suited for holding meetings as it is well provided with seats and has a high ceiling, which makes it pleasant and easy to speak in. Some have been with us this past Winter, and we cannot too warmly express our gratitude to them for their kindness in remembering us, but as the earth takes in the gentle rain which often comes upon it, so it is with us, we feel anxious to have meeting more often. There are but a few of us here, and the evil one tries to make roads among us. Brethren pray for us that we be able to ward off all the darts of the wicked one. He is full of devices, but when we look into our Bible and around us, we are persuaded that He who is for us, is stronger, than he who is against us. Dear brethren and sisters let us work more and harder, for we can see the time approaching when the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the works which are therein, shall be burned up. Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye (we) to be, in all holy conversation and godliness. There has been a little stir among the people of the country about here, on the Sabbath question. Bro. Hall delivered two lectures at the church concerning it, which were very interesting and instructive. Any one concluding to favor us with a visit will please drop us a card, so we may have time to make an appointment. We will be glad to meet any such at the train. Yours Fraternally, A. M. I. & M. C. MILLER.

From C. Hope.

Dear Brethren:— GOD be thanked to-day, I feel free to write as if I had just been delivered from a dark prison. Often have I written and then torn it to pieces; and what little I have sent you was filled with our burdens, which must be endured on all sides. I commenced a series of meetings in our house. At first only five or six persons came, but as the meetings were continued, the number increased from time to time, until we had a good congregation, the house well filled. At first we were alone, no other members being present; but on Saturday evening Bro. Nielsen, Bro. Eskildsen and two sisters came. At this meeting I spoke on the blood of Christ, and it was soon manifest that the chains of some were beginning to break. O how the tears flowed from their eyes, denoting that they felt their sinfulness. On Sunday was our regular appointment, and an hour before the appointed time the people began to assemble. The first hour was spent in setting before our members their duties and privileges in order to help carry on the work, and when the time came to declare the word to the people, Bro. Eskildsen humbly set the truth before them from 2 Cor. 5: 16. The audience was much affected and many wept long and loud. I thought when Bro. Eskildsen had finished, I would say nothing, but still one remark by our brother filled my soul for this people, that "there are only two classes of people in this world, good and bad, saint and sinner." I wish you could have seen and heard the tears and sobs of the whole congregation. I rejoiced to hear and see, for it denotes conviction. We appointed prayer-meeting at seven P. M., and at that hour the house was again nearly full. — Bro. Eskildsen took charge of the meeting, and again the sinners felt the arrows of conviction penetrating their hearts. Poor people! God bless them in hearing. We closed our meeting at ten, and appointed meeting for next Wednesday. We cannot work as rapidly as you can in America. We have so many barriers to break down, so many obstacles to overcome; and we must be careful to remove them so that repentance may be thorough. I have written to the Primitive Christian in answer to several requests from warm-hearted brethren. They wish to know how long we would stay here, and whether we have sufficient means. We get all that is put in the treasury, but has been barely sufficient. And as to staying, we will remain here as long as we can. We will conduct the mission as cheaply as we can. But to get work is out of the question.

If even work could be had, I would be obliged to hire for six months or a year and then work on Sunday as well as other days. In such a situation, I could not preach any; and if I am to thus proceed, it would be better for me to be in America, where I would be free on Sunday. Things are different here from those in America. We are like all other people, we cannot get along without food and raiment.

I trust our beloved brethren and sisters from America will give you a complete account of matters here. We also trust the Lord that He will make us able to stay here if he wills. To make missionary work successful, requires constant work, night and day, and it is better to work mainly in one place. I believe the time of the Gentiles is nearly fulfilled, and the return of the Jews near at hand. The present war does not affect our work, but rather promotes it spiritually.

Some may think our expenses too great, but I am sure, their kind, tender hearts will not so believe when they once learn our condition, the condition of our country and the customs of the people. It is customary to give people something to eat when they come to see and ask the way of life. Strangers come from all parts of the country to inquire about the way of the Lord, and of course we dare not, ought not, cannot turn them away hungry. Our God says, "Feed the hungry, clothe the naked," and O may we never become so lost to love us to withhold the food from the hungry! Last Sunday we had sixteen persons for dinner; all were from a distance. You see, therefore, in every way we have cares and burdens resting upon us. But I shall at this time, say no more. — Look to those whom you sent to help us and look at our standing. They can tell you better than I can of our burdens, necessities and severe trials. God bless you all.

Hjerring, Denmark, March 10th, 1878.

Oregon Letter.

Dear Brethren:— WE left our home in Ohio on the afternoon of the seventh of March, 1878. Inasmuch as we were about to start on our journey to the Pacific coast, feeling quite an assurance that we should nevermore return to our old home and friends in Ohio, we felt like reading the last paragraph of the 20th chapter of Acts, which we did and then bowed down and engaged in prayer, and so commended our souls and bodies unto our heavenly Father, trusting that he would preside over us whether by land or sea.

At our separation we all wept aloud to take the parting hand of so many that were dear to us as parents, children, brethren, sisters, friends and neighbors. Then that evening at 9 o'clock we took the train in Lima, for the West. Arrived at Chicago on the ninth at 10 A. M. — Here we met Bro. Isaac N. Huffman of Lane Co., Oregon, who had went East with us in December. He had formerly lived in Page Co., Va., and spent the Winter there, on business and visiting friends. We also had old Bro. J. Bashore of Dark Co., Ohio with us; he was aiming for the Walla Walla Co., W. T. He stood the trip remarkably well and continued with us to Portland, at which place we separated and left him to travel the rest of his journey with strangers.

We left Omaha at 4: 45 the same evening and moved slowly on our way Westward, till we arrived at North Platt City Sunday evening. Here we received orders to lay over in consequence of the snow storm farther West, though there was no snow at this place. We remained at this place till Tuesday, and arrived at Ogden on Thursday evening. By this time there were sixteen emigrant cars in our train, and having this great crowd together, we were continued through at the same rate, and were landed in San Francisco on Saturday evening, the 16th, about dark. On Sunday morning at 10 o'clock we were aboard the steamship Idaho for Portland, and though it was in the stormy month of March, we had an extremely smooth voyage and only myself and some of the young children were sea-sick for a short time, while the wife and the older children didn't miss a meal.

We arrived at Portland, Wednesday evening, the 20th, and remained here till the next afternoon, spending the day in prospecting the lively City of Portland. Then at 4 o'clock P. M. we took the train for Salem and arrived there about 7 o'clock, a distance of about fifty miles, where we were met by Bro. Ashenfelter, and taken to his house in the city and entertained for the night. On Friday were met by Marcus Brower and F. M. Wade, with whom we contracted for our new home and were conveyed out to the same. Looked around a few moments—and then took dinner at Bro. David Brower's who kindly received us.

On Saturday the 16th, we passed through the Sierra Nevada Mountains, containing that snow shed over thirty miles long, and the snow in many places drifted about over the shed, and in one place broke it down, so that we were detained about two hours. No human power was done, and what seemed the strangest to us, while we left those snowy drifts about nine in the morning, we were by noon in the midst of green pastures and blooming flowers, and even now while I am writing these lines, the 24th, the pastures are green and fruit-trees blooming in Oregon. The weather is pleasant and the people are busy plowing and sowing; the white clover in our door yard is ankle-high.

In conclusion we would remark that we cannot tell yet how we will enjoy our new home in the far West. Many would like to know how much our trip cost us; we would say it cost us, fare and boarding from Lima, Ohio to Salem, Oregon, about $520. We paid for six whole, and two half tickets, or about 70 dollars for the whole ticket. But I would say that those, wishing to come to Oregon now, could not come for that amount, as we bought our steamer tickets in February for eight dollars each cabin passage, but now the rates have advanced to twenty-five dollars.

Commending ourselves to God as unto an all-wise Creator, we bid you farewell for the present.

DAVID EARLY, Salem, Oregon, March 21, 1878.

To Sister Mary Harding.

Dear Sister in Christ:— I FEEL like addressing a few lines to you, since witnessing your happy conversion to the truth as it is in Christ Jesus, and that your husband too has found Him. Dear sister you told me that you had studied long and earnestly whether "these things were so," before entering this new relation with the all-adoring Son of God, and also that you had become dissatisfied several years ago with some professed followers of Christ, or the so-called Christian church, with which you have been connected some thirty years.

You say you have read the Word of the Lord much, and with anxious prayer and that at last you have come to the conclusion that these professed Christians do not observe near all of the holy commandments of Jesus, but pass them over in a light, careless manner, considering them, as they call them, "non-essential to salvation," though the Holy Scriptures themselves declare, that the way, that is, the commandments of Christ, are so plain, that the wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err thereon.

You also saw too much corruption in that body, such as running after every vain fashion and custom of the world; as the putting on of costly array and of gold and and the lust of the eye and pride of life, etc., all of which we are commanded to abstain from. We are plainly told not to conform to the world but to be transformed.

Now, dear sister, as you have so ardently studied to know the ways of the Lord more perfectly, and have at last, like Mary of old chosen that good part, Oh, how happy should you feel when you and your dear husband and family join in singing those beautiful songs of Zion, and exercise your musical talents, with which you all seem so highly endowed, can you not now more than ever before, truly sing with the spirit and with the understanding also?

Dear sister, I truly did rejoice, when I saw you returning from the cold and watery grave, where you had been buried with Christ by baptism, and as you came forth, praising the Lord, I thought within myself, surely,

"There's a crown of glory,
And a spotless robe for you,
When you reach that Golden City,
In the land beyond the blue."

Now, dear sister, since you and your husband have, by the grace of God put on the whole armor of God, in Christ Jesus, O, how I would love to say a word of encouragement to you both, but I feel my great inability to do so, for I know that I am very unworthy. Yes, I often feel that I am the very least in the household of faith, and that I come far short in living up to the requirements of the Gospel, but yet I never feel like giving up. I would just say to you, brother and sister, put your trust in God, cast your care on Him from whence all your help cometh, and He will never, never forsake you; for,

"When through the dark waters he calls you to go,

The river of-woe shall not you overflow,
And when hoary hair shall your temples adorn
Like lambs shall you still in His bosom be borne."

Oh then, never be discouraged although friends should forsake you or you should meet with many difficulties through this life.

"And if you meet with troubles, and trials on the way, Cast all your care on Jesus and don't forget to pray."

Now, lest my article become too lengthy, I will close by hoping that you by your Christian example and pious walk, may soon constrain your dear family and many of your kind friends, to turn in with the overtures of mercy, and make their peace, calling and election sure, before it be eternally too late, is the prayer of your unworthy sister in Christ.

CAMIE HOESINGER, Carlton, Nebraska.

A Strange Death.

ONE week to-day, one of our neighbor's boys, almost thirteen years old, John Robinson by name, was sent to water the horses of his father. A short time after, his brother went out, and saw John's hat near the wood pile, and at once started out in search of John. In a few minutes he found him, a short distance from the house,—dead.

It seems he had haltered a two-year old colt to lead to water, and by some means the rope got in a loop around his neck, and the colt drew him in this manner, until the halter came off.

Memorial services in behalf of him were held to-day at the place where he attended Sabbath school. He was a good boy; peace to his ashes!

M. MYERS, Mackslary, Iowa, March 31st, 1878.

From Texas.

Dear Brethren:— BY your request and that of others, we will try to give some account of ourselves, since in this sunny land, through the columns of your paper, should you deem it worthy of publication, and hope it may prove of some interest. We ask forbearance from our many dear friends in not writing to them personally; were we to write to all that requested us to do so, we could do but little else. Received no mail with the exception of one letter till first of last week, when it came plentifully. Among it were three copies of BROTHERS AT WORK, and one from your office.

The paper, always dear to us, is doubly so now. While we read with pleasure the good tidings, our eyes are darkened with tears as we read of the deaths of those with whom we formerly associated. We think we are settled for a while at least, in our humble log cabin, and extend a hearty welcome to our Northern friends.

We continue to like the country. The people about here, are kind, olding and Christian-like. We live within three miles of Bro. J. Sowder, a minister in the second degree.

Have regular appointments the fourth Sunday in each month. Yesterday we had the pleasure of listening to a discourse from Bro. Hutchinson of Mo., followed by Bro. Sowder. Also met with Bro. J. W. Chambers from Montague Co., Texas. The house was filled to overflowing and good order prevailed.

Although a fair-looking country, excepting the improvements, to those contemplating moving here, we would advise to first come and look at the country. It is not always wisdom to be guided by the opinions and judgment of others.

L. K. HOWE, Gamesville, Texas, March 25th, 1878.

From G. W. Lindower.

Dear Brethren:— YOUR paper has been a faithful visitor to us since January 1st, 1877, and we like to read its columns. I think that good impressions are produced by reading the paper and comparing the same with the Holy Scriptures. I fear that we are not searching the Scriptures as faithfully as we should. We sometimes forget our spiritual welfare and think too much of earthly things. This should not be thus; for we may be called away at any time. Then if we are not ready and have not been faithful to our Divine Master, we will not hear those cheering words: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant," but it will be, "Depart from me, ye workers of iniquity; I never knew you." —

Ah, we should watch and pray, lest we enter into temptation. The Savior said: "Be ye ready always, for ye know not at what hour the Son of man will come. O what a pity, if He would come and find us sleeping. Therefore let us watch. We should be a light to the world and salt to the earth; by our daily walk and conduct we should show what we profess.

How many of us would be ready to-night to leave the shores of time? Ah, I fear that we would see a great deal yet undone; I think there are but few that could say: "I am ready to go."

This I have written out of love to the cause of our heavenly Master. May the Lord bless us all and finally gather us around His throne, there to praise Him forever and ever.

From Ohio.

Dear Brethren—

WHEN I last wrote you, I was near Bryan, Ohio. I remained here nearly two weeks, had good meetings. From here I went Northwest of Bryan into the Silver Creek church, preached some eight days. Had very good meetings, though they were not very well attended on account of bad roads; several applications for membership were made. On the 19th arrived at Eld. John Hornish's near Defiance. Eld. Loose had preached in the forenoon; he remained with us till Saturday; then returned home. Our meetings continued; preached twice a day until the 31st; closed with twenty additions to the church.

This church is known as the Poplar Ridge church; Jacob Lehman, the elder, is in his 71st year. The church here is in a prosperous condition. At this point I received a challenge from an elder of the United Brethren church.

PROP. 1. Does the New Testament teach that water baptism is an indispensable pre-requisite to the pardon of sins?

J. Nicholson affirms.
J. K. Alwood denies.

PROP. 2. Does the New Testament teach that Jesus Christ instituted as an ordinance in His church two literal suppers?

J. Nicholson affirms.
J. K. Alwood denies.

PROP. 3. Does the New Testament teach that faith, repentance and baptism, administered into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, are for the remission of sins?

J. Nicholson affirms.
Will J. K. Alwood deny?

PROP. 4. Does the New Testament teach that bread and wine constitute the Lord's Supper?

Will J. K. Alwood affirm?
J. Nicholson denies.

I will now say to our brethren and sisters and kind friends, God bless you with all needed good. Thanks to you all for your acts of kindness. To those who have recently entered the fold of Christ with us, we would say, many of you are quite young, while others are near the grave; the Lord keep you near His bleeding side! War a good warfare. He will soon come to bear His children across the dark and rapid river, which divides us from our joyful inheritance. But those who are out of Christ and die in their sins, death will have its sting, the grave the victory, it will be deep and dark; the form of death will be terrible. But believers in Christ have found the grave a resting-place, and death their kindest friend. They have gone down into the tomb, saying, when Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory. They do not die, they only sleep.

I arrived home in safety, found all well.

J. NICHOLSON.

Rossville, Ind.

GLEANINGS.

From Henry Troxel.—I see there is a mistake in giving my address through your paper. It is Post Oak, Clay Co., Texas. We have meetings once a month, good attendance, excellent order and great interest are being manifested by the people generally and prospects of doing much good. We like this country well. There is considerable corn planted and up already. The weather is warm and dry, and a shower is much needed. Health is good so far, and there are good chances here to get homes with but little capital. But the honey ponds and bismit trees are not found in Texas; it takes industry and economy to live happy at home.

March 25.

From D. Whitmer.—The Brethren of the South Bend church have just concluded a series of meetings, which were conducted by Thurstin Miller of Portage church. The meeting commenced March 17th, closing March 24th with one addition. So the good work is going forward here while angels in heaven rejoice more over one sinner that repenteth, than over ninety and nine just persons that need no repentance. Daniel Rupe of Pine Creek church was with us also and assisted.

From S. T. Bosserman.—The ark of the Lord is still moving on with us. One more added to the fold by baptism, making twelve additions since Jan. 1st, 1878.

Dunkirk, O., April 6.

From James Y. Heckler.—I will say that elder Daniel Fry and wife were here on their way home from Europe, though they do not expect to get home before July next. They held three meetings with the brethren at Hatfield, and five at Indian Creek. From here they went to Norristown and from there to Ephrata in Lancaster Co., Pa. He also preached in Germantown and Philadelphia before coming here. He made some very good impressions and the brethren were very glad for the visit they made among us, as the Brethren here are interested in the Danish mission. When they heard how poor the Brethren there must live, they again had something to give for their relief. May the Lord bless our little sister church in Denmark, and those who labor there to sow the good seed of truth. Bro. Daniel thinks that the prospect for the church in Denmark is good. Bro. Eby went right on from New York to the interior of Pennsylvania.

Mainland, Pa.

From Mary Hickory.—The Whitesville church, Mo., is progressing slowly. Some of our members have left here, some have gone to Colorado for their health; others have gone where land is cheap, to get homes. We have only two preachers, Bro. J. Bashor and Bro. D. Glick in this arm of the church. Have preaching twice a month here, Elder John Forney has the care of the church, he has not been here since last October. I hope Bro. Stephen will give us a call as he goes to the A. M., and preach some for us. We have had a very mild winter; scarcely snow enough to cover the ground, but plenty of rain and mud. Had nice warm weather all through March, everything looks nice, peach trees are in bloom.

Whitesville, Mo.

From F. Teeter.—Bro. K. Heckman had been our preacher for the past year, but has some time since moved to the North part of the State, so we are left without a preacher. There are only eight members in our neighborhood, and have not the privilege of meeting with the brethren and sisters as often as we would like to. We belong to the Okaw church, Piatt Co., Ill., though about twenty-four miles distant from the main body of the church. Ministering brethren should not forget to give us a call when traveling through this section of country.

Tuscola, Ill., April 7.

From I. M. Calvert.—The work of the Lord is slowly moving on here in Allison Prairie. We have just closed a series of meetings and with all the opposition we have to contend with, we have had the pleasure of seeing seven persons baptized, two of whom were prominent members of the Campbellite church. Bro. Jesse Calvert labored for us, with the assistance of Bro. S. M. Forney; hope the Lord will bless their labors wherever they go.

April 4.

From E. Hoover.—There are few members here, yet all seem to be in a healthy condition. We have one minister in the first degree. We would love to have some of our brethren to come and hold some meetings for us. We have not had any brethren to visit us this winter. There are some here now who desire to unite with the church, but have been waiting for some one to come and hold a series of meetings. Who will come? Prospects were never better for the building up of a church here.

Winfield, Kan.

From A. B. Snyder.—Our series of meetings in Cerro Gordo, commenced March 9th and ended April 7th. Bro. R. H. Miller came to the aid of our home ministers March 28th. The result of the efforts by the blessing of the Lord were forty-two accessions. The entire result of meetings in Cerro Gordo district, is sixty-one, of which six were reclaimed. Unto God be all the praise.

Cerro Gordo, Ill., April 9th.

From Josiah Keim.—On February 9th the Brethren of the Louleville church, North-eastern Ohio, commenced a series of meetings, which continued nine days. The result was that fourteen precious souls came out on the Lord's side and were baptized. I learned that two more were added since, making sixteen accessions in this church this Spring. Love and union characterized the meeting throughout and all were made to feel glad and thankful for what the good Lord did for them.

The church is in a prosperous condition under the care of Bro. Morgan Workman, whose chief concern seems to be, to work in the interest of His Master. May he be spared to watch over his little flock, and enjoy their society. We were kindly cared for while laboring with them. The brethren have our warmest thanks for their kindness.

Louisville, Ohio.

From Beatrice, Neb.—The brethren of the Beatrice District, Gage Co., Nebraska, are looking forward to the erection of a house of worship. Prospects for a good crop are very encouraging here now. There will be great abundance of fruit, if frost does not yet cut it short. The farmers are very much encouraged, and emigration is flowing in very rapidly. The church here is in a prosperous condition, all is well, our prayers are for your prosperity and the enterprise you have undertaken. Your paper is highly valued in this neighborhood.

W. B. PRICE.

From Manor Congregation, Pa.—Our church is still prospering. Eighteen accessions during this year so far, and more to follow. Baptized two sisters that belonged to the Campbellites for several years.

J. HOUSEHOLDER.

DIED.

Obituaries should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and separate from all other business.

BRUNK.—In the Fall Creek church, April 6, 1878, Bro. Jacob Brunk, aged 79 years, 2 months and 24 days.

H. BRUNK.

WARNER.—Near Salem, Montgomery Co., O., March 31st, 1878, Bro. John J. Warner, aged 74 years, 5 months and 4 days.

S. D.

FRISTOE.—In Shelby Co., Ohio, March 21st, 1878, Annie M. Fristoe, daughter of friend Charles and sister Maria Fristoe, aged 18 years, 7 months and 15 days.

SAMUEL MOHLER.

STUDEBAKER.—In the Yellow Creek congregation, Stephenson Co., Ill., April 2, 1876, friend George Studemaker, aged 47 years and 5 months.

M. H. FOWLER.

STROUP.—In the Sandy church, Columbiana Co., Ohio, March 7th, 1878, sister Laura E. Stroup, daughter of Bro. E. and sister Lucinda Stroup, aged 14 years, 1 month and 7 days.

D. S. BUSH.

BARKLEY.—In the Quemahoning congregation, Somerset Co., Pa., March 26th, 1878, Noah Barkley, son of George and Catharine Barkley, aged 16 years, and 11 months.

E. J. BLOUGH.

INTERESTING ITEMS.

NOW AND THEN.—One hundred years ago not a pound of coal or cubic foot of illuminating gas had been burned in the country. No iron stoves were used, and no contrivances for economizing heat were employed until Dr. Franklin invented the iron-framed fire-place which still bears his name. All the cooking and warming in town and country were done by the aid of fire kindled upon the brick hearth or in the brick oven. Pine knots or tallow candles furnished the light for the long winter nights, and sanded floors supplied the place of rugs and carpets. The water used for household purposes was drawn from deep wells by the creaking sweep.

No form of pump was used in this country, so far as we can learn, until after the commencement of the present century. There were no friction matches in those early days, by the aid of which a fire could be speedily kindled; and if the fire went out upon the hearth over night, and the timber was damp, so that the spark would not catch, the alternative remained of wading through the snow a mile or so, to borrow a brand of a neighbor.

Only one room in any house was warm, unless some one in the family was ill; in all the other rooms the temperature was at zero during many nights in the winter. The men and women of a hundred years ago undressed and went to their beds in a temperature colder than our modern barns and wood-sheds, and they never complained.—Home Journal.

—French Quakers are not numerous, but a young man of Sarthe, named Tureau, belonging to the sect, was lately conscripted to the French army, and refused to do duty. He was stripped of his clothing and left an entire day in his tent in his shirt, with the option of suffering the cold or donning the uniform presented to him. Towards night he sought warmth by wearing it, but no efforts could make him drill. He was finally court-martialed and sentenced to two years' imprisonment for disobedience of orders. His father visited him, and encouraged him to persist in his course, telling him that he had himself formerly been subjected to the very same persecution.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Notices of Love-feasts, District Meetings, etc., should be brief, and written on paper separate from other business.

LOVE-FEASTS.

At Beaver Dam congregation, Kosciusko Co., Ind., June 6th, 1878.

Four miles South of Waterloo, Iowa, Wednesday, June 5th, 1878, at 10 A. M.

Union church, Marshall Co., Ind., June 4, 1878, commencing at 5 o'clock, P. M.

Four miles South of Lewistown, Winona Co., Minn., first Saturday and Sunday of June next.

Nodaway Co., Mo., four miles East of Graham, May 10.

Montgomery Co., Iowa, twelve miles North of Villisca, May 18.

Panther Creek church, Dallas Co., Iowa, May 16th and 17th, commencing at 1 o'clock.

Maquoketa church, one half mile East of Lost Nation, commencing May 25th at 1 o'clock.

Two miles North of Hudson, McLean Co., Ill., May 11th, at 10 o'clock A. M.

Stone church, Marshall Co., Iowa, June 15, at 10 o'clock, A. M.

The brethren of Cedar Lake congregation, in Northern Indiana will hold a Love-feast, the Lord willing, at the church-house, two miles South-east of Corunna, DeKalb Co., on Thursday, June 6th, 1878, meeting to commence at 2 o'clock.

By Order,

G. J. PATTERSON.

We the Middle District of Miami Co., Ohio, have appointed a Communion on the 15th of May, commencing at 2 P. M. Those coming by railroad will stop off at Tippicanoe City. This town is on the Dayton and Michigan road; please enquire for my house, as I live in the town.

O. F. YOUNT.

If the Lord will, our Communion meeting in the Silver Creek congregation, Ogle Co., Illinois, will be on Thursday and Friday, the 16th and 17th of May, 1878, commencing at 10 o'clock.

D. E. PRICE.

The brethren of the State Center church, Iowa, contemplate holding a Communion meeting, five miles and a half South-east of State Center at the premises of brother Martins on the 29th and 30th of May, 1878, commencing at 1 P. M. Those coming from the West, will be met at the train on the 28th at 4 o'clock P. M., and those from the East on the 29th at 10 A. M., on the N. W. R. R.

D. B. MARTIN.

The Brethren at the Pleasant Valley church, Elkhart Co., Ind., have appointed a Communion meeting at their meeting-house on the 16th of May, 1878, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M. Those coming by railroad will stop off at Vistula, three miles North of place of meeting.

A. A. WISE.

DISTRICT MEETINGS.

Northern District of Indiana in English Prairie church, May 9th.

Northern District of Illinois at Shannon, May 21, at 8 o'clock, A. M.

North-eastern district of Ohio, in Mahoning church, Mahoning Co., Ohio, May 29th, commencing at 9 o'clock, A. M.

The District meeting for the Middle District of Iowa, will meet Monday, May 27th, at the church one and a half mile East of Lost Nation.

Eastern District of Pennsylvania, in Indian Creek church, Montgomery Co., May 23rd.

Eastern District of West Virginia, April 19th and 20 in the Fairmont congregation.

Northern District of Kansas and Southern Nebraska, eight miles South-east of Beatrice, May 13th, at 8 A. M.

W. U. R. R. Time Table.

Day passenger train going east leaves Lankark at 12:25 P. M., and arrives in Racine at 6:43 P. M.

Day passenger train going west leaves Lankark at 2:14 P. M., and arrives at Rock Island at 5:50 P. M.

Night passenger trains, going east and west, meet and leave Lankark at 2:18 A. M., arriving in Racine at 9:00 A. M., and at Rock Island at 6:00 A. M.

Freight and Accommodation Trains will run west at 12:10 A. M., 10:50 A. M., and east at 12:10 A. M. and 4:45 P. M.

Tickets are sold for above trains only. Passenger trains make close connection at Western Union Junction.

G. A. SMITH, Agent.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK.

"Behold I Bring You Good Tidings of Great Joy, which Shall be unto All People." — LUKE 2: 10.

Vol. III.

Lanark, Ill., April 25, 1878.

No. 17.

The Brethren at Work.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY

—BY—

J. H. MOORE & M. M. ESHELMAN.

—CO.—

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

R. H. MILLER, ———— LAHOMA, IND.
J. W. STEIN, ———— NEWTONIA, MO.
D. VANIMAN, ———— VIRDEN, ILL.
D. B. MENTZER, ———— WAYNESBORO, PA.
MATTIE A. LEAR, ———— VERANA, ILL.

EVENING HYMN.

BY SABELLA KELSO.

WHEN the light of day is closed,
And every one has sought repose,
When the mantle of sleep is thrown,
Over God's creation alone;
The quiet angels o'er us bend,
Telling all, Jesus is our friend;
He watches through the darkest night,
Preserves our life till morning light,
Then we should wake with joyous hearts,
To work or pleasure He imparts.
And the glorious rays of sun,
All of God's children shining on,
Renewing splendor every day,
Blessing the Christian on his way;
Showing the force of God above,
Teaching mortals that He is love,
To needy man His grace bestows,
Instructing men precepts to know,
To the Redeemer chanting praise,
Our voices in submission raise,
To Him from the throne on high
Looks down in mercy from the sky,
Who're fitting angels ever roam,
Whilst they are pure and bright at home,
Praising the Omnipotent One,
Relating all to Christ His Son;
Flying with awe around His throne,
Radiantly their faces shone,
By faith we see them from afar,
Shining elegant as a star;
To faithful followers He will show,
The path of truth we are to know;
He'll guide us to our home above,
To glorify the God we love,
For stars are but the shining dust
Of saints below who in Thee trust;
And if the sun refuse to shine,
The lasting promise "We are Thine,"
Shall cheer us through this world of gloom
To dwell with Christ secure at home;
When all the saints of God shall raise
A song of universal praise.

THE INNER APOCALYPSE.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

To Brother B. F. Stump, his wife, brother, and sister, of Davenport Nebraska:—

WOULD to God I could run the rib of my pen into a million hearts, and effect an opening for the ingress of Emmanuel. To see with our eyes, and handle with our hands, the Word of Life, is not enough. The objective and tangible must become personal and conscious. "Herby we do know that we know Him, if we keep His commandments" (1 John 2:3). To know that we know. This is "the mystery of godliness." All the saints have it as their blessed experience, without being able to define it. To know our knowing in the keeping of His statutes, is a grievously misinterpreted passage. To keep the commandments of Jesus reaches to the finest, deepest element of our being. The Nazarene Carpenter would have been the chief of impostures had He not been GOD in human mould. "The flesh profiteth nothing; it is the Spirit that quickeneth." Sectarians and blind and dead to the true significance of the humanity of Jesus. And the Brotherhood is imperiling the Deity by the overgrowth of the human. In the flesh and blood of the Son of Man lay all that is outward in religion; and we can no more make redemption actual without the objective, than He could make it possible without the assumption of a veritable human body. And as absolute as was the necessity of a real Deity inhering in order to make the human the vehicle of Atonement, so essential also is immanence of the Holy Ghost to give efficacy to the outward institution of grace. The incoming and indwelling of God in regeneration and sanctification is not a mere "think so," or "hope so," or loose presumption, or imaginary confidence, but "herby we do know that we know."

"Born of God," not simply by thinking and willing and believing, but by doing all these in relation to an OBJECT who becomes part of us in these psychological processes through the ORIENTATION OF THE HOLY GHOST. We "purify our souls in obeying the truth THROUGH THE SPIRIT" (1 Peter 1:22). This is the same as "keeping the commandments" in the interior sense already indicated—Christ is "God manifest in the flesh," and the Spirit is as truly God as either of the other two in the Holy Trinity, and it is the experienced reality of the Divine Presence in the soul "through the Spirit" that constitutes religion. Fearfully is this ignored by many in the church, by placing the hope of salvation on obedience in the external sense, and bearing our filial relation to God in the region of fancy.

If we must guess our sonship and heirship, there is occasion for solemn, searching, radical questioning us to the reality of our regeneration. If there is one thing on earth which it is pre-eminently perilous to take for granted, it is our saving relation to God. "This is Eternal life, that they might know The only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom Thou hast sent" (John 17:3). It is a personal acquaintance, a new-creating, transforming, God-infusing, Heaven-participating Apocalypse of Emmanuel. Short of this there is no salvation. "Whoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be IN HIM a well of water springing up into everlasting life." Conversion from sin to holiness, from enmity to friendship with God, is a deep and thorough work. As the Holy Ghost must originate, so must He perpetually reside over and sustain it. Temples of the Holy Ghost, embodiments of God, duplicates of Jesus. These are Christians. Who can claim the title?

CHURCH GOVERNMENT

BY DANIEL VANIMAN.

IN answer to your request, for me to write out for you the method the Brethren of Southern Ill. have adopted for defraying the District's expenses, and also the method of church government in the Macopin Creek congregation, I will say:

1. Each congregation in Southern Ill., reported to the treasurer the number of her membership.
2. The treasurer is instructed by District Meeting to estimate what the probable expenses will be for the next year, by considering the No. of delegates sent, and the distance to be traveled &c., and proportion the amount to each church according to her membership. When this is done he drops a card to each church, stating the amount needed from said church, and at what time it will be expected to be in his hands so as to have it in time to pay over to delegates before starting on their journey. They have so far responded to the calls of the treasurer, and since this plan has been adopted, we always have some money ahead, which works well.

The means for the support of our home missionaries, were raised by each church appointing a committee of brethren to circulate a subscription through the church, and request each to give for that purpose as much as they wished.

3. The method of church government in the Macopin Creek church, does not differ much from the general practice of other congregations, except a little more system and a stricter adherence to parliamentary rules than have been adopted in many other congregations. For instance, every question before being discussed, must come in a written form; must be read by the clerk and presented to the congregation by the chairman before anything is said on it. No member is allowed to make a statement or discuss a question without rising, and thus obtaining the right to the floor legally; unless permission is obtained to speak in the seat, by asking for it.

4. The clerk is required to keep a faithful record, in a book procured by the church for that purpose of all business transacted by the church, except such as relates to improper conduct of members that has been considered by the church, and pardon granted.

5. All items found by the brethren on annual visits are brought in writing, and if possible in the form of questions. Each item is then in its order read to the church and disposed of by the church, by giving it a written answer or by tabling it, the same as at District Meetings; if answered then they are recorded.

6. Members departing from the order of the church by wearing gold or superfluity, will have a regular visit sent them by the official brethren, and if they refuse to conform to the order, they will be brought before the church and dealt with as transgressors.

7. The chairman or overseer, of this church never takes sides or disusses any question with any of the members in council; but allows the church to dispose of her own business in her own way; while he simply considers his business to be to present business in its order; to preside over the assembly and see that members keep inside of the rules of order adopted by the church; to see that the voice of the assembly is fairly taken on all subjects left to vote and state the result.

I have now given you some general outlines, supposing that this will probably about cover what you wanted by asking for our method of church government. If this does not cover what you wanted, you must particularize and I will answer more minutely.

Virden, Ill.

"MY KINGDOM IS NOT OF THIS WORLD."

BY A. BEARSS.

IT is plainly understood by all intelligent beings that there are two kingdoms or ruling powers by which the masses of the people are wholly influenced or ruled. There are two classes of people in existence, and always have been from the time the first family was upon earth; for we see the spirit of opposition between the first two brothers on earth, which resulted in sorrow, disappointment and bloodshed. By this we might understand that there are two great powers which influence the mind of God's creatures.

When the great King of kings, and lord of lords came to this lower world, His birth was announced to the humble shepherds, while on the plains of Bethlehem in the silent watches of the night, by the heavenly host, saying: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." This of course does not mean trouble on earth and bad will toward men; so we see that the disciples of Jesus cannot, or will not, take part with the kingdom of this world, as long as they are under the guidance of King Emmanuel. We have a plain figure of the two classes of subjects as controlled by the two powers recorded in the fourth chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, where the authorities of the kingdom of this world told Peter and John to speak no more in the name of Jesus. But they being ruled by King Emmanuel answered, "We ought to obey God rather than men."

No wonder that Jesus said, my kingdom is not of this world. When "the kings of the earth stood up and the rulers were gathered together against the Lord and his Christ" (Acts 4:26), for to destroy this great King, that the prophet Daniel spoke of many hundred years before: "He should break in pieces and consume all other kingdoms, He (Christ) shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of His kingdom there shall be no end." That is, first, He would set up a kingdom in men's hearts that would consume all our worldly pleasures and enjoyments, and would rule over us forever; for said he, "Behold the kingdom of God is within you."

Our Savior said, we should not resist evil. This is in opposition to a temporal kingdom; and in carrying out His object. He taught His little family how to make peace before the first battle was fought, when simply trying to defend their blessed Master; that He might not fall into the hands of sinners and be crucified according to His own prediction, for said He, "If my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight that I should not be delivered into the Jews."

After the disciples were endowed with power from on high by the outpouring of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost, they were of one heart and soul, they were no more after that desiring fire to come from heaven to consume those who would not receive their testimony, neither were they desirous to know who should be the greatest. They had then that same mind in them which also was in Christ Jesus. Now, then, if we have received that Holy Spirit that our King promised to send unto us when He went to the Father which reproves the world of sin and of righteousness and of judgment, and will also lead us into all truth, by the reception of that Spirit and being led by it, we are subjects of His kingdom, and subject to His laws as recorded in His last will and testament; and by reading His Word in the right mind His Spirit will bear witness with our spirit that we are the sons of God. We should be very careful indeed that we do not read it as carnally-minded and only as the dead letter; for the Apostle John says, "the letter killeth, but the Spirit quickeneth, and the carnal mind cannot discern the things of the Spirit, for they are spiritually discerned." Then if we want to understand the deep things of God and His Word, we must get in the spirit like those that wrote it.

Never will I forget the expression of my mother when in my boyhood days, she gave me one day, while deeply impressed with a sense of duty by the convicting spirit, and was in trouble about my soul and was searching the Word of God for what I could not tell, every move in the quiet home was noticed by her; so she said to me, "Thou can't understand the Scriptures until thee gets in the spirit like they that wrote them." Thus far on the Christian path I have experienced the truth of this.

PATIENCE.

IF a robust man, after a stout breakfast, lays off a thick overcoat on the damask pulpit sofa, and preaches from the text, "let patience have her perfect work," it seems but little. Anybody can be patient when he has about everything he wants. But when auntie, with the asthma, and dropsy, and dyspepsia, white as it is possible to be, and not having lain down for three nights, talks about the goodness of God and how she has been sustained in all her sufferings, that makes an impress on the whole household and the whole neighborhood as far as they hear of it. If you cannot be the cupola, with a loud-ringing bell, be a pillar to bear up one of the arches. The people you do not hear of often are more useful than some who make a great racket.—The Advance.

WHO WILL MEET ME FIRST?

WHO will meet me first in heaven?
When that blissful realm I gain;
When the hands have ceased from toiling,
And the heart hath ceased from pain;
When the last farewell is spoken,
Severed the last tender tie,
And I know how sweet, how solemn,
And how blest it is to die!

As my bark glides o'er the waters
Of that cold and silent stream,
I shall see the domes of temples,
In the distant brightly beam—
Temples of that heavenly city
From all guilt and sorrow free;
Who, adorn its golden portals,
First will haste to welcome me?

Who will greet me first in glory?
Of the earnest thought will rise
Musing on the unknown wonders
Of that home beyond the skies.
Who will be my heavenly mentor?
Will it be some seraph bright,
Or an angel from the cloudless
Myriad of that world of light?

No, not these for they have never Glabbed, here, my mortal view,
But the dear one gone before me—
They, the loved, the tried, the true
They who walked with me life's pathway,
From my soul by death was risen,
They who bade me bid in this world,
Will be first to greet in heaven.

Selected by Susan Hunt.

THE NEWTONIA DEBATE.

THE following is a brief synopsis of the arguments presented during the discussion at Newtonia, Mo., between D. B. Ray of the Baptist, and J. W. Stein of the Brethren. As several speeches were made before I reached the place, my report cannot commence with the first speeches. Suffice it to say as a commencement that Mr. Ray affirmed that "the Baptist churches possessed Bible characteristics entitling them to be regarded as churches of Jesus Christ." This Bro. Stein denied.

Ray maintained that the Baptist church, like Solomon's Temple was composed of the proper material, claiming that the people were fully converted and pardoned of sins before being received by baptism into the church. He maintained that persons must have their sins pardoned, and be fully converted before entering the church. Brother Stein maintained that Baptist churches were not composed of proper material—that their conversion was not thorough, for they did not cease to learn war as commanded in the Scriptures which was proof that the Baptist churches were not composed of properly prepared material—not fully converted. He maintained that their repentance was not genuine, not sufficiently thorough to prevent them from taking oaths of confirmation in direct violation of the Scriptures, when it says, thou shalt not swear.

When I entered the meeting-house, Mr. Ray was near the close of his second speech, hence I could obtain no direct notes of it, but had to start in with Bro. Stein's second speech which commenced about three minutes after I entered.

THE DEBATE.

STEIN.—God does things that we dare not be for He kills and makes alive. His making oath is no proof that we are to do likewise, especially so since He has said in His Word, "Thou shalt not swear." God forbids swearing. The Baptist church does not heed the command, but violate it by taking oaths of confirmation. Baptists keep together in battle, they go to war and fight, maiming their hands in each other's blood; this I know to be a fact. The Gospel teaches that every soul should be subject unto the higher powers, but not subjects of these powers. We are not only subjects of this government, but strangers and pilgrims on the earth. We obey man when it does not conflict with God's teaching, but prefer obeying God rather than man. We pay tribute, and in this way respect those who are over us, but take no part in war. We do not resist, but submit. The gentleman has been attempting to prove that baptism is not a condition of salvation, but Peter, who evidently knew what he was doing, told the Pentecostians to "repent and be baptized for the remission of sins." Paul was told, "Arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins calling on the name of the Lord." From this, it is clear that Paul's sins were not pardoned till after baptism, hence making baptism a condition of salvation. The water did not wash away his sins, but God did, and this was on condition that he would "arise and be baptized."

People do not become members of the body of Christ until they publicly put on Christ in baptism; this is to be "born again of the water and of the Spirit." To illustrate: a foreigner desires to become a citizen of this government. He must fill the requirements and the last net upon his part is to take the oath of allegiance. I care not how good his motives are, nor what may be his faith, the oath he must take and is not recognized as a citizen until he does. The simple oath don't make him a citizen, but he cannot be one without it. Just so in baptism, this simple act does not make man a Christian, but God has ordained that man must be baptized, or born of the water before entering the kingdom. Naaman was told to dip himself seven times in Jordan and he should be cleansed. He became clean, not by the water cleansing him, but God did the cleansing, however on condition, and that condition was that he should dip himself seven times in Jordan. My friend wants to know what a man is before he is baptized? Is he a child of God or the devil? I will answer by asking him a question: What is a foreigner before he takes the oath of allegiance? Does he belong to this government or not? I want him to show that salvation is by faith independent of baptism where baptism is possible. This we know he cannot do. He refers to the thief on the cross and says that proves salvation without baptism. But it evidently does not in this case, for it was not at that time possible for the thief to be baptized. Let him bring forward a case where it was possible for a man to be baptized, and saved without it, and that may be some proof of his faith alone theory.

But while Christ was on earth, He could do as He thought proper regarding the pardoning of sins—He could say, "thy sins be forgiven thee," but after His death, after His will was sealed and made valid by His death, no one on earth has the power to promise pardon on any other condition than by that laid down in that will. That will says, "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned." This is the will and from it not one dare deviate. The law has been committed to carbon vessels, and they must teach and administer it just as it stands. Christ commands both faith and baptism as a condition of salvation. Mr. Ray don't do that; he will not teach the Bible doctrine on this subject. He don't teach like Peter on Pentecost, "repent and be baptized for the remission of sins." He and Peter differ. He has the remission of sins without baptism; Peter does not, that is one point of difference between Peter and Ray.

Christ says, "except a man be born of the water and of the Spirit he cannot enter the kingdom of God," but Ray says, he can—can get into the kingdom without being "born of water." My friend's method is an abortion, it is getting people into the kingdom before they are legally born.

RAY.—Being born of water does not refer to baptism. I will not say what it refers to, but will say it does not refer to baptism. I learn that he that "loveth is born of God," this don't refer to baptism. A man loveth before he is baptized, and when he loves he is born again—born of God, this puts being born before baptism. All who call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. God will damn a man for the want of faith, but not because he is not baptized, for he that "believeth not, shall be damned" so says Christ. He don't say, he that is not BAPTIZED shall be damned, not one word of it.

I maintain that Christians have a right to fight in defense of their country when called on to do so. If we live in a government and endorse what it does, though we do not help, yet it is the same as if we did it ourselves. If we give our voice for hanging a man it is the same with us as if we ourselves had done the hanging. Our giving consent also implicates us.

Cornelius was saved before baptism, for Peter says, "who can forbid water that these may not be baptized who have received the Holy Ghost as well as we." Cornelius received the Spirit just like the apostles at the beginning, which shows that his sins were pardoned before baptism, for the Holy Ghost would not dwell in a heart full of sin. My friend says, baptism is a symbol. Well the thing symbolized must exist before the symbol, and as baptism is a symbol of remission of sins, it follows that sins are remitted before baptism. If Paul's sins were washed away at baptism then the ERYTHRAL WATER washed them away, and therefore I call it a WATER salvation. But this leaves salvation in the hands of men, and hence the sinner must come to man to have his sins pardoned. I tell you sirs that I don't believe such doctrine—away with a doctrine that puts salvation in the hands of poor, fallible man. Come unto ME all ye ends of the earth and be saved, is the language of the Bible. We learn that salvation is of grace and not of works lest any man should boast, for by grace are ye saved and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God. We are saved by grace through faith, then our salvation is not of works, but FAITH. A man can be saved without coming to me, he must go to Christ, and not come to me. The doctrine of salvation by water will not apply to the poor, wounded soldier on the battle field. He is wounded and helpless, and away from home and friends in a dying condition, and there calls upon the name of the Lord; must he be damned because he cannot be baptized? I say no, he can be saved without the aid of men.

Anderson tells of three noble young men who made application for baptism, but did not say it could be granted. They thought they had no chance of being baptized. Take a poor sinner who is down sick with the typhoid fever. While on his death-bed he is convinced of his sins and wants to be saved. He cannot be immersed for he is not able. Must he be forever lost just because he is not able to be baptized? This water salvation doctrine is a Roman Catholic dogma, it came from the mother of harlots and not from God. Peter's language to the Pentecostians does not prove that baptism is for the remission of sins, but teaches that baptism is to take place because of the remission of sins. For Solomon's Temple they had the material fully prepared before it went into the temple. So with the church of Jesus Christ; people want to be converted, and made a Christian before put into the church. I asked my friend, what a man is before he is baptized, whether a child of God or the devil? He says he will answer by asking me a question. That is the way the yankee does, and I guess he must be one, they answer one question by asking another. He wants to know whether a foreigner is a citizen before he takes the oath? I answer he is not. Now I want to know of him what a man is before he is baptized? Is he a child of God or the devil?

STEIN.—God in His divine arrangements requires no impossibilities of any one. We are not debating about the design of baptism where it is impossible. The Baptist church holds that even where baptism is possible it is not a condition of salvation, and then to prove that they are right, bring up a case where baptism is impossible, hence the thief on the cross. All he could do was to believe and repent; with him baptism was impossible, hence not required. Let him bring forward a case where baptism is possible and then not a Bible condition. He thinks salvation is not turned over to human hands, in agencies, yet he preaches, and this is human work, in order that people may believe and be saved. Christ says, "As my Father has sent me, even so send I you." They were to go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature, in order that "He that believeth and is baptized might be saved, and he that believeth not, be damned." If human instrumentalities have nothing to do with salvation, why have the Gospel preached? He virtually approves of human agencies when he sends men to preach to the heathen. Paul says, we are saved "By the washing of regeneration, and the renewing of the Holy Ghost" (Tit. 3: 5). The washing of regeneration here refers to baptism, to being born of the water. A man's faith is not perfected till in baptism, for by works is a man's faith brought to perfection. Abraham's faith was made perfect by works. Faith without works is dead, and a dead faith has no virtue in it. Jesus Christ is the author of salvation unto all who obey Him, and baptism is one of his commands, but the man who refuses to obey Jesus by not being baptized, has not Christ as the author of his salvation, for he has no salvation unless there is salvation out of Christ in disobedience. We teach salvation by both grace and faith, but not independent of baptism, nor neither do we teach salvation by the washing of regeneration independent of grace and faith. We obey God and then trust in His salvation. Peter connects baptism with salvation, for he says, when speaking of the eight souls being saved by water, "The like figure whereunto even baptiz'd and th'also new born sirs." The Baptist Church makes baptism a condition of membership, for they will not receive a member into the church without baptism, but maintain that a man can be saved without it. If a man can be saved without baptism he can be saved without getting into the Baptist church.

at all; and if the Baptist church is the church of Jesus Christ then a man can be saved outside of the church of Christ, and if that be the case I do not see what use the church is.

You see Mr. Ray teaches that a man can get to heaven without baptism, but he cannot get into the Baptist church without baptism, therefore it follows that a man has to be better to get into the Baptist church than he does to get into heaven. According to this logic a man without baptism is good enough to commune with the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, but not good enough to commune with the members of the Baptist church. Because we talk about baptism being a condition of salvation, my friend calls it water salvation. Why does he not talk about a faith salvation? According to his logic Naaman's cleansing from the leprosy was a water salvation. Why does he not talk about a serpent salvation in the wilderness where Moses lifted up the serpent? When the blind man was told to go and wash in pool of Siloam, why not call that a pool salvation? Why not talk about a spittle salvation when the eyes of the blind man were anointed? He says baptism for the remission of sins is a Roman Catholic doctrine, and is from the mother of harlots. Both Mosheim and Dr. Cave, learned historians, say the primitive churches held baptism for the remission of sins. Tertullian who wrote at the close of the second century, taught the same doctrine, and so did Justin Martyr, who wrote about the middle of the second century. The Apostolic Fathers, whose writings I have, taught the same doctrine, and they lived in the first century. Both Paul and Peter taught baptism a condition of salvation; and so did Christ, yet my friend says it came from the mother of harlots.

This closed the discussion on Wednesday evening. Our next will contain what was said on Thursday.

J. H. MOORE.

PLAINNESS IN DRESS A SOURCE OF MORAL POWER IN THE CHURCH.

BY ALEX W. REISE.

IN like manner also let women adorn themselves in modest apparel with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with braided hair, or gold, or pearl, or costly array" (1 Tim. 11: 9). The Church on earth was established by our Lord Jesus Christ, for a specific purpose. Its chief object being, as we believe, to separate His followers from an unbelieving and godless world, and to reclaim the lost and ruined race.

It pleased God by "the foolishness of preaching" to lead men out "of nature's darkness into the marvelous light of the Gospel." Man is naturally a social being. His sympathies lead him to affiliate with his kind. Whatever affects men as a class affects the individual man. An old writer says, "One touch of nature makes the world akin." These instincts and sympathies are as universal as the race.

History, individuality, repeats itself from age to age. "For we are the same that our fathers have been; we see some sights that our fathers have seen, and run the same course our fathers have run." One of the noblest sentiments that ever fell from mortal lips, is that memorable expression of Cicero—a pagan writer, and yet a philosopher and sage. "I am a man, and consider nothing foreign to me that belongs to man." Man is, also, a dependent and imitative creature. He is greatly influenced by the conduct and example of his fellow men.

"No man liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself"—God planted these instincts in the human soul for great and noble purposes. As our blessed and adorable Redeemer was not only Divine, "God manifest in the flesh," but, also, a perfect man. He could sympathize with the common wants and sympathies—the natural affections and feelings of man. Christ needed not that any should instruct Him in regard to man, and knew what was in him. "For we have not an High Priest who cannot be touched by a sense of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted like as we are, and yet without sin." In our worship of the blessed Redeemer, we often forget this precious fact. So full of reverence and awe is the devout soul, in its approaches to the throne of grace, that it often fails to realize that Christ is our Elder Brother in a human, as well as a divine point of view.

The church is the light of the world. It is the great moral lever that moves the world from sin in this present life, and from "the wages of sin" in the life which is yet to be. But the church, as a body, is just what the individual members are. The moral power of the church can rise no higher than the individual character of its component parts. The fountain can rise no higher than its source, is true in a spiritual as well as physical sense.

Speaking to His disciples the Savior said, "Ye are the salt of the earth, but if the salt have lost its savor, wherewith shall it be salted?" Also, "Ye are the light of the world, but if that light be darkness, how great is that darkness?" All the moral power, then, the church can possibly bring to bear against Satan and the powers of darkness depends, not on the church as a whole, but upon the individual character of its members.

Then whatever affects the individual character of its members affects the church as a whole. This proposition, we think, no one will care to dispute. The moral character, then, of the church is the sum of the moral character of its members. Whatever, then, tends to holiness of life in the individual members, tends to elevate the standard of purity and holiness in the church. This reasoning being assumed as correct, the converse of the proposition must be equally true.

In the proposition, therefore, that the church is pure and holy, does the church exert a moral power over the world? We are commanded, among other things, in God's blessed Book, not to affiliate with the world—to come out from it, and to be "a peculiar people, zealous of good works." "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world," say the Scriptures of divine truth. Why not? Because, continues the Word, "all that is in the world, the lust of the eye, the pride of life" &c., "is not of the Father, but is of the world." "Set not your affections on the things of the earth?" Why not? Because "the fashions of this earth passeth away." The things of time and sense are transitory, evanescent, perishing, mutable, passing away, is written by the finger of God Himself upon all things that pertain to earth.

"The things that are seen are temporal, but the things that are unseen are eternal." The world cannot supply the wants of our imperishable souls. Then it is not only the duty of man, as the intelligent, rational creature of God—accountable unto the Judge of all the earth for the deeds done in the body, to seek for those things that are permanent, immutable, and eternal, but it is supreme folly to do otherwise. Every source, then, of moral power should be earnestly and diligently sought and appreciated, with a view to our growth in grace, and in "the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ."

All undue concern about the perishing things of time and sense must be banished from the mind of him who would set out to win the prize of eternal life. The Christian is admonished not to be conformed to this world, but to be transformed by the renewing of his mind. The world runs to great excess in adorning the outward man, the perishing tabernacle of clay, which shortly must be food for the worms, in the habiliments of fashion and pride. To be "clothed in purple and fine linen," and to "furnish sumptuously every day," is the one absorbing passion of the vast body of worldly and godless men. To this end all their energies are bent, and like Dives of old, upon this unhallowed shrine all the tender and sympathetic impulses of the soul are offered up. The rich set up a princely and gorgeous style of life, to gratify their own sensual instincts, and to operate as an inseparable barrier between them and the poor, whose poverty condemns them to social ostracism, and bars, as with triple steel, the doors into this charmed and exclusive circle.

The poor, striving to attain to this envied and fascinating position in life, are led into extravagant, profligate, and vicious habits, which ultimately, terminate in financial ruin, and not infrequently end at the penitentiary, the gallows, or suicides' graves. We need but glance over the columns of the secular prints, to see this sad truth abundantly verified in the long, black catalogue of crimes set forth from day to day therein. In fact are not these melancholy details the chief "stock and store" of the daily prints of the land? Behold the ghastly record of victims offered on the pitiless altars of fashion, extravagance and pride.

(To be continued next week.)

THE LORD'S SUPPER.

BY JOHN FORNEY.

SCENARIO III.

THE LORD'S SUPPER AND THE COMMUNION CONTRASTED.

THE Lord's Supper is a full evening meal, and was so eaten by Christ and the apostles just before the Communion, and is never called the Communion anywhere in the New Testament by an inspired man, and points us to the marriage supper of the Lamb in the kingdom of God (Rev. 19: 7, 9; Luke 22: 30), while the Communion is emblematical of the broken body and shed blood of the Lord, by which we do shew forth the Lord's death, and shall do it in remembrance of Him (Matt. 26: 27-29; Mark 14: 22-24; Luke 22: 19, 20). Christ ate of the supper with His disciples, but He did not eat of the bread, nor drink of the cup of the Communion, but said, take this and divide it among yourselves. For I say unto you I will not drink of the vine &c. (Mark 14: 25; Luke 22: 17, 18). Paul said, the bread which we break, is it not the Communion of the body of Christ? The cup of blessing, is it not the Communion of the blood of Christ? (1 Cor. 10: 16). Paul said, for I have received of the Lord, that which I also delivered unto you, that the Lord Jesus, the same night in which He was betrayed, took bread, and when He had given thanks He brake it, and said, Take eat; this is my body, which is broken for you: this do in remembrance of me. After the same manner He also took the cup, when He had supped (after supper Luke 22), saying: This cup, is the New Testament in my blood &c. (Cor. 23-26).

THE COMMUNION.

How men can call it the Lord's supper, and thereby contradict Christ and Paul, when they named it, the Communion of the body and blood of Christ, as if Christ and the apostles knew not how to name it, and men knew better, and then turn right around and take it in the morning and at noon, and call it the Lord's Supper, and what is still worse, they separate God's ordinances, as if Christ had not known the business of His mission; or as if the Father had not understood His business when He sent His Son into the world to do what the Father commanded Him? For we hear Jesus say, the Son can do nothing of Himself, but what He seeth the Father do: these also doeth the Son likewise (John 5: 19, 20). For I have not spoken of myself, but the Father that sent me, He gave me a commandment what I should say, and what I should speak (do, German), and I know that His commandment is life everlasting (John 12: 49, 50). Then surely He has received Feet-washing, the Supper as well as the Communion, all from the great Father in heaven, and can poor, wicked men disregard and throw aside, and put asunder that which God has joined together, and only keep that which they in their carnal mind think best, and pervert and abuse it? How long will God forbear judgment? Who will answer? Who will be able to stand?

We hear Christ say, before He left the supper table in that upper room, "Verily I say unto you, he that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto the Father" (John 14: 12). Here Christ had just finished the work of Feet-washing, the Supper and Communion, and said, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; if a man love me, he will keep my words, and my Father will love him. He that loveth me not keepeth not my sayings (John 12: 23, 24). He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: (verse 21). For this is the love of God, that we keep His commandments, and His commandments are not grievous (1 John 5: 3). And hereby we do know that we know Him, if we keep His commandments. He that saith, I know Him, and keepeth not His commandments, is a liar and the truth is not in him (1 John 2: 3, 4, 5). Whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, has not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son (2 John 9-11). I marvel at ministers who profess to teach men the doctrine of Christ, and misconstrue and set aside the above plain teaching of Christ. How will they stand when Christ will come in flaming fire to take vengeance on all that obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ? (2 Thes. 1: 8). May God open their blind eyes and stop the error and save the world, is my prayer.

"Pray without ceasing," is an exhortation of the apostle. If we live a prayerful, pious life, we have peace in God; our lives will be a continual prayer.

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE,
M. M. ESHELMAN, } EDITORS.

BRO. S. H. HANSEN is duly authorized, by us as our traveling correspondent and agent for the BRETHERN AT WORK and will receive subscriptions for the same at our regular rates. All business transacted by him for our office, will be the same as if done by ourselves.

THE BRETHERN AT WORK will be sent post-paid, to any address in the United States or Canada, for $1.50 per annum. Those sending ten names and $15.00, will receive an extra copy free of charge. For all over this number the agent will be allowed 10 cents for each additional name, which amount can be deducted from the money, before sending it to us. Money Orders, Drafts, and Registered Letters may be sent at our risk. They should be made payable to Moore & Eschelman.

Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., APRIL 25, 1878.

For report of the Hay and Stein debate at Newtonia, see second page of this issue.

THE boy who amuses himself on a rocking-horse, forcibly reminds one of some Christians.—a terrible sight of motion, but nothing done.

A CARD from Bro. Basher informs us that he is still unable to do much preaching owing to the fevered condition of his lungs. He is now at his home in Waterloo, Iowa.

THE Baptist Battle Flag has finally come out and said something about the contemplated written discussion, to which we will respond next week, not having room to say much this issue.

BRO. S. Z. SHARP of Tennessee writes that everything in that part of the heavenly kingdom is in love and harmony, and that wheat and rye, on the 15th of April were out in head, and as proof sent us a rye head in bloom.

BETTER be humble with one talent, than proud with ten, says a sensible writer. "Pride goeth before a fall," and if the fall be with the ten talents in hand, great may be the fall. Act wisely, use prudence, do not be too fast; deep waters run slow, especially if useful.

BRO. JOHN Y. SNAVELY of Hudson, Ill., wishes us to publish an article on How the Blood of Christ cleanseth us from all sin. It is a good subject to write upon. We take the liberty of inviting Bro. Daniel Viniman to give us an article on it. The question comes in his line of thinking.

WE do not report the money sent here for Bro. Hansen, but drop it in the contribution box, and forward it to him once a week. Most of those who send, request us not to report, they want to wait till they reach heaven and then hear a good report. They want to obey Matt. 4: 1-4.

THERE is considerable talk regarding the propriety of Northern Illinois purchasing and fitting up a farm to be used as a charitable institution, at which to keep and care for the poor of the district. The enterprise, we think, is a commendable one, at least it is worthy of thought, for the poor we have always with us, and it is in our place to do them good.

BRO. DAVID L. WILLIAMS writes us a long letter soliciting ministerial aid in Sabine Co., Mo. He has more calls than he knows how to fill, having to meet about six in each month. He describes the country as being an excellent place to live; good land, good water and an excellent climate. Ministering brethren thinking of going West, would no doubt do well to correspond with Bro. Williams. His address is, Brownsville, Sabine Co., Mo. They want brethren who let their light shine in their daily walk and conversation.

REGARDING the Eastern question a late writer says: "Russia seems to be turning her eyes to Palestine; of this there have been several indications lately. A Russian newspaper says, 'The hour is come to complete crusades by delivering the holy places forever. A free Christian and international province must be made from Jerusalem to the banks of the Jordan, and independent and international institutions must be given to it.' Students of prophecy will do well to watch the course of events in this direction."

THE Christian Cynosure says: "A new Unitarian congregation in Boston, the South Free church, has introduced a novel way of observing the Lord's Supper. The bread and wine are displayed on the Communion table, and that is all there is of it. Imagination does the rest; they partake like a hungry man in his dreams and presume to call it faith. Their spiritualization goes a step further back than do the Catholics before the priest begins his formality of transubstantiation."

THERE is not a little of the imaginary faith extant now. Some imagine a little water sprinkled on a person is baptism; others, that if they think that they are willing to wash one another's feet, the Lord will take the thought for the act; or if they imagine they salute one another with a holy kiss, it will be approved of God. Verily, imagination has about all it can do.

MEMBERS moving from one congregation to another should not fail to carry with them certificates of membership, especially when moving some distance. Persons frequently move to the West and settle down in small congregations, but make no effort to procure a certificate of membership till sometime afterwards, after causing a good deal of trouble and giving room for much suspicion. Things of this kind are quite embarrassing to weak congregations.—There is another feature however, somewhat worse than this. There is a class of persons who sometimes get into trouble and move to small congregations before settling the difficulty, and thus cause a stigma to rest upon the church to which they move. These small churches, especially in the West, have a hard time of it to keep a good light before the world, and when annoyed by unfaithful members moving among them, it makes it that much worse. Those who move to other congregations should go in the proper light, and carry along a certificate of good standing.

ORIGINAL GROUND AGAIN.

NUMBER II.

OUR last closed with the observation, that our ancient Brethren took the unadulterated truth as the man of their counsel, and in all things were governed exclusively by it. But finally they commenced holding, what we call, Annual Meetings, for the purpose of assisting each other in arriving at a better understanding of the Apostolic order of church government. They never thought of any other method, save that practiced in the first century. These meetings were of the simplest character, having neither clerk nor moderator chosen. They kept no minutes of their proceedings. When an important case was presented it was answered by letter to the church or churches that had presented it. This was the Apostolic order as laid down in Acts 15: 23.

They settled everything by the Bible, referring as much as possible, to chapter and verse. They had nothing else to settle things by, for they kept no minutes of their proceedings; and as for the decisions and decrees of other churches they rejected them. Stern necessity threw them back on the inspired Word as their only rule of faith and practice, and that was the reason why they reproduced the church in its primitive purity. Had they selected any other model, save the Apostolic churches, their efforts would have been a failure.

It was some time before the Brethren commenced printing their minutes, and for that reason it is difficult to get hold of any early records of their business. It is our impression, that when they commenced printing the minutes they did not see what it would finally lead to, nor what would be the inevitable consequences arising from their improper use. From year to year they have come down to us, and now fill a book of considerable size, and owing to a few conflicting decisions in it some of our enemies take delight in using it against us. The impact of the book, however, is badly misconstrued, not by outsiders only, but frequently by members who do not act as prudently as they might.

Of those who use the minutes improperly there are two classes: One class takes the book to council meetings, and decide every case by it, never once referring to the Bible. They can tell what the minutes say on most every question that comes before the church, but when asked for Bible authority fail to give it. Churches that pursue this course cannot prosper as they ought, for they do not search the Scriptures to see whether these things be so. They are not on the original ground occupied by our ancient Brethren, and their course, if persisted in, will cause one part of the church to more or less disrespect the Bible, and in the other, create hostile feelings against the minutes, the Annual Meeting and the counsels of the old brethren generally. The intentions, though seemingly good, will lead to evil in the end.

The other class shun the minutes as they would a viper; they will not allow it in their houses, and lose no opportunity of speaking evil of it, often saying very hard things about it, and sometimes before the world too at that. It would seem that they can never get done censuring it. They speak against the Annual Meeting in a very unbecoming manner, often saying hard things about the old brethren. They make more fuss and trouble over the minutes than they would over a false prophet, and are so intent on its destruction that they cannot keep still about it. Of this class we have met but few, yet know that they exist. We see no reason why they should be materially alarmed. God will take care of the church if we only take care of ourselves. If it should so happen that the minutes will become an injury to the church, we feel confident that He will have a way of removing them. The brazen serpent was a good thing in its day and place, but when the Lord saw that it was being improperly used He provided a way for its removal, and it was no more a source of trouble (2 Kings 18: 4). Let us have a little more confidence in the Lord, and labor a little more earnestly in the performance of our duty, and it will be better for both us and the church.

There is a third class who look at things quite differently, and constitute the main strength of the church. They look upon the Bible as their only infallible rule of faith and practice, but have great respect for the sentiments of the general brotherhood, desiring, as much as possible, to act in concord with the entire body, and for that reason respect the decisions of the Annual Meeting. They know that man is fallible and liable to make mistakes, but never fail to remember that they themselves are not infallible. They do not all approve of the general course of the A. M., but do not think it prudent to abuse and reject it. They consult the minutes to learn the general sentiments of our people on certain questions, and then follow the best light they can obtain. They know that the A. M. is not a law-making power, and that her decisions are not law, but advice, and have been so decided by that body.

If all the ministers and churches would pursue a course of this kind they would not be troubled so much about the minutes, neither would the A. M. be annoyed by them. It is presumed that we have hundreds of ministers who never read the minutes, yet they are in perfect harmony with the general order and practice of the church. They say very little about the minutes, but a good deal about the Bible, and are in their faith and practice like the Apostles and our ancient Brethren.

It is painful to see the course taken by the two first classes named above: one party making the minutes a Bible, virtually so to speak. We have never had the misfortune to meet one of this class, though we have heard of them, but do hope that the report is false. The other class, if they had it in their power, would, at one sweep, send the minutes and A. M. entirely out of existence, and thus jeopardize the present existing unity of the brotherhood. If the first party had its way, and would persist in that course, it would finally run the church into the worst of superstition, and ultimately and inevitably into priestcraft. History of past ages has demonstrated this fact. But if the other class should prevail, it would, under the present existing circumstances, sever the church into a hundred fragments bleeding at every wound. The church would soon be so mixed up with the world that no one could distinguish saint from sinner. Its members would join secret societies, follow the fashions of a corrupt world, and finally degenerate into a church void of the true piety that should characterize the people of God. These are not far-fetched conclusions, but founded upon logical deductions.

It is to the third, or conservative class, that we must look for the strength and disposition to sustain and defend before the world, the distinctive characteristics of our people. They are not led about by every wind of doctrine, nor are they easily persuaded to take hold of and endorse that which they know to be contrary to the general principles of the church. Among us they are the ground and pillar of the truth, and when it comes to our distinctive Bible characteristics they are one, being perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment, but sometimes differ about opinions, but not about faith. The conservative part of the church, since the day it was organized in Germany, down to the present time, has stood together as a body. She has passed through several wars, but was not affected, and came through the late rebellion as much united, if not more so than before. But she has had her troubles. Small parties have sloughed off on either side, and at times disturbed her tranquility, yet to-day the church, as a body, stands firm, but where are those factions that split off from her? We ask again, where are they?

The church has stood and will stand, though her trials and troubles may increase. There may be some drawing off from the two extremes, but the body, the church will remain and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it, while those who depart from the faith will either dwindle down to nothing or else drift off into the corruptions of the world, and popular religion.

Thus it was with the old Apostolic church of the first century. There were schisms, but the main body stood firm; rejecting the decrees and discipline of uninspired men it adhered firmly to the unadulterated Gospel, and labored to keep the church pure, while the schisms either dwindled down to nothing or else drifted off into the vile corruptions and idolatry of a pagan world.

If the gentle reader will now follow us, we shall drift off into a series of reflections, relating to the prosperity and good of the church in the future. Doubtless some will not fully agree with us, especially those occupying the extremes, yet we desire a candid consideration of the conclusions before passing judgment.

The church of Jesus Christ has but one head, and that is Christ. He is its law-giver, and has given to the church a perfect law, to which we can neither add thereto nor subtract therefrom. This law is perfectly adapted to the wants of every nation and people in every age of the Christian dispensation, and for that purpose needs neither addition nor subtraction; and to prevent such a crime, the closing chapter of the New Testament sets forth a woeful penalty upon any who would dare tamper with the revealed law of the Lord. This law has been recorded by inspiration, contains all respecting revelation God designed that man should know, and woe be unto him who dare add thereto.

This perfect law-giver, while on earth, organized a church that was to be the model of all churches. He also inspired men who were to travel in different lands, and organize model churches for different countries. The first church at Jerusalem was the model for these model churches, and when all were once put into good working order they resembled each other, for they were all made from the same model. The New Testament was then placed in their hands as their only rule of faith and practice, their only divinely authorized bond of union. This was their creed, and by it all were to square their lives and conduct. God designed that the church should have but one rule of faith and practice, for by that means they could be one body, having the same practice throughout.

During the early age of the church some men, who held their membership at Jerusalem, for they lived in Judea, went up to Antioch and taught false doctrine in the church at that place. It created considerable disturbance in the church, hence they concluded to send the matter, in the hands of two delegates, to Jerusalem, where these men were from, to consult the Apostles and elders about it. Now, here comes the model council for the whole world. When this matter was brought up, speeches were made over it, and they were Bible speeches to that effect. James made the best Bible speech at that meeting that I ever read of at any council meeting. And when the question was settled, it was settled by the Bible. But who settled it? The Apostles and elders? Not quite, for it is said that it pleased "the Apostles and elders, with the whole church, to send chosen men of their own company to Antioch with Paul and Barnabas," the two delegates from Antioch. So we see that the whole church had a hand in it. Then they wrote letters to the church at Antioch and such other points as they thought prudent. This is the only council of which we have any account during the Apostolic age, and should be the model counsel of the church in every age. We will have more use for this after awhile.

Some of the primitive churches were not content with the simple Gospel which the Holy Spirit had left them, but during the second century, and especially the third and fourth centuries, they commenced meddling with questions which neither Christ nor the Apostles had settled, hence the necessity of councils to settle them. But their councils were not after the model council held at Jerusalem in the days of inspiration, but partook more of a legislative character. They published their decrees and confessions of faith, which, in the course of time, actually took the place of the Gospel in many respects. Then commenced their schisms, not so much about what was in the Bible as what was not in it.

But they ran into another evil. They soon began to have what was known as Metropolitan churches. These were to be the models of the surrounding churches, and hence they commenced imitating each other instead of following the New Testament. The consequence was that they grew worse and worse, not so much in the external acts of worship as in real Christian piety. Had all those churches let their decrees and confessions alone, and clung to the New Testament as their only rule of faith and practice they would have preserved their primitive purity. They, in their church government, departed from the Apostolic order, and the consequence was that many of them went into corruption. From these things let us learn valuable lessons.

When our people started up in Germany they hit right upon the old Apostolic order, and settled down upon that old primitive foundation. They took the churches organized by the Apostles themselves as their model, and for their creed or confession of faith took the same book that the Apostles had, and that is the reason why they occupied Apostolic ground. Let me tell you, gentle reader, that there was something more than human power in that little movement.

But one step farther: When difficulties arose how did they attempt to settle them? Like the world? By making decrees and passing laws? Not one bit of it. They held their council meetings just like the old mother church at Jerusalem. And why did they do that? They had to have a model and were not willing to go to the world for one, hence went to the New Testament where they could find but one. This they imitated to the letter and spirit local that. The "whole church" took part in it. They kept no minutes, but like the old model council at Jerusalem, wrote letters where it was necessary. Was not that Apostolic? Who dare say that that little church was not the church of Jesus Christ? She took the New Testament teachings as her only rule of faith and practice. Did the Apostolic churches have anything more? They held their first councils just like the old and divinely inspired model council at Jerusalem. Could either reason or revelation ask anything more of them?

Before closing this part of our article, we turn to page ten of brother Kurtz's Encyclopedia and copy the following account of the "origin of Annual meetings" among the Brethren, and how they were held by our people in days of yore:

THE ORIGIN OF ANNUAL MEETINGS.

"From our forthcoming History of the Brethren in America, which shall be published as soon as possible, if the Lord will spare us yet so long, we will find that the first company of our Brethren, having arrived in 1719, almost 150 years ago held their first love feast in Germantown, Pa. on Christmas-day, December 25, 1723, and previous to this, we are informed, 'they had important work.' They remembered difficulties, which had occurred in Crefeld (Germany) already. They were indeed a branch of a church, but not yet a church (sufficiently organized and established) that could assume (the authority) to administer the sacraments (ordinances). But the chief difficulty was, that there were still differences among themselves, and they only of late had commenced to come together. After all these difficulties had been worked through in the spirit, they at last agreed to gratify them the new converts, who desired baptism and being received into fellowship, and also to hold the love feast.' So then we have a record not only of the first church visit, the first meeting for public worship, the first baptism and the first love feast, but also of the first council meeting, and in fact the first general council or yearly meeting ever held in this country; and it is presumable that the love feasts were connected and preceded by such council meetings the day before love feast, and that these council meetings being attended by members and ministers from every church, were sufficient for every purpose during the first thirty or forty years, while the churches were confined at first within a territory bordered only by the Delaware river on the east and the Schuylkill on the west, and at a later date by the Susquehanna on the west. But as the churches multiplied, and extended into New Jersey on the east and beyond the Susquehanna on the west, and even into Maryland, &c., and it thus becoming impracticable for all the churches to be represented at every ordinary love feast, it became a necessity to set apart every year a certain time, and appoint from year to year a place for such a general council. This was done, as far as we can learn, a little after the middle of last century, and consequently a little over a hundred years ago. The first council meeting had been held, as we have seen, about Christmas, the presumed birthday of the Saviour, but now a more proper time was chosen in fixing Pentecost of every year, the birthday of the church, for the big meeting, as it was called even to a recent day of our own recollection. With regard to the place, it was concluded at a late day, that the big meetings should be held alternately, one year east of the Susquehanna, and the next year west of that river. The churches spreading further west and south, the Allegheny mountains were considered as the dividing line for a time in this respect, and still more recently the Ohio river was named as such line.

HOW THE YEARLY MEETINGS WERE HELD.

That they were at first held in the most simple manner, even as our ordinary council meetings have been held up to our own times, is evident from all the testimony we could gather. Brethren met on Friday morning before Pentecost, and opened as usual by singing, exhortation, prayer, and, perhaps, reading the Scriptures. Having met in the fear of the Lord, and invited him to preside over the meeting, and prayed for the Holy Spirit to guide and direct all hearts, they considered the meeting ready for business. Cases were presented and decided, questions asked and answered, all by word of mouth, as in ordinary council meetings; there was no clerk chosen nor minute taken, and hence it is that our records are so meagre for the first twenty-five or thirty yearly Pentecostal meetings. But as will be made to appear more at large in our forthcoming 'History of the Brethren,' when any important case or cases had been presented, it was answered afterward by letter to the church or churches that had presented them. Of these manuscript letters a goodly number yet extant have been collected with great care, and are embodied in this present work."

Let each reader study brother Kurtz's remarks well, then turn to Acts fifteen and compare the practice of our ancient Brethren with the old Apostolic order. Do this till next week, and then, if the Lord willing, we shall commence where we now leave off, and carry the subject up to the present time. J. H. M.

HEAVEN AND HELL.

WHAT are they? Simply states of mind—this, and nothing more, nothing less. Heaven is a happy, and hell an unhappy state of mind. Happiness, that results from the consciousness of right-doing, is heaven; unhappiness, that results from the consciousness of wrong-doing, is hell. Conscious innocence is conscious heaven; conscious guilt is conscious hell. Self-approval is heaven; and heaven cannot be in the soul without it. Self-condemnation is hell, and without it there is no hell. The man who is self-approved is self-sustained, has heaven in him; but self-condemned, he has no sustaining power within; he has no courage, no inward support; he sinks in his own esteem; he falls, and is in a moral paralysis—he is in hell—no; he is not in hell, but hell is in him.

Heaven, or hell, then, is a state of mind, and exists nowhere in the universe for us but in our own souls. As is our state of mind, so is our heaven or our hell. They exist only in the human soul. G—.

We clip the above from The Missionary published at Towanda, Pa. The conclusion of G—is, that heaven and hell are not places, but a condition of something—the state of the soul. It is said of An, that "the smoke of the city ascended up to heaven" (Josh. 8: 20). Did the smoke of the city only ascend up to the condition of the mind? To the condition of whose mind? Again we read in God's Book that "Jesus lifted up his eyes to heaven." Did

He simply lift up His eyes to the condition of His mind? When Jesus went to His Father, His disciples stood looking "steadfastly toward heaven" as the Lord "went up." Looked "toward" the condition of their mind, did they? Did Jesus go up in the condition of their minds, and then they stood gazing up into the state of their own minds? What absurdity! And yet, this is the only conclusion that can be drawn from the position assumed by G—. Heaven is a place, not the condition of a place. Heaven is not time, manner, nor condition, but a real place.

David declares that "the wicked shall be turned into hell." Does the term "hell" here mean that the wicked shall be turned into a "state of mind?" If hell "exists nowhere in the universe for us but in our souls," then the wicked, whose state of mind is already evil, shall be turned into a wicked condition of the mind. They will not be turned into hell, but being evil will be turned into the condition of the wicked! Ah, how your rope of sand melts away before the sword of the Spirit!

Again, we are taught that "death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them" (Rev. 20: 14). Were the dead in the condition of the mind? If so, whose mind? Here it is expressly stated that hell, a place, delivered up something, "the dead." It is not said that a condition of the mind delivered up the dead, but hell did the delivering. M. M. E.

HOW IS THIS?

THIS is the way one of our subscribers writes: "I was at the post office one day, and there was a ministering brother there also. I received my paper, the BRETHREN AT WORK, and he the — State Journal and two other political papers. I tried to show him the BRETHREN AT WORK, and asked him why he did not take it? He replied that he did not patronize church papers, neither did he think it was right for any one else to do so. I asked him, why? He said it was making merchandise of the Word of God, and when brethren published their talents in books and pamphlet form and then sell it (if it was the truth) it was selling the Word of God, and the Word, says he, 'shall be bought without money and without price.'"

We wonder if that preacher ever bought a Bible? Did he get it without money and without price? Supposing a brother were to print a number of Bibles, must he give them all away? Have those who print Bibles a right to sell them? If not, then those who patronize them do wrong. Does that preacher patronize them when he buys a Bible. He has no money for a religious paper for his family, but plenty of it for political journals; no money for those who are working hard to disseminate the principles of truth, but plenty of it for unconverted politicians, who are spreading their corruption and discord over the country. He has a conscience that allows him to patronize worldly institutions, but not a religious enterprise; he has no taste for the good, religious matter written by his brethren, but relishes that, written by unconverted and corrupt men. Straws show which way the wind blows. If that preacher would spend his time reading the good books and pamphlets published by the brethren instead of reading secular papers, he would doubtless be setting a better example, if it would not make a better preacher of him. — If any of our readers can find that preacher, they will please let him read this article. J. H. M.

HARSH WORDS.

HARSH words are like hail stones in Summer, — beating down and destroying what they would nourish if they were melted into drops. — Knock Eby.

And in harmony with the idea of our dear brother, Solomon says that "A soft answer turneth away wrath; but grievous words stir up anger," and "a soft tongue breaketh a bone." How many there are who delight in sending forth the hail stones that beat down and destroy. Better far to let them melt in the mouth, and then they will run out in a gentle shower, nourishing and building up. Harsh words have not in them any soul-clearing, soul-inspiring power. They tear down, overthrow and mutilate to no good purpose. A soft tongue breaketh many a bony heart. Kind words never die. Their effects grow and grow, until eternity reveals them in all their grandeur.

How often do those who are supposed to be empowered to "rebuke," do so in a hail-like manner instead of rain-like! Instead of doing so with "all long-suffering," it is done with harsh words, and an air of authority as if the rebuker were incapable of doing as the Lord directs. How many tender hearts, full of love and zeal for the cause, are driven away out on the barren hills by harsh words? How many who are able to "eat meat," are made to weep and sorrow because some brother used hail stone words? Ah, the latter pangs, the heart-rendings that fill many places, — all because some person in authority used not soft words.

Soft words, tender words, — words of sympathy are noble and divine-like, and those who use them are silently but surely doing a work that will stand to their honor in eternity. — When I hear a man use harsh words just because he can, I begin to conclude that he is proud and wants to show himself, and he does. He shows how ill he is qualified to speak to any one, and he himself becomes an object of pity. M. M. E.

BROTHER T. J. ALLEN, of Storkton, Mo., writes that they have now organized a church in Cedar county, with eighteen members. This sounds like news from home, for we spent five years of our boyhood life in the northern part of that county and have always had a liking for that part of the State. Before the war there was a church there of some thirty or forty members, of which brother Wm. Gish, who now lives in Kansas, was elder. As we left soon after the commencement of the war, we have heard but little of the workings of the church till now. Hope the Brethren will prosper, and succeed in building up a good congregation in that part of the West. We have many fond recollections of life in that country. If we are not mistaken, there is a small congregation a short distance South of Osceola, in the beautiful and fertile bottoms of Snake river, and not very far from the North line of Cedar county. Will some one please write us regarding this? J. H. M.

The third edition of brother Miller's defense of the Brethren's doctrine is now out, and having just received another lot we are now ready to fill orders. Price $1.00 by mail, post paid, and may be ordered of us, or R. H. Miller, Ladoga, Ind.

UNANSWERED QUESTIONS.

Having on hand a number of queries which we have not time to answer, we give some of them below, hoping our correspondents will aid us in this department. Let your answers be short and to the point.

Did Christ die a God-forsaken man according to the following Scripture? "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Mark 15: 34. J. J. HOOPER.

Will some of you please give an explanation on the fifteenth verse, third chapter of 1st Corinthians? D. A. W.

I wish to know, through your paper, the meaning of the fifth verse of the third chapter Titus. WM. B. GOODWIN.

Would you or some other brother please give us your views on the third verse of the seventh chapter of Hebrews? "Without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days nor end of life, but made like unto the Son of God aboleth a priest continually." MARIA B. HEGSTAD.

A man claiming to be a minister of the Gospel, in a sermon against feet-washing, denied the world to show, from sacred or profane history, that the Gentile church ever practiced the ordinance of feet-washing; and W. C. Thurman, in his book on feet-washing, page 59, 60, says it might be shown from church history, that feet-washing has, from the night of its institution, down to the present day, always been observed as an ordinance of the church. Now which is true? Please answer me through your paper. SAMUEL SALLA.

I would like an explanation of Romans 4: 4, 5. JOHN STAGER.

Please give me an explanation of the second chapter of second Thessalonians, from the first to the twelfth verse inclusive. D. LEATHERMAN.

Please explain, through the paper, the Scripture found in Acts 2: 17, 18, concerning the prophesying of daughters. Also reconcile what Paul says in 1 Cor 14: 34. S. BRIDGEMAN.

Did the apostle Paul receive the Holy Ghost before he was baptized. Please answer through the paper. J. E. B.

The Home Circle.

READ AND OBEY.

"Husbands, love your wives."
"Wives, obey your husbands."
"Fathers, provoke not your children to wrath."
"Children, obey your parents in all things."

SUNDAY MORNING.

Cannot Go to Meeting.

I THINK of the many this morning who are away from the main body of the church—are isolated and cannot go to worship with their brethren and sisters. There are many such! Perhaps you once lived in a large and flourishing congregation where the members could go to a large house, comfortably warmed and seated, and there enjoyed the words of truth as they were read or spoken. Yes, brother, sister, you once lived where you saw your brethren often, but because of poverty you were compelled to go to some country where land is cheap, that you might have a place called "home." How you would have liked to stay where you could go to meeting every Sunday, but you could not. Go away you must, and you went; and now you cannot go to meeting this morning. O how your heart would leap for joy if you could go to meeting once more! You are very hungry for the bread of life, and the fellowship of the saints. O how you long for a few brethren and sisters to come and sing and pray with you! If a few would just now come in, how full of rejoicing you would be. You would not care for the broken remarks, the feeble voice, the bashful look—you are hungry, and the words of comfort would be gold to you now. Ah how happy you would be, if a poor, "unlearned" brother or sister should, this morning, walk into your lonely cottage and talk of Jesus to you! What fullness of joy would be in that house.

But I want to encourage you this beautiful morning with the words of Jesus. "I have chosen you out of the world," therefore "let your light shine," that others may be constrained to follow Jesus. First, live right; this will have a powerful effect on your neighbors. Second, when you have thus gained their love and respect, ask them to come to your house, and there try to instruct them. Do not say you cannot. A man that can tell how he plows, can tell how he is sowed; and he that can tell how he was saved, can tell how others may be saved, for all men are saved alike—are saved by the same Savior, have the same Book, the same Spirit to lead and guide them. Ah, but you say you are no preacher—have not been called. Do not mistake. He who shall be king and priest of God in yonder world, is certainly fit to tell sinners to come to Jesus. Work for sinners; work to build up the church, not only in numbers but in piety and godliness. Yes, you would like to sit in a comfortable meeting-house, with brethren to your right and left, and listen to some one preach, but you cannot. The Lord bless you in your loneliness.

And then you are exposed to the jeers and taunts of the world much more than those who almost wholly make up a community. Your plainness is a subject of remark by both the popular professor and the worldly person. Your mode of worship, your plain habits, your devotion to Bible principles are talked about in a light manner. But be patient, beloved in the Lord, and never give up the old ship. Hold to the helm, keep the sails up and you will sail through in safety. To speak evil of God's ways, God's people, is to speak evil of God Himself, and all such naughtiness God will avenge. O, never leave Jesus! Cling to Jesus! How He loves you! You were baptized into His death, therefore abide in Him. Look up and behold His care, His love. Read the Bible, pray much in secret, talk Jesus to your neighbors and behold the work of the Lord in your midst. For every little that you do, God will do much. But He wants you to do your part. True, your burdens are great, the cross heavy, but O, what is more pleasant and profitable than working in God's vineyard? God pity the poor, isolated brother and sister this morning! They have many trials, many temptations to overcome. We who have all things convenient know but little of your hardships. But I would encourage you to overcome them by watching for souls. You want those around you of the same faith. Work for them. Take God's tools and work with them.

But I now think of some poor sisters whose husbands are not yet in Christ. They live quite a distance from the regular places of meeting. They want to go to meeting this morning, but the husband says, "O no, we cannot go to-day; I want to rest." Ah! my friend, were you at rest in Jesus, you could not stay away from meeting to-day. Poor sister! she has not been to meeting for six months, and O how she longs to go to-day. God bless you, dear sister, in your isolated condition. Brethren, seek such, and sing and pray with them. Do them good whenever you can. Their lot is truly a hard one. They need sympathy and encouragement.—M. M. ESHelman.

A TALK WITH MY YOUNG FRIENDS.

I LOVE to meet and talk with young people, and take great pleasure in hearing them talk. That you may know I do, I will tell you how lonesome I have been the past week, for I was not permitted to meet with my young folks (my scholars) because the directors thought it proper to close school for a short time, to prevent the spread of that loathsome disease, diphtheria, which has been raging for some time in this place.

About four weeks ago, a little girl in this neighborhood took the dreadful disease and died. About the same time one of my pupils was kept from school, and on learning the cause of her absence, I found that she too had taken the disease. She had a sweet little brother, Willie, who came with her to school every day. After she took sick, he came alone, bringing me word from her every morning until finally he took the disease too, and it was not long until another of my pupils whom I will call little Alfred, took it, and then another, Alfred's little brother Sidney. The next time I saw Willie, he was in his coffin. He did not look like one dead, but like one sleeping and dreaming an angel dream; for on his face was a smile of joy. As I watched them filling up the grave I thought,

"One more buried beneath the sod,
One more standing before his God;
We should not weep that he has gone,
With us 'tis night, with him 'tis morn."

The morning after Willie was buried, and my pupils and I had again met at school and were busily engaged in our daily work, some one rapped. On going to the door to learn who was there, I met a gentleman who had come to tell us that little Alfred was dead. O, how sad it was! He was to be buried the next day. I did not attend the funeral, but went home to see the dear ones there. On Sunday evening when I returned again, they (the people with whom I board), told me that Sidney was quite sick and could not get well, but must follow his little brother Alfred. They took me to see him, but we were too late; he was gone. We found the bereaved father, mother, sister and brother weeping for the dear one, who but a short time ago, was a laughing, joyful member of the circle. The baby brother was sleeping, unaware of what had taken place.

Last Monday these three remaining children were well, but today the sister and brother are very sick. The baby brother too, was sick, but is better now. I hoped they would escape the dreadful disease, but ere long my hope faded away.

"Thus youth and beauty for awhile
The cheek and eye will show,
But scarce they claim the tribute smile
Ere death will lay them low."

To-morrow I will open school again. O what a change there will be from the scene in the same school-room! How we will miss the dear little ones who have left us here and joined the heavenly school. I will miss them sadly, for I loved them dearly. They were beautiful, and more than beautiful, they were good. Their seats will be vacant, and I will miss them in their classes, those bright faces and sparkling eyes and sweet little voices that would sound so well when reciting. My pupils will miss them on the play-ground and school-room. And the vacancies they leave at their homes are too numerous to tell, for they were remarkably studious and amiable, also obliging and obedient, both at home and at school. Willie was very amiable with his little sister; he would help her to put on her wrappings before leaving the school-room and always carried the dinner pail.

Little sisters and brothers are you kind to each other? I tell you this story so that those of you who have brothers and sisters will love them and be kind to them, for you do not know how soon they too may be called to leave you. And, dear readers, those of you who have kind parents to provide food and raiment for you, do you appreciate them? Do you love and obey them? Remember that they too may die and leave you alone in this world. Then will thoughts of the lost ones crowd themselves upon your mind; then will you be forced to acknowledge that their teachings and prayers for you were earnest and right, yet you heeded them not; then will arise in your mind the many slight acts of disobedience, and sometimes open rebellion, by which you have grieved your ever-loving parents. But on the other hand if you will be obedient and kind, it will not be a final parting, but will seem only as though they had gone before you to their long, last, happy home, where you can hope, when your work on earth is finished, to join them to part no more.

My dear, young readers, are you prepared to meet your God? If not, begin "while it is yet called to-day." Does not even reason tell us plainly, that now is the only time we can call our own? We are sure of this moment, but the next may never be ours. Why, then, when life is so uncertain, not attend at once, to so important a matter? It is your heavenly Father who watches over you and cares for you always. He can do more to keep you from evil than the most watchful eye of a loving father on earth ever could, if you will only ask Him. Then come to Him now, while you are young. God, in His holy Word says, "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them." "They that seek me early, shall find me." Then why put off so important a subject till some more convenient season? for that will never come. He is waiting now with outstretched arms to receive you, if you will but give up all else for Him. Christ does not ask you to purchase His love; He makes it a free gift to all who accept it upon His own gracious terms, and I am sure they are easy. He only wants us to love Him—to give our whole hearts to Him. I wonder how I could live so long without Christ! How ungrateful and wicked I have been! But I hope that I shall always love Him now. I am made happy by the presence of God's Holy Spirit. Often, when I was made to feel mean, did I try to still the voice within me, which was constantly calling me to come to Christ and live, by going more and more into the ways of the world; but I could not help seeing the emptiness of the world and its vanities, upon which I depended for all my pleasures, as compared with the all-sufficiency of the great Savior. I was then forced to admit that the religion of Jesus Christ was a good thing, and that some day I would embrace it. Thank God, that day came! Oh that baptismal day! Never was there a day half so beautiful; never before had music sounded so sweet, for I was now about to follow the footsteps of Him who had meekly bowed His head beneath Jordan's wave. Never before did words seem half so expressive as those which fell from the lips of the minister on that day; and when it was all over—when I had "sought and found" the place where Jesus lay, how happy I felt in the consciousness of doing right! It was a day of gladness and joy.

Let me now entreat you, my dear friends, to think seriously upon what Christ has done for you, and what He offers to you. It is not safe to put it off a moment longer. This moment is yours; God in His infinite mercy, has given it to you; but the next may be withheld; it may never be yours; then before I close, let me urge upon you once more, the importance of at once accepting Christ Jesus as your Friend and Savior. Much love to all.

MARY J. STEES.

Yellow Creek, Ill.

CHILDREN AT WORK.

From Griffin Fisher:—I live with my good, kind mother and two brothers. We are seven children living; three, together with my father, he buried on the bank of the Tippecanoe river. Father and little Bettie are buried in one grave. O how sad we felt when they died! I go to school and want to learn all I can. My brother-in-law takes your paper, and he gives it to me to take to mother to read. I became so fond of the little folks' letters that I wish to do my part. Let us try to be good.

Deer Creek, Ind.

From F. D. McKeever:—I go to meeting and like to hear the minister preach about Jesus. "Children obey your parents in the Lord; for this is right. Honor thy father and thy mother, which is the first command with promise."

Middlebury, Ind.

From Jacob Bomgardner:—I am a poor orphan boy, and live with my sister Mary. I have a little blind brother; and oh how thankful I am to God for my eyesight when I see my brother read his Bible with his fingers. I am not a member of the church, but I like to go to meeting. I hope the good Lord will spare me, so that when I am older, I may become a member. Let us all be good children.

Middlebury, Ind.

"Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him."—Paul.

WHAT CAN I DO FOR JESUS?

WHAT can I do for Jesus?
I'm such a little child;
Can I make known His goodness,
His disposition mild?
What would I do for Jesus
If I had but the power?
Alas! I feel my weakness,
I'm such a little flower.

I cannot preach the Gospel,
To eager, listening ears,
Nor fight His glorious battles,
Who am so young in years,
Can I do naught for Jesus,
For His kind love to me?
O yes, I'll sing His praises,
Who died upon the tree.

Yes, I can sing for Jesus,
And He will hear my song,
Who wishes little children
Join the heavenly throng;
He loves to hear the voices,
Of little ones like me,
And, smiling, say His kingdom,
Shall too our kingdom be.

I'll pray and sing to Jesus,
The little children's friend,
Who gave His life to save us,
From torment without end.
The sound of children's voices
His willing ear doth greet;
Then sing and pray to Jesus,
For children's prayers are sweet.

Selected by WILLIAM RICE.

THE OTHER FAMILY.

Dear Children:—

I AM now ready to tell you something about that other family. I am glad I don't need to pain your feelings again by giving you such a sad picture as I did in the account of the other family. I received a letter from a mother that has three bright little boys, and they have a sweet little sister whom they love very much. In the letter she wished me to visit them. I got there in the evening and how glad we all were to see each other again, for since we had parted the last time, these children's dear, good papa had become willing to love Jesus and help their dear mamma keep up the family prayer and read the Bible. (Don't you just now think of the little boys' papa in that other family, who whipped mamma for wanting to do good?)

When I got to this family instead of the children being shy and awkward, they came right up with happy smiles, beaming on their faces, and shook hands, and what intelligent little faces they had too. At night after all the chores were done the little boys came in and each one seemed to know just where to put his hat, and just how to do to please papa and mamma. At the table each one seemed to know just how to behave so as to make people love them. And papa and mamma seemed also to know how to talk kindly and politely to the children so that they will love them. I heard no harsh, loud words there. After supper we read out of the blessed Bible and talked about our duties as Christians. The little boys can talk intelligently about many things. Their papa told me that the boys can sit up late of nights and hear the Bible read. After the reading and talking, we all bowed before God and tried to ask Him to still be good to us as in the past, and keep us all safe through the dark night. I heard these little children's mamma ask our good Father in heaven to bless these dear little ones whom He had entrusted in their care. You will now think, no wonder that these are good, happy children. After prayer, when the little boys started to go up stairs to bed, I heard them say, "good night, mamma." O! what a blessing, thought I, to have such good parents; but, dear children, I only saw it the more when I was in that other family and saw how it is when a family does not obey Jesus.

The next day was Sunday, and we had the good privilege of attending meeting and heard about some of the things we must do to be saved. In the evening, when I parted with that nice family, I just felt like staying all night with them again.

Now, dear children, which of these two families would you rather live in? (I forgot to tell you that the good family reads the BROTHERS AT WORK). Now if this poorly written sketch proves acceptable to our little readers, and our editors print it, you may hear, after awhile, again about that poor mother who wants to be saved, or something else to interest and edify you.

Your Well-wishing Brother,

D. E. BURBANK.

Iron Centre, Iowa.

from ten to twenty-five cents a year for the support of it. The money thus arising to be used for buying books.

These books could be taken by any person wishing to read them, by complying with the rules necessary to keep it all straight and in order.

This would secure privileges to many of our ministering brethren (especially the poorer ones who cannot afford to spend so much for books) in preparing themselves better against our opponents, holding views contrary to ours. Some may say the Bible is sufficient; but we can be sure, it will not hurt them in studying God's word, by having access to other men's views besides their own on certain subjects.

And next, it would give every member, rich or poor, young or old, a chance to read on different subjects, that they would in no other way obtain.

And lastly, it would be one of the best plans to distribute the many tracts published by the brethren. Members could get them, give them to their neighbors, and when read through, they could be returned to the library again.

O. WISTRICH.

REMARKS.—The plan suggested by our brother is a good one, and if reduced to a proper system and put to practice, would, no doubt, result in much good. If each congregation would purchase a good collection of reliable books, keep them at some convenient point and lend, for a stated time, to such as would want to read them, the numbers could be afforded an opportunity of being kept posted, and that, too, without the outlay of much money. It would cause all the members and their children to read more, and do much towards improving the literary attainments of our people.

There are hundreds of good books, which if selected with care would be a credit to any congregation, and the reading of them be attended with the best results. We all will read, in fact we ought to read, it does us good, both mentally and physically, will improve the mind, and if the right kind of reading, will improve us spiritually.

—make better men and women. It will give us something useful to talk about, and that is no small consideration. Ministers, whose limited circumstances will not allow them to purchase books, will be much benefited by having such a library convenient. At no cost to themselves they can have the privilege of consulting works that otherwise they could have no access to. Members' children would be much benefited by such an arrangement, for they must have something to read, and why not furnish them with good, wholesome reading matter.

There are young brethren and sisters, too, who spend all their leisure time reading borrowed books, and if they cannot borrow a good book, they will borrow a bad one. Outsiders, living in the vicinity of the library, might derive much good from such a library, for by reading works treating the faith and practice of the Brethren, they would in many instances become convinced of the truthfulness of our position.

Hope our readers will give this matter some thought. The suggestion made by the brother is certainly a good one, and may be made practically useful.

J. B. M.

A Half-Day at a Baptist Conference.

AFTER singing and prayer, the first thing was, "What does the word 'resurrected' mean?" This was answered by two only; that it means to stand up, only once, not again.

The next was, "How does the blood of Christ cleanse us from all sin?" "Well," said one, "by faith in Christ; if we believe that Christ died and shed His blood for us, and are baptized because our sins are remitted, this brings us down very low, as low as we can get, and have our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience."

Another said: "I cannot see it in that light, how can we have our hearts sprinkled with the blood of Christ?"

"Why," said another, "what do we believe in Christ for? Because He shed His blood for us, this pays the debt for us. It is just like a man paying a debt at the bank for another man, that man is now free from that debt if he believes the man that paid the debt for him."

Then another said: "I cannot see how that would cleanse us from all sin."

Another read a part of 1 John 1: 7, "And the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanses us from all sin." "Now," said he, "in this lies the whole matter. Now, if we believe this, we need have no more fears of condemnation; we are as free from sin as Christ was free."

So they left it, as they could not agree. Such things we hear, sitting under the sound of the voice of these mistaken, learned men. Now, brethren, I thought if we had some tracts treating on the subject, "How Does the Blood of Christ cleanse us from all sin?" to scatter among them, it might do much good. Brethren, write on the subject soon.

JOHN Y. SNAVELEY.

From Marshall Co., Ill.

Dear Brethren:—

WE will by your permission give a little history of the branch of the church located at this place.

We belong to the Northern District of Illinois. Bro. Lemuel Hillery came to labor for us two years ago. We had only three members then, but some additions since, and on April fourth had seventeen members. Bro. Hillery commenced a series of meetings on that day, and preached with such power that three precious souls came out on the Lord's side on Sunday the 7th, and were baptized, all of the brethren and sisters and a large congregation being present.

Bro. Hillery then went to Woodford Co, but returned the 11th, when three more precious souls were added to the church the same day by baptism. There were, we think, others that are almost persuaded. There should be more preaching here and our house is open at all times for this purpose. We hope the Lord will reward the brother for his labors, and may the blessings of God rest upon those, who have started out in the service of their Master. Brethren of Northern Illinois, do not forget us in your District Meeting.

With Much Love,
J. M. FIKE.

GLEANINGS.

From J. S. Flory.—We have nothing special to write in regard to church matters, only all seems to be moving on in perfect union. Have regular appointments and good attendance. Had two appointments at our school-house last Sunday.

We have an unusual early Spring. Large crops are being put in. Health seekers are beginning to come in, in order to receive the benefit of our healthy and invigorating climate.

April 10.

From W. C. Milroy.—Please send me a copy of "Campbellism Weighed in the Balance and Found Wanting." I heard one of these preachers preaching, having on a big, silver watch chain, a gold breast-pin and a fine suit of broadcloth. I could not help but think, that if the blind lead the blind, they will both fall into the ditch. He says, they take the Word of God for the man of their counsel. He preached from Matt. 23, dwelling considerably on the word "oughtest," in verse 27. If it had been in the 13th chapter of John, he would have talked differently.

Carlton, Neb., April 14.

From L. Hyre.—The health is good among the members at this time. The cause of the Master is progressing slowly; had twelve additions this Winter. Pray for us that we may hold out faithful and that the evil one may never gain the victory over us.

Mecum, Ind.

From Amos Chamberlin.—There was baptism in this arm of the church on the first Sunday in March. Five precious souls covenanted with God in baptism. May He help them to be faithful! The waters are still troubled; for on last Sunday one more was baptized, and we believe that others are near the kingdom. May the Lord help them to come.

We are having meeting and Bible class every Sunday when the weather permits; also prayer-meeting every Wednesday evening. Hope to be able to send more good news soon. Pray for us.

Orton, New Jersey.

From S. Murray.—I have been in what I call my home church, the Salamony district, one week. Preached every evening, also on Lord's day preached at three different places. Yesterday preached a funeral for an infant child of Bro. Jacob and sister Lida Hitches. By request of sister Hoover we had a little meeting at the house of Bro. Eli Hoover in the evening. The sister has been poorly all Winter; O may the good Lord comfort her in her afflictions, is our prayer! To-morrow evening we expect to commence a series of meetings in the Huntington district, and think of continuing them some ten days.

Huntington, Ind.

From D. Rittenhouse.—Since our meeting at Primrose, Bro. Nicholson from Knox Co., O., has been with us, and preached a few sermons at different places, and four have been added to the church and others are counting the cost.

Vianor, Ohio.

From B. P. Stump.—I have no special church news to write, but the brethren and sisters here are in love and union so far as we know. I would say to the brethren who are going West, come and see our country before locating elsewhere. We have a beautiful town site here, and land surrounding it, which can be bought cheap. The weather is fine and health is good.

Davenport, Neb.

From John Metzger.—I came to Ogden, Ill., yesterday evening. Expect to stay with the few brethren here this week; they have appointed meeting in Ogden for this evening in the Methodist church. I learn a Universalist minister is coming to Ogden to-day, to have meeting this evening and continue awhile here at this place.

April 16.

DIED.

Obituaries should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and separate from all other business.

HENDRICKS.—In the Nettle Creek church, Indiana, our esteemed brother, Robert A. Hendricks. Departed this life April 9th, 1878, aged 48 years, 4 months and 5 days. He had been afflicted with that dread disease, consumption and not been able to perform any labor for about seven years. A BOWMAN.

YARGER.—In the Wadham's Grove congregation, Stephenson Co., Ill., April 2nd, 1878, William Yarger, aged 72 years, 6 months and 16 days. Funeral text: Rev. 14, 13.

H. B. RBY.

SNELL.—In the Cook's Creek district, Va., sister Susannah Snell, on April 3rd, 1878, aged 61 years, 6 months and 4 days.

S. F. SANGER.

MERTZ.—Near Burnettville, Ind., April 4, 1878, sister Sarah Mertz, wife of Peter H. Mertz, aged 36 years, 9 months and 7 days.

J. G. ROYER.

BOWMAN.—In Magdolee congregation, Franklin Co., Va., April 7th, 1878, sister Catharine Bowman, aged 81 years, 6 months and 27 days.

W. A. PETERS.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

NOTICES of Love-feasts, District Meetings, etc., should be brief, and written on paper separate from other business.

LOVE-FEASTS.

At Beaver Dam congregation, Kosciusko Co., Ind., June 6th, 1878.

Four miles South of Waterloo, Iowa, Wednesday, June 5th, 1878, at 10 A. M.

Union church, Marshall Co., Ind., June 4, 1878, commencing at 5 o'clock, P. M.

Four miles South of Lewistown, Winona Co., Minn., first Saturday and Sunday of June next, Nodaway Co., Mo., four miles East of Graham, May 10.

Montgomery Co., Iowa, twelve miles North of Villisca, May 18.

Panther Creek church, Dallas Co., Iowa, May 19th and 15th, commencing at 1 o'clock.

Maquoketa church, one half mile East of Lost Nation, commencing May 25th at 1 o'clock.

Two miles North of Hudson, McLean Co., Ill., May 11th, at 10 o'clock A. M.

Stone church, Marshall Co., Iowa, June 15, at 10 o'clock, A. M.

Cedar Lake congregation, in Northern Indiana, two miles South-east of Cornum, DeKalb Co., on Thursday, June 6th, 1878, at 2 o'clock.

Middle district, Miami Co., Ohio, May 15th, at 2 P. M.

Silver Creek congregation, Ogle Co., Ill., on Thursday and Friday, May 16th and 17th, commencing at 10 o'clock.

State Center church, Iowa, four miles and a half South-east of State Center, May 20th and 30th, commencing at 1 P. M.

Pleasant Valley, Elkhart Co., Ind., May 16th at 4 P. M.

Cherry Grove, Carroll Co., Ill., May 15th, commencing at 10 A. M.

We, the brethren of the Clear River district, intend holding a Love-feast on the 18th of June. — Place of meeting near Merriam, Noble Co., Ind.

J. HYRE.

We, the brethren of the Cerro Gordo church, Macon Co., Ill., will hold a Communion meeting, June 5th, commencing at 2 o'clock P. M. All coming by railroad from the East or West, will stop at Cerro Gordo the day before.

JOHN METZGER.

JOS. HENDRICKS.

The brethren and sisters of the Lost Creek church, propose, the Lord willing, to hold a Love-feast on Sunday and Monday, the 12th and 13th of May at the Good Will meeting-house, eight miles East of Millin station. A hearty invitation extended to all. All coming by railroad to Millin, will be met with conveyance to place of meeting by dropping a card to the undersigned at Millin, Box 16, Juniata Co., Pa.

JOHN ZOOK.

The Brethren of the Smith Fork church, Clinton Co., Mo., will hold a Love-feast, the 8th of June next, commencing at 2 o'clock, P. M. Place of meeting one mile and a half North of Plattsburg in our meeting-house.

By order of the church,

D. D. SELL.

DISTRICT MEETINGS.

Northern District of Indiana in English Prairie church, May 9th.

Northern District of Illinois at Shaanon, May 21, at 8 o'clock, A. M.

North-eastern district of Ohio, in Mahoning church, Mahoning Co., Ohio, May 29th, commencing at 9 o'clock, A. M.

The District meeting for the Middle District of Iowa, will meet Monday, May 27th, at the church one and a half mile East of Lost Nation.

Eastern District of Pennsylvania, in Indian Creek church, Montgomery Co., May 23rd.

Eastern District of West Virginia, April 19th and 20 in the Fairmont congregation.

Northern District of Kansas and Southern Nebraska, eight miles South-east of Beatrice, May 13th, at 8 A. M.

The District Meeting of Northern Indiana will be held in English Prairie church, the Lord willing on Thursday, May 9th, 1878, commencing at 9 o'clock, A. M. All the Brethren coming by railroad from the East and from the West, must come via Kendallville and stop off at Lima, where the Brethren will meet them, as there is no connection at Sturgis. The Brethren coming to that place, will have to stay over night.

By Order of the Church,

D. KAUB.

The District Meeting of North-western Ohio will be held with the Brethren at the Sugar Ridge church, Hancock Co., Ohio, on June 1st. Those coming from the East on the B. & O. R. R., will be met at Hayesville by notifying the undersigned. Those coming from other points will stop off at Leipsic on the D. & M. R. R., where they will be met with conveyances. We suggest that each delegate consult his church, as to how many copies of Minutes are desired. Address me at Gilboa, Ohio.

I. J. ROSENBERGER.

INTERESTING ITEMS.

—The late controversy has completely turned the heads of our Baptist brethren. They discovered during the discussion, that apostolicity was a very necessary, if not an essential mark of the true church, and then went straightway to work to get up an apostolic pedigree for their sect. The Baptist Bath Play, of this city has gone so far that the Watchman of Boston, calls upon it to stop its "suicidal nonsense." — St. Louis Daily Globe.

Yes, they are contending for church succession, when in fact there is not a man among them, who can find a Baptist church, practicing backward, single immersion, beyond the twelfth century. Let them bridge those 1,200 years with their method of baptizing, if they can. Their succession is about 1,200 years too short.

—The grand doxology, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," was composed by bishop Ken, and is 240 years old.

—The annual income of the church of England is $30,000,000. The Church has 10,000 religious edifices, including thirty cathedrals.

—The Superintendent of a factory in Canada, which manufactures paper from wood says, that the process is now so much improved that the paper can be made ready for use in six hours from the cutting of the tree.

—A new Pompeii has been discovered in Italy. At the foot of Mount Gargano, a buried town has been laid bare, the houses being twenty feet below the surface. A temple of Diana was first brought to light, then a portico, composed of columns without capitals, and finally a necropolis, covering nearly four acres.

—Eagles have been carefully timed and found to fly often at the rate of 140 miles in an hour, and the hawk exceeds even this speed.

W. U. R. R. Time Table.

Day passenger train going east leaves Lanark at 12:25 P. M., and arrives in Racine at 6:43 P. M.
Day passenger train going west leaves Lanark at 2:14 P. M., and arrives at Rock Island at 5:59 P. M.
Night passenger trains, going east and west, meet and leave Lanark at 2:15 A. M., arriving in Racine at 9:00 A. M., and at Rock Island at 9:00 A. M.
Freight and Accommodation Trains will run west at 12:10 A. M., 10:50 A. M., and east at 12:10 A. M. and 4:45 P. M.

Tickets are sold for above trains only. Passenger trains make close connection at Western Union Junction.

G. A. SMITH, Agent.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK.

"Behold I Bring You Good Tidings of Great Joy, which Shall be unto All People." — LUKE 2: 10.

Vol. III.

Lanark, Ill., May 2, 1878.

No. 18.

The Brethren at Work.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY

—BY—

J. H. MOORE & M. M. ESHELMAN.

—FO—

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

| | |
|-----------------|-----------------|
| R. H. MILLER, | LABORA, IND. |
| J. W. STEIN, | NEWTONIA, MO. |
| D. VANIMAN, | VIBDEN, ILL. |
| D. H. MENTZER, | WAYNESBORO, PA. |
| MATTIE A. LEAR, | URBANA, ILL. |

GO, FEEL WHAT I HAVE FELT.

BY EMILY STEES.

Go, feel what I have felt,
Go hear what I have borne;
Sink 'neath a blow, a drunkard's death,
And the cold, proud world's scorn,
Thus struggle on from year to year,
Thy sole relief, the scalding tear.

Go weep as I have wept,
O'er a loved husband's fall;
See every cherished promise swept,
Youth's sweetness turned to gall;
Hope's faded flowers strewed all the way
That led me up to woman's day.

Go, kneel as I have knelt,
Implore, beseech and pray,
Strive the besotted heart to melt,
The downward curse to stay;
Be cast with bitter curse aside—
Thy prayers burlesqued, thy tears defied.

Go, stand where I have stood,
And see the strong man low,
With gnashing teeth, lips bathed in blood
And cold and livid brow.
Go catch his wandering glance and see
There mirrored, his soul's misery.

Go, hear what I have heard,
The sobs of sad despair,
As memory's feeling fount hath stirred
And its revealings there,
Have told him what he might have been
Had he the drunkard's fate foreseen.

Go, hear and see and feel and know
All that my soul hath felt and known;
Then look within the wine cup's glow,
See if its brightness can atone;
Think of its flavor you would try,
If all proclaimed—"tis drink and die.

Tell me I hate the bowl,
Hate is a feeble word;
I loath, abhor, my very soul,
By strong disgust is stirred
When'er I see, or hear, or tell
Of the dark beverage of hell!

LOCK AND KEY.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

To Sister Mary Hoover, of Chatham Centre, Ohio.

WE are all Nehuchadnezzars, and need some Daniel to interpret our dreams and dissolve our doubts. God has made no lock to which He has fitted no key. Both lock and key may be too intricate for our comprehension in this life; but this life is not intended to spring the bolt of all the dark texts of Revelation. Eternity will present more mysteries than time. Even the simplest things reach to the depth of the Infinite. While penning these lines I am chewing a fragment of orange rind. I perceive it to be an orange and not a peach or fig or banana. There is as inexplicable a mystery in the distinction of taste as in the incarnation, or the personal deity of the Holy Spirit. I am not only incapable of giving a full solution of the queries you propound, but can give you no guaranty that you will not have some of them on hand in the world to come. Eternity is an ever-unfolding Apocalypse of the Unknowable.

Your first lesson is Mark 4: 11, 12. Whatever exegesis is given, we must never throw the shadow of a shade of suspicion on the Divine integrity, as though He arbitrarily vouchsafes or withholds the treasures of His grace to or from any one. Christ's course was a puzzle even to His disciples. They privately interrogated Him. This was not the disposition of the multitude. For reasons into which the inner life of the apostolic elect entered as factors, it was "given unto them to know the mystery of the kingdom of God." The same conditions would have brought the same revelation to twelve thousand instead of the individual twelve. The word lest in verse 12 is not the representative of a Divine decree, but of human prejudice, judicial stupor and petrification. The words are as applicable to-day as eighteen centuries ago. This principle of the apprehension and obscuration of the mystery of the Cross is forcibly presented in verse 13, where it is declared that the knowledge of that parable is the passport to all others.

Your next query is Mark 16: 17, 18. The life in the winged butterfly is the same as that which thrived in the chrysalis. That the visibly extraordinary has passed away is no proof that the saints have lost any of the essential power of holy character. The ocular demonstrations requisite for the inauguration of Christianity are not needed for its perpetuation. No Divine Dispensation can be changed without Divine authority, and the authority must be supported by Divine credentials. To continue these would be to destroy their effect by making them common. Familiarity with variations from the ordinary course of things would lower the miraculous to the sphere of daily natural phenomena. The perpetuation of miracles would utterly derange the order of providence, and invalidate all biblical evidence that Jesus Christ was the Son of God. Had miracles continued, their cessation would now be the miracle.

Your third interrogation refers to the case of those who are immersed without conversion, and are led to repentance after their admission to church-fellowship. This is a serious question. It comes home to our individual condition and destiny. I have had many similar problems presented for solution, but have never met one that really needed rebaptism. That many are immersed in profound ignorance of the import of the ordinance, does not necessitate its repetition when they awake to "the exceeding sinfulness of sin." The unfitness for baptism lies in our unbroken relation to sin, and not in our lack of apprehending its depths and power and heinousness. The unbred taint of sin may appear to us more horrible and damning at four score under the full blaze of the Sun of Righteousness, than did actual sin in our first awakening prior to baptism. Heavy-headed ministering brethren have asked whether they ought not be rebaptized because their score of sin was so much more overwhelming at Seventy than at Twenty. When the motive is base, or selfish, and the consciousness of repentance predominant, and the love of sin unsubdued, the necessity of going back to the Divine order and character of induction is imperative.

Next comes the awful "mystery of iniquity," blasphemy against the Holy Ghost. What is it? Whether it has but one form of commission we are not told. But one thing is logically certain; whoever commits it must be schooled in a course of unrighteousness which crushes out all capacity for the retention or readmission of the Holy Ghost. To "sin willfully," according to Paul's solemn avowment in Heb. 10: 26, has a deeper meaning than lies on the surface of the letter. It is not a single act, nor a dozen acts, however vile and damnable, but a persistence that converts the will-power into unmitigated devilism. To sin once willfully is to put our souls in fearful jeopardy. To sin twice is to rivet the bonds of hell, and shrivel our spiritual capacity. To keep on sinning, in whatever form, approximates more and more to the complete transformation of every soul-element into the hopeless disposition of Satan. To reach this climax is to eradicate all possible conditions for the indwelling of the Holy Ghost. "Without faith it is impossible to please God," and certain psychologic conditions are as essential to faith as certain condition of the eye to sight.

Next you put the query whether there are persons now possessed with devils in the same way as in the time of Christ. I do not think so. We need not enter upon proof that the demons of that period were personally occupied by the Spirits of the pit. The instance of the Gadarene is irrefragable evidence of this fact. Hell was allowed a wider sphere, and a more extraordinary regnancy over human nature, so as to prepare conditions for the most wonderful and convincing exhibitions of the Omnipotence of the Nazarene Carpenter. The devil and his angels are as busy now as ever, and have as complete possession of souls as in any former period; but with the personal ministry of Jesus, and the miraculous endowments of the immediate successors, the personal in-being of evil spirits terminated. To extend their incarnation beyond that period would have been as disastrous to the cause of redemption as the perpetuity of miracles.

Your next query sweeps a wide field, and goes to the very core of the principle on which rests the very existence of the church. What is the nature and extent of the power conferred in Matt. 18: 18, and 16: 19, and John 20: 23? Here is room indeed for misconception, usurpation of authority, and misapplication of power. The assumption of unauthoritative prerogatives, buttressed by these passages, has been the cause of incalculable evil. The Heaven-bathed, earth-and-hell-astounding corruptions of the Church of Rome, are the outgrowth of unholy ambition and abused authority. There is nothing in which the church has need of greater vigilance and humility than in the weight she puts upon her decisions in relation to matters not specified in the inspired record. New applications of principles are necessary, but it is a rare thing to devise an application so perfectly accordant with the principle as not to admit of improvement. Not infrequently there is no reference to principle whatever in the exercise of authority; but decisions are made with a dogmatism as repulsive as irrational. Too often the countercheck to the foregoing passages which the Spirit has added as a kind of Postscript in Rev. 22: 18, is ignored. The door should ever be left open for investigation and progress, and peremptorily closed against all cavilers with the principle on which our imperfect decisions rest. Tradition and custom are only human mile-stones, and should not be exalted into equality with Revelation. To "lend it over God's heritage" is as culpable a violation of the Divine arrangement as insubordination to church officials in the exercise of their God-given authority. Tests of membership cannot be based on any thing save the experience of the Divine life in its Divine forms, without arrogating Divine prerogatives, which is popery. There has been enough given in the life of Christ in relation to humility to divorce us thoroughly from the vanities and frivolities of fashion, so that the above principle cannot be claimed in defense of departure from the general order of the Reformation. That no alteration in the sanctioned order of dress is allowable in any particular, I would not aver. But the clamors for liberty generally repudiate the central truth of the Cross.

You ask, in the next place, "Whether it is according to the Scriptures to have our likenesses taken, or to have instrumental music, or instructive pictures?" Thousands will answer no, and thousands yes. God never employs what is intrinsically wrong. He "created man in His own image, after His own likeness." Has filled the many mansions of His vast temple with photographs of His Infinite Beauty and goodness. Whose eyes are purged may see the face of the Divine Father in miniature ten thousand times a day. He is not only the Chief Photographer, but the great Choir-leader in the Diapason of the Universe, and has made Heavens on earth a magnificent, ravishing picture-gallery. The harps and splendors of the Upper Realm will do the saints no harm on earth, but the saints harm themselves by the perversion of the Divine Goodness. In relation to all this God-invented, God-arranged concert of beauty and harmony for the culture of the soul, many are under the spell of I Cor. 8: 7. Their conscientiousness I respect, while I deplore their prejudices, and deprecate their denunciations. There are many others who are unfit to have pictures, or be skilled in instrumental music, because of the vanity and self-idolatry of their natures. But the restrictions of circumstances do not diminish the beneficence of the Divine provisions, or our natural right to their enjoyments.

Lastly, you inquire "why was Jesus thirty years old before He was baptized, being He was our example?" The waiting period of His life is the most significant and instructive of all. How few of us, with the stirring consciousness of great pent-up powers for human good, know how to wait under the veil of obscurity and the burden of toil, for the best employment of their endowments for the church and the world. A mighty truth lies buried under the tools and shavings and dust of the workshop of Nazareth, which can come to judicious resurrection only by the power of the Holy Ghost. The age of Jesus at baptism is no more a precedent for us than that of His death. Our sense of sin, hunger and thirst after righteousness, and our recovery to holiness, qualify for baptism at ten years of age as truly as at thirty. The mind of Christ gives a right relation to and perception of all things. We grow into Him eternally I Cor. 13: 12.

THE OBLIGING ELEPHANT.

SIR Emerson Tement, tells of an adventure. He had in Ceylon, while riding on a narrow road through the forest. He heard a rumbling sound approaching, and directly there came to meet him an elephant bearing on his tusks a large log of wood which he had been directed to carry to the place where it was most needed. Tement's horse, unused to these monsters, was frightened, and refused to go forward. The elephant seeing this, evidently decided that he must himself get out of the way. But to do this he was obliged to take the log from his tusks, with his trunk and lay it on the ground, which he did, and then backed out of the road between the trees till only his tail was visible. But the horse was still too timid to go by, when the thoughtful elephant pushed himself farther back, till all his body except the end of his trunk had disappeared. Then Sir Emerson succeeded in getting his horse by, but stopped to witness the result. The elephant came out, took the log up again, laid it across his tusks, and went on his way. This story shows not only reasoning, but faithfulness to his task, and spirit of courtesy to a fellow-traveler not always shown by man.

—Selected.

The old Jerusalem was laid waste by war, and the ruins are overlaid with dirt and desolation. But the New Jerusalem shall never tumble down. The jasper battlements shall stand and shine forever. The golden gates shall never lose their lustre nor rust upon their portals. The white robes shall never need cleansing, for they are washed in the blood of the Lamb. The harps of heaven shall always be in tune, and never be swept for dregs. No failing eyesight, no gray hairs, no weary limbs, no wrinkled brows, no hollow cheeks, no sickness, no pain, nor any more death. O blessed prospect! Whose fall glory draweth night!

EXPOSTULATION.

SINNERS, perhaps this news to you
May have no weight although so true.
The carnal pleasures of the earth
Cast off the thoughts and fears of death enormous.

It is awful, awful, awful.

The blooming youth all in their prime,
Are counting out their length of time,
They oftentimes say 'tis to their intent,
When they get old they will repent.

The aged sinner will not turn,
His heart 's so hard he cannot mourn,
But oh, the sad and awful state
Of those who stay and come too late.

Much harder than a flinty rock,
He will not turn though Jesus knocks,
The foolish virgins they began
To knock but could not enter in.

Then parents take a solemn view
Of your dear children, dear to you,
How can you bear to hear them cry
And foist you with their misery?

When Christ the Lord shall come again,
In solemn pomp and burning flame,
Say, Gabriel go, proclaim the sound,
Awake ye nations under ground.

Oh how will parents tremble there
Who raise their children without prayer!
Methinks they'll hear their children say,
"I never heard my parents pray."

Good Lord what groans, what latter cries,
What thunder rolling through the skies,
Poor sinners, sunk in dark despair,
While saints are shouting through the air.
Selected by G. W. ARVUS.

PLAINNESS IN DRESS A SOURCE OF MORAL POWER IN
THE CHURCH.

BY ALEX. W. REESE.

REMEMBER IT.

SEE the suspensions, the abscondings of confidential clerks, cashiers and tellers of banks—dishonest public officials, defaulters, and swindlers of every grade and type; men who have betrayed their trusts, embezzled the funds of others, and, in numberless instances, have fled to foreign lands to escape the vengeance of the law, and a felon's cell. Look at the frightful list of murders, thefts, forgeries, robberies, breaches of trust, bankruptcies, betrayals of confidence, both in public and in private life, and, to crown all, the terrible list of suicides, human lives rashly and recklessly cast away to escape remorse, exposure, and disgrace. And why all this? Simply because, in a corrupt and venial age men are so infatuated with "style," that they will live beyond their means, and, in order to make a display, to keep up appearance, to pamper a false and pernicious pride, will accomplish the end so eagerly sought, even at the sacrifice of honor, integrity, manhood, self-respect and all that involves and dignifies the character of man. Yea, they will imperil the immortal soul that they may enjoy the "pleasures of sin for a season."

Such is the ghastly picture of the morals of the present day, and it is enough to cause a sickening shudder of the soul to contemplate its revolting features. And this results from the sad fact that men, as well as women, fritter away the brief and transitory life, that God has given for nobler purposes, in this mad rush after display.

While our text condemns the wearing of gold, of jewels and the putting on of costly array by the females professing godliness, it by no means confines the interdiction to them. Every one (both males and females who are the followers of Christ) is included in the command. None can escape its obligations without guilt. The doctrines of Christ are in startling contrast with the maxims and habits of the world. In all respects the Christian differs from the man of the world. And this difference is as apparent as it is real. The Christian is literally "a living epistle known and read of all men." What moral power does the worldly and fashionable Christian(?) exert upon a godless world? Where is the cross in the worldly and fashionable church? (unless it be the picture thereof, garlanded with roses, and hung in a frame on the wall, or perhaps the wooden representation of it on the summit of the perched church spire).

Where is the self-denial in such a church? Where the image of Christ? Can we distinguish the fashionable audience, at the fashionable church, from the fashionable assembly at the fashionable watering place, or the fashionable theatre? Are not vanity, pride and display the ruling passion with the first as well as the latter? Are such members noted for piety, godliness and humility of mind such as the Gospel demands? Are such church members "a peculiar people, zealous of good works?" No wonder that in view of inconsistency like this, the world is full of infidels and skeptics, who openly scoff at a religion like this! No wonder that such Christians as these excite the pity and contempt of the world. No wonder that the moral power of such a church sinks below zero, and its zeal for Christ like the sun's rays reflected from the ice bergs of the Arctic seas.

Just so far, then, as the church is in non-conformity to the world, in that degree will its moral power be felt and acknowledged by the world. If the Christian supposes that he gains anything in the estimation of the world by concession of principle, a sad bid for its favor, he makes a sad mistake. The world is a keen critic. It detects inconsistency in the Christian character with the quick perception of intention; and the world gives no quarter in such a case. While the world is full of sophistical reasoning and plausible argumentation, in sustaining its innate enmity to the cross of Christ, it yet rigidly holds the professor of Christianity to both the spirit and letter of the Gospel of the Son of God.

For every sacrifice demanded of the sinner unbelief rears its "horrid front," but while specious argument is now at hand, the world cannot resist a pure, consistent, and godly life.

"Truth crushed to earth will rise again;

The eternal years of God are hers;

But error, wounded withes in pain,

And dies amidst her worshippers."

The example of a pure and godly life has a moral power upon the world as irresistible as the torrent of the Niagara, or as the surge of the mighty ocean. Every source, then, of moral power should be utilized by the church, to the end that the Gospel of Christ have free course and be glorified of men. "Let your light shine, so that others, seeing your good works, may glorify your Father which is in heaven." Simplicity and plainness in dress are so manifestly in accordance with both the letter and the spirit of the Gospel, and so diametrically opposed to the feelings and sentiments of the carnal mind, that it is passing strange how any one, professing the religion of "the meek and lowly Jesus," should hesitate to adopt these Gospel principles, and to incorporate them into their daily confession of Christ.

We are not surprised at this defection among the members of the various fashionable and worldly sects of the present day, for we expect nothing of self-denial or of sacrifice of popular favor, on the part of such people. What indeed could we expect from professing Christians who distort the plain Word to suit their own peculiar views—caprices, convenience, or whims; but the sad fruits of disobedience and schism which such a source inevitably produces. But that, in the membership of the Brethren church, which especially claims to "obey" the Gospel, there should be found those in open rebellion against one of the plainest and most positive principles found inside the lids of the New Testament; or if not actually in open rebellion, yet in secret sympathy with, and encouraging, those who are, surpasses all comprehension. While such members profess humility, and approve, (so they say) non-conformity to the world, yet how plainly do we see the symptoms of worldly vanity and pride cropping out in their actions and appearance.

While these ostensibly profess to have "put away the old man and his deeds," do they not secretly pine after those God-forbidden indulgences which the Word condemns? The trouble with such members, we greatly fear, is that they are trying to hold on to the church with one hand and to the world with the other. This Christ Himself has declared to be an impossibility. "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." "No man can serve two masters," no man can have the spirit of the lowly Nazarene in his bosom, and forbidden trappings of worldly vanity and pride on his back, at one and the same time. Ah, but says one, "God looks at the heart, and not at the outward appearance." So He does, and if the heart is humble the outside appearance will correspond with the state of the mind, vice versa. The man whose soul is filled with Holy Ghost, has no desire for the decorations of a sinful, God-hating world. No abstract virtue can exist without its corresponding act, for, in the absence of its expression, there is no evidence of its existence. The humble disciple of Christ will give expression to this grace in his conduct and in his external appearance. The proud man will show, by the reverse of this, the state of his heart. We firmly believe the Brethren church to be a great moral power in the world. And why? Because of its unflinching and steady adherence to the plain text of the Word of God; and because the church in its membership endeavors to carry out this belief in the Word of God by strict compliance with its divine teachings in their daily walk and conversation.

Let the Brethren church drift away in the smallest degree, from this sure foundation—this "safe plan of salvation," and just so far the Brethren church ceases to be a moral power in the world. Now one of the distinctive features of the Brethren church, is its opposition to worldly forms of dress, and its adoption of a personal costume representing the Scriptural doctrine of non-conformity to the world. This, the Brethren claim, is essential to the church of Jesus Christ.

We are taught to regard this peculiar costume as the uniform of Christ the great Captain of our salvation. The Scriptures represent the Christian life as a warfare, with the flesh, the world and the devil, the combined and deadly enemies of the human soul. The Christian is commanded to put on the whole armor of God, the details of which are specially set forth in the last will and testament of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. We are, also, taught to put on the uniform of the Christian soldier, so that we may be distinctly and certainly known and distinguished from the soldiers of Christ's enemies and our own.

We earnestly believe that this is one of the great sources of moral power in the Brethren church, and just as we depart from this principle, as expressed in the personal costume of its members, just so far we yield to the carnal appetites of the flesh, are spiritually damaged ourselves and lose our influence upon the world without. And the more license indulged, or granted, in this direction the more the church assimilates to the pride and fashion of the world, until, finally Christian identity is lost, and the church sinks into the destructive vortex of worldliness, vanity and sin. We have but to look at the history of contemporaneous churches, to behold the inevitable result of such a course. Look at the Methodist church in the days of Whitfield and John Wesley! With all the doctrinal defects of the organization, which we, by no means endorse; they were right as to their principle of non-conformity to the world in dress and ostentatious display.

In that early day they were as distinctively and severely plain as the Brethren church ever has been. Many a fiery and withering denunciation against pride and its inevitable expression in personal adornment, as the wearing of gold, of pearls, of jewels, of gay ribbons, of artificials, flowers and of "costly array," was hurled from the pulpit of the primitive Methodists in those purer days. And this Gospel doctrine is part and parcel of the Methodist "Book of discipline" at this very hour. But, alas, how sadly has the Methodist church degenerated in this respect since the days of Whitfield and the two Wesleys. How have they departed from the Gospel of Christ, until to-day their church bears off the palm in the race after worldly fashion and display?

Is the Methodist church the moral power in the world that it was in the days of John Wesley and that "sweet singer," his brother Charles? The most ardent of its devotees will scarcely do his intelligence justice to say that it is. While its members have been greatly swelled, yet its primitive and fiery zeal for Christ has become so diluted with the spirit of worldly fashion and pride, that its moral power has visibly and sensibly declined. And other denominations might be cited, which starting out in the principles of plainness, have so drifted away from the ancient moorings as almost to defy recognition by human eyes. This we earnestly believe, will be the sad, inevitable fate of the Brethren church whenever it departs from its primitive simplicity of dress, worship and practice as found in the Word of God; for it is a well-known saying that "history repeats itself." But it seems that some of our brethren while assenting to the general principles of plainness, yet object to reducing it to a personal and practical application by adopting the peculiar garb of the church as understood among ourselves. They are impatient of the restraints of the church; they will not come into the order without much admonition on the part of those who have the rule over us. They declare that there is no "thus saith the Lord" for the sister's cap, or the brother's round-cornered coat, or, indeed any of the other specific details which go to make up the costume by which the Brethren are known in a peculiar sense, as the followers of Christ.

Now we fearlessly assert that, in the consideration of this question, there is inevitably one of two things, either the Brethren's costume represents a principle of godliness, or it does not. If it represents a principle of godliness that principle is found in the Book, for there is no principle of godliness in the wide universe that is not found in the Book. Then, if this proposition be true, how can the sincere and humble follower of Christ refuse to accept its truth, and to be governed by it in his practice? On the other hand, if the Brethren's costume represents no principle of a holy and godly character, then it is as worthless as the worldly dress of a century ago, and no specific benefit can come from its adoption by the church.

These are the two palpable horns of the dilemma, one or the other of which must be grasped when we come to investigate the moral aspect of the question. There is no middle ground. Those who contend for non-conformity and plainness of dress, and yet oppose uniformity in costume, involve themselves and the church in endless confusion, impracticable theories, and diverse interpretations of the Word.

Some of the writers of our church papers, who assume the ground, seem not to foresee the logical results of the reasoning employed. In a recent issue of one of our papers an article of this character occupies a considerable space. Its author (who, by the way, is one of the ablest writers among the Brethren) in his review of the subject which appears in the form of an open letter addressed to another brother—takes what seems, at least to us, objectionable grounds. While admitting the general principle of plainness, he strongly, and in his quaint and peculiar style, objects to uniformity, in that respect, among the Brethren. Our dear brother says, "Some of our plainest members have fallen the deepest into scandal," because they knew without knowing.

While this sentence might be changed with ambiguity, we presume that the brother means that the members alluded to had the form of godliness without the spirit thereof. Granting this, for argument's sake, might not the result be deplored, be due more to the latter, than to the former cause? And really is this a sound argument against the principle of plainness, as represented in the peculiar garb of the Brethren church? Again he says, "None of us are in equipoise in Christ as He is in Himself, and this issues in collisions of thought, feeling and action." This statement is the ground-work of all the differences of modern Christendom. Hundreds of different sects, all claiming the Word for their various and specific views, have sprung up from this source. Because we cannot all see alike, is not the fault of the Word, but in ourselves. Because of a want of equipoise, men differ about what is essential in the Word, and what they consider is not. Hence one thinks we "ought" to do this, and the other that we "ought" not.

One claims to be of Paul, another of Cephas, and a third of Christ. Men have thus differed for over eighteen hundred years, and perhaps will differ through all time to come. But the church is condemned for this very thing. We are commanded to be of one mind, and that there be no divisions among us. Now the presence of divisions among us, is an evidence that we are not in the order the Scriptures prescribe for the church of Christ—not in equipoise with Christ as He is in Himself, and shows conclusively that there is something wrong among us, and that these divisions ought to cease. Do not such articles as our dear brother has penned, tend to encourage these divisions, rather than otherwise, by stimulating opposition to the order of the church? I cannot attempt in this already prolonged essay, any elaborate review of the brother's article, but will simply give expression to the thought, that it is a matter of regret that anything emanating from so influential a source, should seem to influence members against adopting the order of the church.

This, probably, is not the intention of the article, but we fear its tendency is in that direction. Finally if the Brethren church, claiming to be in a special and peculiar sense, the people of God—claiming to obey all the commandments of Christ, and known among men by its unflinching opposition to pride and vanity as expressed in worldly forms of dress, would cease to exert its moral power upon the world, then let the door be opened for indulgence in this respect. And the door once opened will never again be shut. Brother, wider, deeper the on-sweeping tide of worldliness and fashionable pride will flow, until the very foundations of the church will be sapped to their fall, and the Brethren church, its identity swallowed up and lost in the resistless torrent of fashionable Christianity, will be known only as a thing of the past.

Warrensburg, Mo.

THE NEWTONIA DEBATE.

[Brief synopsis of the discussion held at Newtonia, Mo., between D. B. Ray, of the Baptists and J. W. Stein of the Brethren. We give much of the arguments as we could correctly report.—J. B. MOORE.]

Thursday morning March 7th

RAY.—If baptism is a condition of salvation then that places salvation in the hands of men—I tell you I want no salvation in my hands to deal out to people. I point them to Christ, for there is no other name given under heaven or among men whereby we may be saved. The salvation is all in Christ, not in the hands of men. We preach the Gospel because we are commanded to do so. The washing of regeneration referred to in Titus does not refer to the pardoning of the sins, but the cleansing of the church. It does not say one word about baptism. The washing of regeneration does not refer to immersion, but alludes to moral cleansing. We are not justified by water baptism, but in 1 Cor. 6: 11, we are told that we are justified by the Spirit of God. Paul's baptism was emblematic of the washing away of his sins. My friend thinks a man cannot be a Christian without baptism. It is the blood of Christ that cleanseth us from all sins.

There is nothing wrong in talking of serpent salvation—The children of Israel had to look upon the serpent and then they were healed of God Himself. Who-soever believeth on Christ shall be saved. From Gal. 3: 26, we learn that we are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. We become a child of God by faith, but get into the church or body by baptism. We are baptized into the body. The church will save no one. Salvation is not locked up in the church, but is free to all who will believe on the Lord.

The Baptist church is the true church of God, yet I believe that there will be many saved out of other churches. Even out of the Roman Catholic church, for the Revelator says, come out of her, my people.

My friend's theory is that if you baptize a goat it makes a sheep of him. He goes into the water a goat and comes out a sheep. I hold that some out of all denominations will be saved. The old mother church will be saved, and will constitute the bride, the Lamb's wife.

The Scriptures teach that except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish, but if according to my friend, they will all go to the devil if not immersed three times. The jailer wanted to know what to do to be saved, and was told to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. This is what Paul and Silas told him.

STEIN.—My friend just keeps repeating the same arguments over. He blames us for teaching baptism a condition of salvation, yet he will teach faith a condition, and also repentance. He teaches salvation by grace alone, yet brings in faith as a condition. Faith alone will not save men. Christ told the Jews that believed on Him that if they would continue in His Word they should be His disciples and the truth should make them free. Though they had faith, yet they were not free, were still the servants of sin. Then faith alone will not save, for faith without works is dead, being alone.

My friend refuses to tell us what being born of the water means. If it does not mean baptism, why does he not tell us what it does mean? Let him answer the argument I drew from the language of Peter when he speaks of the like figure whereunto baptism doth also now save us. Paul says as many of us as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ (Gal. 3: 27). It is not repent into Christ, nor believe into Him, but be baptized into Him. We believe on Jesus Christ, repent of our sins and then are baptized into Christ, thus we get into Christ by baptism, and not by faith only, as my friend says.

We have shown you that Peter told the Pentecostians to repent and be baptized for the remission of sins. Here repentance and baptism are joined together for the same purpose. If baptism is because of the remission of sins, then repentance is too, and therefore put repentance after the remission of sins instead of before. I want my friend to tell us whether Peter answered the Pentecostians right when he told them to repent and be baptized for the remission of sins? The Baptists will not answer their converts that way. Though Mr. Ray takes the position that baptism is not a condition of pardon, yet he makes it a condition of membership in the Baptist church, and will not commune with any one without it. He maintains that a man becomes a child of God by faith, yet he is not good enough to be a member of the Baptist church. According to his logic people can be members of the church of Christ without baptism, but cannot be a member of the Baptist church without it; therefore the Baptist church is not the church of Christ.

But he maintains that we get into Christ, the head, by faith and then into the church, the body by baptism. I would like him to explain how one gets into the head without getting into the body? and what authority he has for making that distinction.

During the past Winter I have read about 150 books of the ancient Fathers, and find that for the first 500 years baptism for the remission of sins was the doctrine of the general church, yet my friend will maintain that it originated with the Roman Catholic church. He talks about the doctrine not being in the Bible. The New Testament is full of it. John the Baptist, Christ, Peter, Ananias and Paul taught it.

The primitive Christians did not go to war and kill each other. They were all opposed to war and blood-shed. War was opposed by Origen who lived in the second century, and also by Cyprian, Tertullian and Justin Martyr. The Baptist church is not opposed to war as was the primitive church. Even their preachers are allowed to take part in it, go to war and help kill their brethren instead of preaching the Gospel of peace as they are commanded to do by the Bible. The old Anabaptists and Waldenses, with which they claim proud connection took no part in war of any kind, but stood aloof from all blood-shed and cruelty. Thus we see that the Baptist church has departed not only from the faith of the Bible, but from the practice of the ancient churches.

For the want of time to prepare our report for the press this is all that we can give this week. J. B. M.

THE MARCH OF DEATH.

BY J. C. MILLER.

THE march of death is relentless, universal; none can escape his hand; no place is safe from his quiet footsteps behind. Death may overtake us at sea—the waters receiving the cold, still form, that left the shore full of life, and the hope of meeting friends across the ocean. The angry waves close over the still living forms that cry and pray as the wrecked vessel sinks down to destruction. He may visit our homes and take us along with him when we are surrounded by loving friends, while we are in youth's bright hour, or in the blessed peace of old age following a well spent life.

He may snatch away the infant, spared of all life's sorrow—innocent, pure and holy. He may meet his victim when abroad, lonely and desolate. The sad news is carried across the sea to mourning friends, who are made to feel that they too must meet this last enemy of man. Whatever of evil we may escape in life, whatever of good we may miss, one lot awaits all mankind that we cannot escape. We must all yield to the march of death. We cannot bar the way for the conquering warrior who steadily advances towards us, every day drawing us onward to the inevitable end. He may come quickly, snatching us from the cradle. He may come in hours of deepest joy—to the bridegroom at the altar, to the mother caressing her first-born, to the youth who has attained great renown. He may come in our deepest anguish—taking the widow from contemplating her husband's corpse; the child upon its dead father's bosom; the wretch who is confined to the darkest dungeon. He may claim the good man who is distributing merciful gifts; he may strike down the murderer beside his victim. No place will hide us when death seeks us.

Let us then so live that the grim monarch will be greeted as our best friend, that he will unbar for us the portals leading to a glorious immortality.

"Death is a path that must be trod,
If ever man would pass to God."

A young man distinguished for his mathematical attainments, was fond of challenging his fellow students to a trial of skill in solving difficult problems. One day a class-mate came in to his study, and laying a folded paper before him said: "There is a problem I wish you to help me solve," and immediately left the room. The paper was eagerly unfolded, and there instead of a question in mathematics, were traced the lines, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul; or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?"

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE, M. M. ESHELMAN, EDITORS.

Bro. S. H. Basson is duly authorized, by us as our traveling correspondent and agent for the Brethren at Work, and will receive subscriptions for the same at our regular rates. All business transacted by him for our office, will be the same as if done by ourselves.

THE BROTHERS AT WORK will be sent post-paid, to any address in the United States or Canada, for $1.00 per annum. Those sending ten names and $15.00, will receive an extra copy free of charge. For all over this number the agent will be allowed 10 cents for each additional name, which amount can be deducted from the money, before sending it to us. Money Orders, Drafts, and Registered Letters may be sent at our risk. They should be made payable to Moore & Eshelman.

MOORE & ESHELMAN, Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., MAY 2, 1876.

The remainder of the report of the discussion between Bro. Forney and Mr. Shuff reached the office too late for this issue. It will appear next week, and will be found quite interesting, especially the closing part.

The recent excavations in the ruins of Babylon demonstrate the greatness of Nebuchadnezzar's power, for not less than nine-tenths of all the brick, found among the ruins, are stamped with his name. Babylon was at one time the most splendid city on the earth.

It is said that the New England Methodist Conference, at Westfield, Mass., has voted not to admit ministers in the future who use tobacco. It is well for ministers to set a good example for the rising generation. This is doubtless the best way to abolish an unbecoming habit.

The season in this part of Illinois is about one month ahead of its usual time. Vegetation is growing very rapidly, fruit-trees out in bloom, thus giving the city a beautiful appearance. So far the prospects for abundant crops are good, though we still have some cool weather.

From J. W. STEIN.—Permit me to say through your columns in reply to a number of letters which I have not time to answer, that I have close engagements up to time of A. M.—Brethren will try to have their letters reach me at A. M., or early in May in care of J. R. Gish, Rome, Ill.

Through the kindness of the Central Book Concern, Oskaloosa, Iowa, we have received a copy of the Gospel Echoes, containing a choice collection of songs for Sunday Schools, etc., by R. G. Staples. We are not sufficiently versed in music, to pass judgment on the merits of the work. The appearance of the book is very attractive.

It would seem that we are to have another breeze from the Beecher and Tilton scandal. It is hoped that the good sense of publishers will get the carnality of the reading public have a little rest. A leading preacher of Detroit has also fallen from what little grace he ever had, by similar conduct. What is most needed among preachers just now, is a thorough sifting and may God hasten the day when it will be done.

The new Pope astonished a crowd of Roman beggars, too lazy even to tramp, by dispersing them in front of the Vatican with a message, that "it is God's will that man shall earn his bread by the sweat of his brow." If he would enforce that precept on the attention of the Catholic church in this country, it might materially relieve the people here of a great nuisance. It would seem that a majority of the tramps are Catholics.

In Lancaster Co., Pa., there are said to be about two thousand members, yet we have not over fifty papers going to that county, and the Primitive Christian says that it has but about two dozen. This is a small number of papers for that amount of members; we therefore suggest that parties living in that county, send for sample copies of our paper, and distribute them among the members there, and in that way we may succeed in working up a pretty large list in Lancaster Co.

Bro. Eshelman is at present on a trip East, and may likely remain a few weeks. He left here at noon the 22nd, intending to spend a day or more in Chicago. Our little folks will exercise patience till his return, as he generally takes charge of their letters and the Home Circle. It is likely that Bro. E. may have some good things to tell you on his return home. In his absence we will say to our little readers, do not be discouraged because your letters do not appear as soon as you think they ought, as we have quite a number of them on hand, and cannot find room for all yet.

"At Dallas, Texas, a large farm has been purchased by the city, and all tramps and vagrants are sent there to work." So says a Chicago paper. That is a right step in the right direction. The country is full of men who are doing an untold amount of mischief, and are of no benefit to either themselves or anybody else, but if put to work, may be reformed and become useful and enterprising. Men were made to work, and there is no use in any one being idle. There is plenty of work for all to do, though wages may be low, yet a little is far better than nothing. It is said that there is an organized body of these tramps and they have bound themselves together by oath, not to work.

ORIGINAL GROUND.

WE have been so busy this week that we could not find time to write our third article on "Original Ground," and must therefore ask our readers to wait on us a little while longer. We shall finish up the series just as soon as we can spare the time to prepare them for the press. With us the subject is one of importance, and needs to be well understood if unity and purity be retained in the church.

The Gospel is perfect and complete in all its parts, and fully adapted to our wants, but must be studied with care and wisdom. These times of deception and false teaching make the study of the Bible absolutely essential. If there was ever a time that Christians should be "as wise as serpents" it is now. The falling away from the faith once delivered unto the saints, with the general disposition upon the part of modern Christendom to pattern after the vain and corrupt things of the world, make it necessary that the distinctive features of our religious claims be clearly set, not only before the world, but before our people. Other denominations have been ruined by patterning after each other, instead of using the primitive churches as their only model, and unless we repent there may be danger of our candlestick being removed, and we cease to be the light of the world.

RAILROAD ARRANGEMENTS.

WE have arranged with the Western Union Railroad company to carry persons desiring to attend A. M., from Lanark, Shannon and Freeport to Warsaw, Indiana and return for $9.00. Warsaw is about twenty miles from North Manchester, the place near which the meeting is to be held. Persons can start at any time between the fifth and tenth of June and return by the twentieth. Those coming from Ogle and Lee counties, this State, and those from northern Iowa, will change cars at Freeport. Those from central Iowa and other parts of the West, who wish to avail themselves of this route, can reach Lanark by way of Rock Island, Ill., or Clinton, Iowa. Tickets will be for sale at the offices above named.

THE TRANSIT OF MERCURY.

A TRANSIT of Mercury will occur on the 6th of May, which is anticipated with much interest in the astronomical world. It will be visible all over the United States, and will occupy about seven hours and a half in its passage. Transits of Mercury are much more frequent than those of Venus, the average interval being less than ten years. Thus the coming transit will be followed by others in 1881 and 1891, while after the transit of Venus in 1882 none will occur until 2004.

Mercury is the name of a small planet about 37,000,000 miles from the sun, and 3,000 miles in diameter. It revolves about the sun once in every eighty-eight days, and so happens that it gets between the earth and sun quite frequently, thus causing a dark spot to slowly move across the disk of the sun. "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament showeth his handiwork."

Mercury is too small to be seen by the naked eye in its passage across the sun, but unscientific observers, who have access to good telescopes, will have no difficulty in detecting the presence of the slow moving black spot on the face of the great luminary, while they are willing to leave the delicate observations and calculations to practical eyes and mathematical brains.

REASON AND REVELATION.

BY R. Milligan. This is a work of 561 pages, printed in large and beautiful type, well bound in cloth. Following are some of the subjects handled in a masterly manner: "Divine Origin of the Bible;" "Unity and harmony;" "Simplicity and Incomprehensibility of the Bible;" "Unparalleled Theology of the Bible;" "Superior Morality of the Bible;" "Supernatural Character of Christ;" "Existence and Prevalence of Christianity;" "Fulfilled Prophecy;" "Harmony of the Bible and Science;" "The Canon of the Holy Scriptures;" "Integrity of the Holy Scriptures;" "Scope of Biblical Criticisms;" "Inspiration of the Holy Scriptures;" "Theories of Inspiration;" "Sacred Hermeneutics and Exegesis;" "Last and Highest Function of Reason;" "Faith and Infidelity;" "The Bible as a means of Education;" "Qualifications of the Bible Student;" "Polemistic Greek;" "Scripture Analysis." A careful perusal of this work cannot fail to give the reader valuable ideas on the Divine origin of the Bible, its inspiration and harmony. Price, $2.50.

GRAVES AND TRINE IMMERSION.

ON Baptist history, Ray was driven to the wall; and, at the end of the fourth day's discussion, declared that he would not give a feather for the evidence of such historians as Orchard, Judson and Robinson.

So reports one of the editors of the Dunkard paper, who attended the debate between Bro. Ray and Mr. Stein, who was, a few years ago, a Baptist minister of the Cold Water Association of Mississippi. We do not believe Bro. Ray ever disparaged those histories. If they are valueless, what is his own worth?

Bro. Stein showed that the commission taught trine immersion so plainly that it took five hundred years before a man could be found having audacity enough to claim that it taught single immersion, and that that man was a pope, belonging to the mother of harlots, too, at that; and then challenged Ray to produce one single person before five hundred years after Christ saying to the contrary. Ray would not touch this question.

If Mr. Stein, or any body else, will find a pope, i. e., bishop of all bishops, before the seventh century, we will give them the pen we write with, and publicly confess our ignorance of ecclesiastical history.

Dunkard Stein misstates the matter wholly. We can find a man in the first century who had the audacity to say that Christian baptism consisted of but one single immersion; and he knew whereof he affirmed. His name was Paul, who received his information directly from Jesus Christ, the author of the commission. He declared, in a letter to the church at Ephesus, that there was but "one immersion." True immersion destroys the symbolism of baptism. We only bury a dead body once; and therefore, as baptism is the likeness of death, we can dip but once.

REMARKS.

The above is clipped from The Baptist, the leading Baptist paper of the South. It is edited by J. R. Graves, the most prominent Baptist minister and writer in the United States. It needs a few comments.

Mr. Ray disparaged historians as badly as represented by the quotation taken from our paper. We, too, would like to know what his own history is worth? What is any Baptist history worth to the Baptist church? For every one of them, when endeavoring to establish Baptist succession, run the chain through churches that practiced trine immersion. Why do they not run the succession through churches that practiced backward single immersion? When they find a man who can do this then we will send him our pen.

Mr. Graves wants some one to find a "pope" before the seventh century. That is not the question. The question is, find a man before five hundred years after Christ, saying that the commission, in Matt. 28: 19, teaches single immersion. That is what we want Mr. Graves or some other man to do. We can find plenty before that time, who affirm that the commission teaches the trine immersion; this is an easy task, but to find one who says otherwise is where the trouble comes in. The first person who taught single immersion in connection with the three names of the Trinity, was Gregory the Great, sometimes called "Pope Gregory." He flourished at the close of the sixth, and beginning of the seventh centuries. If Mr. Graves can find a man before this saying that the commission teaches single immersion he will please name it.

But, he says Paul taught "that Christian baptism consisted of one single immersion." Will he please name the chapter and verse where Paul says that Christian baptism consisted of one single immersion? In Eph. 4: 5, Paul uses the Greek term en baptisma. Does the gentleman maintain that en baptisma means one single immersion? If he does, then we call for his proof. It is certainly evident that native Greeks ought to understand their own language best, and all of them who have written on the subject say that en baptisma refers to trine immersion. Will Graves name just one ancient Greek scholar who says that Paul's en baptisma refers to single immersion? Now for your history if you please.

But he violates the rules of logic, by assuming the very thing to be proven. He assumes that en baptisma (one baptism) means one single immersion. We have just as good a right, on the other hand, to assume that it refers to the three-fold immersion. But to the law and testimony we appeal. We want some proof from proper authority.

He further says, "Trine immersion destroys the symbolism of baptism." Does he mean that the symbol, and the thing symbolized must agree in number? Does he teach that the type and anti-type must agree in number? If he does, then he should be able to prove that it is a Bible rule for types and anti-types to agree in number, but if he cannot prove this, what authority has he for saying that "trine immersion destroys the symbolism of baptism?" It will not do for him to assume, or suppose that types and anti-types outside of baptism need not agree in number, but in baptism they should, for that would establish premises that could be strongly urged in defense of sprinkling and pouring. If Mr. Graves will now go to work, and prove that it is a Bible rule for the symbol, and the thing symbolized to agree in number, he will help his people to an argument that would be difficult to refute.

When it comes to Baptists writing against trine immersion they need to tread cautiously, for if they take the position that trine immersion is not Christian baptism the theory disproves their claims to church succession, as their books, already written, when tracing up the line of succession, invariably run the chain through churches that practiced the three-fold immersion. There is not a man on earth who can trace church succession through churches that practiced backward single immersion.

J. H. M.

A STRANGE CASE.

THERE was a young man at meeting that had talked for some time of coming to the church. I preached one of my old-fashioned sermons. After meeting I saw that he evidently wanted something, but he said nothing. I went home and he went with one of the brethren for dinner. So that night, quite awhile after dark, he and the brother and sister he stopped with, came to my house and he demanded baptism that night. I asked him if he would not as soon wait till morning. He said no, it must be done that night; said he, "I might not live till morning!" So we sent word around to the nearest neighbors and soon had quite a little meeting. I inquired into his faith; he seemed very strong. I laid all the duties before him as plain as I could, and he answered everything unhesitatingly; then we repaired to the water and I baptized him. The scene was a very solemn one, which could be seen by the light of the lanterns. He seemed all right till, perhaps, three weeks ago; he came to me and told me that he did not realize any benefit from his baptism, he had no more evidence of his sins being pardoned than he had before. I showed him many evidences, in the Gospel, if he did what he did do, in faith. He said he had no vivid manifestation in his feelings that his sins were pardoned, and that he must have; nothing else will satisfy him. He said he was converted once when a small boy, while in the field at work; said he had the evidence then in his feelings, but it did not last long, and he has tried for years since to get the same feeling and could not. He attended Methodist and United Brethren's meetings, had been at the mourner's bench a number of times, and had, I think, joined both these churches as a seeker, but has ever failed to get that feeling (he was raised a Methodist), and he thought if he would be baptized he would then instantly get that feeling he so much desired, and he said, "I did not get it, and now I know that baptism is not for the remission of sins, and I won't be owned as a member."

I reasoned with him, but could not effect anything. If you publish any part of this letter give us as plain an article on the subject as you can. * * *

REMARKS.

The trouble with the young man is a lack of faith in what the Gospel teaches. He is depending on his feelings for evidence of his pardon, and does not rely on the plain, simple Word. He was taught wrong in the first place, and still entertains those wrong impressions, and will not likely be much benefited until they are removed.

He has been taught that when his sins are pardoned the Holy Spirit will tell him so, that is, put that idea directly into his heart. He is not depending on what Christ and the apostles say about conversion, but is relying on what he supposes the Spirit will put in his heart. He is not the first one who has been in this trouble, though it, under different circumstances, assumes other forms, however, the theory is about the same, and to reach one will be to reach the other.

The whole thing is predicated upon what is known as the "abstract Holy Ghost doctrine," a doctrine extensively preached by the popular denominations of the day, and even by some that are not so popular. It supposes that the Holy Ghost works or acts upon the human heart independent of the Bible, and at times tells people things that are not recorded in the Bible. A better understanding of the work of the Holy Spirit will speedily remove all such erroneous ideas.

It should be remembered, that all you and I know about God and His revealed system of religion is what we have learned from the Bible. Whatever the office of the Spirit may be, it is evident that it never reveals to us anything about the Christian religion that is not in the Bible. Among those who believe in the abstract Holy Ghost doctrine, I have the first one to find who can name a single idea, not in the Book, revealed to him by the Holy Spirit. It is then upon the Word that we must depend for all our knowledge of conversion, and of the knowledge of the pardoning of our sins. It is by the Word that we know when our sins are pardoned, and to rely on feelings, moulded by erroneous doctrine is dangerous in the extreme.

Paul says, "Faith cometh by hearing," and "without faith it is impossible to please God." "He that believeth not shall be damned." But what must he believe? "Believe the Gospel"—believe in Jesus Christ with all that He said and did. The sinner is not required to believe that which is not in the Book. A belief in such things is not a condition of salvation. If he believes in Jesus Christ with all his heart, that is "Gospel faith." If he believes that the Holy Spirit will come to him direct, and tell him when his sins are pardoned then he believes something that is not in the Book, something not taught by inspired men, something that has a tendency to lead wrong instead of right. His faith on that subject is not Gospel, and therefore he, while in that condition, cannot get the Spirit to bear witness with his spirit that he is the child of God. The Holy Ghost will not bear witness with a spirit that is not according to the Gospel. The young man's spirit is not according to the Gospel, for he believes that the Holy Spirit will come into his heart direct and tell him so and so. This being anti-Gospel he cannot expect to have the Spirit bearing witness with his spirit. Before he can expect the Spirit to bear witness with his spirit that he is a child of God he must change his faith, and be fully in possession of a truly Gospel faith.

The New Testament was written by men who were inspired by the Holy Spirit, hence when we turn to it we get just what the Spirit has to say on the subject, and it is evident that the Spirit of God will not now contradict what it had to say years ago. We now turn to the Book. The young man wants the evidence by which he can know that he has passed from death unto life. Here it is: "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren" (1 John 3: 14). Then it follows that he who loves the brethren has passed from death unto life—has had his sins pardoned. But who are the brethren here spoken of? and how shall one know when he loves the brethren? All will agree that the brethren are the children of God. No one will call this in question. Concerning the second question the Lord has not left us in the dark, but gave us positive proof on the subject that we may know when we love the brethren. I know some want to trust to feelings, but in matters of this kind feelings are a very poor guide, especially so when we realize that they are creatures of faith and education, and are turned about by the faith at will.

Says John (1, 5: 2), "By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God, and keep his commandments." How do we know that we love the children of God? "When we love God"—is that all? No, "and keep his commandments." Then it turns on "loving God and keeping his commandments." Now for the conclusion of the argument: The man who loves the brethren knows that he is saved from sin. And he knows that he loves the brethren when he loves God and keeps His commandments. Then if he loves God and keeps His commandments the point with him is settled. "For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments" (1 John 5: 3).

What are the commandments of God to the unpardoned sinner? By turning to the second chapter of Acts we have three thousand unpardoned sinners inquiring what must we do? They were out of Christ, unpardoned, and wanted to be saved. Peter, by the authority of the Holy Spirit, said to them, "Repent and be baptized * * * for the remission of sins." This was the command of God. They believed it with all their hearts. Then they were baptized, and felt in their hearts that their sins were pardoned. Why did they feel that way? Because they believed what Peter said. Peter told them that they should repent and be baptized for the remission of sins; they believed him, hence had Gospel faith; then the Spirit bore witness with their spirits that they were the children of God, hence felt it in their hearts. God tells the sinner that "he that believeth not shall be damned," and to "repent and be baptized." The man who does this knows that his sins are pardoned, and why? because he believes it. And why does he believe it? because God says so.

If the young man has Gospel faith and does what God says, he knows that his sins are pardoned, because the Bible says so. It says in positive terms, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Any man who has Gospel faith and Gospel baptism, has his sins pardoned just as sure as there is a God in heaven. And that is not all, he knows it, and he cannot help but feel it, for having Gospel faith, which is authorized by the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of God will bear witness with his spirit to that effect. And when a man knows that he has passed from death unto life, he is bound to feel it; his faith in God's Word will make him feel it. If he has been baptized and does not feel that his sins are pardoned it is evident that he has not faith enough in what the Bible says about the duty of unpardoned sinners. What he wants is more faith. If he believed with all his heart that "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," and that he should "repent and be baptized for the remission of sins," and then does as it says, he knows that he is pardoned, and if he knows it he will feel it. If he does not feel it, it is evident he does not know it, and if he does not know it, it is for the want of unbounded confidence and faith in God's Word. May God help us all to have more true, genuine faith.

His saying that he was converted while a little boy out in the field, does not harmonize with the Bible order. Conversion consists in the change of at least three things: 1. The heart, 2. The actions, and 3. The relation. These cannot take place in a field where a man cannot fully obey all that God has enjoined upon him. What is the evidence of his conversion? Simply feelings. Aside from his feelings he has no evidence. He puts his trust in his feelings—in his heart, and Solomon says, "He that trusteth in his own heart is a fool" (Prov. 28: 26), for the heart is desperately wicked. Before a man is safe in trusting his heart, he must have something by which he can try his heart. Feelings being governed by faith it is needful that a man first examine himself to see whether he be in the faith.

To maintain that baptism is not for the remission of sins, just because one person did not have the right kind of feelings after his baptism, would but array fallible human feelings against the infallible Word of God. The Gospel on this subject is true, and every man who speaks differently is simply mistaken, it is not even possible for him to be right. Peter told the Pentecostians to "repent and be baptized * * * for the remission of sins." This we know is right.

A. U. M.

WHO SHOULD BE PLEASED?

ANYTHING relating to Gospel facts and commands must be observed to please God; for "our God is in the heavens; he hath done whatsoever he pleased" (Psalm 115: 3). When God is pleased, He fulfills His promises; and He is faithful to comply with all He has promised. This pleases us. "Christ pleased not Himself." Had He pleased Himself, the way to the tree of life would yet be closed; but denying Himself of comfort and pleasure, He came to save that which was lost. He knew that there would be pain and death in His pathway, but He hesitated not—pleased not Himself.

Now it often turns out that somebody wants to help some other body to come to the knowledge of the truth, and starts out, even without any concern who is to furnish the money for railroad fare, food and lodging, and soon finds men and women hungry and waiting to be fed. They fed them the bread and water of life, and the once lean multitude grow strong and healthy in grace and truth. True, such a minister might please himself by waiting for some one to show him an easy way, but he pleases not himself, but goes. Too many are listening to the "go" of the purse, and not enough to the "go" of the Lord. Just a little more faith, both on the part of the working minister and among those who ought to help bear the burdens might increase simplicity and Gospel order among us.

Again a minister comes along, ready and willing to labor for the turning of sinners to God. The congregation owns two or three meeting-houses. The minister can only remain one week. Now to please all the brethren and sisters, he must preach two or three sermons in each place, whether sinners are made saints or not. He must please the brethren, and that too when he knows that by staying at one place and concentrating his efforts he might induce many to turn to the Lord. Now the question is, Who should be pleased? the Lord or some brethren and sisters?

We should remember that self-denial is a part of the Christian creed, and that it is our duty to deny ourselves for the good of sinners. We should not please ourselves, but try to please the Lord, and certainly the turning of men and women to obey Him pleases Him. Do not expect yourselves to be simply gratified by hearing the words of comfort, but forget not that many are yet serving sin, and for them you should be concerned. Enoch, before his translation, had "this testimony, that he pleased God." Excellent testimony indeed! God help us to please Him in all things!

M. M. E.

RAILROAD ARRANGEMENTS.

THE Pittsburg, Cincinnati and St. Louis Railway company (Pan Handle Route) will sell to Brethren and their families desiring to attend the A. M. at North Manchester, Indiana, Round trip excursion tickets at low rates. Tickets will be sold at all points along the route, by presenting to the ticket agent, orders from the company which will be furnished all, by writing for them. Do not write us for orders, but send to W. T. O'Brien, Gen'l. Pass'r. Agent, Columbus, Ohio. The lines of this company extend from Pittsburg, Pa., Washington, Pa., and Wheeling, W. Va., connecting through to North Manchester, Indiana.

A SENSIBLE gentleman down in Texas wants to know "why it is such a wicked thing for people to amuse themselves with a bull-fight, or a bear-fight, or any other little thing like that, and quite a proper and Christian thing for two or three great nations to get by the cars, and kill a million men, and leave the widows and orphans desolate?" This will serve as a lesson for some modern preachers who justify Christians going to war and killing their fellow-men. If neighbor B. goes over and kills his neighbor on his own premises, he must be punished for it, yet one nation can march into the country of another, and kill a couple hundred thousand men, women and children and nothing serious thought of it. Take this as another lesson.

News from the East is little else save conjecture. One day peace seems to be the leading feature, the next all is war-like and gloomy. Germany seems to be acting as a kind of a moderator. England, in certain parts, is threatened with some trouble resulting from a strike among her cotton operatives. Thousands have quit work, and others will follow.

At the present time four-fifths of the inhabitants of the earth have the Bible in their own native tongue, so that they can read and obey the Word of the Lord.

THE WRITTEN DEBATE.

THE Baptist Battle Flag says: We did not understand the Dunkards as accepting our invitation. But now the editor says: Mr. Ray made a proposal for a written debate, and Bro. Stein took him up, and he must now either debate or back down from his own proposal! (Italics ours). But Mr. Moore finally says: "Bro. Stein is prepared to arrange the propositions with him!!" If Mr. Stein accepted our "proposal," then the propositions are already arranged. The same "church propositions as debated at Newtonia," were our propositions. Mr. Moore and Mr. Stein know this. Why then try to dodge out into an open field and quibble over forty abstract propositions? We are still of the opinion that the Dunkards will not again risk the discussion of those church propositions.

We made our offer to the Brethren at Work, because Mr. Stein neither edits nor controls any paper. Mr. J. H. Moore, the leading editor of the Dunkard organ, was present, assisting Mr. Stein; therefore, we made our invitation to the paper, in order to give the proper weight to the written discussion. We still press the invitation for the written discussion of our respective church propositions, as debated at Newtonia, upon the Brethren at Work. The editors may conduct the discussion themselves, or endorse Mr. Stein or any one else for the work. Will the editors of the Brethren at Work open their columns for the discussion of the church propositions as debated at Newtonia? If they refuse, they confess, by actions at least, that the Newtonia affair did not please them too well.

REMARKS.

The above from the Baptist Battle Flag fully explains Mr. Ray's feelings in regard to a written debate. We will endorse brother Stein as a man competent to defend our side of the question in a written discussion with Mr. Ray; hence that subject is settled. Brother Stein is the man that our people want to see handle the Baptist doctrine. It would be better and more satisfactory if each subject were discussed under a separate and distinct proposition, but as Mr. Ray does not feel disposed to debate any other propositions only those used at Newtonia, we accept them, in the order as follows:

- The Brethren (Touker) churches possess Bible characteristics entitling them to be regarded as churches of Jesus Christ.
- J. W. Stein affirms.
- D. B. Ray denies.
- The Baptist churches possess Bible characteristics entitling them to be regarded as churches of Jesus Christ.
- D. B. Ray affirms.
- J. W. Stein denies.

Each disputant will be expected to exchange an agreed to number of articles on each proposition, the articles to be of equal length, and to appear each week alternately in the BROTHERS AT WORK and Baptist Battle Flag, i. e., the entire discussion is to appear in both papers, Bro. Stein one week, and Mr. Ray the next till through with the first proposition, and then vice versa the next proposition.

We see nothing now in the way of a discussion. Other things pertaining to the number of articles &c., must be settled between the parties and publishers.

NOTICE.

THE two railroad companies here are making arrangements with other connecting lines running East, West, North and South, for excursion rates to Annual Meeting. In a very few days I will give notice of the entire arrangement. The Pittsburg, Columbus & St. Louis Railroad tickets are only good from the 10th to the 15th. That time is too short. Who will see to it?

A. LEEDY,
Cor. Sec.
North Manchester, Ind.

The Home Circle.

READ AND OBEY.

Husbands, love your wives. Wives, obey your husbands. Fathers, provoke not your children to wrath. Children, obey your parents in all things.

SUNDAY MORNING.

Fellowship.

PRAISE the Lord for fellowship—for real Christian fellowship! Before there can be any fellowship, there must be two or more who profess "like precious faith,"—who believe and practice alike.

Of the first disciples of Jesus, it is written: "They continued steadfastly in the apostle's doctrine and fellowship." O how happy they were in sweet fellowship! O blessed fellowship! It means love, peace, earnestness.

If we walk in the light, and the light be in us, we have fellowship with each other. Do not crawl in the light, but walk.—be a man of God. Thank God for such a privilege!

There could be no church, no one body, no unity in Christ without the doctrine of fellowship. To be together, to work the same way, to be alike in purpose, following the same rule, having one divine nature is holy, heavenly fellowship. Individual choice, self-will, pride and vanity must fall behind if we would reach true, practical fellowship.

You go forth into the busy world and meet your brother or sister in your travels. The moment you meet, you begin to rejoice, you have fellowship even in the midst of the busy, noisy world. How your heart is lifted up with joy. Perhaps you are in the public assembly having fellowship with your brethren and sisters. And then there is the love-feast; who does not enjoy the fellowship at the feast? Here are associations full of love and kindness,—real brotherly kindness. O blessed fellowship! We meet, sing, pray, are exhorted, hear the Word preached, and have fellowship. Take away these privileges and sweet fellowship loses much of its brightness to us.

SEEK JESUS EARLY.

HOPE you will continue to write about things in the Bible. We all should try to work for Jesus, and not depend on our ministers to take us to heaven. I rejoice that so many of you have started to serve the Lord. I am sorry I spent so much of my time in sin and folly. It is hard to overcome Satan when we are old. Then come to Jesus early. Trust in the Lord and do good: "So shall thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed" (Psalm 37: 3).

JANE RAYB.

Be strict in the performance of family devotion.

SCRIPTURAL ALPHABET.

A is for Adam the first of his race; In the garden of Eden God gave his place; He took from his body and made him a wife And breathed in their nostrils the breath of their life.

B is for Benjamin the father of his tribe, The brother of Joseph whom no man could bribe; He went with his brethren to Egypt's good land And returned to his father with bread in his hand.

C is for Caleb the faithful and true Who was firm in his faith when the valiant were few;

He followed God fully to the end of his days And gained the assurance that God loved his ways.

D is for David the poet and king; He taught the whole nation to pray and to sing; He led forth their armies, he conquered their foes, Then laid off his robes to rest and repose.

E is for Ezra that servant of God Who restored the old paths, where the fathers had trod;

Also for Esther who periled her life To rescue her kindred from bloodshed and strife.

F is for Felix who quailed before Paul As he felt that the wicked and drunken must fall, But Satan suggested that Paul must be mad, That one in his station no need to be sad.

G is for Gideon who led the small band Against the great host that invaded the land; He went forth to battle with pitcher and lamp And drove in confusion the foe from the camp.

H stands for Haman, that treacherous man Who conceived in his malice that satanic plan; He built a high gallows for the death of another, But on it was hung the son of his mother.

I is for Isaac the pure and the good, Who was laid by his father on the altar of blood; God rescued the lad and accepted the goal, So that no stain was left on the patriarch's coat.

J stands for Jesus the Savior of men, Who died on the cross to save us from sin; He now reigns in glory to hear our complaints, God over all and king over saints.

K is for Kish the father of Saul, Whose person and stature were noble and tall; God made him a king and gave him a crown, But he dishonored God, and his sin went down.

L stands for Luke, the companion of Paul, A doctor beloved, who administered to all; He gave us two books that will out-last the sun, Pertaining to mysteries before time begun.

M stands for Moses, a type of the Lord, He gave to the fathers the first written word, A God to the Hebrew, he delivered from death, He finished his mission and gave up his breath.

N was for Nathan who preached at the heart; His personal preaching made consciences smart; He rose above fear of the king on his throne, As above the small sparrow on the house-top alone.

O stands for Obed, the son of that Ruth, Who left her own kindred, from love of the truth, The father of Jesse, whose young strapping son Slew the great champion with a smooth pebble-stone.

P stands for Peter the apostle of truth, Who was called from his nets in the days of his youth; Though acting the coward in the judgment hall, He was after converted and restored from his fall.

Q is for Queen who came from the South, To hear words of wisdom from Solomon's mouth; She walked in his gardens and drank at his board And saw all the splendor that riches afford.

R stands for Rachel, Jacob's loved wife, Who gave him a son at the cost of her life; Also for Reuben the chief of a clan, A merciful brother but an imperfect man.

S is for Simeon who wanted to see The dawn of that Sun that makes the world free; He came from the Temple and gave the embrace, And with great satisfaction returned to his place.

T stands for Thomas who doubted the word Of those who had seen and conversed with the Lord; He must feel with his hands the wounds in His side, Before he could credit, believe and confide.

U is for Uzzah the God-fearing king, Of whom prophets did write and poets did sing; But in the last of his days he fell by his pride, Forsaken by his people and of God cast aside.

V is for Vahsi the young Persian queen Whose sense of dishonor was pungent and keen;

She was thrust from the palace and left in disgrace.

While the beautiful Esther was raised to her place.

W was invented since the prophets have died, It is now used for Water, Winter and wide; It is left to stand here for artists to paint, Too large for a king and too small for a saint.

X is too cross to fix on a name, Of one who is saintish, a king or a dame; It is left where it stands till names shall be changed, Or the structure of language shall be re-arranged.

Y fits the Yankee, a New England lord, A good saint at home, but a trimmer abroad; To every opening where the dollar is at stake, At home or abroad he is ever awake.

Z is for Zacheus who was anxious to see That wonderful man whose words made him free; He took a position above the dense throng, To see the great King as the crowd pressed along.

FROM D. D. CLARK.

Dear Brother:— I CONGRATULATE you on the successful management of the "Home Circle." You certainly have a host of workers. How nice, and how encouraging to the children, to have a column reserved for them. I like your plan—to have them write on Bible subjects. That is certainly a good plan, and will encourage them to read for themselves. I fear parents too often neglect their duty in failing to get the young to read in the good Book. Try and get them interested and they will read it with pleasure.

Another excellent plan to get the young to read the good Book is, tell them some Bible story, for instance, the story of Joseph. You can tell them in as simple words as you are able, then try and teach them good precepts. You will find it a subject from which you can gather many good and profitable lessons. When they get old enough to read and take care of a book, let them read the story themselves. They, no doubt, will ask you a great many questions which you should answer as best you can. Do not get in a hurry, but take time and explain, for it is a commendable sport and should be encouraged. By following this second plan, you first get them interested, then you will have no trouble to get them to read.

Then there is the Sabbath-school which, if properly conducted, will also encourage them to read, but this will not interfere with what I have written, and all the children do not have the privilege of attending Sabbath-schools.

I submit the above for the consideration of parents and guardians.

MUSIC BY STEAM.

Dear little Friends:— WOULD you like to read a little news from the far West? Of the wonders of California? I see by your kind, little letters that you can say something good about that One who is a friend to all, both old and young, and who loves little children—Jesus who is love; also anxious to hear what others can say in favor of His marvelous kindness, and to learn of the wonders which are contrived by man in different parts of the world.

As we have an amusing sight which passes up and down the great Sacramento river, and which draws the attention of all the little folks, and the big ones too, I will tell you what it is: A large steam-boat named "Whipple," which plays music by steam, and can be heard for miles. Whenever she passes, she calls out all the little children by the music, who clap their hands and shout for joy as long as they can see her; but she passes on with her songs, leaving the little ones behind, anxiously wishing she would stay longer. But at last all consent to let her go on for this time and wait till to-morrow to come back and give us another song; but she comes again to pass on as before. By this I am often reminded of the sweet dreams I used to have when I was a little girl, that I saw and heard companies of angels and virgins pass over on a cloud, singing sweet songs of praises to God, and as I ran to meet them, waving for them to stop and let me join in with them, they would pass on and leave me, beckoning me to wait till they came back, which made me feel sad.

Oh, dear little friends, I want to tell you, as I feel that I love you all and wish you all well, to keep close to Jesus, so when He comes to collect His jewels home that none will be left behind, but all can happily enter the good ship "Zion," and safely ride home to glory, where all can join in to sing the songs of redemption with Moses and the Lamb forever. There's a beautiful land far beyond the sky, And Jesus, my Savior is there; He has gone to prepare me a home on high,— Oh I long, oh I long to be there!

MARY A. RIGGLE.

Clarksburg, Cal.

CHILDREN AT WORK.

From G. W. Aschenbrenner:—We were to meeting last Sunday. Elder Peter Forney preached. His text was in Ephesians, second chapter. He read from the first to the ninth verse. I love to go to meeting, and to school too. One little brother has gone to Jesus. Dycart, Iowa.

From Willie L. Ekenberry:—I am trying to read my Bible through. I have read to the 13th chapter of Mark. I read one or two chapters every day. In the 27th chapter of Matthew I learned how our Lord was mocked and crucified. I also learned many more things about Jesus. I also read in the Old Testament, how God made the earth and all things, and then how soon the people forgot God and He had to punish them. Noah was a good man; we know he was good, because he did what God told him to do. Waterloo, Iowa.

From Myron Bent:—I read this paper with much pleasure. I must write some for the little folks too. The brethren do not come here to preach any more. My father, mother, sister and brother-in-law are members of the church. I love to read the Bible. I have one little sister at home with me. I want this letter to miss the waste basket. Sherwin, Ohio.

From A. J. Robinson:—Dear little boys:— You don't know how your kind favor made my heart throbb with thanks. The moment I read your letter of Jan. 31st I rejoiced. May our Father, who knows the secrets of all hearts, bless you in your deeds of charity (1 Cor. 13: 13). Ma and pa will give me some ground to raise some vegetables this Summer, so that I can sell enough to return your gift; then you can cheer the heart of some other boy or girl. In my next I will write on Rev. G: 17. Miss's Station, Tenn.

From Anna Lehman:—I have two little brothers and two sisters in heaven, and I want to be a good girl so that when I die I can go to them. I like to go to meeting and keep my seat in time of worship. I think it is bad for boys and girls to run out and in during meeting. And I think all little boys and girls ought to kneel at prayer. Coarsville, Iowa.

From Mary E. Kepler:—I do like to see the letters written by the little boys and girls. I have been sick, am better now. I want to be good; my parents are kind to me. I know some children who have no parents. I would be sorry if my parents should die; I want to obey them. Dear girls and boys, I love you; let us be kind and obedient to our dear parents, for we know that they will not always be with us. I am young, but I know that we must all die; my parents tell me that the old must die and the young can. I love Jesus, and my mother taught me to pray. New Hampton, Iowa.

From Samuel J. Moore:—I am a little boy thirteen years old. I have two sisters and a kind pa and ma. They belong to the church. I do not belong, but hope I may sometime. J. H. Ebersole, L. Dickey, C. and I. Graybill are our ministers. In answer to Leah H. Clower's question I would say, you will find it in the 17th chapter of Luke. Zacheus is the man's name, and the tree was a sycamore tree. I will now ask a question: What man, in the Bible, fell backward and broke his neck, and died, and how old was he, and how long was he judge?

From Barbara A. Frantz:—I read the "Home Circle" and like it very much. I like to read so many letters from the children. My pa, ma and two of my sisters belong to the church. Pa is a minister of the Gospel. Leah H. Clower asked who the man was that climbed the tree to see Jesus, and what kind of a tree it was? I would say, in reply, that it was Zacheus, and it was a sycamore tree. Deyraff, Ohio.

CORRESPONDENCE.

From Enoch Eby.

Dear Brethren:—

My wife and I just returned to this place, after being absent nearly two weeks on a tour through Perry Co., and Path Valley, Franklin Co., to my native home. From thence we went to Tuscarora Valley, in Huntingdon and Juniata counties. Had a very pleasant visit with many old associates, and also many dear brethren and sisters, who seemed to enjoy good health both physically and spiritually. Among them was our aged brother Peter Long, who, though in his 82nd year, traveled and preached more last Winter than in the prime of his life; even baptized three. Surely he has many reasons to praise the Lord, and with him we had several interesting and, to us, profitable seasons of worship. What added still more to our enjoyment, was the sympathetic feeling and liberality manifested towards the poor saints in Denmark. We hope our abundance will be a full supply for their wants. O, that many more hearts throughout the brotherhood might be touched in a similar manner.

IS IT COMING?

That is the query revolving in the minds of many of our dear brethren and sisters, and not inadequately asked in relation to Bro. Hansen's statement of his circumstances, which appeared in your paper, April 4th. Having a knowledge of his circumstances, we can say, for the satisfaction of any who may have any doubts, it is correct as far as he related it, but did not tell all, I presume, for modesty's sake. He told enough, however, to give us to understand the necessity of him having some aid.

OUR JOURNEY

properly, will be as follows: April 20th to Dry Valley congregation, Millin Co., Pa.; on the 24th to Spring Run; on the 26th to Aughwick, Huntingdon Co.; on the 30th to Huntingdon; May 1st to Altoona; the 3rd to Bear Creek, Montgomery Co., Ohio; the 6th to Covington, Miami Co., where we expect to meet Bro. Henry Smith and wife from Barry Co., Mich.; hence we will not go to Michigan, as previously reported. On the 8th we intend to leave Lima, and if we meet with conveyance at this point, will go to D. M. of Northern Indiana. On the 10th we intend leaving for Lena, Ill., so as to arrive there on the evening of the 11th.

And to many others, who wished us to stop with them, we would remark, that the above arrangement was matured before many of your letters reached us, hence cannot comply with your request, though it would be a great pleasure for us to do so; furthermore it would take us until harvest or even longer to respond to all.

THE IS MILLER-TOWN.

The night of the 16th inst., about midnight, fire was discovered in one of the stores, and in a few minutes the building with its contents was consumed; also a dwelling-house and post office building connected, was burnt, though most of the contents were saved. The supposition by many is, that these buildings were set on fire.

Millertown, Pa., April 18.

From Denmark.

Dear Brethren:—

I HAVE once more returned home from North Denmark; have had ten meetings with good interest and appointed many more for the coming month.

Several souls are coming much nearer in that neighborhood, and we hope will come out soon on the Lord's side. Around Hoping there are good prospects for an ingathering soon. Let us reach me from Bro. Christensen that some in his native place want to unite with the church. I await him here every day, as he is to be starting for Lamark, where he expects to arrive by the latter part of this month. Then I will find out about those mentioned, and it necessary, go there at once.

On my last trip I sold 500 peace envelopes and calls for them still continue. I also get interesting letters and inquiries about the peace cause and about the church. I have written two days right along to inform and explain and answer letters, and you know I write not so very slow when I get hold of a pen.

I know of about twelve persons whom I consider near the kingdom and earnestly counting the cost, and yet I have not counted all. I am glad it is so and rejoice, that many of the Brethren over there, are glad with us. So far everything is all right and good, but when we look at the signs of the times, they are darker than ever for poor laboring people. I tried to prevail on Bro. Christensen to stay and help work for the good cause, but he answered: "I cannot; I can get no work of any kind, and it is now over half a year, since I am out of work." May God help us all to work for good, and to the salvation of souls.

War between England and Russia appears to be near at hand, yea, and we believe it will come sure, and dreadful will be the consequences. We know not how long we will live in a land of peace; know but little how soon we will have to endure severe trials, yet the Lord will help. We dread not this; we are not fearing such things.

We shall, by the grace of God, not leave our station or put the light under a bushel so long as the church says, stay, and does her part, so that we can stay and help along the now well-begun work. I traveled yesterday twelve miles by rail and sixteen miles on foot, in a rough snow storm and deep snow. Had two small meetings with good interest; kept them for the benefit of the members living on places too far away to come to meeting often. They however are alive to the cause of the Master and happy in Him.

Our meetings in town will be continued this week, the interest is increasing and those meetings, how I love them, when after some few remarks, sinners will not only weep, but pray! Saints and sinners often mingle their tears and prayers, and I believe that at the same the High Priest intercedes for sinners at the great throne of grace.

Bro. Eschelman, do you remember that memorable meeting at Bro. D. Royer's house? If you do, you may have an idea how our town meetings are conducted. Do you have such meetings yet in Lamark? Are the young people cared for as they were then? Well, now, when I am getting so close, I see your wife, your dear, loving companion, a good wife for you she is; I see your child and you, working as ever, and yet I cannot embrace nor kiss you. I cannot hear you say, God bless you, nor speak to you about the crimson fountain of life, but yet, God be thanked, we can drink of it together, and at the same time.

It would do my heart good if I could see you a little while. I would appreciate it more than ever, but it cannot be. We thank God that you go ahead so well with your paper, we long for it all the time. No. 8 did not reach Bro. Nielsen and me.

Please remember then, Bro. Christensen and his wife will arrive at Lamark, the Lord willing, the last part of this month. Please help them to get a situation. I mean places to work, so that they can help themselves along. He is a young, well-meaning brother, and I hope you will have joy when he commences to tell you something about Denmark. May God bless you all evermore. Our united love to all.

Your Brother,
C. Hope.

From C. H. Balsbaugh.

Sister Eliza Brandt:—

GREETING in the Crucified. Your fragrant Christian message has come. Your defec- tive orthography is a thousand times compensated by the excellent sentiments and kindly tone that characterize your letter. Your devotion to Christ and His cause, your earnest desire for the extension of His Kingdom, and the increased sanctification of those who are to extend it, have taken hold of my inmost soul. The lethargy of at least one-half of the church in relation to the progress and triumph of the Cross, is absolutely soul-darrowing. No person has ever been slighted and smudged like Jesus. We have much to say of the ordinances of God, while we show but superficial appreciation of the God of the ordinances. "All souls are mine," saith the Lord. Practically many respond, the Cross and salvation are only for America, or this section or that.

What a Heaven-sent voice just now comes across the Atlantic from Denmark. How inspiring the multi-perced hands of Emmanuel reach out to us through the appeal of Bro. Hansen in No. 11, BROTHERS AT WORK. It is hard to believe that any reader of that heart-melting letter can love Jesus and not unclasp his purse and contribute his mite. Punched as I am I would feel like a murderer to close my heart against such a God-endorsed Macedonian cry. The very angels are pouring on the mystic ladder, awaiting our response to the warm, loving, fearful pleadings of the God-man. O, brethren and sisters, how can you act so coldly, selfishly and treacherously toward Him who vacated the Throne of Glory for you, yielded His Eternal Majesty in your nature, submitted to all the limitations of the finite, to all the in-digities and cruelties of misapprehension, misrepresentation and enmity, and sacrificed His life under an aggregation of unspeakable horrors to meet the necessities of your ruined, doomed, damned condition? Is it Christian to profess love to Jesus and turn the back to His claims? What right have you in the Christ of God that does not belong to the most idolatrous heathen and the most revolting barbarian on the face of the earth?

The life of Jesus is the very antithesis of selfishness. Where Jesus reigns, the heart expands over all latitudes and longitudes. The indwelling of the Holy Ghost widens and elevates and clarifies our affections so as to take in the whole horizon of Calvary. "The field is the world," So says Jesus. Will we fence in a patch for our cultivation, and consign the rest to the thorns and thistles and desolation of sin, and to the blasting and burning, wailing and woes of perdition?

Shall the devil be a freeholder and Christ a tenant? Jesus has bought every soul, and to the church He has committed the triumph of His blood. Who will say nay to Jesus? Hark all ye, who in very deed can say that the Son of God has delivered you from sin and hell, hark to the pleadings of your bleeding, dying, living, loving Redeemer. Weigh well your purposes and decisions against the claims of Jesus and the issues of Eternity.

From Arkansas.

Dear Brethren:—

WE are living, where the Gospel has never been preached in its purity and the following words have often come to my mind: "And he said: How can I, except some man should guide me?" (Acts 8: 31).

But while we have no preaching here, we are comforted by the weekly visits of your paper. We are much built up by the perusal of its columns, and that others might have the same benefit, we send it around among our neighbors. All seem to be much pleased with it, and right here come in the words of our text: "How can I, except some one should guide me?"

Not long since while conversing with our friends about the ordinances of God's people as we believe and practice them, a young lady said, that she would go twenty miles to hear the Brethren preach, but, alas! this can never be. A few days ago, her body was laid in the silent grave.

O, how sad we were made to feel that blooming youth is thus snatched away by the resist- less hand of death. Our prayer to God is, that some of our dear ministering brethren will come in and preach Jesus Christ and Him crucified. We think much good could be done; there is not one ministering brother in the State, as far as I can find out.

MARSHALL EUNIS,
Caucary, Clay Co., Arkansas.

Educational.

Dear Brethren:—

A meeting of the Trustees of Ashland College, on the twelfth inst., the follow- ing business was transacted:

The locating committee reported on the vari- ous lots offered, on which to erect the College buildings, and the Trustees, after considering different sites, concluded to accept a lot on Bank street, containing twenty-seven acres of land. The land is high, and gently sloping downward on all sides. From the grounds a beautiful and magnificent view presents itself of the town, railroad, and surrounding coun- try. On the grounds is a beautiful spring of clear water.

The lot is on the South side of the town, above and away from the obnoxious and un- sanitary influences of the town. The building committee was instructed to proceed at once to purchase the lot, and have the proper paper executed and proceed to erect the main part of the building.

The present plan of the edifice is, 112 feet front, and when finished, 106 feet deep; three stories high besides the basement. In the building will be a chapel in which the students are all requested to meet every morning for devo- tional exercises and preaching on the Sab- bath. Bro. S. Z. Shoup of Tennessee has been elected President of the institution. Bro. Shoup is an ordained Elder of the Brethren, of un- doubted character, a ripe scholar, and standing in the foremost ranks of the brotherhood.

Enough money has been subscribed to war- rant the commencement of the building. It is expected that the buildings will advance far enough this Summer, so as to commence the school next Fall. The citizens of Ashland all seem to be in good earnest to assist in the furtherance of the cause. As a sample of their metal I would say, that on the day of the meet- ing at noon, we reported to Mr. Stubbs, Editor of the Ashland Times, that we would accept a certain lot, provided the town would raise $800; as the price was more than we wished to pay. In about three hours he reported a sub- scription of $850, being $50 more than we ask- ed for. All this was done after the town had raised $10,700 for the school.

By Order of Trustees,

JACOB MISHLER.

Mogadore, Ohio, April 16, 1878.

From Bristol, Indiana.

Dear Brethren:—

OUR annual visit in the Elkhart congrega- tion came off last week, consequently yesterday we had a council meeting to report the visit. Everything seemed to be in harmony with the Word as it is in Christ, Jesus our Lord, and the members seemed to be in love and union. One member was excluded from the body, which made us feel sad, but it seem- ed he would rather serve mannaion than the liv- ing God. So the brethren thought, it was not good to serve two masters, and acted ac- cordingly.

The church seems to be alive to the Master's cause, and we have had about fifty accessions by baptism since last September. The members are also alive in the missionary cause in Den- mark, and showed the same by raising eighteen dollars to send to Bro. Hope for the Danish Mission. We have six speakers in our district of church, four elders, and two in the second degree. Elder Jacob Studelaker is eighty-five years old, elder Jacob Leer between seventy-five and eighty, Elder D. B. Stutsman seventy-sev- en, and elder A. Bigler is about sixty. So our ministerial force is not very strong after all, but much zeal is manifested for the Master's cause.

Yours in the bonds of love,
J. C. LEDMAN.

From the Missionary Field.

Dear Brethren:—

YOUR worthy paper makes its weekly visit to our home and with pleasure its con- tents are read. May God abundantly bless your labors and give you a glorious reward for them in the end.

As an item of church news I would say that Bro. Lemuel Hillery has just closed a series of meetings at this place, and six precious souls have come out on the Lord's side, making four- teen that have yielded to the commands of the blessed Savior, since Bro. Hillery came among us a few months ago.

I think that there are those among us who are counting the cost. And would our broth- er's health have permitted him, to stay with us longer, much good might have been done in building up the cause of Zion. May the Lord bless his labors here and elsewhere and restore him to health that he may visit us again. O may we feast on the crumbs, as they fall from the Master's table, and thus enable us to go on our way rejoicing in hopes of the glory of God. May the words spoken by our brother sink deeply into the hearts of those who sit beneath the sound of his voice. And may the good seed sown, spring up and bear fruit an hundred fold. May the Lord bless us all and guide us by the divine Spirit into all truth, while we live, and when true shall be with us, no more, save us all, without the loss of one, is the pray- er of your sister in Christ.

HARRIET BUCK.

Lena, Ill.

From the California Church.

Dear Brethren:—

KEEPING the Master's command, "Go, work in my vineyard," we went over to the San Joaquin and united there with Bro. George Walte, and J. P. Walte in holding a series of meetings. We found a hard road be- fore us, full of riddels, tree-thinkers and others who love darkness rather than light. But God is good; His Word is truth, and will shine brightly when all those who now talk and write against it, will be gone and forgotten. A woe is pronounced against such already in the word of God and unless they repent, it "will surely come; it will not tarry beyond the appointed time." He from Bozrah, traveling in the greatness of his strength, who is red in his ap- parel, will come in His holy providence and put in motion the wine press of His wrath. His glittering sword is bathed in heaven, he hath bent his bow and made it ready for the overthrow and destruction of all who abide not by the doctrine of Christ.

God blessed our work and gave us souls for our labor. Four were baptized in His own appointed way and about the same number will be, in the month of May.

Our church is in love and union, each one striving to enter in at the strait gate into the golden city of our Lord and King. Our hearts are with you in your noble work and with those across the ocean. God bless Bro. Hope and his co-laborers and his work, and God willing we will soon send our mite to help the Mission.

WALDEMAR MEYERS.

Brighton, Cal., April 17.

GLEANINGS.

From Cornell, Ill.—Our series of meetings in Cornell commenced March 20th, and ended April 12th, though there was an intermission of six days. Bro. T. D. Lyon and Bro. John Metzger were with us in the beginning. Bro. Metzger stayed only a few days on account of the ill health of his companion. On Saturday, March 23rd, brethren Mowry and Hollinger of Will Co., Ill., also came to our assistance; stayed one week. The result of the efforts, by the blessings of the Lord, were three conversions and one reclaimed. Since then, two more have been baptized and many more strong impressions made. Unto God be all the praise. D. HECKMAN.

From George Wurst.—Correct in paper No. 4, present volume, page 8, article above gleanings twelfth line from bottom, omit "volunteered to perform," and read "performed."

From D. D. Clark.—Your paper makes its weekly visits regularly and is a welcome guest. We would feel lost, if it would cease to visit us. It is very pleasant to get news from the whole brotherhood. O, how we rejoice to read of the success of the church.

On the 31st of March we were much pleased to have Bro. Daniel Hays call, and preach two very interesting discourses. We were much built up, even amidst our severe trials. Hope the good Master will abundantly bless Bro. Hays for his labor of love while with us.

Your "Plain Talk," is certainly very good. That is right, brethren. I like to see our editors unveil the mask and speak plainly. Now let there be a general recruiting all along the line. There is certainly much room for improvement. Some things are painful, yet, nevertheless true, yes, too true.

Grant, W. Va., April, 15.

From J. P. Mason.—The debate is still the topic of conversation in Newtonia, and is resulting favorably to the Brethren.

Newtonia, Mo.

From Poplar Ridge Church, O.—Bro. John Nicholson from Knox Co., O., came to us on the 19th of March. Had two meetings every day, mornings and evenings; continued until the 30th of March, and the result was, twenty received by baptism and a good many more good impressions made. God bless Bro. John, and here let me tell you, brethren and sisters, God bless you also, that you may never forget to contribute to the wants of those who need our help and support. JOHN HARRISH.

From Isaac Dell.—As an item of news from our parts, would say to those of our dear brethren and sisters, contemplating a home in the West at some future time, that at our last quarterly council a committee was chosen to select suitable grounds for a burying place and meeting-house. Also privilege granted to that part of our congregation, North-east of Bentrice, to make an effort to build a house of worship this Fall. Our prospects at present are good, both spiritually and temporally, thank the Lord; although since the planting of His vineyard at this place it has been found necessary to do considerable pruning, as we desire a healthy vineyard, bearing good fruit. Many of the vines planted here, have been imported and came to us more or less damaged, hence need pruning. Some are wild vines, or branches grafted in, and need dressing, nevertheless we all need the pruning knife at times. May the good Husband-man give wisdom and skill to know when and where to apply. BATRICE, Neb.

From W. B. Sell.—I presume that it is generally understood that the District Meeting is to be held with the brethren and sisters of the Long Branch congregation, Harrison Co. I do hope that we shall have a good representation, as it is desired, and the clerk gave notice to this effect. Let us have therefore a good and full representation. I have understood that of late some have taken exception to having it here, on the ground that it was too much one side. Now, brethren, it has been desired for several years to have the churches East of us represented in district council, and as yet we have not succeeded. But as I have corresponded with them, we have the promise of some of them to be represented at District Meeting, which is to be on the 17th and 18th of May. Now, brethren, we want you to come. True, we are poor and considerably scattered, yet we will do all we can to make you feel at home, and we do hope, by having the District Meeting here, it will be the means of doing much good, in advancing and enlarging the border of our Master's kingdom. We have also in contemplation a Love-feast and Communion after the District Meeting.

DIED.

Obituaries should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and separate from all other business.

BOSSERMAN.—In the upper Stillwater church, Miami Co., Ohio, February 19th, 1878, Bro. Solomon Bosserman, aged 80 years, 9 months and 17 days. E. HOOVER.

BOWMAN.—In Franklin Co., Va., sister Catherine Bowman, on April 8, 1878, aged 81 years, 6 months and 27 days. J. H. FLORA.

GOSHO.—In the Stony Creek church, Hamilton Co., Ind., April 2nd, sister Anna Gosho, daughter of friend Tobias and Kate Gosho, aged 19 years, 7 months and 25 days. S. SAUNDERS.

STUDEBAKER.—In the Yellow Creek church, Stephenson Co., Ill., April 6th, 1878, sister Jimima Studemaker, wife of Bro. Joseph Studemaker, aged 54 years and 12 days. M. H. FOWLER.

MILLER.—Near Crescent Hill, Bates Co., Mo., March 3rd, friend Joseph Miller, aged 26 years, 2 months and 43 days. J. FANSEN.

DULLINGER.—In Boylston Mills, Kosciusco Co., Ind., Feb. 28, Daniel Dullinger, aged 62 years, 3 months and 24 days. A. MOCK.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

NOTICES of Love-feasts, District Meetings, etc., should be brief, and written on paper separate from other business.

LOVE-FEASTS.

At Beaver Dam congregation, Kosciusco Co., Ind., June 6th, 1878.

Four miles South of Waterloo, Iowa, Wednesday, June 5th, 1878, at 10 A. M.

Union church, Marshall Co., Ind., June 4, 1878, commencing at 5 o'clock, P. M.

Four miles South of Lewistown, Winona Co., Minn., first Saturday and Sunday of June next.

Neshawny Co., Mo., four miles East of Graham, May 10.

Montgomery Co., Iowa, twelve miles North of Villson, May 18.

Panther Creek church, Dallas Co., Iowa, May 16th and 17th, commencing at 1 o'clock.

Clear River district, Merriam, Noble Co., Ind., June 18th.

Magnoketa church, one half mile East of Lost Nation, commencing May 25th at 1 o'clock.

Two miles North of Hudson, McLean Co., Ill., May 14th, at 10 o'clock A. M.

Stone church, Marshall Co., Iowa, June 15, at 10 o'clock, A. M.

Middle District, Miami Co., Ohio, May 15th, at 2 P. M.

Silver Creek congregation, Ogle Co., Ill., on Thursday and Friday, May 16th and 17th, commencing at 10 o'clock.

State Center church, Iowa, four miles and a half South-east of State Center, May 20th and 30th, commencing at 4 P. M.

Pleasant Valley, Elkhart Co., Ind., May 16th at 4 P. M.

Cherry Grove, Carroll Co., Ill., May 15th, commencing at 10 A. M.

Cedar Lake congregation, in North Indiana, two miles South-east of Cornuda, Dekalb Co., on Thursday, June 6th, 1878, at 2 o'clock.

Cerro Gordo church, Mason Co., Ill., June 5th, at 2 o'clock.

L. S. Creek church, near Millin, Juniata Co., Pa., May 12th and 13.

Smith Fork church, Clinton Co., Mo., June 8th, at 2 o'clock.

There will be a Love-feast held in the Eagle Creek church, Hancock Co., Ohio, on the 15th of June, 1878, beginning at 10 o'clock, A. M. By Order of the Church, S. T. BOSSERMAN.

Our Love-feast at Hickory Grove Ill., will be on the 23rd and 24th of May. GEO. D. ZOLLARS.

There will be a Communion meeting in the Monticello church, White Co., Ind., June eighth, commencing at 10 o'clock and last over Sunday. We want the brethren in the West to notice this, and come to us, as they can very handy go from here to place of A. M. on Monday following.

Monticello is the station to stop off, and conveyance will be there on Friday evening and Saturday morning. J. S. SNOWBERGER.

There will be a Love-feast at Tipton, Iowa, on Thursday and Friday, the 6th and 7th of June. B. F. MILLER.

Our Communion meeting in the Panther Creek church, Woodford Co., Ill., will be on Thursday, May 16th, 1878, commencing at one o'clock. J. B. TAUZER.

We, the brethren of Middle Fork, Clinton Co., Ind., have appointed a Communion meeting on the 8th of June, to commence at 2 o'clock, P. M. Brethren coming on the L. M. & B. R. R., will stop off at Mulberry, and those coming on the T. W. W. R. R. will stop off at Lafayette. All those desiring to stop with us, will be met at the above-named places on the day before, if notice be given to the undersigned, or J. W. Metzger, at Edna Mills, Clinton Co., Ind. In Behalf of the Church, I. BILLHIMER.

The Brethren of Naperville, Dupage Co., Ill., contemplate holding a Love-feast on the 11th and 12th of May, 1878, commencing at 2 o'clock, P. M. By Order, N. EARLY.

DISTRICT MEETINGS.

Northern District of Indiana in English Prairie church, May 9th.

Northern District of Illinois at Shannon, May 21, at 8 o'clock, A. M.

North-eastern district of Ohio, in Mahoning church, Mahoning Co., Ohio, May 29th, commencing at 9 o'clock, A. M.

The District meeting for the Middle District of Iowa, will meet Monday, May 27th, at the church one and a half mile East of Lost Nation.

Eastern District of Pennsylvania, in Indian Creek church, Montgomery Co., May 23rd.

Eastern District of West Virginia, April 19th and 20 in the Faircoat congregation.

Northern District of Kansas and Southern Nebraska, eight miles South-east of Beatrice, May 13th, at 8 A. M.

North-western Ohio at Sugar Ridge church, Hancock Co., Ohio, June 1st.

Notice to Brethren.

I have made arrangements on the Toledo, Wash & Western Railroad, for brethren going to the Annual Meeting, at one and one-fifth fare. Tickets will be placed at the following stations: Quincy, Springfield, Cerro Gordo, Danville, Lafayette, Delphi, Peru, Decatur, Toledo, Ft. Wayne, St. Louis, Taylorville, Warsaw, Burlington and Hannibal. J. BENCHLY.

BOOKS, PAMPHLETS, ETC..

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

Pengilly's Guide to Christian Baptism. — Price 50 cents.

Quinter and Snyder's Debate on Immersion. — Price, 75 cents.

Cruden's Concordance to the Bible. — Best edition, Imperial 8vo, cloth, $2.75; Library Sheep, $1.50.

History of Palestine, or The Holy Land. By M. Russell. LL. D., Engravings—18 mo., cloth, 75 cents.

Christian Baptism.—With its Antecedents and Consequences. By Alexander Campbell. Cloth, $1.25.

Passover and Lord's Supper.—By J. W. Beer. An able work of great merit, and should be in the hands of every person, who wishes to thoroughly understand this subject. Bound in good cloth. 256 pages. Price, 75 cents.

Duck's Theological Dictionary.—Containing definitions of all religious terms, a comprehensive view of every title in the system of divinity, account of all the principal denominations, and an accurate statement of the most remarkable transactions and events recorded in ecclesiastical history. 8vo., Sheep, $2.50.

A Sermon on Baptism.—Delivered by Bro. S. B. Bashor in the Elk Lake Congregation, Somerset county, Pa. A newly printed pamphlet of thirty-two pages. Price, 20 cents.

Ancient and Modern Egypt.—View of Ancient and Modern Egypt. By M. Russell, LL. D., Engravings. 18 mo., cloth, 75 cents.

Neale's Theological Works, or a Vindication of Primitive Christianity. By Elder Peter Neale. Bound in cloth. 472 pages. Price, $1.25.

Christianity Utterly Incompatible with War. Being one of Twenty Reasons, for a change in by church relations. By J. W. Stein. Price, 25 cents. 25 copies, $6.00.

Family Rules and Regulations. — By J. W. Stein. Beautifully printed in three colors on good card board. Intended for framing, and should be in every family. Price 20 cents.

Voice of the Seven Thunders; Or, Lectures on the Book of Revelations. By J. L. Martin. Among modern books this is really a gem. You can't help but understand it. $1.50.

True Immersion Traced to the Apostles.—Being a collection of historical quotations from modern and ancient authors, proving that a threefold immersion was the only method of baptizing ever practiced by the apostles and their immediate successors. By J. H. Moore. 64 pages. Price, 25 cents, five copies, $1.00, ten copies, $2.00.

The Pillar of Fire; or, Israel in Bondage.—Being an account of the Wonderful Scenes in the Life of the Son of Pharaoh's Daughter (Moses). Together with Picturesque Sketches of the Hebrews under their Task-masters. By Rev. J. H. Ingraham, LL. D., author of "Prince of the House of David." Large 12mo, Cloth, $2.00.

The Last Supper.—A beautiful, colored picture, showing Jesus and his disciples at the table, with the supper spread before them; He has just announced that one of them should betray him. Each of the twelve present is pointed out by name in the margin of the picture. Price, one copy, 15 cents; 2 copies, 25 cents; 10 copies $1.00.

The "One Faith," Vindicated.—By M. M. Eschelman. 40 pages, price, 15 cents; 8 copies, $1.00. Advocates and earnestly contends for the faith once delivered to the saints.

The Holy Land.—This is the name of a beautiful lithographic map, giving a complete Bird's Eye view of the Holy Land, and enables the observer, at a glance to behold all the cities, towns, rivers, brooks, lakes, valleys and mountains. In short, it is a perfect picture of the whole country from Dan to Beersheba. It is the most complete thing of the kind we ever saw. By a few hours' careful study, the different places mentioned in the Bible about Palestine, may be firmly fixed in the mind, making the reader as familiar with the location of these different places, as the country in which he lives; thus aiding him in understanding the Bible. Those who think there was not water enough in Palestine to immerse people should carefully study this map. It is printed in beautiful colors, suspended on rollers ready for hanging; is 23 by 35 inches in size, and will be sent by express for $1.50.

Eusebius' Ecclesiastical History.—This author lived in the fourth century, and had a thorough knowledge of the History of the church, and his writings are therefore of considerable value to the student of Ancient History. 8vo, cloth, 2.50.

Campbell and Owen Debate.—Containing an examination of the Social System, and all the systems of Skepticism, ancient and modern. Complete in one volume. This will always remain a leading work on the evidences of Christianity. $1.75.

Brethren's Envelopes.—Prepared especially for the use of our people. They contain, neatly printed on the back, a complete summary of our position as a religious body. Price 15 cts. per package—25 in a pack, age—60 cts. per hundred.

Brethren's Hymn Books.—1 copy Turkey Morocco, post-paid, $1.00; per dozen, post-paid, $11.00; per dozen by express, $10.00. 1 copy Arabic or Sheep, post-paid, 75 cents; per dozen, post-paid, $8.25; per dozen, by express, $7.25. When ordering hymn books sent by express, it is expected that the purchaser will pay the express charges at the office where the books are received.

Biblical Antiquities.—By Dr. John Nevin. We know no work, intended to enlighten the reader on Bible customs, etc., that we can recommend to all Bible readers more cheerfully than this volume. It should be in every library. 12mo, cloth, 1.50.

Union Bible Dictionary.—A Bible Dictionary giving an accurate account and description of every place, as well as a history of all persons and places mentioned in the Bible. It will be found particularly useful to all Bible students. 100 pages, with maps and numerous illustrations. Cloth, $1.50.

Historical Chart of Baptism.—This Chart exhibits the years of the birth and death of the Ancient Fathers who have written on the action in baptism—the length of their lives, who of them lived at the same period, and shows how easy it was for them to transmit to each succeeding generation, a correct understanding of the Apostolic method of baptizing. By J. H. Moore. Price, 25 cents.

The Origin of Single Immersion.—Showing that single immersion was invented by Eusebius and as a practice, cannot be traced beyond the middle of the fourth century. By Elder James Quinter. It is a tract of sixteen pages and the Brethren should take an active part in giving it an extensive circulation. Price, 2 copies, 10 cents; 6 copies, 25 cents; 30 copies $1.00.

Truth Triumphant. — In six numbers of four pages each. Baptism, Grace and Truth, Feet-washing, Brotherly Kindness, Non-resistance, Non-Essentialism Measured, and Found too Short. Price 1 cent each, or 50 cents per hundred.

The Throne of David.—from the consecration of the shepherds of Bethlehem to the rebellion of prince Absalom. By the Rev. J. H. Ingraham, LL. D., author of "The Prince of the House of David," and the "Pillar of Fire." With five splendid illustrations. Large 12 mo, cloth, $2.00.

Campbellism Weighed in the Balance, and Found Wanting.—A written sermon in reply to Elder C. Moore. By J. H. Moore. It is a well printed tract of sixteen pages. Should be circulated by the hundreds in almost every locality. Price, 2 copies, 10 cents; 6 copies, 25 cents; 25 copies $1.00; 100 copies, $3.50.

Sabbatism.—By M. M. Eschelman. 16 pages, price 10 cents. 15 copies $1.00. Treats the Sabbath question, briefly showing that the observance of the seventh-day Sabbath passed away with all other Jewish days, and that the "first day of the week" is the preferred day for Christians to assemble in worship.

Reason and Revelation.—By R. Milligan. This work should not only be read, but carefully studied by every minister in the brotherhood. $2.50.

Student's New Testament History.—With an Introduction, summarizing the history of the old and New Testament. Edited by Wm. Smith, LL. D. With maps and woodcuts. Large 12mo, cloth, $2.00.

Philosophy of the Plan of Salvation.—12mo. By J. B. Walker. This is a work of uncommon merit, clear, instructive, and should be in the hands of all Bible students. Cloth, $1.50.

Why I left the Baptist Church.—By J. W. Stein. A tract of 10 pages and intended for an extensive circulation among the Baptist people. Price, 2 copies, 10 cents; 6 copies 25 cents; 100 copies $3.00.

Send any of the above works sent post-paid on receipt of the annexed price. Address

MOORE & ESHELMAN, LANARE, Carroll Co., Ill.

W. U. R. R. Time Table.

Day passenger train going east leaves Lanark at 12:25 P. M., and arrives in Racine at 6:45 P. M.

Day passenger train going west leaves Lanark at 2:14 P. M., and arrives at Rock Island at 5:50 P. M.

Night passenger trains, going east and west, meet and leave Lanark at 2:18 A. M., arriving in Racine at 2:00 A. M., and at Rock Island at 6:00 A. M.

Freight and Accommodation Trains will run east at 12:10 A. M., 10:30 A. M., and west at 12:10 A. M., and 4:15 P. M.

Tickets are sold for above trains only. Passenger trains make close connection at Western Union Junction. G. A. SMITH, Agent.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK.

"Behold I Bring You Good Tidings of Great Joy, which Shall be unto All People." — LUKE 2: 10.

Vol. III.

Lanark, Ill., May 9, 1878.

No. 19.

The Brethren at Work.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY

—BY—

J. H. MOORE & M. M. ESHELMAN.

—:O:—

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTORS:

| | | |
|-----------------|-----------|-----------------|
| R. H. MILLER, | - - - - - | LADOGA, IND. |
| J. W. STEIN, | - - - - - | NEWTONIA, MO. |
| D. VANIMAN, | - - - - - | VIRIDEN, ILL. |
| D. B. MENTZER, | - - - - - | WAYNESBORO, PA. |
| MATTIE A. DEAR, | - - - - - | URBANA, ILL. |

SPRING.

BY GEORGE D. ZOLLENS.

FAREWELL to the bleak winds of Winter,
Rejoice for the Spring time is here,
When nature presents to our vision—
The loveliest scenes of the year.

Then the dormant receive animation,
And emerge from their caverns of gloom;
Then the Spring ever gladdens creation,
And the welkin is vocal with song.

The trees, too, arrayed in their grandeur,
The kingdom of nature adorn,
While the birds sit with joy in the branches,
And chant in the blush of the morn.

[Long for a home in that country,
Where the bleak Winter storms never blow,
But the bright vernal scenes are immortal,
And our rapture no respite shall know.

Here our joyful sensations are transient,
And the handsomest flowers must fade,
And the friends we so tenderly cherish,
All vanish in death's dismal shade.

But the Lord in that day shall restore them,
And bring them with joy from the grave,
And atar in the landscape of glory,
Their bright palms of victory shall wave.

EMMANUEL.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

To Brother Isaiah Harnce, of Brighton, Indiana.

"To be or not to be; this is the question."
So says the world's great dramatist.
This is no question at all. Moral being admits not of extinction. Suicide changes life's conditions, but changes not its character, nor destroys its essence. To be thus, or to be otherwise—this is the question on which hinges our eternal destiny. To be Emmanuel or Dab-lous—this is the supreme choice of the human will. "God with us" is the only condition of Eternal Life, but not of eternal being. "I am the LIFE." Emmanuel is not simply life, but specific life, being untainted by sin. In the communication of the Divine Nature, we are also honored with the Divine Name. CHRIST is the uniquel of God, and "we have an unction from the Holy One." "Thou shalt call His Name EMMANUEL, which is, God with us."
"God is in you of a truth." "Christ in you the hope of glory" (1 Cor. 14: 25, and Col. 1: 27).

All the Holy Ghost begotten are Emmamuels;
Incarnation, living Photographs of the Eternal
Wonderful—Father, Mother, Brother, Sister, Friend, all in One. The in-being of God, gives the character, the peace, and the glory of God (John 14: 20, 1 Pet. 1: 16, Philpp. 4: 7, 2 Cor.
3: 18, and 4: 6). "I will write upon him my new Name." If the life of God is in the soul, the name of God will be on the forehead—
EMMANUEL. "God with us" is the central fact of religion; not only God in Christ, but Christ in us. Christ came not without requisite credentials. We cannot be Christians without the evidences of Divine paternity. To say Lord, Lord, is not the criterion of sonship. The test for the Only begotten was, "not as I will, but as Thou wilt." The test of the younger brethren is, "thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven." "Holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners." This was the standard of Emmanuel the Great. "Every man that hath this hope in Him PURIFIETH HIMSELF, EVEN

AS HE IS PURE." This is the ideal and work and dignity of all in whose bosom beats the pulse of the Godman. "Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of Him who hath called you out of darkness INTO HIS MARVELOUS LIGHT" (1 Pet. 2: 9).

When Elijah restored to life the son of the widow of Zarephath, she said, "by this I know that thou art a man of God" (1 Kings 17: 24).
"By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, IF YE HAVE LOVE ONE TO ANOTHER."
"Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." "Love one another as I HAVE LOVED YOU." "By this
I know that thou art a MAN OF GOD; by this—EMMANUEL. "The love of God shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost," and "Holiness in the Lord" emblazoned on our nities—
"by this I know that thou art a MAN OF GOD."
"Without holiness it is IMPOSSIBLE TO SEE THE LORD." "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." "Rejoice let us love one another, for LOVE IS OF GOD." "God is love, and he that dwelleth in love DWELLETH IN GOD, and GOD IN HIM." Love and Holiness—this is Jehovah. This is "the Divine Nature" of which we are to be "partakers." "By this I know that thou art a MAN OF GOD"—Emmanuel, God with us. A pharos beaming on a surging, perilous ocean; a beacon on the dizzy edge of a soul-engulfing precipice; a city set upon a hill;
a sweet, fascinating picture of Jehovah-Jesus; a living, loving epitome of "the glory that exceedeth" and the "joy unspeakable," and the beauty ineffable;—such, in some measure, is the Christ-born man and woman.

"God manifest in the flesh"—Emmanuel—is the character and title of all the seed royal.
Our lineage is not in the line of the mighty princes of earth—these are insignificant—but we are sons of God, "heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ." Our call is not to mount earthly thrones, possess earthly dominions, and wield earthly sceptres. Perishable gewgaws are all these. "The high-calling of God"— this is our glory, our boast, our bliss unutterable.
"A crown of glory that fadeth not away," a throne built on the perfections of Deity, a palm-sceptre of eternal majesty, a garment woven out of the heart-strings of Jesus, and died in the seven colors of the rainbow round about the throne." A calling so high implies a corresponding character. None but Emmamuels can share the beatitudes of the All-body and All-beautiful. Where there is to be an eternal community of interests, there must be an eternal intrusting of natures. Herein lies our only true hope of Heaven. Salvation means not going where Jesus is, but being what He is.
All the elements of Heaven must be ours in this life.

"The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the highest shall overshadow thee; therefore"—EMMANUEL. This adumbrates and includes our individual regeneration. The Only-begotten and the many-begotten have one life. One overshadowing, fraternalizing Agent has made them brothers and fellow-heirs. The Cross of the One is the glory and salvation of the many. The footsteps of the First-born must be trodden by all the after-born. It must ever be Emmanuel. The nails that crashed through the quivering hands and feet of the Savior, must pierce the hands and feet of all the saints. None pass through the glory-flashing Doors of Pearl save those on whose bodies are found the marks of "the Lord Jesus." Selfpleasers and world-worshippers, money-hoarders, and Cross-despisers, can never set foot on the Golden Gabbatha. Only Emmamuels will be acknowledged as the seed of the "Everlasting Father." "God manifest in the flesh" is the mould for all whom God will own when He calls His family together to celebrate the Golding Wedding of the co-eternal, Divine-human Son. A mystery so fraught with sacrifice and suffering to the ever-existent Trinity demands a renovation and illustration of our nature in order to realize a genuine fellowship with incarnate Deity which few attain. Emmanuel is a mighty name, representing a stupendous fact. "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His." O if we could grasp the overpowering significance of these words, we would drop on our knees and wrestle against flesh and blood, against the principalities and powers of the infernal realm, and wrestle with the Jehovah-Angel at the "ford Jabbok," until the desert would become a Pennel. It is because we so inadequately apprehend John 3: 16, that we have so little experience of the flesh-macerating, sin-blasting, soul-liberating reality of Philpp.

2: 12.

No one can know that for which the letter stands save through the soul-and-spirit-rising energy of the Everliving Word. O how many are lettered and choked and self-murdered by the letter. How tenaciously they adhere to the forms of sacred realities, while they are "in the gall of bitterness, and the bond of iniquity."
Where is the Divinity of our generation? the royalty of our priesthood? the sacredness of our citizenship? the peculiarity of our high and holy relationship? Can we, in the lowest testimony of our conscience, and with the Divine approbation, present ourselves to a sin-smitten, hell-threatened world and say—Emmanuel?

THE INCARNATION.

BY JAMES WIRT.

DEFINITION: The act of clothing with flesh; the act of assuming flesh, or of taking a human body and the nature of man;
as, the incarnation of the Son of God.—Hebster. God was manifest in the flesh (1 Tim. 3:
16). Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh (1 Pet. 4: 1). And the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us, full of grace and truth (John 1: 14). These quotations have direct reference to the Incarnation of the Son of God. The inspired apostle states that they were permitted to behold His glory, the glory of the only begotten of the Father. When Christ says, that He and the Father are one, He is speaking of His divinity, but when He says, "my Father is greater than I," it is respecting His humanity, and cannot be applied to His divine nature.

The human and divine natures completely harmonize in the person and character of Christ, and it is the union of these two natures in which the incarnation consists. The union of these two natures is a great mystery, and will remain a mysterious union until the deep things of God are revealed. The object of this union, is plainly revealed in the New Testament Scriptures, which is the salvation of the world.

What great things the Lord has done for us,
and it is just and proper that we should write and speak of His mighty acts to our kindred of the human race—to stir up their pure minds by way of remembrance. The time is coming when we need not say to our neighbor, "know the Lord," for all shall know Him from the least to the greatest, as the knowledge of the Lord shall eventually cover the earth as the waters now cover the sea. This will be the state of things after the great arch enemy of souls is bound and Christ's personal reign on earth is introduced.

By the death and resurrection of Christ His humanity became immortality, and with this immortalized body He ascended to heaven, and is at present at the right hand of the throne of God, interceding for the saints who are yet upon the earth, burdened with their tabernacle of clay, and waiting for the redemption of the body. In the great plan of salvation, there have been means provided for our assimilation to the holy character of our divine Head, and the church collectively is the representative body of Christ on earth, and whatever mission or work is accomplished by the church will be realized in heaven, if the course taken is in accordance with the written Word. He has committed this power or authority, to properly exercise, until He comes again to take the reign of His government in His own person during those indefinite days, when peace and righteousness shall prevail, where sin and iniquity now abound.

Now as God has sent His Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, to open up a new and living way from earth to glory, should we not be earnestly engaged in working out our salvation, and taking Jesus as our pattern, who has said,
"I am the way the truth and the life," and by this means be in a state of readiness to be awakened or changed into the likeness of our Redeemer? The writings of holy men of old plainly intimated that the aspirations of the soul, will only be satisfied when we can see Jesus as He is and be like Him. To the believer in Christ, the future has bright prospects of heavenly blessedness and spiritual felicity. The teachings of the Bible require purity, chastity and virtue, as the ruling disposition of our character, and entire subjection of the carnal mind to the law of the spirit of life, to insure to us these happy ends. May we implicitly confide in our divine law-giver and be as plastic clay in the Potter's hand, ready at all times to be fashioned according to His own likeness, and whether living or dying we are the Lord's, and claim Him as our blessed Redeemer. He being formed within us, is the hope of glory.

DAY OF CRUCIFIXION.

AND while they abode still in Galilee, Jesus said unto them, the Son of man shall be betrayed into the hands of men, and they shall kill Him, and the third day He shall be raised again (Matt. 17: 22, 23). Here it is definitely stated that His resurrection is to be on the third day. Again, in John 24: 21, we read the following: "To-day is the third day since these things were done;" the "things" referred to are the trial, and the crucifixion of Christ. Early in the morning of this day, the women came to the sepulchre and found not the body of Jesus. In the first verse of the chapter, we are told this was on the first day, this was reckoned as one of the three days; the day before was the Sabbath, thus the first day and the Sabbath which corresponds to Saturday, makes two of the days which Christ was to remain in the grave. On the day which He was crucified, He died before the close of the day, thus this day making one of the three days, would bring the crucifixion on Friday. The objection often arises that if this be the case, He could not have remained three whole days in the grave. In no place in the Bible do we find it stated that He should remain three whole days in the grave,
only that He should be raised on the third day.
Had the crucifixion taken place on Thursday, and the resurrection on the first day, would He have risen on the fourth and not on the third day.—Bible Banner.

God's government is one of personal responsibility. No man can perform his neighbor's duty for him, and no man will be excused for neglecting his own duty because his neighbor has failed in his.

A worthy Quaker thus wrote: "I expect to pass through this world but once. If, therefore, there be any kindnesses I can show, or any good that I can do to any human being, let me do it now. Let me not defer or neglect it, for
I will not pass this way again."

THE ALTERED MOTTO.

Oh! the bitter shame and sorrow,
That a time could ever be,
When I let my Saviour's pity
Plead in vain—and proudly answered—
"All of self, and none of Thee."

Yet he found me—I beheld Him,
Bleeding on the accursed tree;
Heard Him pray: "Forgive them Father!"
And my wistful heart said faintly,
"Some of self, and some of Thee."

Day by day His tender mercy,
Healing, helping, full and free,
Sweet and strong, and oh! so patient!
Brought me lower, while I whispered:
"Less of self, and more of Thee."

Higher than the highest heavens,
Deeper than the deepest sea,
Lord! Thy love at last has conquered;
Grant me now my soul's desire;
"None of self, and all of Thee."

Selected by RUMA C. BOWMAN.

BE HONEST BE TRUE.

BY CHARLOTTE T. BOSTON.

HONESTY and truth are not only the most noble principles of morality, but without them a profession of religion is mockery. A life of deception is a life of wickedness. Let us be true to ourselves, true to our friends, true to brethren and sisters, true to Christ, and true at all times, and in all places.

The great work we have to do for God and our own salvation, can never be done unless our hearts are true and honest. We cannot have the blessed influence of the divine Spirit unless our hearts are purified from all deceitful lusts; we may deceive our fellow-men, but God sees in the remotest recesses of our hearts and can discern every thought. God's Spirit moves upon the mind and thought together, the rational thought and right feeling; the sound mind and pure heart come from the same source. All must be honest and true to do the work of righteousness required at our hands. The greater part of the religion of the present day has become so much a matter of taste that we very much fear the truth, as it is in Christ Jesus is lost sight of; the preaching and praying must be so polished, the language so elegant, the singing so stylish. Such fine gems of thought are expected by the audience, that the main object of the Gospel of Christ is entirely overlooked, and souls in search of truth, hungering and thirsting after righteousness, are not filled, and wonder if they are to find Jesus in all this pomp and display.

The humble Nazarene is not to be found among people who come to meeting to applaud anything that is beautiful, and to be pleased with nothing that is not done up in good taste. We learn His people and followers have always been an humble, true-hearted class of beings, entirely separate from the world and its follies. Go to our large cities, view the number of houses dedicated to the worship of the Creator of heaven and earth; walk around on Sabbath morning and see the vast numbers wending their way to different places of worship. How many of this number are going with true, honest hearts? How many are going to worship God in spirit and in truth? We cannot tell the number but God knows their hearts, and will reward them according to their works. We have been created and given life for a purpose. Was it to spend a life of hypocrisy and deceit. Verily no, God is true, and He loves the truthful and honest. False words, false heads and false hearts are an abomination in His sight, while the truthful, honest and upright are His delight. His Word is truth, and it is only the true that can understand it, and if we search in it for truth we certainly will find it, and if our motives be honest and pure, we can stand firm in conscious security before all mankind.

The man who stands firm in the defence of truth has many conflicts, yet he feels nothing is more worthy of his greatest abilities and he has a sweet consciousness that the great Founder of truth is ever ready to brace him up and give strength to his weakness, and in every act and thought the divine truth is portrayed. New desires are given him, the mind will flash into a new world of thought. Pride and arrogance will quail beneath mighty words of truth; all is weak and worthless that has not truth for its anchor.

Those that are true followers of the blessed Redeemer are endowed with the spirit of truth, and when we see professed Christians diverting from the path of rectitude, having very little respect for truth, whose honesty we cannot help questioning; we can but say, by their fruits shall ye know them, and out of a true, honest heart, true and honest actions will proceed. The spirit of truth does not guide into false actions, but it guides into all truth. Our Saviour says, I am the true Vine. The branch must necessarily be true and faithful or it cannot abide in the Vine or bring forth fruit, but will be cast forth as a worthless branch.

It is greatly to be deplored that in this enlightened day as the present time is generally called, that there are fewer true, honest, noble men than there have been for ages past. Converse with old men, how they were raised, how earnest their parents were to instill right and true principles in their minds while young; now that thing in a great measure is overlooked, and children are allowed to do anything that will make them popular in the world. The world and church have joined hands too much, and are so near together in the manner of education that the difference can scarcely be perceived. We believe education to be very essential, but not exactly as the world has it. We believe we should instill into the minds of the young true, honest principles, and that which will establish genuine moral worth, and by this means prepare a soil for the seed of eternal truth—a soil that will not be barren or unfruitful; for an education that fills the heart and head with vanity and pride, is worse than useless.

God has endowed us with improvable faculties, and it is our duty to strengthen them that we may be better able to wield the sword of the spirit and more capable of bearing of Christ; for if we are not able to properly understand His Word, it would be much more difficult for us to get into the strait and narrow way of truth. God grant that we may all be able to walk in wisdom's ways and be guided by the Spirit of truth.

I like an open honest heart,
Where frankness loves to dwell,
Which has no place for base deceit
Nor hollow words can tell.

COME TO JESUS.

BY J. W. SOUTHWOOD.

I WISH to call your attention to a few thoughts that have often been brought forcibly to my mind while thinking of persons at the so-called mourner's bench. While they are kneeling and seeking Jesus as they call it, the minister is saying, come Lord; come near; come and fill his heart with Thy Holy Spirit; come down just now &c.

Now let me ask, is this the way to come to Jesus? Is this coming to Jesus according to the Gospel? Is this, humbling one's self under the mighty hand of God? Is this coming to Jesus according to His plan, or is it trying to have Jesus come to men according to their plans. They often sing:

Come to the Savior, make no delay.

Here in His Word He's shown as the way.

Why not search His Word and find out the way; that is find out Christ's way? Why not find out how Paul came to Jesus? Did he get down at the mourner's bench? No. When he fell to the ground the Lord did not tell him to lay there and mourn, but sent him to Damascus; when Ananias came to him he did not say, pray on brother, but he said, "Why tarriest thou? Arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins" (Acts 22: 16). How did the Samaritans come to Jesus? Did they get down to the mourner's bench? No. Philip preached till they and many others believed, then they were baptized (Acts 8: 12, 13).

Look also at Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, and see how he and many of the Christians came to Jesus. Did Paul tell them to come to the mourner's bench and get religion? No, he preached till they believed, then they were baptized (Acts 18: 8). Did Philip get down to the mourner's bench with the Eunuch and try to comfort him by saying, pray on a little longer? No, but he got down into the water with him, and baptized him (Acts 8: 37, 38). Why not listen to, and heed what Peter said on the day of Pentecost when the inquirers asked what they should do? Does he tell the Lord to come to them and fill their hearts with His Spirit? No. But he tells them to come to Jesus by repenting and being baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins; then said he, "ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost," and thus three thousand souls came to Jesus in one day (Acts 2: 37, 38-41).

Is this not the way to come to Jesus? Is it not the way that all must concede to be infallibly safe? Is it not the only way in which we have any promise of being saved? For he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not (of course will not be baptized, and hence) shall be damned (Mark 16: 16). It is not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven (Matt. 7: 21). Now we see that only those who do the will of the Father have any promise; and as the Father has revealed His will to us through His Son, why not accept it, and arise and be baptized, and come to Jesus as Christ and the apostles command, and receive the promise and not try to climb up some other way.

Brethren, let us ever take Gospel plan for all we do, endeavoring to persuade others to come to Jesus according to the Gospel and be saved.

Linnæus, Ind.

WHAT IS DEATH?

BY JOHN FORNEY.

IT is a great evil in the world, because it is the effect of sin, and sin was introduced by Satan; and hence separated man from God, by the death of sin, and caused nakedness and fear, and a final separation from the garden of Eden and the tree of life. Death is an evil, because it separates husband and wife without their wish or consent. No matter how much they love each other, or how much they need each other to help raise the little family of children. Death comes, and the father or mother must go and leave the children in the care of the other, no difference how unwilling the other of the family is, to see father or mother fall into the cold embrace of that monster death. So it takes the children from the parents without their wish or consent; the minister from the church without the counsel or consent of the church. And oh! what sorrow, what mourning, and shedding of tears death causes daily in the world, in the church and in the family. Death is an evil because it not only was brought about by sin and Satan, but must also be cast into the lake of fire, which is the second death, wherein the devil is to be cast. So we see that both death and the devil are a great evil in the world and must dwell together in the hereafter (Rev. 20: 10-14).

We know that sin and Satan have caused all this great evil in the world, and it will not stop when this world will end; if the sinner is not freed from sin in this life, the poet says sin kills beyond the tomb (John 8: 24). Jesus says, "ye shall die in your sins, wither I go ye cannot come." Then I will say to you sinner, why will you go one step further in sin? Do you not know that you are bearing fruit unto death? for the wages of sin is death, Paul tells us in Rom. 6: 23. "But the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Then it is only through Christ Jesus that you and I can be made free from sin, and to make our escape from the second death, and to lay hold on eternal life.

Brethren and sisters and all who profess to know God (2 John 8: 9), let us look well to ourselves, that we lose not those things which we have wrought, but that we receive a full reward. Whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, has not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he has both the Father and the Son (1 John 3: 4). Whosoever committeth sin transgresseth also the Law, for sin is the transgression of the Law (8th verse). He that committeth sin is of the devil. Then let no one violate any commandment of God; for all who will, do love death rather than life, and do forfeit their right to the tree of life, and must take their part outside of the city of God, where there is weeping and gnashing of teeth. Come sinner, consider well what you are doing, and whom you serve; for God surely will not be mocked by you, whatsoever you sow, that you must also reap, then sow to the spirit; and from the spirit reap life everlasting, is my prayer.

A LITTLE CHARITY.

BY R. A. BOWEN.

I HAVE been reading your paper for some time; I like it very much. As there are still calls for help, I wish to throw in a small mite for the poor fund. Charity covers a multitude of sins. Though you have angel's tongues and have not charity it will profit you nothing. I wish we were all engaged in the work. Oh what a happy time if we could all work together for Jesus. All things work together for good to them that love the Lord. But there are divisions which ought not to be. Would to God we could all stand firm and work together in one band. The enemy is going about seeking whom he may devour; there are many temptations and trials in this life. The way is narrow, a little step to the right or left, and we are straying away from Jesus.

Oh could we ever be near to Jesus—influenced by His Holy Spirit, so we may be able to withstand the wiles of the enemy. Abstain from every appearance of evil, and use the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God. Oh remember Jesus when He was about to be crucified; His enemies were nailing Him to the cross. He says, "Father forgive them for they know not what they do." Could we have a praying heart like Jesus, that we could love our enemies and pray for those that despitefully use us; for God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ who died for us, that whether we wake or sleep, we may live together with Him. Then let us press onward toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

Often when I retire at night do I meditate and think, if Jesus would come to-night, would I be ready; for the day of the Lord cometh as a thief in the night. Let us ever stand firm, putting on the breastplate of faith, and have for a helmet the hope of salvation. We have the promise if we ask in prayer, believing we shall receive. Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. The evidences of faith are love to Christ, confidence, prayer, attention to His ordinance, zeal in promoting His glory, and holiness of heart. Oh could we all be more engaged in the great work, more zealous in the cause of our Master. There are many precious souls that we would rejoice to see come into the fold; some are almost persuaded to become Christians. Oh that I knew nothing but Christ and Him crucified, and could we be prepared ready for death at any moment. Our friends are passing away one by one, and we too must die.

PICTURES.

BY S. M. MINNICH.

WHAT is a picture gallery. You enter and you will see perhaps many pictures on the walls that are familiar to you. That lady before the glass is preparing to sit for a picture. Seating herself before the Camera, hands, head, mouth and eyes must all be in perfect position. She knows that the picture will be an exact likeness of her person, hence her great effort is to look graceful.

How wonderful is man that he can make an instrument that does so perfectly delineate every feature. But in God's Book of remembrance, not only the features will be delineated, but the life, the thought and intent of the heart, will be seen and known.

Some years ago I saw an account of a girl who was laying in a trance for some days. When she awoke to consciousness, she said, she had been to the place of "many mansions," that an angel had been her guide. The angel took her into a beautiful mansion and said to her, "I will leave you here a while, you can interest yourself examining the paintings that are hanging on the walls." She said the pictures looked familiar. Continuing to examine them, she saw with amazement, and read with astonishment her life; her good and evil deeds were spread before her.

Persons who have been rescued from the water in an unconscious state, when brought to consciousness, have said that a panoramic view of their life had vividly passed before them. It is the opinion of some that whatever is impressed on the mind can never be erased. Forgotten, but not blotted out; covered up with new thoughts and ideas, but not lost.

As a witness in a judicial court stands waiting to be called, so our life is written and mapped ready to witness for or against us. When the books are opened, and every man is judged according to his work, the inside will be seen as clearly as the outside. We may look at the whitened sepulchres that appear beautiful now, then we shall see the dead bones and uncleanness that these sepulchres covered up. In that day when every man's work shall be made manifest, no broad fringes or phylacteries will conceal the evil thoughts of the heart, nor of the flesh.

The wicked shall see and know their evil deeds so plainly that they pass judgment upon themselves—crying out for the rocks and mountains to fall upon them and hide their shame. Reader, you and I are in a great picture gallery. Every day a picture of our lives is mapped, to be revealed in the last day.

"How careful then ought I to live,
With what religious fear;
Who such a strict account must give,
For my behavior here."

THE CHURCH.

BY S. S. BEAVER.

"WHEN shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins" (Matt. 25: 1). While perusing your valuable paper, we see how many vineyards of the Lord are planted over this goodly land and in Europe; and the cause of God and His dear Son being propagated from the rising of the sun to the going down thereof. Sons and daughters are being begotten of God, and laborers brought into the vineyard of the Lord through the instrumentality of the Word and power of God, by the preaching of His Word through men of God. Embassadors in Christ's stead, who being mindful of, and obedient to the sacred injunction, "Go stand in the temple and speak to the people all the words of this life," and through the foolishness of preaching, it has pleased God to save men.

As water falling day by day wears the hardest rock away, even so the preached Word from the sacred desk and the religious literature. Speaking the same thing are an ebbing and a flowing tide upon the ocean of God's workings with the hearts and conscience of the children of men. "Paul may plant and Apolos water, but the increase must come from God." "No man cometh unto me except the Father which has sent me draw him." It is here that the prophecy of Ezekiel finds a connecting link of fulfillment when he speaks of the "dry bones." "And he said unto me, Son of man, can these bones live, and I answered O Lord God thou knowest. Again he said unto me, prophesy upon these bones, and say unto them, O ye dry bones hear the word of the Lord, thus saith the Lord God unto these bones. Behold I will cause breath to enter into you, and ye shall live." (Ezekiel 37: 3, 4, 5). The dry bones may well be regarded as a figure emblematical of the sinner, the unconverted, and the valley the prophet speaks of,—the entire world. These dry bones had been very dry, and they also were many. The scorching rays of the sun dried them; the winds that blew over them grieved them to wither, and the valley was full of them.

While the prophet was prophesying (preaching) there were "a shaking, and the bones came together bone to his bone, and the sinew and the flesh came upon them, and the skin covered them above, but there was no breath in them. Then said he unto me, prophesy unto the winds, prophesy Son of man, and say unto the wind, thus saith the Lord God come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain that they may live, and the breath came into them and they lived and stood upon their feet an exceeding great army."

Now my brethren, an exceeding great army brought forth by the Word of God and the preaching of the same unto you, brought from the dry bones of sin and iniquity into the glorious liberty of the children of God. Consider a parable. "Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins." This parable given by Christ Himself, is the most striking and deepest driven of all the many parables He has used; in the volume of the Book. Most of the parables He used in the present tense, but the one under consideration, He used in a future tense. "Then shall the kingdom of heaven (the church) be likened unto ten virgins. He did not here say, by whom it shall be likened—who shall use the legislative or administrative power? But suffice it to have us understand that it shall be likened. This being a settled point, it next follows to consider the subject, who shall be likened? Not the dry bones shall be likened, but those into whom God has breathed His Spirit of adoption and made them to stand upon their feet; those whom He has "brought out of the horrid pit and the miry clay, and set their feet upon a rock and established their goings." These virgins who have set out to meet the Bridegroom, members of His mystical body on earth, the church. These virgins who are traveling with glowing hearts in the prospect before them, and anticipating in their minds to realize a vision and full enjoyment of what Paul said he heard in the spirit, as he was caught up into the third heaven, which was not lawful for him to utter, and though he had heard this above fourteen years ago. Even now, he only reveals this much unto the Corinthian church. The church members (virgins), who gave him so much trouble in that they were so much inclined to get out of order, and to whom Paul has occasion to say, "Truly the signs of an apostle were wrought among you, in all patience, in signs and wonders and mighty deeds" (Cor. 12: 12).

And furthermore he also said, "For I fear lest when I come I shall find you such as I would, and I shall be found unto you such as I would not;" and though they were claiming to be virgins, yet they needed many reproofs. Their garments of an undefiled religion, were so easily soiled, they oft forgot that they were purged from their former sins.

"Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins." This exceeding great army who started out to meet the Bridegroom, whose aims and purposes are fixed on the one and same object; all start with the same mind; all will come to the end of the journey of life, and here be fully desirous of meeting the bridegroom. But alas, unfortunately five were wise and five were foolish, and while the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept; and at midnight there was a cry, behold the bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him, and they that were ready (wise) went in with him to the marriage, and the door was shut." Sad, irrevocable truth, one half of the number saying, "Lord Lord open unto us." Who shall be able for these things? The Son of God has spoken it, "and my words shall not pass away." "If I have told you earthly things and ye believe not, how shall ye believe if I tell you of heavenly things." Then it is plainly evident that there are drones, foolish virgins in the church to be revealed in the last day. When we use the term, the church, we do not propose to allow every wind of doctrine to be the church, but they that have "obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine delivered to the saints;" "for if ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."

We find upon record a time when among twelve inspired apostles, one was a Judas. Marvel not, "the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine." "Finally brethren whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, and if there be any praise think on these things." David says, "while I was musing the fire burned." "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness" (Tim. 3: 16).

READ THE BIBLE.

UNDOUBTEDLY the Bible, as such, is but little used in some Sunday-schools. Lesson-leaves and kindred helps supersede the one book. Good helps have this mission. They are a means of opening up and enforcing the Scriptures. But they should never supplant the Bible in the classes. President Chadbourne, of Williams College, recently enunciated this sound doctrine upon the point.

"There is danger, in the multitude of books and studies, that the Bible will be neglected. It is neglected sadly even in Christian families. When the Bible was the one Book of the family, many learned its truths as they are not now learned by the young. There is a demand that the Bible be banished from our public schools. All these efforts and this talk, which will poison the minds of our children, make it more important that the Bible be exalted in every Christian school and college. And especially is it necessary that the Sabbath-schools should do their work in the most efficient manner. They should teach the Bible, and not merely something about the Bible. The Bible will remain when the earth and the heavens pass away; and when the great white throne is set, it is one of the Books that will be opened. Can such a Book be ignored in any system of education—a Book that fits men for all in this life—for citizenship, for social life, for old age, for sickness, and for death, and for that other life for which this whole life is simply an education? Let us come to simple Bible truth."—School.

Good humor is always relished. But when either wit or humor is employed to undermine respect for the truth, or to ridicule, or to make sport of what all should prize as most valuable to the individual and to society, then it becomes the thoughtful to utter their protest. "Great laughter," the reporters tell us, followed on certain occasions, when recently the Bible was reviled, and its most vital doctrines ridiculed. An audience that can be amused with witty blasphemy is nearly ready to tolerate any crime.—Christian Intelligencer.

The Brethren at Work. PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE, M. M. ESHELMAN, EDITORS.

BRO. S. H. BAXTER is duly authorized, by us as our traveling correspondent and agent for the Brethren at Work and will receive subscriptions for the same at our regular rates.

THE BRETHERN AT WORK will be sent post-paid, to any address in the United States or Canada, for $1.50 per annum. Those sending ten names and $15.00, will receive an extra copy free of charge.

MOORE & ESHELMAN, Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL. MAY 9, 1878

At the close of a card just received from a brother, was the following: "Pray without ceasing." That would be an excellent subject for some one to write on.

The New Testament revision company held their monthly meeting at the Bible house in New York, last week, and finished the first revision of Ephesians and part of Colossians.

THREE were baptized at Yellow Creek, (Ill.) April 27th, and one on the Sunday following. There were several more applicants, and a warm feeling generally among the people.

AN exchange says, that Minnesota is a Lutheran State, having more Lutherans among its population than of any other name or confession.

BROTHER Christian Rowder, of Newton, Mo., writes that he receives more letters of inquiry about that country than he can answer.

BROTHER E. C. Parker, formerly of Canton, Ohio, wishes us to announce that his address is now changed to Ashland, Ohio.

JOSEPH Cook says, aitatus is used sixty-six times in the New Testament. In fifty-one cases it is used to express the happiness of the righteous.

WE have just received a small tract from Mr. James Crystal, author of the Modes of Baptism, setting forth his intentions to inaugurate a movement looking to the Restoration of primitive Christianity.

MOODY advises converts to avoid Masonry, Odd-fellowship, theatres, card-playing, horse-racing, novel-reading, and business partnerships, and marriages with unbelievers.

It would seem that the Kentucky drunkards will have a hard time of it if the new law is strictly enforced. It prohibits licensed liquor dealers from selling, giving or loaning spirituous or malt liquors to them.

will decrease a hundred per cent, and thousands of families made happy thereby.

SATAN'S GROUND.

PERTULLIAN, in his writings, tells of a Christian woman, who, on going to the theatre, was there possessed of the devil, and when the evil spirit, at his casting out, was asked, How he durst set upon a Christian? he presently answered, "I did but what was fit and just, for I found her on my own ground."

How many Christians are led astray by getting on Satan's ground? The narrow path of Christianity is not wide enough for them, they must walk and act with the world, not for the purpose of making the world better, but for the purpose of enjoying its sins, and patronizing the evil ways of the world.

QUIT AT LAST.

WHILE visiting a school, some years ago, Mr. B. was called on to address the scholars. He directed his remarks against the use of tobacco by boys and young men, telling them that as a habit it was useless, yet very expensive.

About one year after this, old father S— stepped into Mr. B's business office, looking unusually hale and hearty for a man of sixty-one.

SHOT AND CHRISTIANS

WHERE is a feature in religion that forcibly reminds me of a process in the manufacturing of shot. When the lead is melted, it is poured through a sieve of the proper structure, from a lofty tower, and while passing through the air assumes a globular form, thus making shot, which fall into water and thereby become cool and hard.

To separate the round shot from those that are imperfect, they are taken into a room having a smooth inclined floor, and slowly poured on the upper side of the floor.

Just so with Christians, they must be tried, or tested. They are started down the inclined plane of life toward the paradise of God. Some of them seemingly describe very crooked lines, others pass straight on in the line of duty, while many, regardless of their fate, wander off to the right or left and are lost.

centered on the cross. On either side of the narrow path that leads to life eternal, is darkness, and those who walk in darkness are not the children of the light.

PRACTICAL PRAYER.

A SCOTCH paper gives the following account of a practical piece of sympathy: A poor man who had a large family to support, broke his leg, and as he would for some time be destitute of the means of grace, it was proposed to hold a prayer-meeting at his house.

This is a specimen of the kind of praying that is much needed just now. This thing of a man of wealth getting down on his knees and praying the Lord to "remember the poor, clothe the naked and feed the hungry," and then won't turn his hand over to help the poor and hungry, is mockery.

Whenever we pray the Lord to do a good work we ought to do all in our power to enable Him to fully answer us. If a man gets down on his knees and prays the Lord to make a better man of him, he is in duty bound to help the Lord accomplish the work, or he may rest assured that it will never be done.

TELEPHONE AND PHONOGRAPH.

BROTHER Eshelman writes us that he has been talking through the telephone, and finds its construction a very simple contrivance. It is a wonder some one never thought of it before.

We give below, an account of a still later, and more remarkable invention, which causes one to stand in awe, thinking of the world of wonders to which this invention will open the door.

When the telephone was invented not long ago, by which two persons at a distance could converse with each other as well as if they were sitting in the same room together, it badly seemed as if invention had gone about as far as it could.

forwards by another machine are given off just as they were made at first. But the possibilities which this opens for the future, make one hold his breath in wonder. In a few years, doubtless, these machines will be as common as telegraphs are now.

Our singers and eloquent speakers will sing and speak through the phonograph, and years hence, when they are dead, perhaps, there may be concerts and lectures where their voices may be heard, just as they were in life.

DANCING.

THE following, clipped from a Baptist paper coming to this office, is worth preserving. The first half dozen lines afford matter for serious thought:

The churches of Christ have for a century been free from persecution, and they have relaxed the old-time practice of rigid examinations for candidates for baptism; and, under the modern revival system, thousands of the unregenerated have been swept into the churches, and, for lack of Scriptural discipline, they are allowed to remain in the church, but these unrenewed members cannot be kept out of their old haunts of sinful pleasure, the ball-room and theatre.

The question raised is— Is the modern dance a species of the 'revelry' condemned by Paul?

The Greek word is komos, and to the Greek we must go.

Hedericus defines it:— 'Saltationes in convessationibus, et saltationes universae—dancings in merry makings, and dancings in general.'

Liddell and Scott, (the latest and standard Lexicon). 'Komos, a jovial festivity with music and dancing, a revel, a carousal, a merry-making, singing and dancing and playing all kinds of foibles or games.'

Music and dancing, either decoriously or lasciviously, was denominated komos, 'rev-ry,' by the Greeks in Paul's day, therefore he used that term to denote the exercise of 'music with dances' as belonging to the 'works of the flesh,' and wholly unbecoming Christians who had professedly renounced them and put them away.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

BUT we preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling block, and unto the Greeks foolishness (1 Cor. 1:23). This was the theme of brother Snyder of Waynesboro, Pa., in the Antioch church, this forenoon. The minds of the hearers were enriched with the idea that unto us who are saved, Christ crucified is neither a stumbling block nor foolishness, but "the power of God, and the wisdom of God."

